PREFACE

BY THE

GENERAL EDITOR FOR THE OLD TESTAMENT

THE present General Editor for the Old Testament in the Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges desires to say that, in accordance with the policy of his predecessor the Bishop of Worcester, he does not hold himself responsible for the particular interpretations adopted or for the opinions expressed by the editors of the several Books, nor has he endeavoured to bring them into agreement with one another. It is inevitable that there should be differences of opinion in regard to many questions of criticism and interpretation, and it seems best that these differences should find free expression in different volumes. He has endeavoured to secure, as far as possible, that the general scope and character of the series should be observed, and that views which have a reasonable claim to consideration should not be ignored, but he has felt it best that the final responsibility should, in general, rest with the individual contributors.

A. F. KIRKPATRICK.

PREFACE

THE preparation of the present commentary has occupied longer time than I expected. The Book of Exodus either deals with, or touches on, many different subjects, upon most of which much has been written, and which frequently raise difficult and complex problems. Had not able guides cleared and smoothed the way, I should have shrunk from the task imposed upon me by the General Editor. Naturally, I had constantly beside me the masterly commentary of Dillmann. Dillmann was a learned and accomplished scholar, of critical yet sober judgement, and gifted, as the present Dean of Canterbury has justly observed, with 'strong sense and historical capacity.' On historical questions, especially, I have been glad to have the benefit of Dillmann's judgement; and I have generally in such cases allowed the reader to know what Dillmann's conclusions were. Dillmann's Commentary on Exodus and Leviticus appeared, however, in 1880; and naturally it needs now to be supplemented, in some respects, by more recent works. Among these I must name in particular the very thorough and ably written commentary of Bāntsch (1903). Bāntsch's death, in 1910, at a comparatively early age, was a great loss to Biblical science. On special questions,—such as Egyptian history, the route of the Exodus, the ancient limits of the Isthmus of Suez, the characteristics of the Sinaitic Peninsula,—and on frequent details in the exegesis, there were naturally many other authorities whom I had to consult: the note, for instance, on one word, stacte, in Ex. xxx., involved a correspondence with Sir W. Thiselton-Dyer, in addition to much independent research. The researches and discoveries of recent years have shewn that the customs and institutions of the Hebrews present many analogies with those of other nations; and references have in consequence had frequently to be made both to ancient original documents, such as the Code of Hammurabi, and also to modern works dealing with archaeology, travel in the East, and anthropology. In preparing my notes, I found it a great help to be able to refer the reader for fuller information to one or other of the two valuable repertoires of Biblical learning which we now possess, the large Dictionary of the Bible, edited by Dr Hastings, and the Encyclopaedia Biblica. The greater part of my notes were in type when the excellent commentary of Mr (now Dr) McNeile in the 'Westminster Commentaries' appeared, marked by a felicitous combination of critical insight with the religious feelings and belief of an English Churchman. It was a satisfaction to me to find how often he had reached independently the same conclusions as those which I had reached myself; and I was glad sometimes to be able to refer to his work. To the General Editor I am indebted for a most careful reading of the proofs, as well as for numerous suggestions, to most of which I have gladly given effect. And I have to thank Mr F. Ll. Griffith, Reader in Egyptology in the University of Oxford, for much valuable help on points connected with Egyptology.

Exodus is a striking and fascinating book. It sets before us, as the Hebrews of later ages told it, and in the vivid, picturesque style which their best historians could always command, the story of the deliverance from Egypt: it exhibits some of their most characteristic laws and institutions, ceremonial observances, and religious ideals, in different stages of their growth; the writers in it, one and all, are manifestly men filled and moved by the Spirit of God; and it possesses a deep and abiding spiritual value. It has been my privilege and my endeavour to do the best that I could, consistently with the limits at my disposal, to explain and illustrate, and to help the reader to appreciate, the varied contents of the book. Some of the conclusions which I have adopted may be novel to some readers, and appear to them to be ill-founded: but while there are undoubtedly details which are, and from the nature of the case must probably always remain, uncertain, these conclusions, I am persuaded, rest in their broader outlines upon secure foundations, which neither have been, nor are likely to be, overthrown. I say this with full knowledge of what has been said by various writers on the other side. Assiduous and painstaking as the labours of some of these writers have been, it does not appear to me that they have been successful either in shaking the great cumulative argument which shews that the traditional position is untenable, or in finding a better explanation of the facts presented by the Old Testament itself than, substantially, —I expressly do not say, in every particular,—that which is commonly associated with the name of Wellhausen<sup>1</sup>. True religion will not suffer in consequence. There was a time when the belief that the earth moved round the sun was universally believed to be subversive of the Christian faith: that belief is now held universally by all civilized races; and the Christian faith remains as secure as ever. It is not the object of criticism either to weaken or to overthrow the Christian faith, but, the Old Testament being admittedly the record of a progressive revelation, it is the object of criticism to ascertain, so far as the best means at our disposal enable us to do so, the stages and the means by which this revelation was given, and the record of it was written. From a study with such aims the cause of Christian truth has surely much to gain, and nothing to fear<sup>1</sup>.

OT., 1910) rather than with Wellhausen. But Kittel, though he opposes Wellhausen on some points, can appreciate his merits; and remarks justly (p. 57) that 'the science [not 'criticism,' as in the translation, p. 75] of the OT., on this and other fields, owes more to' him 'than to any other living man.' Nor do I assign Deuteronomy to the reign of Josiah; and I believe, of course, that large elements of pre-exilic usage are codified in P (cf. Wellh. Hist. pp. 366, 404).

INTRODUCTION.

§ I. NAME AND CONTENTS.

THE Book of Exodus derives its name through the Vulg. Exodus from the LXX. *Εξοδος, i.e. the Outgoing or Departure (cf. Heb. xi. 22), viz. of the children of Israel from Egypt: By the Jews, in accordance with their practice of calling the books of the Pentateuch after one or more of their opening words, it is known as שְׁמוֹת אֱלֹהִים (Origen, Ουελεσμοθ), 'And these are the names...', or, more commonly, simply as שְׁמוֹת, Shemōth, 'names.' The Book carries on the history of the Israelites from the death of Joseph in Egypt (Gen. 1.) to the erection of the Tabernacle by Moses in the wilderness of Sinai on the 1st day of the 2nd year of the Exodus (Ex. xl. 1, 17).

I. Chs. i—xi. Events leading to the deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt.

Chs. i—ii. The increase of the Hebrews in Egypt. The birth and education of Moses, and his flight to Midian.

Chs. iii. 1—vii. 13. Moses commissioned by Jehovah to be the deliverer of his people. His unsuccessful endeavour to obtain their release from the Pharaoh.

Chs. vii. 14—xi. The first nine Plagues.

II. Chs. xii—xviii. The departure of the Israelites from Egypt, and their journey as far as Rephidim.

Chs. xii—xiii. The last Plague. Institution of the Passover, and the Feast of Unleavened Cakes. The death of the firstborn of the Egyptians. The departure from Egypt. Law for the consecration of the firstborn. The journey to Etham.

Chs. xiv—xv. The passage of the Red Sea (ch. xiv). Moses' song of triumph (xv. 1—18). The journey from the Red Sea to Elim (xv. 22—27).

Ch. xvi. The journey from Elim to the wilderness of Sin. Manna and quails given.

Ch. xvii. The Israelites reach Rephidim. Water given to them at Massah. The victory over Amalek.

Ch. xviii. The visit of Jethro to Moses. Appointment of judges to assist Moses in the administration of justice.

III. Chs. xix—xl. Israel at Sinai.

Ch. xix. Arrival at Sinai. The theophany on the mount.

Ch. xx. 1—21. The Decalogue (vv. 1—17). Introduction to the Book of the Covenant (vv. 18—21).

Chs. xx. 22—xxiii. 33. The Book of the Covenant.

Ch. xxiv. The ratification of the covenant. Moses ascends the mount to receive the tables of stone, and directions for the construction of a sanctuary.

Chs. xxv—xxxi. 18<sup>a</sup>. The directions given to Moses for the construction and equipment of a sanctuary, and for the vestments and consecration of the priests.

Chs. xxxi. 18<sup>b</sup>—xxxiv. The Episode of the Golden Calf, and incidents arising out of it or mentioned in connexion with it.

Chs. xxxv—xl. Execution of the directions given to Moses in chs. xxv—xxxi. 18<sup>a</sup>.

For a more detailed summary, exhibiting the distribution of the narrative between the different sources, see p. xviii ff.

§ 2. SOURCES AND LITERARY STRUCTURE OF THE BOOK OF EXODUS.

The Book of Exodus, like the other books of the Hexateuch, is of composite origin, and reached its present form by a series of stages, being built up gradually on the basis of excerpts from pre-existing documents or sources. The principal grounds on which this conclusion of modern criticism respecting the sources and structure of the Hexateuch rests, are stated in the General Introduction to the Pentateuch in the present series: here, therefore, the conclusion will be taken for granted; and all that will be attempted will be to explain, as far as may be necessary or possible, the details of the composition of the book, and to give an outline of the narrative contained in each of the sources. The two oldest sources of which Exodus is composed are those now commonly known as 'J' and 'E'—the former, called 'J' on account of its author's almost exclusive use of the sacred name Jehovah, written probably in Judah in the 9th cent. B.C., and the latter, called 'E' on account of the preference, frequently shewn in Genesis and Numbers not less than in Exodus, for Elohim ('God'), written probably a little later in the Northern Kingdom. The principal materials out of which these two narratives were constructed were partly oral tradition, and partly (esp. in chs. xx.—xxiii., xxxiv. 10—28) written laws. Excerpts from these two sources were combined together, so as to form a single continuous narrative (JE), by a compiler, or redactor (R<sup>JE</sup>), who sometimes at the same time made slight additions of his own, usually of a hortatory or didactic character<sup>1</sup>, and who lived probably in the early part of the 7th cent. B.C. The parts derived from J and E are in tone and point of view (as in the other books of the Hexateuch) akin to the writings of the great prophets: the additions which seem to be due to the compiler approximate in both style and character to Deuteronomy (7th cent. B.C.). The other source used in Exodus is the one which, from the priestly interests conspicuous in it, is commonly denoted by 'P': this is evidently the work of a priestly school, whose chief interest it was to trace to their origin, and embrace in a framework of history, the ceremonial institutions of the people. Ex. i.—xxiv. contains only a few fragmentary excerpts from P; but the fact that chs. xxv.—xxxi. 18<sup>a</sup> and xxxv.—xl belong to it—to say nothing of nearly the whole of Leviticus—is sufficient to substantiate what has been just said. There are reasons for thinking (pp. 328 f., 378) that what has here been denoted by P, though it all bears the same priestly stamp, is not throughout the work of the same hand, but that parts of it (e.g. most of chs. xxx.—xxxī., xxxv.—xl.) are of later origin than the rest. It is probable that P was written, partly during the Babylonian exile, partly during the century that followed the return to Judah. The materials upon which it was based were partly, it seems, historical traditions current in priestly circles, partly the knowledge of pre-exilic Temple usage possessed at the time, the whole of the latter being arranged, developed, and systematised so as to form an ideal picture of the theocracy, as it was supposed to have existed in the Mosaic age. A second compiler or redactor (R<sup>P</sup>), living in the 5th or 4th cent. B.C., taking P as the framework of his narrative, inserted into it large portions of JE, and so, except perhaps for a very few still later additions (e.g. xxxviii. 21—31), produced Exodus—not of course as an isolated book, but as a part of the Hexateuch—in its present shape.

The discourses of Deuteronomy must have been united to JE, before the latter was combined with P. The compilation of the entire Hexateuch will thus have been effected in three main stages: first, J and E were combined by a compiler, R<sup>JE</sup>; secondly, the discourses of Deuteronomy were combined with the whole thus formed by a second compiler, R<sup>D</sup>; and thirdly, P was combined with JED, or the whole formed by JE and D, by a third compiler, R<sup>P</sup>. The sources, and gradual formation, of the Hexateuch may be exhibited approximately by the diagram on p. xiii (cf. Bennett, Exodus, in the Century Bible, p. 18).

The reader who desires to view the Hexateuch in its historical perspective, should thus think of it as a series of strata: the oldest and lowest stratum consisting of JE—for J and E, as they are very similar in character and tone, may, for many practical purposes, be grouped together as a single stratum—expanded here and there by additions made by R<sup>JE</sup>; the second stratum consisting of the discourses of Deuteronomy, written in the 7th cent. B.C., and combined with JE not long afterwards; and the third and latest stratum consisting of P. And when a verse or passage of the Hexateuch is quoted or referred to, he should cultivate and strengthen his historical sense by thinking of it not as a part of the Hexateuch generally, but as a part of the particular stratum to which it belongs.

There were, it has been said, three main stages by which the compilation of the Hexateuch was effected: for in all probability the new form presented by the Hexateuch at each of these stages was itself not the work of a single hand, but the result of a more or less gradual literary process. As has been just remarked, there seem clearly to be in P some strata of later origin than others: but it is in JE's account of the legislation at Sinai (Ex. xix. 2<sup>b</sup>—xxiv. 15<sup>a</sup>, xxxi. 18<sup>b</sup>—xxxiv. 28) that the process by which parallel narratives and collections of laws were combined together and, at times, amplified by hortatory additions, seems to have been more than usually protracted and complicated. As a natural consequence of this complication, the skein is correspondingly difficult to unravel. The marks of composition are indeed unambiguous: but the phenomena calling for explanation are varied and involved; and when we seek to fix the details of the process by which these sections of the Pent. reached their present form, it is difficult to be sure that we have found the right clues, and so more than one hypothesis can be framed which will, at least in appearance, account for the facts. It lies beyond the scope of the present Commentary to consider in detail different hypotheses; and all that has been attempted is to indicate what seems on the whole to be the most probable view of the structure, and mode of composition, of these narratives, but with the frank recognition that there are details which are uncertain, and on which, probably, certainty will never be attained. Indeed, as regards JE in general, it is to be remembered that the criteria distinguishing J and E from each other are less numerous and strongly marked than those distinguishing P from JE as a whole; so that, while there is hardly ever any doubt as to the limits of P, there are passages of JE in which, from the insufficiency or ambiguity of the criteria, the analysis is uncertain, and different critics may arrive at different conclusions<sup>1</sup>.

Customs, Laws, and Oral Traditions.

* I.e. the discourses of Deuteronomy (excluding the few verses excerpted from JE, or added afterwards from P: see LOT. p. 72). The discourses of Dt. themselves, also, embody many passages dependent directly upon JE (see LOT. pp. 75 f., 80—82; Chapman, General Introd. to the Pentateuch, 1911, pp. 90—95): this is indicated in the diagram by the dotted line connecting Deuteronomy with JE. The historical parts of P are not entirely independent of JE; but they are not based upon JE, in the manner in which the discourses of Dt. are.

† The 'Law of Holiness,' i.e. the laws, partly moral and partly ceremonial, excerpted from some older source, and found now in Lev. xvii.—xxvi., and probably in a few other parts of Ex.—Numb., embedded in a framework of P. See LOT. p. 47 ff., Chapman, pp. 111 f., 240 ff.

<sup>1</sup> A full discussion of the grounds of the analysis is impossible within the limits of the present Commentary; the principal grounds are, however, generally pointed out, as occasion arises, in the notes; comp. also McNeile's Exodus, pp. xii—xxxiii.

Readers to whom the methods of compilation described above may seem improbable may be reminded that there are many cases,—in other parts of the OT., in the Synoptic Gospels, in Arabic historians, and in mediæval English Chronicles,—in which they can be seen in actual operation: see the examples quoted by Chapman, Introd. Appendix VII.

The literary characteristics of the sources are most strongly marked in the case of P. The following is a list of the principal expressions, phrases, and usages characteristic of P, occurring in Exodus, with the passages in which notes upon them will be found, and other occurrences cited<sup>1</sup>. An expression, phrase, or usage of a word is the more characteristic of a particular writer, the more rarely it occurs elsewhere; and most of those here quoted are confined to P, or to P and the other principal priestly writers, Ezekiel<sup>2</sup>, Ezra and the Chronicler, only a few occurring sporadically elsewhere. The sign * marks expressions occurring noticeably, once or oftener, in Ezek.; † marks those found also in Chr. or Ezr.—Neh. (in parts the work of the Chronicler).

Expressions characteristic of H (the 'Law of Holiness,' Lev. xvii.—xxvi.):—I am Jehovah vi. 8; **my sabbaths* xxxi. 13; **I am Jehovah which sanctifieth you* xxxi. 13; **to profane* xxxi. 14; shall surely be put to death (also in Ex. xxi.—xxiii.) xxxi. 14. Comp. LOT. p. 49 f.

Recurring expressions in J are noted on iii. 18 (twice), iv. 22, vii. 13 (to be or make heavy, of Pharaoh's heart) pp. 56, 57 (in J's narrative of the plagues), and on xxiv. 12. See also McNeile, p. vii f.

For recurring expressions in E, see on iii. 1 (Horeb, not 'Sinai'); iv. 22, vii. 13 (to harden or be hardened, of Pharaoh's heart); pp. 56, 57; and on xxiv. 12. See also McNeile, p. viii f.

On the more general characteristics of J, E, and P reference may be made to LOT. pp. 117—130, or to the writer's Genesis, pp. xvii—xxv.

The following passages, mostly of a didactic or parenetic (hortatory) character, are generally regarded as expansions of the original narrative, due to the compiler of JE (R<sup>JE</sup>), or, in some cases, esp. those in xx. 2<sup>b</sup>, 4<sup>b</sup>, 5<sup>a</sup>, 10<sup>b</sup>, 12, to a subsequent Deuteronomic redactor (R<sup>D</sup>):—Ex. ix. 14—16, x. 1<sup>b</sup>—2 (to which some would add vii. 17<sup>a</sup> (to that I am Jehovah), viii. 10<sup>b</sup>, 22<sup>b</sup> (to the end, &c.), ix. 29<sup>b</sup> (to that thou, &c.), xi. 7<sup>b</sup>,—all resembling ix. 14<sup>b</sup>, x. 2 end), xii. 25—27<sup>a</sup>, the setting of the laws in ch. xiii. (see p. 106), viz. xiii. 3 (from Remember), 5, 8—9, 11, 14—16, xv. 26 (see the note), xviii. 1<sup>b</sup>—4, xix. 5—6 (expansion of an older nucleus), the explanatory additions in the Decalogue (see p. 192), viz. xx. 2<sup>b</sup>, 4<sup>b</sup>—6, 7<sup>b</sup>, 9—10 (v. 11 R<sup>P</sup>), 12<sup>b</sup>, 17 (after house), xxii. 21<sup>b</sup>—22, 24, xxiii. 9<sup>b</sup>, 12<sup>b</sup> (see p. 372), 15 (from seven: from xxxiv. 18, 20), 17 (from xxxiv. 23), 23—25<sup>a</sup>, 31<sup>b</sup>—33, xxxii. 9—14, xxxiv. 10<sup>b</sup>—13<sup>a</sup>, 15—16, 18<sup>b</sup>, 21<sup>b</sup> (p. 372), 24. Many of these (see e.g. on xv. 26) approximate in style and tone to Deuteronomy; these are, no doubt, pre-Deuteronomic; but those with a strong Deuteronomic colouring (as xx.

A list of Deuteronomic expressions<sup>1</sup> in Exodus—sometimes, probably, original in JE or R<sup>J</sup>E, and adopted thence by the writer of Deuteronomy, sometimes (esp. in ch. xx.) occurring in passages introduced into Ex. by a writer influenced by Deuteronomy (see the notes):—a mighty hand iii. 19, vi. 1, xiii. 9, xxxii. 11 (cf. might of hand xiii. 3, 14, 16†); a stretched out arm vi. 6 (adopted by P from Dt.); house of bondage (lit. of slaves) xiii. 3, 14, xx. 2; which he swore unto thy fathers to give thee xiii. 5; Jehovah's 'servant' (of Moses) xiv. 31; hearken to the voice xv. 26 (see note), Jehovah thy God xv. 26 (cf. on xx. 2), that which is right in his eyes, give ear, commandments...and statutes, and keep, all in xv. 26; special possession xix. 5 (cf. a holy nation ibid., in Dt. a holy people); which brought thee out of the land of Egypt xx. 2; other gods xx. 3, xxiii. 31, cf. other god xxxiv. 14; heaven above...earth beneath xx. 4; bow down...serve xx. 5; to love God xx. 6; thy gates xx. 10; to be long (of days) xx. 12; upon the land which Jehovah thy God is giving thee xx. 12; the two tables of stones xxxiv. 1, 4 (see on xxiv. 12); which I am commanding thee this day xxxiv. 11; take heed to thyself xxxiv. 12; dispossess xxxiv. 24; the ten words (the Decalogue), only in a gloss, xxxiv. 28 end.

§ 3. THE CONTENTS OF EXODUS ARRANGED ACCORDING TO THE SOURCES.

Chs. i—ii. Growth of the people in Egypt, and the measures taken to check it. The birth and early years of Moses.

J (i. 6, 8—12, 20<sup>b</sup>, ii. 11—23<sup>a</sup>). Growth of the Israelites into a numerous people. To check their further increase, the Pharaoh compels them to build Pithom and Ra'amses. Moses twice interposes chivalrously on behalf of a wronged compatriot. On account of his slaughter of the Egyptian, he flees to Midian.

E (i. 15—20<sup>a</sup>, 21—22, ii. 1—10). The two midwives of the Hebrews are commanded to destroy all male infants. The command being disregarded, the Egyptians themselves are commanded to drown all the male infants of the Hebrews in the Nile. The birth and education of Moses.

P (i. 1—5, 13—14, ii. 23<sup>b</sup>—25). The names of Jacob's sons who came down into Egypt. Their increase; and the hard service imposed upon them by the Egyptians. God hears their cry, and remembers the covenant made by Him with the patriarchs (Gen. xvii. 7 f.).

Chs. iii. 1—vii. 13. Moses commissioned by Jehovah to be his people's deliverer, and to demand their release from the Pharaoh.

J (iii. 2—4<sup>a</sup>, 5, 7—8, 16—18, iv. 1—16, 19—20<sup>a</sup>, 22—26, 29—31, v. 3, 5—vi. 1). Jehovah appears to Moses in the burning bush, and bids him return to Egypt, and announce to his people their approaching deliverance. He is to ask of the Pharaoh permission for them to go three days' journey into the wilderness to sacrifice to Jehovah (iii. 2—4<sup>a</sup>, 5, 7—8, 16—18). Moses objects that the people will not listen to him; and is given three signs to work before them (iv. 1—9). He objects further that he is 'heavy in mouth and tongue' (i.e. not fluent): but Jehovah promises that He will be with him, to give him words; and afterwards, as he still demurs, that Aaron, the 'Levite' (iv. 14), shall be his spokesman with the people (iv. 10—16). He returns to Egypt. The people believe him gladly (iv. 29—31); but the Pharaoh peremptorily refuses to let them go for the three days into the wilderness. The tasks of the Israelites are increased. Moses, reproached for this, appeals to Jehovah, who tells him in reply that He will effect His people's deliverance (v. 3, v. 5—vi. 1).

E (iii. 1, 4<sup>b</sup>, 6, 9—15, 19—22, iv. 17—18, 20<sup>b</sup>—21, 27—28, v. 1—2, 4). God appears to Moses on Horeb, and tells him that he is to be his people's deliverer. He objects that he is unsuited either to treat with Pharaoh, or to become his people's leader; but God promises to be with him and assist him. He objects further that he does not know what to give as the name of the God who has sent him; and in reply the name I WILL BE is revealed to him (iii. 1, 4<sup>b</sup>, 6, 9—15). God gives Moses a wonder-working rod, with which he is to do the 'signs' (which must have been described in a preceding part of E, no longer preserved) before Pharaoh (iv. 17). Returning to Egypt, with Aaron, he goes with him to ask Pharaoh to allow the people to hold 'Jehovah's feast' in the wilderness. Pharaoh refuses. The sequel is told in the words of J (v. 5—vi. 1).

P (vi. 2—vii. 13). God tells Moses that He was known to the patriarchs as El Shaddai ('God Almighty'), but that He now reveals Himself to Moses as YAHWEH. He remembers His covenant with the patriarchs, and will deliver the Israelites, their descendants. Moses tells the people this; but they refuse to listen to him (contrast iv. 31 in J). Jehovah bids Moses demand of Pharaoh Israel's unconditional release (contrast the 'three days' of J, iii. 18; and v. 1 in E): he objects that if his own people will not listen to him, Pharaoh is much less likely to do so, especially as he is 'uncircumcised of lips' (not fluent); Aaron is therefore appointed to be his spokesman before Pharaoh (and not as in J, iv. 16, before the people). Jehovah will 'harden' Pharaoh's heart, that He may multiply His signs and portents in Egypt, and bring forth His people with 'great judgements.' Aaron, at Moses' direction (cf. vii. 19, viii. 5, 16 P), turns his rod into a tannin, to satisfy Pharaoh of his and his brother's mission (contrast in J, iv. 1—5, 30, where Moses turns his rod into a nahash, to satisfy the Israelites); but the portent is imitated by the Egyptian magicians, and the Pharaoh's heart becomes 'hard' (vii. 8—13). A genealogy of Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Moses and Aaron (vi. 13—30).

Chs. vii. 14—xi. The first nine Plagues.

In the narrative of the Plagues, the accounts of J, E, and P are distinguished remarkably from each other by a number of recurring differences, both of representation and expression (see, for particulars, pp. 55—57). The summary which here follows is too condensed to exhibit all these differences, though a few may be noticed by the attentive reader; for instance, the formal announcement to Pharaoh, with which the account of a plague always opens in J, the rod in Moses' hand in E, but in Aaron's hand in P, and the different terms used to denote the hardening of Pharaoh's heart.

E (vii. 15<sup>b</sup>, 17<sup>b</sup>, 20<sup>b</sup>). Moses, at Jehovah's direction, smites the Nile with his rod; and its waters are turned into blood.

P (vii. 19—20<sup>a</sup>, 21<sup>b</sup>—22). Aaron, at Moses' direction, stretches out his rod over—not the Nile only, but—all the waters in Egypt, and they become blood. The magicians do likewise; and Pharaoh's heart remains 'hard,' and he 'hearkens not' to Moses and Aaron.

The second plague (viii. 1—15). The frogs. From J and P.

J (viii. 1—4, 8—15<sup>a</sup>). After notice given by Moses to Pharaoh, frogs come up out of the Nile, and swarm over the whole land. Pharaoh begs Moses and Aaron to intercede for him; if the frogs are removed, he will let the people go to sacrifice to Jehovah: they are removed; but Pharaoh nevertheless makes his heart 'heavy.'

P (viii. 5—7, 15<sup>b</sup>). Aaron, at Moses' direction, stretches out his rod over the streams, Nile-canals, and pools of Egypt; frogs come up, and cover the land. The magicians do similarly; and Pharaoh 'hearkens not' to Moses and Aaron.

The third plague (viii. 16—19). The gnats (mosquitoes). P only.

P (viii. 16—19). Aaron, at Moses' direction, stretches out his rod, and smites the dust of the earth, and it becomes gnats throughout the land. The magicians cannot imitate this plague, and acknowledge in it the 'finger of God.' Pharaoh's heart, however, remains 'hard.'

The fourth plague (viii. 20—32). The dog-flies. From J only.

J (viii. 20—32). After notice given by Moses to Pharaoh, dog-flies are sent through the whole of Egypt, except the land of Goshen. Pharaoh grants the Israelites permission to sacrifice to Jehovah in Egypt. Moses declines this offer, lest they should offend the Egyptians; and repeats the demand for a three days' journey into the wilderness. Pharaoh agrees to this: and only again begs Moses to intercede for a removal of the plague. Moses does this; but Pharaoh's heart remains 'heavy.'

The fifth plague (ix. 1—7). The murrain on cattle. From J only.

J (ix. 1—7). After notice given by Moses to Pharaoh, a fatal murrain is sent upon all the cattle of Egypt, except that belonging to the Israelites. Pharaoh sends to ascertain the facts about the cattle of the Israelites: but his heart nevertheless remains 'heavy.'

The sixth plague (ix. 8—12). The boils. From P only.

P (ix. 8—12). Moses, at Jehovah's direction, takes two handfuls of soot from a kiln, and tosses it towards heaven; it thereupon becomes a boil breaking out upon man and beast. The magicians are not only unable to imitate this plague, but are themselves attacked by it. Jehovah, however, 'hardens' Pharaoh's heart; and he 'hearkens not' to Moses and Aaron.

The seventh plague (ix. 13—35). The hail. From J and E.

J (ix. 1—7, 13—21, 23<sup>b</sup>—34). After notice given by Moses to Pharaoh, Jehovah rains a destructive hail upon all the land of Egypt, except Goshen. Pharaoh this time admits that he has sinned, and a third time begs Moses to intercede for him: when the hail ceases, he will let the people go. Moses does entreat for him: the hail ceases; but Pharaoh sins yet more, and makes his heart 'heavy.'

E (ix. 22—23<sup>a</sup>, 31—32?, 35<sup>a</sup>). Moses, at Jehovah's direction, stretches out his rod toward heaven; and thunder, hail, and lightning are sent upon the land of Egypt. All vegetation is smitten, except wheat and spelt, which were not yet up. But Pharaoh's heart is 'hardened'; and he will not let Israel go.

The eighth plague (x. 1—20). The locusts. From J and E.

J (x. 1—11, 13<sup>b</sup>, 14<sup>b</sup>—15<sup>a</sup>, 15<sup>c</sup>—19). After notice given by Moses to Pharaoh, that, if he will not let the people go, his land will be smitten with a plague of locusts, he offers, at the suggestion of his servants, to let the men go alone. Moses declines this offer: the whole people must go, with their families and their cattle: for they have to keep Jehovah's feast. Pharaoh refuses these terms; and an east wind then brings the locusts, which devour all the herbage which the hail had left. Pharaoh a second time confesses that he has sinned, and a fourth time begs Moses to intercede for a removal of the plague. Moses does this; and a west wind drives the locusts into the Red Sea.

E (x. 12—13<sup>a</sup>, 14<sup>a</sup>, 15<sup>b</sup>, 20). Moses, at Jehovah's direction, stretches out his rod over the land of Egypt, and locusts come up, and devour all the vegetation which the hail had left. Jehovah, however, 'hardens' Pharaoh's heart; and he will not let the people go.

The ninth plague (x. 21—29). The darkness. From J and E. Followed closely (ch. xi.) by the announcement of the tenth plague.

J (x. 24—26, 28—29: J's announcement and description of the plague itself are not preserved). Pharaoh offers to let the people go with their families, but without their flocks and herds. Moses declines this offer: the cattle are required for sacrifices. Pharaoh declares that he will see Moses' face no more. Moses replies (xi. 4—8) that at midnight Jehovah will destroy all the firstborn of the Egyptians; and leaves his presence in 'hot anger.'

E (x. 21—23, 27). Moses, at Jehovah's direction, stretches out his hand toward heaven; and there is darkness in Egypt for three days, only the children of Israel having light in their dwellings. Jehovah 'hardens' Pharaoh's heart; and he will not let the people go. He tells Moses (xi. 1) that He will bring one more plague upon Pharaoh, which will secure the release of the people.

xi. 9—10 (P). How the portents wrought before Pharaoh had produced no effect upon him.

The plagues are thus distributed between the sources, so far as they are at present extant, as follows:—

	J	E	P
1.	Nile-water turned to blood	Nile-water turned to blood	All water in Egypt turned to blood
2.	Frogs		Frogs
3.			Gnats
4.	Dog-flies
5.	Murrain on cattle
6.			Boils
7.	Hail	Hail
8.	Locusts	Locusts
9.	Darkness	Darkness
10.	Death of firstborn	Death of firstborn (only announced)	Death of firstborn

Apart from merely literary features, the following are the principal characteristic differences between the three sources. In J, the earliest source, the plague is announced by Moses, but brought, and afterwards removed, by Jehovah, without further human intervention; in E it is brought, without any previous announcement, by Moses with his rod, or once (x. 22, the darkness) by his hand; in P, except in the case of the boils (ix. 10), it is brought by Aaron stretching out his rod at Moses' direction. The difference with regard to the rod recurs in other parts of Exodus: the rod is in Moses' hand in E in iv. 17, 20<sup>b</sup>, xiv. 16<sup>a</sup>, xvii. 5, 9, and in Aaron's hand in P in vii. 9. In J, again, except in the ninth plague (x. 21—29), where the introduction to the plague is taken from E, there is regularly an interview with Pharaoh, and a formal demand is made for the release of the people; the plagues also gradually increase in both impressiveness and severity<sup>1</sup>, the later ones thus produce a proportionately greater effect upon the Pharaoh, and he gives way more and more<sup>1</sup>. In P there is no interview with the Pharaoh, no demand is made of him, and, till the tenth plague comes, there is no difference in the Pharaoh's attitude. Thus in J the plagues have the practical object of gradually making the Pharaoh yield; in P they are little more than marvels, or signs of power ('I will multiply my signs and my portents,' vii. 3; cf. xi. 9), wrought by Aaron with his rod, and designed to accredit Moses and Aaron as Jehovah's representatives: only the tenth plague has a different character, and is also differently described. In P, too, both the introductory sign (vii. 8—13) and also the first two plagues are imitated by the Egyptian magicians; it is a contest between Moses and Aaron and the magicians, in which (Di.) the superiority of God and His agents gradually comes clearly out, till in the end the magicians cannot even protect themselves against the plague (vii. 11 f., 22, viii. 7, 18 f., ix. 11). Finally, J represents the Israelites as confined to Goshen (see on viii. 22), while E pictures them as living side by side with the Egyptians (iii. 22).

Chs. xii—xiii. Institution of the Passover, and Feast of Unleavened Cakes. The last plague. The departure from Rameses. Law for the sanctity of the firstborn. Journey to Etham.

J (xii. 21—24, 27<sup>b</sup>, 29—34, 37<sup>b</sup>—39, 42 (?), xiii. 3<sup>d</sup>, 4, 6—7, 10, 12—13, 21—22). Moses gives the elders of Israel instructions for the observance of the Passover (xii. 21—24). [RJE. Its meaning to be explained to the children of future generations, xii. 25—27<sup>a</sup>.] At midnight the firstborn of the Egyptians are smitten; and Pharaoh now lets the whole people go unconditionally, with their families and their cattle. Numbering 600,000 adult males, they journey from Rameses to Succoth; and having no time to leaven their dough, they bake it into unleavened cakes, xii. 34, 37—39, 42<sup>a</sup>? [an explanation of the feast of Unleavened Cakes]. Laws for the annual observance of the feast of Mazzoth (Unleavened Cakes), and for the sanctity of the firstborn of man and beast, xiii. 3—16,—in a setting due probably to RJE. Jehovah precedes the people, in a pillar of cloud by day, and in a pillar of fire by night, to guide them in the way (xiii. 21—22).

E (xii. 35—36, xiii. 17—19). The Israelites are to proceed to Canaan not by the direct route through the land of the Philistines (where they might be forcibly opposed), but by way of the Red Sea. They take the bones of Joseph (Gen. 1. 25 E) with them.

P (xii. 1—20, 28, 37<sup>a</sup>, 43—51, xiii. 1—2, 20). Regulations for the observance of the Passover (xii. 1—13), and of the feast of Mazzoth (Unleavened Cakes), xii. 14—20. Supplementary regulations relating to the Passover, intended chiefly to define who might partake of it (xii. 43—51). The firstborn of man and beast to be sacred to Jehovah (xiii. 1—2). The Israelites journey from Succoth to Etham.

Ch. xiv. The passage of the Red Sea.

J (xiv. 5—7, 10<sup>a</sup>, 19<sup>b</sup>, 20<sup>b</sup>, 21<sup>b</sup>, 24—25, 27<sup>b</sup>, 30—31). Pharaoh finding that the Israelites have 'fled,' i.e. left the land not for three days merely, but without any intention of returning, starts in pursuit of them. They complain to Moses, who promises them deliverance. The pillar of cloud removes from before them, and stands behind them. An east wind drives back the water, and they cross on dry land. The Egyptians attempt to retreat, but are cut off by the returning waters.

E (fragmentary: xiv. 10<sup>b</sup>, 16<sup>a</sup> [to rod], 19<sup>a</sup>, 20<sup>a</sup>). The Israelites, when they see the Egyptians overtaking them, cry out to Jehovah. Moses is commanded to lift up his rod. The angel of God, which went before the Israelites, removes, and comes behind them....

P (xiv. 1—4, 8—9<sup>a</sup>, 16<sup>b</sup> [from and stretch])—18, 21<sup>a, c</sup>, 22—23, 26—27<sup>a</sup>, 28—29). Israel is to encamp by the Red Sea: Pharaoh will then think they are in his power; Jehovah will 'harden' his heart, and he will pursue after them: by his overthrow Jehovah will get Himself glory. Pharaoh overtakes them: Moses stretches out his hand over the sea: the waters divide, forming a 'wall' on each side, and the Israelites pass through. Moses again stretches out his hand; and the waters close over the pursuing Egyptians.

It may be observed that in P the miracle is much greater than in J, —the waters dividing and reuniting at a signal given by Moses, and the wall of water on each side, while in J the only agency is the wind.

Ch. xv. Moses' Song of triumph. The journey from the Red Sea to Elim.

J (xv. 1—18). Moses' Song of triumph.

E (xv. 20—27). Miriam and the other women praise Jehovah for the overthrow of the foe. The people journey to Marah, where Moses sweetens the bitter water. [R<sup>J</sup>E. Promise that if Israel is obedient to Jehovah, He will keep it free from the diseases which He has brought upon the Egyptians, xv. 26.] The people move on to Elim.

Ch. xvi. The people journey to the wilderness of Sin. Manna and quails given.

J (xvi. 4—5, 13<sup>b</sup>—15<sup>a</sup>, 27—30). [The people complaining of want of food,] Jehovah promises to provide them daily with manna from heaven; and on the sixth day with manna sufficient for two days.

P (xvi. 1—3, 6—13<sup>a</sup>, 15<sup>b</sup>—26, 31—36). The people arrive at the wilderness of Sin. They complain of want of food: Jehovah promises to give them quails in the evening and manna in the morning.

Ch. xvii. The Israelites move on to Rephidim. Water given to them at Massah (J), or at Meribah (E). The victory over Amalek.

J (xvii. 2 end, 3, 7<sup>a</sup>, 9)... The people thirst for water, and complain to Moses. For having thus put Jehovah to the proof, by doubting His presence to help, the place is called 'Massah' (i.e. Proving).

E (xvii. 1<sup>b</sup>, 2<sup>a</sup>, 4—6, 7 [middle clause], 8—16). The people, having no water to drink, 'strive' (i.e. expostulate) with Moses. He smites the rock with his rod, and brings forth water from it. The place is called 'Meribah' (i.e. Striving). Defeat of the Amalekites by Joshua.

Ch. xviii. (E). The visit of Jethro to Moses. At Jethro's suggestion Moses appoints subordinate judges to assist him in the administration of justice.

Chs. xix—xxiv. The arrival of Israel at Sinai. The theophany on the mountain. The Decalogue; and the Book of the Covenant. The ratification of the Covenant.

J (xix. 3<sup>b</sup>—9, 11<sup>b</sup>—13, 18, 20—25, xxiv. 1—2, 9—11). Jehovah calls Moses to the foot of the mount, and announces to him His covenant. Three days afterwards He descends upon Sinai in fire and smoke; and having called Moses up to Him, directs him to prevent the too curious people from trespassing upon the mountain. The narrative breaks off in the middle of a sentence (xix. 25; see the note). [Originally, perhaps, there followed here the nucleus of xxxiv. 1—4, 10—28, containing J's account of the establishment of the covenant at this time (see p. 364). E's account follows immediately, vv. 3—8.] Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy of the elders, go up into the mount, where they have a vision of God (xxiv. 1—2, 9—11).

E (xix. 2<sup>b</sup>—3<sup>a</sup>, 10—11<sup>a</sup>, 14—17, 19; xx. 1—xxiii. 33; xxiv. 3—8, 12—15<sup>a</sup>). Moses goes up the mountain to God, and receives instructions to sanctify the people for a theophany on the third day (xix. 2<sup>b</sup>—3<sup>a</sup>, 10—11<sup>a</sup>). He goes down and does this; and on the third day the theophany takes place. The people are led to the foot of the mount; Moses takes part in a dialogue with God (xix. 19; see the note), God answering him in trumpet-tones. The Decalogue is proclaimed (xx. 1—17). After this, Moses enters into the thick darkness where God was, and receives from Him a collection of laws (xx. 22—xxiii. 33), on the basis of which Jehovah establishes a covenant with Israel (xxiv. 3—8). Moses re-ascends the mount to receive certain 'tables of stone' which God had written, and remains there forty days (xxiv. 12—15<sup>a</sup>).

Chs. xxv—xxx. 18<sup>a</sup> (P). The directions given to Moses for the construction and equipment of a sanctuary, and for the vestments and consecration of the priests.

- a. The Ark, Table of Presence-bread, and Candlestick (ch. xxv.).
- b. The curtains forming the 'Dwelling,' and the wooden framework supporting them, the veil, and the screen (ch. xxvi.).

- c. The court round the sanctuary, and the Altar of Burnt-offering (ch. xxvii.).
- d. The vestments (ch. xxviii.), and ritual for the consecration (ch. xxix.) of the priests.
- e. The Altar of incense, provision for the maintenance of public service, the Bronze Laver, the holy anointing oil, and the Incense (ch. xxx.).
- f. The nomination of Bezal'el and Oholiab; and the observance of the Sabbath (ch. xxxi.).

Chs. xxxi. 18<sup>b</sup>—xxxiv. The Episode of the Golden Calf and incidents arising out of it, or mentioned in connexion with it.

J (xxxii. 25—34, xxxiii. 1, 3, 4, 12—13, 17—23, xxxiv. 6—9 [see p. 367], xxxiii. 14—16, xxxiv. 1<sup>a</sup>, 2, 3, 4 [except 'like unto the first'], 5, 10—28).... (a) The people having rebelled against Jehovah, the Levites, responding to Moses' summons, slay 3000 of them. They are rewarded for their zeal with the priesthood. Moses magnanimously offers his life for the people. Jehovah replies that he may lead the people on to Canaan, but refuses to go with them Himself. They strip themselves of their ornaments (xxxiii. 1—4). Moses entreats Jehovah to let him know whom He will send with him on the way to Canaan, and craves of Him a vision of His glory (xxxiii. 12—13, 17—23). Jehovah proclaims His (moral) glory in a theophany (xxxiv. 6—8). Moses entreats Him to forgive His people, and Himself to go with them to Canaan; and receives the promise that His 'presence' will go with them (xxxiv. 9, xxxiii. 14—16). (b) Moses is commanded to hew two tables of stone, and to take them up the mount to Jehovah (xxxiv. 1<sup>a</sup>, 2—5). Jehovah establishes a covenant with Israel on the basis of a corpus of laws on worship (xxxiv. 10—28, —expanded in parts by R<sup>J<sup>E</sup></sup>). These laws are a different recension of those on the same subject, contained in the 'Book of the Covenant,' viz. xxiii. 12, 14, 15<sup>a</sup>, 16, 18—19, and in xiii. 12, 13. On their probable original place in the lacuna after xix. 25, see pp. 252, 364.

E (xxx. 18<sup>b</sup>, xxxii. 1—8 [R<sup>J<sup>E</sup></sup> vv. 9—14], 15—24, 35, xxxiii. 5<sup>a</sup> c, 6, 7—11, xxxiv. 1 [from like], 4 [the words like unto the first]). Moses receives from God the two tables of stone (xxx. 18<sup>b</sup>: see xxiv. 13). Aaron, instigated by the people, who are disheartened by Moses' long absence (xxiv. 18<sup>b</sup>), makes a molten calf, and they worship before it.

(Probably R<sup>B</sup>: Jehovah declares to Moses that He will exterminate the people, and make him the ancestor of a great nation; but is diverted from His purpose by Moses' intercession, xxxii. 9—14.) Moses, returning to the camp with the tables of stone in his hand, sees the calf and the dancing, throws down the tables in anger, and breaks them. He then grinds the calf to powder; and makes the people drink it. Aaron, rebuked by Moses for what he has done, makes excuses (xxxii. 15—24). The people are told to remove their ornaments (xxxiii. 5<sup>a, c</sup>, 6). How Moses used to take a tent, and pitch it outside the camp, and call it the Tent of Meeting: Moses used to go out to it from the camp to commune with Jehovah, who, when Moses entered the Tent, would descend in a pillar of cloud, and speak with him. Joshua was the custodian of the Tent (xxxiii. 7—11).

P (xxxiv. 29—35). How Moses' face used to shine, when he came down from communing with Jehovah on mount Sinai (the original sequel of xxv. 1—xxxi. 18<sup>a</sup>).

Chs. xxxv—xl. (P<sub>3</sub>). Execution of the directions given in chs. xxv—xxxi. for the construction of a sanctuary and the consecration of a priesthood: viz.

- a. The observance of the Sabbath; presentation of contributions for the work by the people; appointment of Bezal'el and Oholiab (xxxv. 1—xxxvi. 7).
- b. The curtains, and wooden framework, of the 'Dwelling,' the veil, and the screen (xxxvi. 8—38).
- c. The Ark, Table of Presence-bread, Candlestick, Altar of incense, Anointing Oil, and Incense (ch. xxxvii.).
- d. The Altar of burnt-offering, the Bronze Laver, the Court round the Tabernacle, and the account of the amount of metal used in the work (ch. xxxviii.).
- e. The vestments for the priests, and the delivery to Moses of the completed work of the Tabernacle (ch. xxxix.). The account of the consecration of the priests follows in Lev. viii.
- f. Erection of the Tabernacle on the first day of the second year of the Exodus (ch. xl.).

§ 4. HISTORY OF EGYPT DURING THE ISRAELITES' SOJOURN IN IT.

If the tradition recorded in Ex. i. 11 be correct,—and the fact is not of a nature likely to be falsified by tradition,—that the Israelites built Raamses and Pithom, the Pharaoh of the oppression must have been Rameses II (1300—1234 B.C.<sup>1</sup>); for M. Naville has already shewn that Pithom was founded by Rameses II; and it follows from this that the Rameses from whom Raamses derived its name will have been the same king. And Ex. ii. 23, iv. 19, naturally imply that, in the view of the narrator (J), the Pharaoh from whom in the end Moses delivered his people was the immediate successor of the Pharaoh of the oppression, i.e. the successor of Rameses II, Merenptah (1234—1214 B.C.).

Accepting, then, this date, let us survey very briefly the history and condition of Egypt during the time that the Israelites must have been resident in it. If the Exodus took place under Merenptah, and if the Israelites were really 430 years in Egypt (Ex. xii. 40),—which, however, is very uncertain (see p. xlv),—the migration of Jacob and his family must have taken place c. 1660—40 B.C., while the foreign kings, called the Hyksos, were ruling in Egypt, and not long before their expulsion in B.C. 1587<sup>2</sup>. Their rule was followed by that of the Eighteenth dynasty (B.C. 1587—1328). The Eighteenth dynasty had its seat at Thebes; its rule marked the most brilliant period of Egyptian history. Syene (now Assuān), at the first Cataract, marked the S. limit of Egypt proper (Ez. xxix. 10, xxx. 6, R.Vm.); but the third ruler of this Dynasty, Thothmes I (1541—1516), conquered Kush (Ethiopia) to above the third Cataract (19° 50' N.), marched his army through Palestine as far as Carchemish, on the Euphrates, and set up there two pillars to mark the limits of Egyptian territory in Asia. Thothmes III (1503—1449) made a series of expeditions into Asia. In his twenty-third year he advanced as far as Megiddo, where he defeated the combined forces of the peoples of Syria, who had united against him: the names of the 360 places which fell in consequence into his hands are inscribed upon the walls of the great temple of Ammon at Karnak. The first 119 of these places are within, or near, the border of Canaan: some of the identifications are uncertain: but those which are clear include, for instance, Megiddo, Taanach, Ibleam (Josh. xvii. 11), Acco, Joppa, Gezer, and Beth-anath (Jud. i. 33). See the 119 names in Petrie, Hist. of Egypt, ii. 323 ff. Other expeditions followed into the same regions. No other Egyptian king penetrated so far into Asia, or caused the name of Egypt to be so widely feared.

<sup>2</sup> The singular theory of Eerdmans (Expositor, Sept. 1908, p. 193 ff.) that the 'Hebrews' were distinct from the 'Israelites,' that the former were in Egypt from c. 1500 B.C. (for '400 years,' Gen. xv. 13), and the latter (including Joseph!) only from c. 1205 B.C. (for 'four generations,' Gen. xv. 16), and that the Exodus took place c. 1125 B.C. under Rameses XII, is too improbable to need serious discussion. Cf. Skinner, Genesis (1910), pp. xv, 502.

Some inscriptions from this reign contain interesting references to brick-making in Egypt. Thus the illustration given on p. 39 is accompanied by these inscriptions:

For the new building of the store-house of the god Amon, of Apt (Thebes).

Captives whom his Majesty carried away, building the temple of his father Amon.

The taskmaster says to his labourers, 'The stick is in my hand, be not idle.'

And another inscription, evidently part of a foreman's report, reads thus:

Number of builders, 12, besides men for moulding the bricks in their own towns (?), brought to work on the house. They are making the due number of bricks every day: they are not remiss in their labours for the new house. I have thus obeyed the command given by my master.

Under Amenhotep (Amenophis) III (1414—1383) the power of Egypt was at its height. The Tell el-Amarna letters (many of which belong to this reign) reveal to us the sovereigns of Babylonia, Assyria, Mitanni, and other nations eager to secure the friendship of Egypt. Vast temples were built by the king at Thebes; sculpture and other arts flourished as they had never done before. Amenophis IV (1383—1365) is remarkable as having effected a religious revolution in Egypt, and introduced a species of monotheism. He broke with the existing polytheism, dispossessed the various priesthoods, excised the name 'gods' wherever it appeared in the temples, and proclaimed as the sole god of Egypt the sun-god, whom Amenophis revered as the source of all life, power, and force in the universe<sup>1</sup>. This monotheism did not indeed long survive Amenophis himself; but it was a noteworthy phenomenon at the time. At a spot about 100 miles S. of Cairo, now called Tell el-Amarna, Amenophis IV built for himself a new capital, as a centre for this sun-worship; and it is the large collection of cuneiform tablets found there in 1887, belonging partly to the reign of Amenophis III, and partly to that of Amenophis IV, which has shed such a surprising light on the political condition of Syria and Palestine at the time. Both countries were provinces of Egypt, administered by Egyptian governors stationed in their principal fortresses. Under Amenophis IV, however, the authority of Egypt was considerably weakened: its supremacy was threatened partly by the Hittites, partly by formidable invading hordes called in the letters of Abdi-hiba, the governor of Jerusalem, Ḥabiri<sup>1</sup>, partly by the native population, and partly by intrigues and rivalries between the Egyptian governors themselves. In these letters to the Egyptian king, these governors frequently dilate upon the dangers to which they are exposed, and beg earnestly for military help: if it is not forthcoming, the country is lost to Egypt. Under the last few rulers of the Eighteenth dynasty (1365—1328) the power and prestige of Egypt diminished yet more; and the nations whom Thothmes III had made tributary recognized its supremacy no more. With the Nineteenth dynasty (1328—1202) however,—the seat of which was also at Thebes,—the position of Egypt improved. Seti I (1326—1300), its third ruler, in an expedition of his first year, recovered most of Palestine for Egypt. The Shasu (plundering Bedawi tribes from the desert on the S. of Canaan) were raiding and gaining a foothold in Southern Palestine<sup>2</sup>; Seti I, starting from the frontier-fortress of Zaru or Selle (see on Ex. xiii. 20), on the N.E. of the Delta (see the map), marched as far as the town of Pa-Kanana (probably somewhere on the S. frontier of Canaan), routing them in all directions<sup>1</sup>; he then pushed on northwards, capturing Megiddo, Tyre, and other towns on the way, as far as Tunip, 12 miles N. of Aleppo; after which he returned in triumph to Egypt. Scenes of this campaign are depicted on the north wall of the great hypostyle hall built by him at Karnak<sup>2</sup>; and a monument of Seti I's rule over Palestine is still preserved in the pillar, inscribed with his cartouche, discovered by G. A. Smith at Tell esh-Shihāb, 22 miles east of the Sea of Galilee<sup>3</sup>. His son, Rameses II, followed in his steps; and alike by his conquests and the number and magnificence of his buildings, proved himself, during his 67 years' reign (B.C. 1300—1234), one of the greatest monarchs who ever ruled over Egypt. Rameses II, in his second, fourth, fifth, and eighth years led a series of expeditions into Syria; in his fifth year he gained the famous victory over the Hittites at Kedesh on the Orontes, which was celebrated by the court-poet Pentaur; in his twenty-first year he concluded a treaty with the Hittites, the earliest treaty at present known to history, and, historically, a most important document. He moreover gained many successes in Libya, Nubia, and elsewhere. Monuments bearing his name have been found from the Nahr el-Kalb, near Beirut, in Syria, and Sheikh Sa'ad<sup>4</sup>, on the E. of the Sea of Galilee, 11 miles N. of Tell esh-Shihāb, to Napata in Ethiopia (about 18° 30' N.); his victories are represented, or described, on the walls of the great temples at Luxor, Abu-Simbel, and other places. Rameses II also built or renovated numerous temples—for instance, at Memphis, Abydos, Karnak, Luxor, and Abu-Simbel: he also in particular erected temples and other buildings in the Delta, especially in its eastern part, including the great temple at Tanis (Zoan), which he rebuilt, and decorated with numerous obelisks, &c, and the store-city of Pithom (Ex. i. 11)<sup>1</sup>.

The reign of Rameses II was remarkable also for the influence exerted at the time by Canaan and Syria upon Egypt. Even before this reign slaves from Charu and Canaan are frequently mentioned; and some of these had attained—like Joseph—positions of high honour in Egypt. Under Rameses II the number of such slaves had greatly increased: trade with Asia had also considerably developed, with the result that Asiatic luxuries, manufactures, and works of art were imported in great numbers into Egypt; and the latter even strongly influenced Egyptian art itself at the time. Many Canaanite,—i.e. virtually Hebrew—words also found their way at the same time into Egyptian literature<sup>2</sup>. The military expeditions into Asia had made the Egyptians acquainted with Canaan and Syria; and the knowledge of Canaan in particular possessed by Egyptians is well illustrated by the Travels of a Mohar, written under Rameses II, in which many places in Canaan are mentioned<sup>3</sup>.

With the death of Rameses II, the decline of Egypt began. Merenptah, who succeeded him, was his thirteenth son; he was born probably in the eighth year of his father's reign, so that at his accession he would be about 58 years of age<sup>4</sup>. Dated documents from his first to his eighth year are extant: Manetho, as reported by Josephus, and Africanus, assigned him 19—20 years<sup>5</sup>. Petrie, following Manetho, dates his reign 1234—1214 B.C.; Breasted, not going substantially beyond the documents, 1225—1215 B.C. Even before the close of Rameses' reign, the Teḥenu (Libyans), and other N. African tribes, had begun to plunder the western parts of the Delta and form settlements in it; in Merenptah's fifth year, in conjunction with hordes from the Mediterranean coasts,—the 'peoples of the sea,' as the Egyptians termed them,—they organised a great invasion of Egypt; and Merenptah's defeat of these invaders at Pr-yr<sup>1</sup> (probably in Middle Egypt), with the capture of a large amount of spoil, was his chief military success<sup>2</sup>. The victory, which delivered Egypt from a pressing danger, was celebrated with great rejoicings; an inscription, grandiloquently describing it, will be referred to immediately. The rest of Merenptah's reign was uneventful.

The death of Merenptah was the beginning of a conflict for the throne, which lasted for some years. Seti II was the successor of Merenptah. his reign was short (1214—1209), and marked by no event of importance. A period of anarchy followed, until Setnakht, perhaps a descendant of Rameses II, succeeded in exterminating the pretenders and restoring order (1203—1202 B.C.). His son began the 20th dynasty (1202—1102), consisting entirely of rulers bearing the name of Rameses, Rameses III to XII. Rameses III (1202—1171) was a vigorous and successful ruler: under him Egypt recovered much of its former prosperity. He repulsed successfully another combination of Libyans and the 'peoples of the sea'—a combination remarkable for including the Purasati, the 'Philistines' of Hebrew history, here for the first time mentioned in the Egyptian records, whose original home was Crete (Am ix. 7), but who shortly afterwards founded a permanent settlement in the S.W. corner of Palestine, where they maintained themselves for many centuries. After this, the Egyptian possessions in Phoenicia and Canaan were threatened by an invading horde of peoples from the North. to repel them, Rameses III found it necessary twice to march his forces through Canaan; on each occasion he defeated the invaders somewhere in the territory of Amurri (the Amorites) on the N. of Canaan. Rameses III possessed immense wealth which enabled him to erect many public buildings, including in particular a magnificent temple at Medinet Abu, on the walls of which the record of his achievements was inscribed: he also, as the Papyrus Harris, written during the reign of his successor, informs us, gave offerings of fabulous value to the temples<sup>1</sup>. The reigns of Rameses IV—XII do not call here for special notice.

Some inscriptions belonging to Merenptah's reign must now be noticed. From the time of the 12th dynasty onwards the N. E. frontier of Egypt, from the N. end of the Gulf of Suez—which was then perhaps at L. Timsâh<sup>2</sup>—to the Mediterranean Sea, was protected by a line of forts, guarded by troops<sup>3</sup>; and, at least under Merenptah, no one was allowed to pass any of these forts in either direction without giving the officer in command his name, his position, and the object of his journey, and producing the letters he bore. By a happy chance, fragments of the frontier diary kept at this time by Paembesa, a scribe, stationed, it seems, in the fortress Zaru (p. 112), have been preservêd<sup>4</sup>; and here are two of the entries in it:

Third year, 15th of Pachon. There went up the servant of Ba'al, Roy, son of Zeper, of Gaza, who had with him for Syria two letters, as follows: (for) the captain of infantry, Chay, one letter; (for) the chief of Tyre, Baalat-Remeg, one letter.

Third year, 17th of Pachon. There arrived the captains of the archers of the Well of Merenptah, which is (on) the highland, to report (?) in the castle (khetem) which is in Zaru.

There are also three other similar entries, the whole shewing that 'in ten days there were eight important people passing the frontier and seven official despatches, implying much intercourse across the long and forbidding desert journey<sup>1</sup>.'

From Merenptah's eighth year, we have the following report of an Egyptian officer, stating that permission had been given to certain Bedawi tribes to pass the southern frontier-fort, at Thukke, in order to pasture their cattle near Pithom:

Another matter for the satisfaction of my master's heart. We have allowed the tribes of the Shasu (Bedawin) of Atuma to pass the castle (khetem) of King Merenptah which is in Thukke, to the lakes of Pithom, of King Merenptah in Thukke, in order to find sustenance for themselves and their cattle in the domain of Pharaoh, who is the beneficent sun in every land. In the year 8...<sup>2</sup>.

This inscription is of extreme interest. Pithom is only a few miles E. of Goshen; and the permission given to these Bedawi tribes to settle about it, for the sake of their flocks and herds, forms a close parallel to the permission given to Jacob and his sons to settle in Goshen for the same purpose<sup>3</sup>.

From the reign of Merenptah's successor, Sêti II (1214—1209), we have the report of a scribe, who had been sent out to overtake two fugitive slaves of the Egyptian king:

I started from the court of the palace (at Tanis or Memphis?) on the 9th of Epiphi (July), in the evening, in pursuit of two slaves. Now I arrived at the fortified enclosure of Thukke on the 10th of Epiphi, and was told that they had spoken of the south (i.e. spoken of taking the southern route?), and that they had passed on on the 9th of Epiphi. I went to the castle (khetem),—viz. of Thukke,—and was told, 'The horseman (or groom), who comes from abroad [says] that they passed the northern wall of the watch-tower (mektol = Heb. migdol) of Seti Merenptah (Seti II).'

This 'mektol' may be the 'Migdol' of Ex. xiv. 2: as there must have been other 'towers' to protect the N.E. frontier, more cannot be said; still, as Thukke will have been Succoth (see on Ex. xii. 37), the fugitives will have followed approximately the route taken before them by the Israelites.

We come now to the famous stelè, discovered in 1896, in the Theban necropolis at Kurnah, in the funeral temple of Merenptah, on which mention is made of 'Israel.' The inscription, which is dated on the day of the battle, is a song of triumph, describing, in grandiloquent language, the great defeat of Libyans in the king's fifth year, mentioned above; and the peace, unruffled by the signs or sound of war, which afterwards prevailed in the land. The writer continues:

No longer is there the lament of sighing man. The villages are again settled. He who has tilled his crop will eat it. Ra has turned himself to Egypt. King Merenptah is born for the purpose of avenging it. Chiefs are prostrate, saying 'Salâm' (i.e. supplicating for mercy). Not one among the Nine Bows (the Barbarians) raises his head. Vanquished are the Tehenu (Libyans); the Khita (Hittites) are pacified. Canaan is seized with every evil; Ashkelon is carried away; Gezer is taken; Yenoam is annihilated; Ysiraal is desolated, its seed (or fruit) is not. Charu (perhaps the Horites, the old population of Edom) has become as widows for Egypt (i.e. is helpless before the attacks of Egypt); all lands together are at peace.

The tenor of the inscription seems to imply that at the beginning of Merenptah's reign there had been a revolt among the subjects of Egypt in Palestine, and that the Pharaoh had made a successful expedition into Canaan, and reduced them<sup>1</sup>.

While the other places or peoples mentioned in the inscription have the determinative for 'country,' the name 'Israel' has the determinative for 'men': the reference is consequently to 'Israel' as a tribe or people; and from the context in which it is mentioned, among various conquered towns or districts in Palestine, it is plain that it is represented as resident in Canaan itself, though scarcely as occupying the whole of the country, but rather a district of it (by the side of Gezer, Charu, &c.). How is the notice to be accommodated to what we learn from other sources of the history of Israel at the time? As Petrie remarks, the notice is a very surprising one. From the Old Testament we should infer that there were no Israelites in Palestine between the migration into Egypt, and the entry at Jericho under Joshua, whereas here are Israelites mentioned in the midst of various districts and places in Canaan. It is difficult to escape the conclusion that there were Israelites settled in Canaan before the entry into it of the Israelite tribes who came out of Egypt with Moses<sup>1</sup>. Petrie (p. 114) is of opinion that there were Israelites left behind, or immediately returning, after the famine of Joseph, and that they kept up the family traditions about the sites in Canaan which were known in later times. The Egyptologist, Spiegelberg<sup>2</sup>, supposes that they were descendants of the Ḥabiri, or 'Hebrews' (p. xxxiii), who are mentioned in Abdi-ḥiba's letters (c. 1400 B.C.) as making incursions into Palestine<sup>3</sup>. The Biblical accounts of the Exodus are not contemporary: the traditions embodied in them relate solely to the Hebrews who escaped from Egypt. It is possible that these were in reality only a section of the entire nation, and that the representation which we have in Genesis and Exodus of all the house of Jacob migrating into Egypt to join Joseph there, or of all Jacob's descendants leaving it at the Exodus, may have arisen only afterwards, when the nation had become consolidated, and it was natural to think of their ancestors as having all had a common experience in Egypt.

Are the 'Hebrews' mentioned in the Egyptian inscriptions? The eminent French Egyptologist, M. Chabas, argued forcibly in his Mélanges Égyptologiques<sup>1</sup> that a foreign people called Āperu or 'Āpriu', mentioned in inscriptions from the reign of Thothmes III (1503—1449 B.C.) to Rameses IV (1171—1165), as doing either forced labour or other service for the Pharaoh, were the Hebrews: his conclusion, though accepted by Ebers, was controverted by Brugsch and other authorities<sup>2</sup>, and has met generally with little favour. Recently, however, it has been revived, and supported by arguments of considerable weight<sup>3</sup>. The following are the texts in which the Āperu are mentioned:

1. In a tale (not a contemporary document) respecting the taking of Joppa by Tahutia, a general of Thothmes III, it is said that, having by a ruse obtained admission into the city, he sent a message to the troops outside by 'one of the Āperu'<sup>4</sup>.

2. In a report addressed to an official of the reign of Rameses II there occur the words: 'To rejoice the heart of my lord. I have obeyed the message of my lord, in which he said, Give corn to the native soldiers, and also to the Āpuriu, who are bringing up stones for the great tower of Pa-Ramesu.... I have given them their corn every month, according to the instructions of my lord.'

3. In another report of the same age we read: I have hearkened to my lord's message, 'Give provisions to the soldiers and to the Āperu, who bring up stones for Rā (the sun-god), viz. for Rā of Rameses Meri Amen in the S. quarter of Memphis' (i.e. for the temple of Ra which Rameses II had built there).

4. Under Rameses III, the first king of the 20th dynasty (1202—1171 B.C.), there are mentioned, among the people attached to the great temple of Tum at Heliopolis (in the Delta, about 7 miles N.E. of Cairo),

5. In a rock-inscription, in one of the barren valleys of the Hammâmât mountains (a little N. of Thebes), it is stated that Rameses IV sent an expedition to the quarries in these mountains. The number of people that were sent down was 8368: among them were '800 Āperu of the bow-troops (barbarian auxiliaries<sup>2</sup>) of Anu<sup>3</sup>.

There were thus Āperu described as acting under Thothmes III as attendants on the king; and under the other kings mentioned, as settled in colonies in Egypt, and engaged in the work of quarrying or carrying stone for various public buildings. The name is each time followed by the determinative sign indicating a foreign population<sup>4</sup>. It agrees, according to the laws of Egyptian transcription, with the name עברים ('Hebrews'); and the occupations of the Āperu were similar to those of the Hebrews. There certainly seems to be a reasonable probability that the two names are identical; and that the Āperu of the Egyptian inscriptions were detachments of the 'Hebrews' mentioned in Exodus, employed in various capacities by the Pharaohs. If this conclusion is correct, and the Exodus took place under Merenptah, we must suppose that the Āperu mentioned under Rameses III and IV were bodies, or the descendants of bodies, which were perhaps separated from the Hebrews of Goshen and employed in other parts of Egypt, under Rameses II and Merenptah, and who might thus have been left behind at the time of the Exodus<sup>5</sup>.

§ 5. HISTORICAL AND RELIGIOUS CHARACTER OF EXODUS.

If the conclusions of criticism are correct, and, to quote the words of such a cautious and circumspect scholar as the late Professor Davidson<sup>1</sup>, 'we have no literature from the period of the Exodus itself,' but only 'the view of this period taken in the 9th and 8th centuries B.C.,' in what light are we to view the narratives of the Exodus? It is a primary canon of historical criticism that a first-class historical authority must be contemporary (or nearly so) with the events which it purports to relate: if, therefore, the narratives of Exodus were not committed to writing till several centuries after the Exodus took place, what value is to be attached to them? The two earliest narratives are undoubtedly those denoted by J and E: these are based upon the oral traditions current in the 9th or 8th centuries B.C., upon customs and institutions in force at the time, and upon collections of—in all probability—written laws. P dates from a later age, and exhibits the form which historical tradition and must be some confusion with the Israelites,—see Ewald, Hist. of Isr. i. 387 ff.; Petrie, Hist. of Eg. i. 233—5, ii. 21 f.; Breasted, Hist. of Eg. 216 f. The Hyksos retired in fact to a place generally identified with Sharuhen in Simeon (Josh. xix. 6), where they were besieged by the Egyptians for six years (Petrie, ii. 22; Breasted, p. 218); and this, no doubt, led to their confusion with the Israelites: but the account throws no real light upon the Exodus.

It is remarkable what little impress the residence of the Israelites in Egypt left upon either their language or their institutions. On the former, see LOT. p. 125 f., DB. ii. 775,—adding here, the proper names Moses, Putiel and Phinehas (see on ii. 10, vi. 25); of the latter, the ark may have been suggested by Egyptian analogies (EB. i. 307; cf. below, p. 269),—possibly, also, the high priest's ephod (DB. i. 725<sup>b</sup> n., and below, p. 312), and the jewelled front of the pouch of judgement (EHH. 199; cf. Erman, 298); but the two latter, whether of Egyptian origin or not, will have been of later introduction.

ritual institutions had assumed in priestly circles at this later time<sup>1</sup>. J and E, being earlier than P, though the form in which many of their narratives are cast owes much to the literary power of the narrators, contain far more genuine historical reminiscences than P does. And it will be noticed that these two narratives, while differing more or less in details, are often in substance very similar: the differences are not greater than might easily arise, if the same materials were handed down orally by different channels through several generations, and thrown finally into a literary form by different hands. We cannot press details: but it is hypercritical to doubt that the outline of the narratives which have thus come down to us by two channels, is historical. The narratives of J and E cannot be mere fictions: those wonderful pictures of life, and character, and ever-varying incident, though, as we know them, they may owe something of their charm to their painters' skill, cannot but embody substantial elements of fact. That the ancestors—or (p. xl) some of the ancestors—of the later Israelites were for long settled in Egypt, and, in the end, subjected there to hard bondage; that Moses was the leader who, after much opposition on the part of the Pharaoh, rescued them from their thralldom at a time when Egypt was paralysed by an unprecedented succession of national calamities, and led them through a part of the Red Sea usually covered with water beyond reach of their recent oppressors; that he brought them afterwards to a mountain where Israel received through him a revelation which was a new departure in the national religion, and became the foundation both of the later religion of Israel, and of Christianity; that he originated, or, more probably, adapted, customs and institutions from which the later civil and religious organization of the nation was developed; and that thus Israel owed to Moses both its national existence and, ultimately, its religious character,—these, and other facts such as these, cannot be called in question by a reasonable criticism<sup>1</sup>. Moses, in particular, bulks too largely in the Pentateuchal narratives to be anything but a historical person, of whose life and character many trustworthy traditions were preserved.

How long the Israelites had been sojourners in Egypt cannot be determined with certainty. There is nothing in the Book of Genesis to indicate what king, or even what dynasty, was ruling when Jacob and his sons joined Joseph in Egypt<sup>2</sup>. In the Old Testament 400 (Gen. xv. 13 J) or 430 years (Ex. xii. 40 P), and also four generations (Gen. xv. 16 J; cf. Ex. ii. 1 E, vi. 16, 18, 20 P, with the notes on ii. 1 and vi. 27), are assigned as the period of their sojourn there. The two statements may have been harmonized by the supposition that a 'generation' at the period in question consisted of 100 years: but naturally it cannot have done so in reality. The length of the Israelites' sojourn in Egypt must thus be left an open question: if (p. xl<sup>iii</sup>) the Āperu are the Hebrews, there were some Hebrews in the service of Thothmes III, 220 years before the Exodus.

Of the condition of the Israelites in Egypt, practically nothing is known, beyond what can be inferred by conjecture from analogy. We must picture them as a body of settlers numbering (Petrie<sup>3</sup>) some 5—6000 souls, settled in 'Goshen,'

<sup>3</sup> Researches in Sinai (1906), p. 207 f. The present entire population of the Peninsula of Sinai is 5—7000; and the 60—80 square miles of Goshen would support, on an agricultural basis, about 20,000 people, but a much smaller pastoral population, such as the Hebrews were (ibid.). 'Thus we may put the case in brief by saying that not more i.e. (Naville ; see on viii. 22) the fertile district at the W. end of Wady Ṭumîat (see the Map) within 'the triangle lying between Şaft, Belbeis, and Tel eḷ-Kebir,' covering an area of about 70 square miles. These settlers will have had the same simple habits of life, with elementary institutions for the maintenance of justice and order—tribal leaders, Sheikhs acting as judges, councils of elders, simple rules for the punishment of offenders, rudimentary religious observances—which are still in operation among nomad Arab tribes. In all probability they were of little importance in the eyes of the Egyptians. 'In the eyes of their Egyptian contemporaries,' writes Prof. Sayce<sup>1</sup>, 'the Israelites were but one of many Shasu or Bedawin tribes who had settled in the pasture lands of the Eastern Delta. Their numbers were comparatively insignificant, their social standing obscure. They were doubtless as much despised and avoided by the Egyptians of their day as similar Bedawin tribes are by the Egyptians of the present day. They lived apart from the natives of the country, and the occupation they pursued was regarded as fit only for the outcasts of mankind.' Their growing numbers made them dangerous, because, 'in case of invasion, they might assist the enemy and expose Egypt to another Asiatic conquest. Hence came the determination to transform them into public serfs, and even to destroy them altogether. The free Bedawin-like settlers in Goshen, who had kept apart from their Egyptian neighbours, and had been unwilling to perform even agricultural work, were made the slaves of the State. They were taken from their herds and sheep, from their independent life on the outskirts of the Delta, and compelled' than about 5000 people could be taken out of Goshen or into Sinai.' To the same effect, Egypt and Israel, p. 41 f. The number implied by the statements in the Pentateuch is at least 2,000,000 souls; and a number such as this could have been supported neither in Goshen nor in the barely clad and scantily watered wādys and plains around Sinai (p. 178). Petrie's own explanation of the high numbers (ibid. p. 43 ff) is, however, not probable: see below, p. 101.

to do field-labour, to make bricks, and build for the Pharaoh his store-cities of Pithom and Raamses.

The measures taken subsequently by the Pharaoh to check the still increasing numbers of the Israelites, need not here be recounted in detail. How Moses escaped a watery death in the Nile is told in Ex. ii. 1—10: here it need only be remarked that the common opinion, based on Acts vii. 22, that he was instructed in 'all the wisdom of the Egyptians,' has no support in the OT. itself, and is simply (see p. 11 f.) an imaginative development, which elsewhere we first find in Philo, of the Biblical statement that he 'became a son' to Pharaoh's daughter. Moses' abortive attempt to help his brethren resulted in his flight into the land of Midian (ii. 15), where he became son-in-law to the priest of Midian. In the solitudes of 'Horeb' Moses had those mysterious communings with God, in which he first felt the inward call to become his people's deliverer, and, by a series of Divine monitions, overcame, one after another, the difficulties which his diffidence suggested to him—his unfitness either to treat with the Pharaoh, or to become the leader of his people, his uncertainty as to the name of the God who had sent him, his apprehensions that the Israelites would not listen to him or believe in his Divine commission, and his lack of fluency to convince or persuade them (iii. 11—iv. 17). To meet the special difficulty that he will not be listened to, he is endowed with thaumaturgic powers, and instructed to do signs to satisfy (J) the Israelites (iv. 1—9, 30<sup>b</sup>), and (E) the Pharaoh (iv. 17, 21<sup>a</sup>, 28), of his Divine commission. That Moses may have felt such difficulties is, psychologically, extremely probable, though the details of the manner in which he experienced and overcame them may be largely due to the narrators.

A difficulty is sometimes felt as to what is meant when God is described as 'speaking' to a man. As Delitzsch has remarked (on Gen. xii. 1), His voice in such cases 'is to be thought of, not as something external, but as heard within his inmost soul.' And so, when a prophet says, 'And God said,' 'Thus saith the LORD,' &c., what he means is that he is conscious of an impulse or direction, not his own, being given to his thoughts, the result of which, as he describes it, he puts into his own words, and expresses in the style peculiar to himself. And this is why the Divine thought assumes different forms in different writers: it is in each case coloured by the human medium through which it has passed. Thus in the Pentateuch the words said to have been spoken to Moses, or the laws given to him, must not be thought of as if they were spoken or given exactly as they stand: the impulse, or superintending influence, moved the hearts and minds of those concerned—whether Moses, or some later lawgiver, or the narrator, as the case may be—in the required direction: but the words in which the result of this Divine operation is expressed, are supplied by the human individuality of the speaker or writer: hence both here and elsewhere in the OT. the Divine thought and the human expression of it are inseparably combined. Comp. the writer's sermons on the Voice of God in the OT., and on Inspiration, in his Sermons on the OT. pp. 135 f., 148 ff.

The origin of the name Yahweh is still uncertain. Whether the explanation of it, as meaning He will be, suggested in Ex. iii. 14 (see the note), gives its real etymology is doubtful: more probably this verse gives the deeper theological sense in which the name was understood, when the writer (E) lived. E, at least by implication (iii. 13—15), and P expressly (vi. 3), regard it as originating in the Mosaic age; J, on the other hand, represents it as having been in use from the very beginning of the history (Gen. ii. 4<sup>b</sup>, 5, &c.). There may be elements of truth in each of these representations, though neither may be true entirely. It is not likely that Moses would come to his people in the name of an entirely unknown deity—indeed, in E it is expressly stated that it is the God of their fathers whom he is to introduce to the people (iii. 6): on the other hand, it is not likely that the name was known from the very beginning of history. It is remarkable that, while proper names compounded with Yahweh (Yāhū, Yāh, Yēhō-) are abundant during the monarchy and later, the only names so compounded occurring in the whole of the Hexateuch are Jochébed (the mother of Moses), and Joshua. In the Book of Judges, the only names so formed (besides Joshua) are Joash, Jotham, Jonathan (Moses' grandson, xviii. 30), and Micaiah (Jud. xvii. 1, 4 Heb.). Proper names compounded with a Divine name are so very common in Heb., that these facts tend to shew that the name Yahweh was of recent introduction even in the time of the Judges. Yahweh is closely associated with Sinai: Sinai is called a 'mountain of God' before Moses visited it (see on iii. 1); thither Moses led his people after the Exodus; there Jehovah manifested Himself in the storm-clouds that gathered, and in the lightnings which played, about its mountain summit<sup>1</sup>; there He revealed His will to Moses, and gave His covenant to Israel (Ex. xix.—xxiv.); thence He marched forth, in thunderstorm and cloud<sup>2</sup>, to lead Israel into Canaan (Dt. xxxiii. 2)—

Jehovah came from Sinai,
And beamed forth from Seir [Edom] unto them;
He shined forth from mount Paran<sup>3</sup>,

And came from holy myriads [read probably, with a very slight change in the Heb., from Meribath-Kadesh]; and thither also Elijah repaired (1 K. xix. 8 ff.), to find Divine encouragement in his despair. Yahweh must thus have been a God who, in some very special sense, had His home on Sinai; and whose worship, in some fuller and more formal sense than had previously been the case, was there accepted by the Israelites. From the connexion of Moses with the Kenite (Jud. iv. 11) Jethro (Ex. ii., xviii.), and the friendliness which subsisted afterwards between Israel and the Kenites (Jud. i. 16; 1 S. xv. 6), it has been supposed that Yahweh was the God of the

Kenites, and that Israel at Sinai adopted His worship from them. But this view would imply that there was no connexion between Yahweh and Israel before Moses became the son-in-law of Jethro, which is not probable: a new and foreign deity would hardly have been so rapidly accepted by the Israelites. We are in the region of conjectures: but there are reasons for believing (pp. xl, 416) that 'the whole of the tribes of Israel did not undergo serfdom in Egypt, but that part of them led the life of nomads in the neighbourhood of Sinai, and had for long worshipped the god that was established there' (Kautzsch, DB. v. 627<sup>a</sup>). Another conjecture (ibid. 627<sup>b</sup>) is that Yahweh was the God who was recognised by Moses' own tribe; cf. iii. 6 'the God of thy father,' xv. 2 'my father's God.' In either of these cases Yahweh would not have been an entirely new and strange God: and Moses' work would have consisted in proclaiming as the God of the whole body of Israel the God whom part of them already worshipped, and in binding their various branches into a closer unity by the worship of a single deity (cf. McNeile, pp. cxiii, 21).

The name, 'Yahweh,' it now seems, was not confined to Israel. It occurs, to all appearance, in Babylonian texts dating long before the age of Moses. Some of the instances that have been adduced are questioned by some Assyriologists<sup>1</sup>: but, disregarding these, we have<sup>2</sup>, from the Hammurabi period, the proper names Ya-u-um-ilu, 'Ya-u is God' (=the Heb. 'Jo'el,' at least as usually explained), and Ya-ma-e-ra-ak, 'Yama (or Yawa) is the moon<sup>3</sup>,' and, from c. 15—1400, during the Cassite period, Ya-u-ba-ni ('Yau is creator'), Ya-u-a [also = 'Jehu' on the Black Obelisk of Shalmaneser], Ya-ai-u, Ya-a-u, and Ya-a-u-tum negotiations with the Pharaoh, which now follow, are fruitless. The Pharaoh—whatever Merenptah was in actual history—wears in Hebrew tradition the character of a self-willed, obstinate despot, who persistently hardens himself against God, and resists all warnings. The request that the Israelites may go for three days into the wilderness to sacrifice to Jehovah is peremptorily refused by him, and the Israelites' tasks are increased (ch. v.).

(with the caritative affix -tum<sup>1</sup>). We have also, from Taanach, in Canaan itself, c. 1350 B.C., the name Ahi-yami, i.e., apparently, 'Yah is a brother (or, my brother),' corresponding to the Heb. Ahijah ('Ahi-yahu'). There is, however, no evidence whatever that 'Ya-u' belonged to the Babylonian pantheon; and Assyriologists agree that the Bab. names, in which 'Ya-u' appears, are those of West-Semitic, or 'Amorite,' settlers. The names are at present [Dec. 1910] isolated; but they seem sufficiently to shew that a West-Semitic deity, Ya-u, was known as early as c. 2100 B.C. Nothing, however, is at present known about the character or attributes associated with Ya-u. But even though we should in the future learn more about Ya-u than we know at present, and even though it should be shewn that the Heb. name 'Yahweh' was really derived from Ya-u, the fact, though of high interest historically, would be of no importance theologically. The source from which either this or any other divine name was ultimately derived by the Hebrews, matters little or nothing: the question which is of importance is, What did the name come to mean to them? What, to them, was its theological content? What are the character and attributes of the Being whom it is actually used in the O.T. to denote? The name, it may be,—we cannot at present say more,—came to Israel from the outside. 'But into that vessel a long line of prophets from Moses onward, poured such a flood of attributes as never a priest in all Western Asia, from Babylonia to the Sea, ever dreamed of in his highest moments of spiritual insight. In this name, and through Israel's history, God chose to reveal Himself to the world. Therein lies the supreme and lonesome superiority of Israel over Babylonia<sup>2</sup>.' Whatever the name may have been in its origin, it came to be the name of the One and only God; and hence we can await in perfect calmness whatever the future may have to disclose to us with regard to its ultimate origin, or its pre-Israelitic use.

The account of the plagues follows. There is no occasion to repeat here either the details of the narrative, or particulars respecting the differences of representation in the different narratives: some general remarks on the whole will suffice. As is shewn in detail in the notes, the plagues all stand in close connexion with the natural conditions of Egypt, and, as represented in the narrative, are in fact just miraculously intensified forms of the diseases or other natural occurrences to which the country is still more or less liable. Every June, when the annual inundation begins, the Nile assumes a reddish colour, due to the red marl brought down from the Abyssinian mountains. Frogs, gnats, flies, and locusts are common pests of the country. Destructive murrains or cattle plagues have occurred in Egypt during the last century. Cutaneous eruptions ('boils') are common there. Hailstones, accompanied by lightning, though unusual, are not unknown. The darkness was probably the result of the hot wind called the Hamsin, which blows at intervals for nearly two months every year, frequently fills the air with thick clouds of dust and sand, and obliges people, while it lasts, to remain indoors. Malignant epidemics, accompanied sometimes by great mortality, are frequently mentioned by historians and travellers. It is highly improbable that the narrative of the plagues rests upon no basis of fact. No doubt, Egypt was visited at the time by an unusual combination of natural calamities, which materially facilitated the Israelite exodus. If, however, it is true that the narratives are all of much later date than the events themselves, it must be left an open question how far their miraculous character can be insisted on.

The hand of God, it must be remembered, is as really and as fully present in the ordinary course of nature as in the most amazing miracle; and the ordinary course of nature is in reality infinitely more marvellous and astounding than any miracle can be. It may thus have been, as Dr McNeile says (p. 43 f.), that 'the divine power of God worked in Egypt by means of a wonderful series of natural phenomena; and the religious instinct of the Hebrew narrators seized upon these as signs of God's favour to the Israelites and of punishment to their oppressors. This religious conviction led, as time went on, to accretions and amplifications; and the stories, in the course of frequent and triumphant repetitions, acquired more and more of what is popularly called "miracle"<sup>1</sup>. The earliest mention of the plagues is in the narrative of J. In such remains of E as have been preserved the wonders are greater than in J,—their arrival being, for instance, brought about by Moses' rod or hand; and in P they are still greater than in E.

With the tenth Plague, and the Exodus immediately following it, are connected in J and P alike—nothing of E bearing on the same subjects has been preserved—the institution of the Passover (xii. 1—13, 43—50 P; xii. 21—27 J), and of the Feast of Unleavened Cakes (xii. 14—20 P; xiii. 3—10 J), and the law dedicating the first-born to Jehovah (xiii. 1—2 P; xiii. 11—16 J). As in other cases (cf. DB. iii. 70 f.), the earlier forms of the regulations on these subjects are those given by J: P gives them in the form which they had assumed in the later period of the history. The Passover, there are reasons for supposing, was, at least in its primitive form, a pre-Mosaic institution. It was originally, it has thus been supposed, a pre-Mosaic spring-offering of propitiation, and of communion with the Deity, offered annually for the purpose of protecting tents and flocks from pestilence or other misfortune during the coming year, and of renewing by a common sacred meal a sense of communion with the Deity. The Feast of Unleavened Cakes—like those of Weeks and Ingathering—was clearly intended originally to mark a stage in the agricultural operations of the year (see on xxiii. 14—17): it was a feast of thanksgiving to Jehovah observed at the beginning of barley harvest. Why this feast was observed in particular by eating unleavened cakes is uncertain: for conjectures, see p. 242.

Both the primitive 'Passover,' and the Feast of Unleavened Cakes, were, however, celebrated in spring; and so, not unnaturally, they were united. The spring was also the time of year at which the Israelites left Egypt: a great plague was in reality the immediate occasion of the Exodus; and thus these two feasts came to be interpreted as memorials of the event (see pp. 407—412). The statement (xii. 39, cf. 34) that the people in their trepidation were able only to take unleavened cakes, appears indeed to shew that already when J wrote the Feast of Unleavened Cakes was associated with the Exodus. The dedication of the firstborn was doubtless an ancient custom, the real origin of which can only be conjectured. It may be that the firstborn were dedicated to Jehovah, as the first gift of God after marriage; but as it certainly was a Canaanite practice (see Mic. vi. 7), at least upon occasion, to sacrifice the firstborn, the Hebrew custom may have stood in some relation to this: the firstborn of the Hebrews, like those of their neighbours, were still sacred to the national deity; they were, however, not given over to Him as a sacrifice, but redeemed at a money-valuation (xiii. 13): the dedication of the firstborn to the Deity was thus rendered morally harmless. The custom was, however, one of which the real origin was unknown, or forgotten: and so a theological explanation was found in the thought that it was because Jehovah had smitten the firstborn of the Egyptians (xiii. 15)<sup>1</sup>. See further p. 409f.

'The exact line of march pursued by the people after leaving

Goshen cannot now be traced<sup>1</sup>. Of the 40 stations mentioned in Num. xxxiii. (P) as passed by the Israelites between Rameses and the steppes of Moab, the names of most have entirely disappeared; and the only stations of which the sites can be said to be certain are 'Ezion-geber, Kadesh, Dibon, and Nebo. Even the site of Sinai is not beyond question (see p. 189 f.); and the other places mentioned can only be located conjecturally. The Israelites started (Ex. xii. 37) from Rameses, not improbably (see on i. 11) er-Refābeh, 10 miles W. of Pithom, passed Succoth (xii. 37), which is almost certainly the Egyptian Thukke,—either the district round Pithom, or a city very near it; and then (xiii. 20) encamped at Etham, on the 'edge of the wilderness.' The site of Etham is quite uncertain; but it was presumably some place 4—5 miles N. of L. Timsāh, on the W. 'edge' of the wilderness E. of the isthmus. Instead, however, of going on from Etham, by the direct route to Canaan, through the later 'land of the Philistines,' they made a sharp turn back, towards the (Egyptian) wilderness to the (west side of) the 'Sea of reeds' (the Red Sea),—i.e. either as far as the west side of the present Gulf of Suez, or if, as is very probable (see p. 126), this gulf, at the time of the Exodus, extended northwards as far as L. Timsāh, to some point on the W. of this northern extension, the position of which, as the sites of Pi-hahiroth, Migdol, and Ba'al-zēphon (Ex. xiv. 2) are all entirely unknown (p. 122 f.), cannot be fixed with certainty, but where, no doubt,—as even Naville and Dawson suppose,—the water was shallow. M. Naville thinks that the passage took place between L. Timsāh and the Bitter Lakes, a little N. of the 'Serapeum' (see the map); Sir J. W. Dawson considers that the best place would have been near the S. end of the great Bitter Lake, between the present railway stations Fâyd and Geneffa (cf. p. 126). Wherever the point which the Israelites reached was, the Egyptian wilderness seemed to have 'shut them in' (xiv. 3): the sea was in front of them; and to the Egyptians it appeared that they had but to follow them in order to have them in their power. But the waters were shallow : a high wind arose in the night, and, aided perhaps by a low tide, drove the waters aside, leaving a relatively dry passage (xiv. 21), by which the Israelites were able to cross. The Egyptians pursued after them : but the storm increased in violence (cf. Ps. lxxvii. 17—19); they were terrified (if Ex. xiv. 24 is rightly interpreted) by the lightnings that burst from a heavy cloud near ; the wheels of their chariots became clogged in the wet sand ; they saw that further advance was impossible, and beat a speedy retreat. But meanwhile the wind had suddenly veered ; and in the early morning the waters returned, sweeping the Egyptians away before they could regain secure ground (xiv. 27<sup>b</sup>, xv. 10). The Exodus was thus accomplished ; and the Israelites were safe on the E. side of the 'Sea of reeds.' The deliverance was a great one, and it was fraught with momentous consequences for the future : but either tradition, or poetic imagination, or both, magnified it into one of altogether incredible dimensions : a pathway cut through the sea, with a wall of water standing up on each side (xiv. 22, 29 P ; cf. xv. 8), and 2,000,000 persons (p. 101); with tents, baggage, and cattle, passing through it in a single night !

'Egypt is the most conservative of countries, and the children of Israel still have their representatives in it. The Bedawin still feed their flocks, and enjoy an independent existence on the outskirts of the cultivated land. Even when they adopt a settled agricultural life, they still claim immunity from the burdens of their fellaḥin neighbours on the ground of their Bedawin descent. They are exempt from the conscription and the corvée, the modern equivalents of the forced brickmaking of the Mosaic age. The attempt to interfere with these privileges has actually led to an exodus in our own time. Yakub Artin Pasha has told me that his father, the famous Hekekyan Bey, always maintained that he had seen with his own eyes the Israelites departing from Egypt. The Wady Tūmilat, the Goshen of old days, was colonised with Arabs from the Nejd and Babylonia by Mohammed Ali, who wished to employ them in the culture of the silkworm. Here they lived with their flocks and cattle, protected by the Government, and exempt from taxation, from military service, and the corvée. Mohammed Ali died, however; and an attempt was made to force them into the army, and lay upon them the ordinary burdens of taxation. Thereupon, in a single night, the whole population silently departed with all their possessions, leaving behind them nothing but the hearths of their deserted homes. They made their way back to their kinsfolk eastward of Egypt, and the Wady Tumilat fell into the state of desolation in which it was found by M. Lesseps when he excavated the Freshwater Canal<sup>1</sup>.

The passage of the Red Sea was ever afterwards remembered in Israel with feelings of gratitude and triumph, as a signal deliverance, completing the Exodus, and securing the nation's independence (see the passages cited on p. 131 f.). The couplet Ex. xv. 1<sup>b</sup> (comp. v. 21) may have been sung on the occasion itself; but the hymn which follows (vv. 2—18), there are reasons for thinking, is the development by a later poet, in fine and striking imagery, of thoughts suggested, partly by v. 1<sup>b</sup>, partly by the successful advance of Israel afterwards through the territory of hostile nations, till they were planted securely in their home in Canaan (see pp. 129, 130 f.).

The Israelites, after their passage through the sea, 'went out into the wilderness of Shur' (Ex. xv. 22), i.e. into the desert region on the E. of the present Isthmus of Suez. They journeyed in this wilderness for three days,—i.e. for some forty miles,—but found no water. At last they came to Marah (xv. 23), where the bitter waters were sweetened by Moses. After Marah, the stations mentioned are Elim (xv. 27), the 'Sea of reeds,' or the Red Sea (Nu. xxxiii. 10), the wilderness of Sin (Ex. xvi. 1), Dophkah (Nu. xxxiii. 12), Alush (ib. v. 13), Rephidim (Ex. xvii. 1), and the wilderness of Sinai (xix. 1, 2).

The great uncertainty attaching to most of these sites has been alluded to already. Upon the old assumption that the Red Sea was crossed near Suez, and that the first halting-place on the other side was

'Ayūn Mūsā, 9 miles below Suez (see on xv. 22), and that Jebel Mūsā is Sinai, Marah is commonly placed at Hawwārah, 47 miles S.E. of 'Ayūn Mūsā (see the map), and Elim in Wādī Gharandel, 7 miles beyond Hawwārah. If, however, as is now generally supposed (p. 126), the passage was made some 25 (Dawson), or 40 (Naville), miles N. of the present Suez, 'Ayūn Mūsā would be much too distant to be at least the first stopping-place (pp. 141, 142); and both this and all the subsequent halting-places will have to be readjusted. The Israelites, if they went to J. Mūsā, may have passed en route some of the places here mentioned: but to affirm definitely that Marah is Hawwārah, and Elim in W. Gharandel, &c., is to go far beyond what the data justify. Upon the same current assumption, however, the following are the further stages in the itinerary. The 'Red Sea' station is placed at the mouth of W. Ṭaiyibeh, or on the narrow littoral plain el-Murkheiyeh, just beyond: this point, as there is no passage along the coast beyond W. Gharandel, the Israelites, if Elim was in W. Gharandel, must (see on xvi. 1) have made a difficult inland circuit of 21 miles through the hills behind J. Ḥammām Far'un. The wilderness of Sin is identified with the broad and long flinty plain el-Markhā, on the coast, about 10 miles beyond W. Ṭaiyibeh; or, by some,—though less probably, if the 'Red Sea' station be at the mouth of W. Ṭaiyibeh,—with the long upland plain, reached by the ascent up W. Ḥamr, Debbet er-Ramleh. Of Dophkah and Alush all that can be said is that, according to the itinerary of P in Nu. xxxiii., they were between the wilderness of Sin and Rephidim. Rephidim is placed in Wādī Feiran, 3—4 miles below Feiran, the site of the ancient episcopal town of Pharān, near which Rephidim was already located by Eusebius (see on xvii. 1<sup>a</sup>). Feiran could be reached from el-Markhā, either from the middle of the plain up Seiḥ Sidreh, or, 7 miles beyond the S. end of the plain, up W. Feiraṅ itself: the distance from the N. end of el-Markhā would be in the former case about 42 miles, in the latter (which, though longer, is the easier route) 53 miles. At Feiran, Jebel Serbāl, towering up above the mountains in front of it, is visible three miles to the S. (p. 179). The 'wilderness of Sinai' (xix. 1),—if Sinai be Jebel Mūsā,—will be the plain of er-Rāḥah, about 1½ mile long, and ½ mile broad, fronting the height of Rās Ṣuṣāfeh on the N.W.: to reach this an ascent of 3000 ft., through mountain defiles, has to be made from Feiran; and the distance, according to the best route up W. Sheikh, and then round by the defile el-Waṭiyeh (see p. 182, and the map), is 37 miles. The entire distance to J. Mūsā, by the route described, will be, from 'Ayūn Mūsā 175 miles, from Suez 184 miles, from the S. end of the great Bitter Lake (see p. 126) about 205 miles, and from the Serapeum (ibid.) about 220 miles<sup>1</sup>.

We may now return to the narrative following ch. xv. Ch. xvi. (E and P) relates the giving of manna and quails; ch. xvii. (mainly E) the water given to the people in Horeb (z. 6), and the defeat of the Amalekites, at Rephūdīm; and ch. xviii. (E) the visit of Jethro to Moses, and the appointment of judges, at Jethro's suggestion, to assist Moses in the administration of justice. For reasons stated in the notes (pp. 157, 162), it is probable that chs. xvii., xviii. stood originally at a later period of the narrative, and relate incidents which happened shortly before the departure of Israel from Sinai (Nu. x. 11, 12 in P; Nu. x. 33 in J)<sup>2</sup>. The quails (mentioned in ch. xvi. only in P) seem introduced here by an afterthought: their proper place appears to be in J's narrative in Nu. xi. On the manna, see p. 153 f., where it is pointed out (p. 154) that it forms a striking symbolical illustration of the great truth of the ever-sustaining providence by which God supplies the needs of His people. The attack made by the Amalekites—a predatory tribe, who no doubt resented the intrusion of Israel upon ground which they regarded as their own—is such as might be made to-day by the Bedawin of the Peninsula upon a body of strangers attempting to enter it. The principle expressed in xvii. 14—16, and afterwards both inculcated afresh (Deut. xxv. 17—19), and even acted upon (1 S. xv. 1 f.), viz. that on account of this attack Jehovah would for ever have war with 'Amalek'—i.e. not with the actual offenders, but with their innocent descendants, even to distant generations—breathes the spirit of the older Dispensation. Ch. xviii., describing the visit of Jethro to Moses, is of great historical interest. It gives us a picture of Moses legislating: cases calling for a legal decision arise among the people,—evidently on secular matters; they are brought before Moses: he adjudicates upon them; and his decisions are termed the ‘statutes and directions of God.’ The passage sets before us Hebrew law in its beginnings. The decisions thus given by Moses would naturally form precedents for future use; as new cases arose, the precedents would be augmented by the decisions of later priests or judges; and thus an increasing body of civil and criminal law, based upon a Mosaic nucleus, and perpetuating Mosaic principles, would gradually grow up. Collections of laws, or, as they are called ‘judgements’ (see on xxi. 1), arising, we may feel sure, in this way, and including a Mosaic nucleus, but dating, as we have them, from post-Mosaic times, are preserved in xxi. 2—xxii. 17, and in the Code embedded in the discourses of Deuteronomy. Of the subordinate judges appointed to assist Moses nothing further is known (for Dt. i. 9—15 is merely a slightly different version of what is stated here); nor is any instance of their action recorded. Their organization seems systematized (vv. 21, 25) to an improbable degree: but the fact that some such officials were appointed, at Jethro’s suggestion, to assist Moses, may be taken as historical.

Ch. xix. 1, 2 brings the Israelites to Sinai; and the rest of the book is occupied with the events stated to have taken place there till—according to the chronology of P—the erection of the Tabernacle on the first day of the second year of the Exodus. Chs. xix.—xxiv.,—with the exception of a few verses at the beginning and end, entirely JE,—describe the theophany on Sinai (chap. xix.), the promulgation of the Decalogue (ch. xx.), the giving by Jehovah to Moses of the collection of laws contained in the ‘Book of the Covenant’ (xx. 22—xxiii. 33), and the conclusion of the covenant based on these laws (ch. xxiv.). On the theophany,—represented as taking place upon the top of Sinai, as the dark storm-clouds gathered about it, and lightnings flashed, and thunder pealed, out of their midst,—and on the description of the Decalogue, as proclaimed by God, with a voice of thunder, out of the storm, enough has been said on pp. 176—7. The Decalogue itself is a terse and forcible summary of the fundamental duties of an Israelite towards God and his neighbour. The date is disputed: according to some, it really springs from the age of Moses; according to others it springs from a much later age, and exhibits the quintessence of the religious and moral teaching of the great prophets (see on this question p. 413 ff.).

The 'Book of the Covenant' is the oldest code of Hebrew law with which we are acquainted: it is older, it cannot be doubted, at least in its substance,—for in parts a later compiler has pretty clearly introduced parenetic additions,—than the narrative of E, in which it is incorporated. Apart from the hortatory epilogue (xxiii. 20—33), and the short additions of the compiler, it consists of two parts: (1) the 'judgements,' or decisions, i.e. the provisions of civil and criminal law, prescribing what is to be done when particular cases arise (xxi. 2—xxii. 17); and (2) the 'words,' i.e. the positive injunctions of moral, religious, and ceremonial law, introduced mostly by Thou shalt or Thou shalt not (xx. 23—6, xxii. 18—xxiii. 19). A detailed analysis of the laws, arranged under these two heads, and an account of the general aim and character of the Code, will be found on pp. 202—205. Here it may suffice to observe that the laws are designed to regulate the life of a community living under simple conditions of society, and chiefly occupied in agriculture: notice, for instance, the prominence in xxi. 28—xxii. 13 of the ox, ass, and sheep, and the allusions to fields, vineyards, and pits dug (for the storage of grain) in the open country. Slavery, murder and manslaughter, manstealing, injuries to life or limb, injuries caused by culpable neglect (as by permitting an unruly animal to be at large, or opening a pit negligently), theft, burglary, compensation for damage caused by fire spreading to a neighbour's field, for neglect in the case of deposits and loans, and for seduction, are, in brief, the subjects treated in the 'judgements': in the 'words,' the religious and ceremonial injunctions include the prohibition of images and worship of other gods, regulations for the construction of altars, the observance of the three annual Pilgrimages, of the seventh year as a fallow year, and of the seventh day as a day of rest, the sacredness of first-fruits and firstborn males to Jehovah, and laws prohibiting the eating of flesh torn by beasts, and offering a festal sacrifice with leavened bread; and the moral injunctions forbid the oppression of the 'sojourner,' or resident foreigner, the widow, and the orphan, and the taking of interest for a loan from the poor, inculcate veracity and impartiality, and the pure administration of justice, and lay it down that, if an enemy's ox or ass be found straying, or lying down under its burden, it is to be brought back to its owner, or assisted; a sorceress, also, is not to be permitted to live. Some of the penalties strike us as severe; but we must remember the customs of the age in which they were drawn up, and the stage of civilization of the people for whom they were designed. The laws were certainly on the whole calculated to impose restrictions upon abuse of authority, and upon violence, and to promote justice, honesty, and general well-being. Thus definite rights are secured to the slave; and an asylum is provided in the case of accidental homicide. The claims of humanity are also very decidedly recognized: no advantage is to be taken of the poor and helpless; and the object of both the sabbath and the sabbatical year, as here defined, is a philanthropic one. The only punishments prescribed are those sanctioned by the jus talionis, pecuniary compensation, and death: torture, and wanton mutilation, are unknown. It is interesting to compare the Laws of the XII Tables, or the Laws of Solon, which in many respects presuppose a similar condition of society. Some of the regulations of civil and criminal laws have remarkable parallels in the Code of Hammurabi (B.C. 2100), and may indeed have been ultimately derived from it: for a comparison of the corresponding laws, and a discussion of the questions which arise out of them, see Appendix III, p. 418 ff. Religious institutions are in a relatively primitive, undeveloped stage: and the laws relating to them contrast strongly with the minutely defined regulations of P. The legislation of the Covenant Code, speaking generally (for every individual law is not so treated), appears in expanded and developed forms in the later legislation of Deuteronomy, and (especially the ceremonial regulations) in that of P<sup>1</sup>.

The code, as we have it, springs from the early years of the monarchy, and represents the laws which were then in force in Israel. Some of the laws—as those which mention houses, fields belonging to individual owners, agriculture, vineyards, and oliveyards—seem to indicate that the people for whom they are designed were already settled in Canaan; but the nucleus of the Code is no doubt Mosaic<sup>2</sup>.

Chs. xxv.—xxxi. consist of a long section from P, containing minute directions, said to have been given by Jehovah to Moses on Sinai, for the construction of the Tent of Meeting, with its appurtenances, and for the vestments and consecration of a priesthood. The questions arising out of these chapters are considered on p. 426 ff. There are in the Pentateuch two representations of the 'Tent of Meeting.' In xxxiii. 7—11 (E) the 'Tent of Meeting' is the tent, which Moses 'used to take and pitch outside the camp': Moses used to 'go out' to it in order that Jehovah might speak with him, and other Israelites did the same when they had occasion to 'seek' Him. This tent is evidently far more simple in its structure and appointments than the 'Tent of Meeting' of P, described in chs. xxv.—xxvii.: its sole attendant is the Ephraimite Joshua, whereas the 'Levites,' numbering, according to Nu. iv. 48, 8580, are appointed in P (Nu. i. 49—53, iii.—iv.) to guard and tend it; and it is outside the camp, at some distance from it, not in its centre, as in P (Nu. ii. 17). The name in both cases is the same: and it cannot be reasonably doubted that we have here two different representations of one and the same structure. The actual historical 'Tent of Meeting' is the tent mentioned in Ex. xxxiii. 7—11 and other passages of JE (Nu. xi. 16, 24, 26, xii. 4, 5, 10, Dt. xxxi. 14, 15): the elaborate and ornate 'Tent of Meeting' of P is an ideal construction,—an ideal, based indeed upon a historical reality, but far transcending it, and designed as the embodiment of certain spiritual ideas, which, it was considered, could be adequately expressed only in a concrete material form. As seems to follow from a careful comparison of statements made in the Pentateuch with each other and with the history, P's entire conception of the Israel of the Exodus,—the 'congregation,' the symmetrical arrangement of the camp, the order of the tribes on the march, &c.,—is an ideal construction, a picture constructed indeed upon a basis supplied by tradition, but so developed and elaborated as to present in a sensible form certain important religious truths, which it was conceived were visibly expressed in the Mosaic theocracy. The 'Tent of Meeting,' and its appointments, in the representation of P, form part of the same ideal conception<sup>1</sup>. The supreme idea of P is the realization of the great spiritual truth of the presence of God in the midst of His people: other ideas, closely connected with this, are the unity of God, which, as Deuteronomy had taught, required the unity and centralization of His worship, and the holiness of God, which required as its correlative the holiness of His people. The presence of God in the midst of His people is a truth more than once expressed in JE (Nu. xi. 20, xiv. 14, cf. Ex. xvii. 7): but in P the truth finds a significant visible expression in the 'Tent of Meeting' in the centre of the camp, with all the tribes encamped symmetrically around it. The 'Tent of Meeting,' with its ornamented fabric, its sacred vessels, arranged, one in the Holy of holies, others in the Holy Place, and others in the court outside, is a carefully planned and splendid structure, designed to honour worthily the God who is to make it His abode. Expression is given to the majesty and holiness of Jehovah by the significant gradations in the costliness and splendour of the materials used, an object being the costlier and the more beautiful, the nearer it is to the Presence of Jehovah in the Holy of holies. There are also many other spiritual ideas which find expression in the structure and appointments of the 'Tent of meeting,' as also in the ceremonial and sacrificial system of which, in the representation of P, it is the centre (see more fully pp. 259—262; and the Appendix, p. 430 ff.). In Ex. xxviii.—ix., xxxix., Lev. viii. (directions for the vestments and consecration of the priests, and their execution) it is probable that customs and rites, which had been gradually developed, and were actually observed under the later monarchy, or during the early post-exilic period, are ante-dated, and represented as having been already propounded and put in force in the Mosaic age. The ritual of ch. xxix. cannot have been really formulated, whether by Moses or by any one else, before the laws of Leviticus were drawn up: for it presupposes ceremonial usages and terms which are first explained in Lev. i. ff. A consideration of the origin and character of the Levitical ceremonial system belongs to a commentary on Leviticus rather than to one on Exodus: here it may suffice to observe that it exhibits—so far as the OT. is concerned, and disregarding the Mishnah—the final development and systematization of usages and ideas which in themselves were of great antiquity, and, in their original form, did not differ in principle from those current among Israel's Semitic neighbours<sup>1</sup>. As time went on, these common Semitic institutions received naturally, among the Hebrews, many developments and special adaptations. They were also, of course, assimilated to the religion of Israel; and so, the really distinctive character which they exhibited in Israel, consists in the new spirit with which they are infused, and in the higher principles of which they are made the exponent (cf. DB. iii. 71<sup>b</sup>). The ceremonial institutions of Israel appear in their most primitive, undeveloped form in the legislations of J and E (Ex. xii. 21—2, xiii. 6—7, 12—13, xx. 23—6, xxii. 20, 29—31, xxiii. 14—19, xxxiv. 17—23, 25—6).

There follow (chs. xxxii.—xxxiv.) the episode of the Golden Calf, and incidents connected with it. The narrative is a remarkable one: the words put into the mouths of the various speakers are, no doubt, the narrators' words; but, as in other cases, the whole account must rest upon a genuine historical basis. Israel, during Moses' absence on the mount, falls into idolatry; Aaron, their weak and pliant ally, is severely rebuked for yielding so readily to the people's demand; and Jehovah threatens to destroy His stiffnecked nation, and make Moses the inheritor of His promises. A striking description follows not only of Moses' affection and noble self-devotion for his people, but also of the long intercession by which (cf. Gen. xviii.) he at last succeeds in winning from Jehovah Israel's forgiveness, His promise again to be with His people and lead them on to Canaan, and the vision of His moral glory for himself. Interspersed are historical incidents of great interest. The zeal for Jehovah displayed by the tribe, or (cf. on iv. 14) guild, of the 'Levites' in setting fealty to Jehovah above ties of blood, and inflicting upon their disloyal brethren summary punishment<sup>2</sup>— whether for their idolatry, or, as has also been supposed (see p. 354), for some other act of rebellion—leads to their being rewarded with the priesthood. Such at least was the origin which the earliest tradition that we possess, assigned to the privileges enjoyed by the priestly tribe: and there is little doubt that when J was complete, Ex. xxxii. 25—29 was followed by an account of the formal separation of the tribe for sacred functions (comp. esp. Dt. x. 8 'At that time [after Moses had come down from the mount the second time, and put the tables of stone in the ark which he had made, v. 5] Jehovah separated the tribe of Levi to bear the ark, to stand before Jehovah to minister unto him, and to bless in His name, unto this day').

The primitive 'Tent of Meeting,' described in xxxiii. 7—11, has been referred to in a different connexion before (p. lxiii): and what has been there said need not be repeated. Its simplicity is quite in accordance with the simple character of the other religious institutions attested by J and E (xx. 24—6, xxii. 29—31 &c.). It is probable that, when E was complete, xxxiii. 7—11 was preceded by some account of its construction; and though it will not have been as ornate as P's 'Tent of Meeting,' yet it may well have been more decorated than an ordinary tent: so it is at least a plausible conjecture that the ornaments taken off by the people (xxxiii. 4—6) were employed in its decoration. That the fact of Moses' making the ark, and putting into it the two tables of stone, was once mentioned in Ex. xxxiv. 1, 2, 4 is practically certain from Dt. x. 1—3, which agrees almost verbatim with Ex. xxxiv. 1, 2, 4, except in not having the three whole number of Israelites at the time was not more than 5—6000 (p. xlv)—must be judged by the standards of the age, which admitted of hard measures being dealt out to those who were disloyal to the national God (cf. Ex. xxii. 20). Of course such severity, even on a larger scale, has been far from unknown even in the history of the Christian church; but it is not in accordance with the mind of Christ (Luke ix. 54, 55). It must, however, be remembered that in the present case we do not know the entire circumstances; and these may have justified such an act for reasons not now apparent.

clauses relating to the ark, viz. 'and make thee an ark of wood,' ... 'and thou shalt put them in the ark,' ... 'and I made an ark of acacia wood' (see on xxxiv. 3): the compiler who united JE with P omitted them in Exodus, as he preferred the more detailed account of P (xxv. 10—22). The ark, which in the early historical books is identified in some very real sense with the presence of Jehovah, even if it is not regarded as His actual abode (see p. 278 ff.; and Kennedy, DB. i. 150<sup>b</sup>), must have been a very ancient element in Israel's religion. The ark of P (xxv. 10—22) is evidently something much more ornate than the simple chest of acacia wood made by Moses.

In answer (see p. xxviii) to Moses' entreaty (xxxiii. 12—13, 17—23) Jehovah grants him a vision,—or, at least (xxxiii. 23), an after-glow,—of His glory (xxxiv. 6—8); and he hears in spirit the wonderful declaration of Jehovah's moral nature, shewing mercy and justice balancing each other, reminiscences of which were so often on the lips of later writers (see note).

After the theophany—in the existing text, but originally, it is probable, as the sequel to xxxiv. 1<sup>a</sup>, 2—5 (pp. xxviii, 367)—Jehovah announces His purpose to establish a covenant with Israel, on the basis of certain laws, which are in reality merely a different recension of the laws on worship and religious observances contained in xiii. 12, 13 (J), and in the Book of the Covenant (xxiii. 12, 14—19). In its present connexion, the covenant, with the laws upon which it is based, is represented as a renewal of the covenant of xxiv. 3—8 (E), which had been broken by the sin of the Golden Calf: but there are strong reasons for thinking (p. 364 f.) that the narrative of xxxiv. 1—5, 10—28, in its original form, contained J's account of the establishment of the same covenant, the conclusion of which, on the basis of the laws xx. 22—xxiii. 33, is described by E in xxiv. 3—8, and that it formed once the sequel in J to xix. 20—25 (being followed there by xxiv. 1—2, 9—10). However that may be, the laws on which the covenant is here based are of the same rudimentary character, and indeed substantially the same in fact, as those in xiii. 12, 13 and xxiii. 12, 14, 15<sup>a</sup>, 16, 18—19 (see pp. 370—372).

Chs. xxxv.—xl. (P), describing the execution of the instructions given in chs. xxv.—xxxi. (except those for the consecration of the priests, ch. xxix.), and the erection of the 'Tent of Meeting,' do not call for further notice here.

The character of Moses is sketched, particularly in the earlier narratives of J and E, with peculiar vividness and force. He is represented not only as a man of deeply religious spirit, but also as endowed, in a pre-eminent degree, with singleness of aim, with nobility of mind, with dignity of demeanour, with unwearied and self-sacrificing devotion for the welfare of his people, and with that modesty of both word and demeanour which is observable in all the best characters of Old Testament history, and which was no doubt impressed upon them by the mellowing influences of the religion of Yahweh. Though the Heb. word for 'prophet' seems not to have been in use till long afterwards (1 S. ix. 9), yet Moses is to all intents and purposes a prophet. The prophet is a man who, for clearness of insight, and purity of purpose, and knowledge of God, stands above the mass of his compatriots: and so, if Moses were a prophet, this is what we should expect him to be. And in the representations which we have of him, these are the qualities which we find. The writers to whom we owe his biography pictured him as a prophet, and described him accordingly. He speaks in Jehovah's name to Pharaoh, he uses the prophetic expressions, Thus saith Jehovah, &c. (see on Ex. iv. 22, xxxii. 27); he leads Israel out of Egypt under a sense of God's directing hand; he hears inwardly God's words, and sees on Sinai manifestations of His presence; specifically prophetic teaching is communicated through him, or put into his mouth (Ex. iv. 22, vi. 7 (P), xv. 26, xix. 5—6, xxxiii. 19, xxxiv. 6—7 and elsewhere: Dt. passim); Jehovah is even represented as holding converse with him not by a vision or a dream, as with an ordinary prophet, but with some special and distinctive clearness (Nu. xii. 6, 8), 'as a man speaketh unto his friend' (Ex. xxxiii. 11; cf. Dt. xxxiv. 10). Hosea, writing c. 740 B.C., expressly styles him a prophet (xii. 13); cf., later, Dt. xviii. 18, xxxiv. 10.

Whether everything that we read happened exactly as it is written, or whether the representation is more or less due to the narrators, the narrative, as a whole, possesses profound religious value, and conveys, directly or indirectly, supremely important teaching. And if Exodus is in parts a parable rather than a history, we must remember that we have no right to limit the power of God, and to say that He cannot teach by parable as well as by history, by ideals as well as by actual facts. The symbolical, and also the ideal, character of some of the Old Testament narratives must not be forgotten<sup>1</sup>. Whether, in a particular case, a narrative relates actual facts or not, is a question for historical criticism to decide: whatever its decision may be, the religious value of the narrative remains the same. Israel really was God's people, really did receive the blessings and privileges which, under the older dispensation, this position implied, was really led from Egypt to Canaan by a leader who was taught of God not only how to do all this, but also how to conclude a covenant with them on His behalf, and to give them laws and some knowledge of Himself, and who moreover was the first of a succession of teachers, who, with increasing clearness and power, communicated to His people further Divine truths, and held up before it high ideals of moral and spiritual life: but, if as much as this is granted,—and it lies upon the very surface of the Old Testament,—does it materially signify whether, in the Pentateuch, it is Moses who is speaking or writing, or whether it is some later prophet or priest, who describes the events of the Exodus and of the journey through the wilderness as they were told, some centuries afterwards, by tradition, and who besides this traces the way in which the hand of God was visible in them, brings out the spiritual lessons implicit in them, and puts into Moses' mouth thoughts, and feelings, and truths, about God and His relation to His people, in more explicit and articulate words than perhaps he himself would have used? There are cases, especially in the earlier books of the OT., in which we cannot get behind the narratives, in which, that is, we cannot say how far the narratives correspond exactly to what was said or done by the actors in them: in these cases, however, the narrative itself is that which has the religious value, and from which spiritual and moral teaching is to be deduced. The narratives are the work of God-inspired men: and in the actions which they describe, and in the thoughts and truths expressed in them, are 'profitable,' sometimes by way of warning, more often by way of example and precept, and always according to the stage of spiritual illumination which each narrative represents, 'for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness.' Naturally, every part of the Book is not equally 'profitable' for these purposes; but the narratives, especially those in which Jehovah and Moses are exhibited in converse together, abound in great and noble thoughts, and are rich in spiritual and devotional suggestiveness<sup>1</sup>.

Partly in the preceding pages, partly in the notes on the various passages concerned, attention has generally been called to the moral and spiritual teaching of the book, so far as it falls within the scope of the Commentaries in the present series to draw it out. On the Plagues, for instance, see p. 57 f.; on the manna, p. 154; on the Decalogue, pp. xlvi, 191 ff.; on the Sabbath, p. 198 f.; on the Passover, pp. 93, 103 f., 412; on the religious significance of Israel's deliverance from Egypt, p. 131 f.; on the 'Book of the Covenant,' pp. xlviii f., 203—5; on the three annual Feasts, as expressions of thankfulness to Jehovah for the annual gifts of the soil, p. 241; on the Ark, p. 278 ff.; and on the spiritual ideas of which the Tabernacle and its appurtenances are the expression, pp. 259—62, 430 ff. As examples of outstanding texts or passages,—in most cases of high theological significance,—may be cited iii. 14 (explanation of the name 'Yahweh,' as understood by the Hebrews: see p. 40 f.); iv. 22 (Israel, Jehovah's 'son,' His 'first-born'); vi. 7 (Israel, God's 'people'); xiii. 21 f. (the pillar of cloud); xiv. 13 ('Stand still, and see the salvation of Jehovah'); xv. 1<sup>b</sup>, 2;

xv. 26<sup>b</sup> ('I am Jehovah, that healeth thee'); xvi. 10 (Jehovah's 'glory': see the note); xix. 4—6<sup>b</sup> (Israel a 'special possession,' a 'kingdom of priests,' and a 'holy nation': see pp. 169—171); xxiii. 20f. (an angel, in whom God's 'name' is, to guide Israel to Canaan); xxiv. 10 (the vision of the God of Israel); xxv. 8 and xxix. 45 (God's 'dwelling,' in the Tabernacle, in the midst of His people); xxx. 10 (propitiation to be made annually on the altar of incense); xxxi. 13 (the Sabbath a 'sign' between Jehovah and His people); xxxii. 11—13, cf. vv. 30—34, xxxiii. 12—16, xxxiv. 9 (Moses' intercession for Israel); xxxii. 33 (Moses' offer of his life for his people's forgiveness); xxxiii. 11 (how Jehovah used to speak with Moses 'face to face' in the 'Tent of Meeting'); xxxiii. 14 ('My presence shall go (with thee), and I will give thee rest'); xxxiii. 19 ('I will be gracious to whom I am gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I shew mercy': see the note); xxxiv. 6—7 (the great declaration of Jehovah's ethical character); xxxiv. 29—35 (the shining of Moses' face); xl. 35 f. (Jehovah's 'glory,' cf. on xvi. 10, filling the Dwelling).

The principal references, or allusions, to Exodus in the later books of the OT., and in the NT., are cited in the notes: the subject is dealt with more comprehensively, with inclusion of references in the Apocrypha, and a tabulated list of citations or allusions, in McNeile, pp. cxxvi—cxxxvi.

CHAP. I.

The increase of the Hebrews in Egypt, and the measures taken by the Pharaoh to check it.

1—7. Growth of the descendants of Jacob in Egypt, after Joseph's death, into a great people.

1—5. Recapitulation, as the introduction to a new section, of what had been stated before respecting the sons of Jacob (Gen. xxxv. 23—26), and the numbers of his descendants who had gone down into Egypt (Gen. xlvi. 8, 26 f.).

1. Now (Heb. And) these are the names of... As Gen. xxv. 13, xxxvi. 40, xlvi. 8; Ex. vi. 16, &c. (all P).

5. all the souls that came out, &c. As Gen. xlvi. 26 (also P). seventy souls] The number was traditional: cf. Dt. x. 22 (where 'with' should be as). This passage shews that P interpreted the tradition in the sense of 70 souls without Jacob: other writers interpreted it in the sense of Dt. x. 22, and made the number 70 souls including Jacob (cf. Gen. xlvi. 8, 27<sup>b</sup>). See the writer's Genesis (in the 'Westminster Commentaries'), pp. 365, 368. Soul in the sense of 'person,' though found occasionally elsewhere (but never in the earlier historical books), is peculiarly frequent in P (nearly 100 times).

of the children of Israel are <sup>1</sup>more and mightier than we:

7. The continuation in P of v. 5.

[P] were fruitful, and swarmed, [J] and multiplied, and waxed mighty, [P] exceedingly] To 'be fruitful,' as Gen. i. 28, ix. 1, 7, &c., and in the promises to Abraham and Jacob of an abundant progeny, Gen. xvii. 6, xxxv. 11 (xlvi. 4), cf. xxviii. 3 (all P). 'Swarmed,' as Gen. i. 20, 21, vii. 21, viii. 17 (all P); used here of men, as Gen. ix. 7 (P). 'Multiplied and waxed mighty' (the last expression not elsewhere in P), as v. 20: cf. the corresponding adjectives in v. 9. 'Exceedingly,'—here, in the Heb., an expression peculiar to P and Ezek., lit. with muchness, muchness,—qualifies all the preceding verbs.

Hebrew tradition loved to tell of the wonderful increase of their ancestors in Egypt: cf., of an earlier stage of their residence there, Gen. xlvii. 27 (P) 'were fruitful, and multiplied greatly.'

the land] viz. of Rameses, Gen. xlvii. 11 (P), or of Goshen, Gen. xlvii. 4 (J).

8—14. The first measure taken to check the increase of the Israelites: they are set to do forced labour on public works in Egypt.

8. there arose a new king] Implying the rise of a king whose reign began a new policy. The king, to judge from v. 11 (see the notes on Pithom and Ra'amses), will have been Rameses II, the third ruler of the 19th dynasty (B.C. 1300—1234 Petrie; 1292—1225 Breasted): see further the Introduction, § 4. According to Gen. xli. 46 (P), 53 f., xlv. 6, l. 22 (E), and Ex. vii. 7, xii. 40 f. (P), the birth of Moses took place 430—(110—39)—80=279 years after Joseph's death. But there are many indications that the chronological statements of P are of slight value (cf. on ii. 23<sup>a</sup>, xii. 40, and the writer's Genesis, pp. xxvi—xxx).

knew not Joseph] Not only lit., was not acquainted with Joseph, but also, it is implied, did not remember his services to Egypt, and had no thought or care for his people. Comp. Jud. ii. 10<sup>b</sup>.

9. more and mightier] In the Heb. the two adjectives corresponding to the two verbs 'increased,' and 'waxed mighty,' in v. 7. The marg. is merely an alternative rendering of the Heb., bringing out more distinctly the sense intended (cf. 1 K. xix. 7, where the Heb. is similar).

10. deal wisely] I.e., in a bad sense, craftily,—paraphrased by 'deal subtilly' in Ps. cv. 25. Such a people might be dangerous, especially on the frontiers: the Pharaoh does not, however, propose to

It come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they also join themselves unto our enemies, and fight against us, and get them up out of the land. Therefore they did set over them taskmasters to afflict them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh store cities, Pithom and Raamses.

expel them from his territory: he will retain them as subjects, whose services might be profitable to him; but he will take measures to limit their freedom and check their increase.

falleth out] read, upon grammatical grounds, when any war befalleth us (תקראנה for תקראנו): so Sam. LXX. Pesh. Vulg. Onk. Di. &c.; cf. G.-K. § 47<sup>a</sup>.

unto our enemies] Egypt was particularly liable to the incursions of Shasu (Bedawin), and other Asiatic tribes, across its N.E. frontier, which indeed, as early as the time of Usertesen I, of the 12th dynasty (B.C. 1980-35 Breasted), had been strengthened against them by a line of military posts, or fortresses (Maspero, Dawn of Civil. pp. 351, 469 n., 471: cf. below, pp. 127, 141).

get them up (Heb. simply go up) viz. from Egypt to the high ground of Canaan (which is at least in the narrator's mind). So Gen. xiii. 1, and frequently; and conversely go down, Gen. xii. 10, xlv. 3, &c.

11. They were consequently brought into a condition of virtual slavery and compelled to do forced labour. The corvée was an institution common in the despotisms of antiquity, and resorted to whenever an Oriental monarch had stone to be quarried, palaces or temples to be built, &c. Aristotle (Pol. viii. (v.) 11, p. 1313 b 18 ff., cited by Knob.) mentions it as a measure adopted by tyrants to curb the spirit of their subjects, and cites as an example the Egyptian pyramids. Solomon introduced it into Judah for the purpose of carrying out his great buildings (1 K. v. 13, 14, ix. 15): how unpopular it was, may be judged from the fact that Adoniram, the superintendent of the corvée, was stoned to death by the people (1 K. xii. 18).

gang-masters] Lit. captains (i.e. overseers) of labour-gangs,—the word mas being the technical term for a body of men employed on forced labour: cf. 1 K. v. 13, 14, ix. 15 (where it is rendered 'levy').

burdens] The word regularly used of heavy burdens, carried under compulsion: see ii. 11, v. 4, 5, vi. 6, 7; and cf. cognate words in 1 K. v. 15, xi. 28 (RVm.), Ps. lxxx. 6.

Pharaoh] The official, not the personal, designation of the Egyptian king. The word is the Egyptian Per-'o, which means properly the Great House, and in inscriptions of the 'Old Kingdom' (1-11 dynasties) denotes simply the royal house or estate; but afterwards (somewhat in the manner of the expression, 'Sublime Porte') it gradually became a title of the monarch himself, and finally (in the 22nd and following dynasties) it was prefixed to the king's personal name (see F. Ll. Griffith's luminous art. PHARAOH in DB.).

store cities] For provisions, materials for war, &c., perhaps also as trade emporia: cf. 1 K. ix. 19 (= 2 Ch. viii. 6); 2 Ch. viii. 4, xvi. 4, xvii. 12, xxxii. 38†.

Pithom] the Πάρουμος of Hdt. ii. 158, described by him as being on the canal made partially by Necho (B.C. 610—594) for the purpose of connecting the Nile with the Red Sea<sup>1</sup>. The site was discovered in 1883 by M. Naville. Excavating at a spot about 60 miles NE. of Cairo, called, from a red granite monolith of Rameses II, seated between the gods Ra and Etôm, which has long existed there, Tell el-Maskhuta, the 'Mound of the statue,' M. Naville soon met with inscriptions shewing that the ancient name of the place was P-etôm, the 'Abode of Etôm' (the sun-god of Heliopolis). Proceeding further he found that Pithom was a city forming a square of about 220 yds. each way, enclosed by enormous brick-walls, some 6 yds. thick, containing a Temple, and also a number of rectangular chambers, with walls 2 or 3 yds. thick, not communicating with one another, but, like the granaries depicted on the monuments, filled from above, shewing that they were store-chambers (see DB. iii. 887<sup>b</sup>, EB. iii. 3784). Inscriptions found on the spot shewed moreover that it had been founded by Rameses II,—partly, it is probable, as a store-house for supplying provisions to Egyptian armies about to cross the desert, and partly as a fortress for the protection of the exposed Eastern frontier of Egypt. P-etôm was the civil name of the capital of the 8th 'nome,' or administrative district, of lower Egypt (Naville, Pithom, ed. 4, 1903, p. 6); and the ancient geographical lists describe it as being 'on the Eastern frontier of Egypt' (EB. s.v. ΠΙΘΟΜ). No notice however was found of the Israelites as its builders.

Ra'amses] in xii. 37 Ra'm'ses (the difference is only in the Mass. vocalization); LXX. Ραμεσση (cf. the Eg. Ra'messe). Not certainly identified. P<sup>o</sup>-Ramessu is a name often given in the Papyri to Zoan (Tanis), about 30 miles NNW. of Pithom, a city which, though built much earlier, was so greatly added to by Rameses (Ra'messe) II that he is called by M. Naville its 'second founder'; and Brugsch, Ebers, and Budge (Hist. of Eg. v. 123—5) consider that Zoan is the place here meant. Zoan is, however, mentioned elsewhere in the OT. (e.g. Nu. xiii. 22) under its proper name; and as Rameses II built at many different places in the Eastern Delta, and in fact more places than one bearing his name are known (EB. ii. 1760 f., 4013), it may well have been one of these. To judge from xii. 37 the Rameses of the Hebrews will have been W. of Succoth, rather than, like Zoan, N. of it. W. M.

J But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied <sup>12</sup> and the more they spread abroad. And they <sup>1</sup>were P grieved because of the children of Israel. | And the <sup>13</sup> Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigour: and they made their lives bitter with hard service, in <sup>14</sup> mortar and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field,

Müller (EB. ii. 1436, iv. 4013) remarks that a site such as Tell Abu-Suleimân at the W. end of the Wädy Tumilât (p. 67) would be suitable; and Petrie (The Hyksos and Israelite cities, 1906, pp. 28, 31) argues in favour of Tell er-Retâbeh, about 10 m. W. of Pithom, where a temple and stelae of Rameses II, and other monuments, have been excavated by him (so also Garrow Duncan, Exploration of Egypt and the O.T., 1908, p. 172 ff.). It is very probable that this was Rameses, though the arguments hitherto adduced do not prove definitely that it was.

12. But the measure proved ineffectual: the more the Israelites were oppressed, the more they increased, so that the Egyptians felt an uneasy dread of them.

were grieved because of] Render felt a loathing for. Both 'grief' and 'grieve' were used formerly (see DB. s.vv.; and cf. on viii. 24) in various acceptations which have now passed out of use,—Tindale for instance uses it in Ex. vii. 18 'shall grieve to drink of the water of the river,' where AV. has 'loathe.' Here, at least to a modern reader, it conveys an entirely false idea of the meaning intended: RVm. abhorred (so Nu. xxii. 3 RVm.; Is. vii. 16) is better; felt a loathing for (lit. because of) would be better still, as it would be also in Nu. xxii. 3, Is. vii. 16: cf. the same verb in Nu. xxi. 5 (EVV. 'loatheth this worthless bread').

13, 14. The parallel, from P, to vv. 11, 12, and continuation of v. 7. P states simply the fact of the oppression, without referring to the grounds prompting it.

13. with rigour] The rare word found otherwise only in v. 14, Lev. xxv. 43, 46, 53 (all P or H); Ez. xxxiv. 4. The root is not in use in Heb.; in Aram. it means to rub (Luke vi. 1 Pesh.), or crush small.

14. hard service] vi. 9 (P) Heb. (EVV. cruel bondage); also Dt. xxvi. 6 (EVV. hard bondage); 1 K. xii. 4 (= 2 Ch. x. 4); Is. xiv. 3.

in mortar and in brick] for the Egyptian buildings: cf. v. 7, 8. The 'mortar' (lit. clay, Is. xxix. 16 al.), would be the black Nile-mud, which was used in ancient Egypt not only for bricks (see on v. 6—9, 19), but also (Erman, Anc. Egypt, p. 419) for mortar: in the latter case it was usually mixed with potsherds.

in the field] E.g. in constructing canals and dams for conveying water from the Nile to the fields, and in the actual work of irrigation all their service, wherein they made them serve with P rigour.

- 15 And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew midwives, E of which the name of the one was Shiphrah, and the name 16 of the other Puah: and he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the birthstool; if it be a son, then ye shall kill him; but if it be 17 a daughter, then she shall live. But the midwives feared God,

(Dt. xi. 10). This was laborious; for the water had to be brought to the high-lying fields artificially, by a series of shadufs, or buckets attached to long poles, worked on axles, by which it was gradually raised from one elevation to another. 'It is hard work to be the whole day raising and emptying the pail of the shaduf, in fact nothing is so tiring in the daily work of the Egyptians as this irrigation of the fields' (Erman, p. 427). In ancient Egypt this and other agricultural operations were carried on by serfs, slaves, and captives taken in war. The shaduf, constructed exactly as in ancient times, is still a familiar sight on the banks of the Nile: see an illustration of both the ancient and the modern type in Erman, p. 426.

all their service, &c.] The sentence is loosely attached to what precedes, and the construction with 'eth (the mark of the accus.) is very anomalous: cf. however, in the later Heb., Ez. xxxvii. 19, Zech. xii. 10.

15—22. The second measure. The Heb. midwives are commanded to slay all male infants that are born. V. 15 connects directly with v. 12.

15. The names were preserved by tradition (Di.) as those of two noble-minded women, who in perilous times had done their duty to God and their people, and refused to obey the inhuman command of the heathen king. Obviously if the numbers of the Israelites even remotely approached 600,000 males (xii. 37), far more than two midwives must have been required: either the numbers were in reality very much less, or these were the only midwives whose names were remembered.

16. upon the two stones] This is the lit. rend. of the Heb.: the same word is used of the two circular stones, fixed horizontally on a vertical axle, to form the potter's 'wheel' (see ill. in EB. iii. 3820). The allusion is in all probability to the two stones upon which the Hebrew women, in accordance with a custom attested for other nations, either knelt or sat at the time of their delivery: Ploss, Das Weib in der Natur u. Völkerkunde, 1887, ii. 174 f., 177 f., Schapiro, Revue des Études Juives, xl. (1900), p. 45 f. Spiegelberg (Aeg. Randglossen zum AT., 1904, p. 19 ff.) cites from old Egyptian and Coptic texts the expressions, to sit on the brick, and (once) on the two bricks, in the same connexion.

17. The midwives feared God; and would not be parties to such inhumanity.

E and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men children alive. And the king of Egypt <sup>18</sup> called for the midwives, and said unto them, Why have ye done this thing, and have saved the men children alive? And the midwives said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew <sup>19</sup> women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwife come unto them. And <sup>20</sup> J God dealt well with the midwives: | and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty. | And it came to pass, <sup>21</sup> E because the midwives feared God, that he made them houses. And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, <sup>22</sup> Every son that is born ye shall cast into <sup>1</sup>the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

19. Too much cannot be inferred from the midwives' excuse with regard to the facts in question; but it is at least true that Arabian women are delivered very quickly (Knob., with references to travellers). As to whether the Egyptian women were delivered more slowly, there appears to be no independent evidence.

20<sup>b</sup>. Assigned to J, because, while agreeing with v. 7, even in expression—'āsam, to wax mighty, occurs elsewhere in prose only in Gen. xxvi. 16, also J—it seems to imply a far greater people than is done by vv. 15—20<sup>a</sup>.

21. made them houses] i.e. gave them families, to perpetuate their names. Cf. 2 S. vii. 11; 1 K. ii. 24; Gen. xvi. 2 (RVm.).

22. The third measure. As the midwives refused to carry out the Pharaoh's wishes, a command to the same effect is issued to the whole people: the Egyptians themselves are to throw every male infant of the Hebrews into the Nile. The command, if fully carried out, would have resulted obviously in the extermination of the Hebrews; it is thus inconsistent with the intention expressed by the Pharaoh in v. 10 to retain them as his subjects. Perhaps the thwarted and angry king did not heed the inconsistency: perhaps inconsistent traditions have been combined by the compiler. However that may be, the measure seems calculated for a people numbering far fewer than 2,000,000 souls (among whom the birth-rate would be something like 80,000 a year<sup>1</sup>, i.e. more than 100 males a day), and also all living within near distance of the Nile. It is intimately connected with the narrative following (ch. ii.), and indeed supplies the conditions necessary for it.

that is born] Sam. LXX. add, to the Hebrews: in any case, a correct explanation, and perhaps part of the original text.

the river (Nile)] Heb. yē'ōr, from the Egyptian yoor, 'river,' often used of the Nile. yē'ōr is the regular name of the 'Nile' in Hebrew.

2 And there went a man of the house of Levi, and took to E
 2 wife a daughter of Levi. And the woman conceived, and bare a son: and when she saw him that he was a goodly 3 child, she hid him three months. And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of <sup>1</sup>bulrushes, and

CHAP. II.

1—10. Birth, deliverance, and education of Moses. 'The murderous command of the tyrant was to become, in the hand of God, the means of bringing Israel's future deliverer to the Egyptian court, and of preparing him for his future work (cf. the history of Joseph in the same narrator, E, Gen. xiv. 5, 7, 8, l. 20)' (Di.).

1. a daughter of Levi] the daughter of Levi (as the same Heb. is rendered, Nu. xxvi. 59), i.e. of the individual, the patriarch Levi. This rend. would seem to bring Moses very near to Levi; but it is in agreement with ch. vi. 20 (P), where the names of Moses' parents are for the first time given, and where it is stated that his father was Amram, son of Kohath, and grandson of Levi (vv. 16, 18), and his mother Jochebed, Amram's father's sister, i.e. the sister of Kohath, and consequently daughter of Levi. See further on vi. 27.

2. conceived, &c.] The expression (after 'took,' v. 1) suggests that, as in other similar cases (Hos. i. 3; Gen. iv. 1, 17, xxxviii. 2 f.), Moses was his parents' firstborn. A considerably older sister,—presumably Miriam,—appears, however, already in v. 4; and at least in P Aaron is represented as older than Moses by three years. It has hence been supposed that Aaron and Miriam were children of Amram by a former marriage: and it is noticed, as favouring this supposition, that Miriam is somewhat pointedly spoken of as Aaron's sister (xv. 20); and that Miriam and Aaron join together against Moses (Nu. xii. 1). If this supposition be not adopted, it must be concluded that the narrator expressed himself inexactly.

goodly] Heb. good, i.e. comely (cf. Gen. vi. 2): LXX. ἀσραῖος (so Heb. xi. 23; and ἀστ. τῷ θεῷ, Acts vii. 20). Moses' mother could not bring herself to part with such a fine infant; so she kept it with her as long as she could. In Heb. xi. 23, however, the beauty of the child is interpreted as a sign of the Divine favour resting upon him, and an omen that God had some great future in store for him, so that by 'faith' in this, his parents, heedless of the consequences of disobeying Pharaoh's edict, hid him for three months.

3. an ark] i.e. a chest. The Heb. is tēbāh (only used besides of the 'ark' of Noah, Gen. vi.—ix.), an Egypt. word, tēbet, a 'chest.'

papyrus (RVm.]) Heb. gōmē' (Job viii. 12; Is. xviii. 2, xxxv. 7†; deriv. uncertain). A tall reed, consisting of a bare stem, 6 ft. or more in height, with a large tuft of leaves and flowers at the top (see ill. in NHB. 434, EB. iii. 3557), extinct now in Egypt, and found only by the banks of the 'Blue' and 'White' Nile, but abundant in ancient times along the banks of the lower Nile. The pith of the stem was cut into thin strips, which were then laid together side by side to form a sheet; and two such sheets, with the strips in one at right angles to those in the other, placed one upon another, and glued together, were used by the ancients as writing material; the stems themselves, also, bound together and caulked, were used to form light boats (Is. xviii. 2, 'vessels of gômê'); probably also Job ix. 26: Theophr. H.P. iv. 8, 4; Pliny H.N. vii. 57, &c.)<sup>1</sup>. Here a small chest, or 'ark,' is made of it.

E daubed it with <sup>1</sup>slime and with pitch; and she put the child therein, and laid it in the flags by the river's brink. And his sister stood afar off, to know what would be done <sup>4</sup>

daubed it with bitumen (Gen. xi. 3, xiv. 10†) and pitch (Is. xxxiv. 9†)] to make it water-tight. Bitumen, or asphalt, was brought into Egypt from the Dead Sea; it was used particularly for embalming (Diod. Sic. xix. 99).

flags] or reeds: Heb. suph, usually of the water-growth (see on xiii. 18), which gave the 'Red Sea' its Heb. name, once (Jon. ii. 6) of sea-weed; here, v. 5, and Is. xix. 6, of some water-growth along the banks of the Nile, or, in Is. xix. 6 (see RVm.), of the Nile-canal (see on Ex. vii. 19). What suph was, is not certainly known. It is commonly supposed to have been some kind of reed. At the present time, the banks of the Nile in the S. half of the Delta are completely bare: but reed-growths are abundant in the Delta, in disused canals in which the level of the water does not change—for instance, in those running through the site of Goshen—and in pools and ponds (see an ill. in R. T. Kelly's Egypt (1902), opp. to p. 154): Forskål, also, Flora Aeg.-Arab. (1775), p. 24, attests for his time the abundance of the Arundo donax (see ill. in NHB. 436) on the banks of the Nile, apparently in general; and J. Russegger, Reisen (1841), i. 122 (both referred to by Kn.) speaks of the 'impenetrable reeds' on its bank, where the canal from Alexandria to Cairo joins the river. Compare the illustrations in Ebers, Egypt, i. 112, ii. 20 (if the artist may be trusted not to have idealized his picture). What we require is some water-growth which will (1) suit Ex. ii. 3, 5, Is. xix. 6; (2) explain reasonably the name 'Sea of suph' (see on xiii. 18); and (3), unless the late passage Jon. ii. 6 is not to be pressed, sufficiently resemble 'sea-weed' to be called by the same name. Careful observation in Egypt itself might result in the required plant being found<sup>2</sup>.

5 to him. And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to bathe E at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river side; and she saw the ark among the flags, and sent her 6 handmaid to fetch it. And she opened it, and saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' 7 children. Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she 8 may nurse the child for thee? And Pharaoh's daughter

5. the daughter of Pharaoh] Tradition gave her name as Tharmuth (Jubilees xlvi. 5), Thermouthis (Jos. Ant. ii. 9. 5), or Merris (Euseb. Praep. Ev. ix. 27). Rameses II is stated to have had 59 daughters (Petrie, Hist. iii. 38, 82); but neither of these names appears among the 45 that have been preserved (ibid. p. 37 f.).

came down] presumably, from her palace: though where this was, or where indeed the entire incident took place, the narrative does not state. Perhaps Tanis (Zoan), one of the chief royal residences in the NE. of the Delta, near the mouth of the Tanitic branch of the Nile, is intended.

to bathe] Women of any position do not at present bathe in the Nile (Lane, Mod. Egyptians, ii. 36): whether the case was different formerly, we do not know. The painting, from a tomb in Thebes (Wilk.-Birch, ii. 353), referred to by Dillmann, and in the Speaker's Comm., represents (Griffith) not a lady in her bath, but a lady seated in her clothing on a mat, and being anointed and adorned for a party by her attendants (cf. Erman, p. 187).

The Nile was regarded as sacred, and as a giver of life and fertility; but whether this led to the practice of bathing in it, is more than we know. The Heb. at or by the Nile, however, does not necessarily mean that Pharaoh's daughter bathed publicly in the river; there might have been private bath-houses beside the river, into one of which she went.

her maidens] The court-ladies in attendance on her.

her handmaid] her female slave,—which is what the Heb. 'amāh regularly denotes (xx. 10, 17, &c.).

6. and behold, &c.] Heb. and, behold, a weeping boy. The sight moved her compassion; and despite the Pharaoh's orders, she determined to spare the child, and bring it up.

7. of the Hebrew women] The Egyptians, even till the time when they came in contact with the Greeks (Hdt. ii. 178), were exclusive, and unfriendly towards foreigners (cf. ibid. 41; Gen. xliii. 32). So a native Egyptian woman would not have undertaken the task.

a nurse] lit. a woman giving suck: so Gen. xxiv. 59, xxxv. 8. So the verb 'nurse' is lit. give suck to (vv. 7, 9).

E said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother. And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it. And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name <sup>1</sup>Moses, and said, Because I <sup>2</sup>drew him out of the water.

8. The girl naturally brings her mother, who thus recovers her infant.

the maid] Heb. 'almāh, implying that she was a grown up girl, and consequently at least 15 or 16 years older than Moses.

9. and I] The pron. is emphatic.

10. grew] Heb. became great, implying (cf. Gen. xxi. 8) that he was 3—4 years old, and was weaned.

became a son to her] was adopted by her, and naturally, therefore, cared for and educated by her. In the Old and Middle kingdoms, as Dillm. remarks, royal princesses had their own establishments, in a separate part of the palace.

Moses] Heb. Mōsheh. Probably the Egypt. mosi, 'born,' which occurs not only as the second part of a theophorous name, as Thutmōsi (Thothmes), 'Thoth is born,' Aḥmosi (Amāsis), 'The moon is born,' but also as a name by itself (Ebers, Gosen<sup>1</sup>, p. 526). LXX. vocalize Mωσωῆς, which was explained by the ancients as meaning 'saved [σωῆς] from the water [ῥω]' (Jos. Ant. ii. 9. 6, and others), or 'taken [σῆς] from the water' (gloss in Cod. Sarrav. [Swete, Introd. to the OT. in Greek, p. 137], cited by Ges. Thes. s.v.); but though the Egyptian words are correctly given, the compound is not correct; for 'saved from the water' would in Egyptian be wesenmōou (Griffith).

Because I drew him, &c.] 'Mosheh' could mean only 'drawing out'; 'drawn out' would in Heb. be māshūy. The explanation, like those of many other names in the OT. (e.g. Cain, Gen. iv. 1, Noah, v. 29), rests not upon a scientific etymology, but upon an assonance: the name is explained, not because it is derived from māshāh, to 'draw out,' but because it resembles it in sound. The note in RV. is intended to indicate this: it does not, it will be observed, say that 'Mosheh' means 'drawn out,' but only gives the reader to understand that it resembles the Heb. word signifying to 'draw out.' So in similar cases, as Gen. ll. cc., and xxix. 32—xxx. 24.

The verb māshāh is rare, occurring otherwise in Heb. only Ps. xviii. 16 = 2 S. xxii. 17.

The simple Biblical narrative of Moses' youth was decorated in later times with many imaginative details. Thus according to Josephus (Ant. ii. 9. 3—9, 10), his father, Amram, when his wife was pregnant, had a vision foretelling how her child would in the future deliver his people; the Egyptian princess, being childless, adopted him that he might ultimately succeed to the throne; he was a precocious child, and attracted by his beauty the notice of the passers by; when Egypt was invaded by the Ethiopians, he was, in consequence of an oracle, appointed leader of the Egyptians, defeated the invaders, and pursued them to the gates of their capital, Meroe, &c.: according to Philo (Vit. Mos. i. 5), he was a studious and thoughtful boy, Egyptian masters taught him arithmetic, geometry, music, and the philosophy contained in the hieroglyphic treatises; teachers from Greece, engaged for high fees, instructed him in other school-learning (τὴν ἀλλην ἐγκύκλιον παιδείαν); he learnt from others Assyrian letters, and Chaldaean astronomy<sup>1</sup>: according to the more summary statement in Acts vii. 22 he was instructed in 'all the wisdom of the Egyptians.' A good education was valued in ancient Egypt; and the actual education of an Egyptian of the better class comprised such things as moral duties and good manners, reading, writing, composition, and arithmetic (Erman, pp. 164—6, 328—33, 364—8; 383 ff., 548—50). If however Moses was really instructed in 'all the wisdom' of the Egyptians, he must have learnt many things which from a Hebrew point of view it would be extremely undesirable for him to know: for it consisted largely of mythology, astrology, magic, and superstitious practices in medicine (ibid. pp. 348—364).

The thought that in the life of such a great man the finger of God must have early manifested itself, and he must be shewn from the first to have overcome all hindrances which men opposed to him and his work, is perfectly correct, and has been, and still is, often verified: else the most diverse peoples would not have so variously given expression to it in their myths and legends, e.g. about Semiramis (Diod. ii. 4), Perseus (Apollod. ii. 4. 1), Cyrus (Hdt. i. 110 ff.), Romulus (Liv. i. 4), and especially in the singularly similar story of Sargon, king of Accad (B.C. 3800)<sup>2</sup>. In particular cases, to be sure, it is always difficult, and even impossible, to determine how much in such narratives is historical. In Ex. i. 15—ii. 10 there are, as has been shewn, sufficient indications that the narratives were long current as tradition (Sage) before they were written down' (Dillmann).

11—14. The first acts of Moses' manhood. He chivalrously interposes, first on behalf of an Israelite maltreated by an Egyptian, and then in a quarrel between two Israelites. On account of his slaughter of the Egyptian, he is obliged to flee to Midian. Cf., in St Stephen's speech, Acts vii. 23—9.

B.C., said to have been copied from an earlier one: 'My mother, who was poor, conceived me, and secretly gave birth to me; she placed me in a basket of reeds, she shut up the mouth of it with pitch, she abandoned me to the river, which did not overwhelm me. The river bore me away, and brought me to Akki, the drawer of water, who received me in the goodness of his heart,' &c. (Maspero, Dawn of Civil., p. 597 ff.; KB. iii. 1, 101; Sayce, EHH. p. 161). For details about the others see Jeremias, ATLAO. p. 255 ff. (ed. 2, p. 410 ff.).

J And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was <sup>11</sup> grown up, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he saw an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren. And he looked this way and <sup>12</sup> that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he smote the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand. And he went <sup>13</sup> out the second day, and, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow? And he said, Who <sup>14</sup> made thee a prince and a judge over us? thinkest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? And Moses feared,

13. strove] i.e. quarrelled, fought: cf. xxi. 22; 2 S. xiv. 6.

14. Moses' motive in slaying the Egyptian must thus have been misunderstood; it was not seen that he was really intending to help his people. Cf. Acts vii. 25. At the same time Moses now shewed definitely that he no longer desired to be counted a son of Pharaoh's daughter (v. 10), but that he wished to throw in his lot with his own people; cf. Heb. xi. 24—26.

'In both these acts, the future hero shews himself courageous and energetic, burning with patriotic ardour, full of a strong sense of justice and of sympathy with the suffering, in their service readily giving up all material advantages. To free him, however, from all excess and impetuous passion, and to purify and deepen his spirit, he is now, as a result of his deed of blood, to be removed for a while into another environment' (Dillm.). In slaying the Egyptian, Moses acted without authority; his act was consequently unjustifiable, and there was cogency in the Israelite's remonstrance, 'Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?' Motives, in themselves praiseworthy, of justice, patriotism, and sympathy with the oppressed, led him to interpose in an ill-considered manner, and he was obliged to take refuge in flight. Augustine, c. Faust. xxii. 70 (quoted by Keil), points out both the good and the bad features in Moses' act: he had fine qualities, but they needed training and disciplining, in order to produce worthy fruits. 'Reperio non debuisse hominem ab illo, qui nullam ordinatam potestatem gerebat, quamvis injuriosum et improbum, occidi. Verumtamen animae virtutis capaces ac fertiles praemittunt saepe vitia, quibus hoc ipsum indicent, cui virtuti sint potissimum accommodatae, si fuerint praeceptis excultae.'

And after referring to Peter's action in defending his Master with the sword (John xviii. 20), he continues, 'Uterque non detestabili immanitate, sed emendabili animositate justitiae regulam excessit; uterque odio improbitatis alienae, sed ille fraterno, hic dominico, licet adhuc carnali, tamen amore peccavit.'

15—22. Moses' flight to Midian; and his marriage there to a daughter of the priest of Midian.

15. Midian] The most important of a group of tribes (Gen. xxv. 1—4), in N.W. Arabia, and E. of Canaan (ib. v. 6; cf. Nu. xxii. 4), which the Hebrews reckoned to their own race, through Abraham's second wife Keturah, and so a step further removed than the Ishmaelites. The proper home of the Midianites appears to have been on the E. side of the Gulf of 'Akaba, where Ptolemy (vi. 7. 2) and the Arabic geographers (cf. EB. iii. 3081) mention a place Modiava, Madyan, almost exactly opposite the S. extremity of the Sin. Peninsula; but nomad branches of the tribe wandered northward along the margin of the desert, whence they made forays into Edom, for instance (Gen. xxxvi. 35), and even Canaan (Jud. vi.—viii.). From Ex. iii. 1 (cf. xviii. 1, 5, 27) it appears that 'the land of Midian' was not far from Sinai: if, therefore, 'Sinai' has been rightly located by tradition (see p. 189 ff.), there must have been a Midianite settlement in some part of what is now called the 'Sinaitic' Peninsula, probably in its S.E. Others, however, regard 'the land of Midian' as denoting more naturally the proper home of the tribe, and consider the passage to support the view that 'Sinai' was on the E. of the Gulf of 'Akaba (cf. p. 189 f.).

In the S. or SE. of the Peninsula, Moses would be beyond Egyptian jurisdiction. It is true, in Wādy Maghārah, and Wādy Sarbut el-Khadim, there were mines for turquoise and copper, worked by the Egyptians, and protected by military guards, which are mentioned frequently, at intervals, from the 3rd to the 20th dynasty (see full descriptions, with numerous photographs, in Petrie's Researches in Sinai, 1906): but (see the Map) these were in the NW. of the Peninsula, and not necessarily on the route to the S. or SE. Sayce's statement (HCM. 265 f.) that in the days of the Exodus the Sin. Peninsula was 'an Egyptian province' seems to be an exaggeration of the facts; for even the mining districts were not occupied by them permanently (see Petrie, p. 206).

by the well] the well of the district to which he came.

16. the priest of Midian] the chief priest of the tribe, or settlement, and so a person of some importance. On the duties and position of the old Arabian 'priest,' see on xxviii. 1.

drew water] cf. Gen. xxix. 9 (Rachel). To the present day, among

J the troughs to water their father's flock. And the shepherds <sup>17</sup> came and drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock. And when they came to <sup>18</sup> Gl. J | Reuel | their father, he said, How is it that ye are come the Bedawin of the Sin. Peninsula, 'the men consider it beneath them to take the flocks to pasture'; it is 'the exclusive duty of the unmarried girls,' and those thus employed spend the whole day with the sheep (Burckhardt, Syria, 1822, p. 531, Bedouins, 1831, i. 351 f., cited by Kn.; cf. Doughty, Arabia Deserta, 1888, i. 306, 322).

the troughs] The word rendered, not very happily, gutters in Gen. xxx. 38, 41. Such troughs are still found regularly in the East about wells; they are often made of stone.

17. drove them away] wishing to water their own flocks first. But Moses chivalrously comes forward (cf. vv. 12, 13) to assist the girls.

18. Reuel] Heb. רְעוּל, the 'friend' or 'companion of God' (Sayce, EHH. p. 163 'Shepherd of God': but why should the name be Assyrian?). (AV. Raguel, where the g comes from the LXX., and is one of the many instances of ʿ being expressed in that version by g, as Gaza, Gomorrah, Gotholiah, &c.: see the writer's Notes on Samuel, on 1 S. xvi. 20.) The name occurs also in Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 4, 10) and Israel (1 Ch. ix. 8). Here it occasions a difficulty. In iii. 1, iv. 18, and ch. xviii., Moses' father-in-law is called Jethro<sup>1</sup>; in Nu. x. 29, Jud. iv. 11 (RVm.) he is called Hobab (RV. 'brother-in-law,' cf. i. 16, is a doubtful rend., adopted entirely from harmonistic motives): here, if Reuel is correct, he would have had a third name. Perhaps, however, the word here is a gloss, due to a misconception of Nu. x. 29 (so Ryssel in Di.<sup>2</sup> al.): had the name been original, it would naturally have been given in v. 16 (where the 'priest of Midian' is first mentioned). Still, it is strange, if a name had to be found, that it was taken from the remote Nu. x. 29, rather than from Ex. iii. 1. 'Tradition,' says Prof. Sayce (EHH. p. 163), 'has handed down more than one name for the high-priest of Midian'; perhaps indeed, as Nielsen (Die alt arab. Mondreligion u. die Mos. Ueberlief., 1904, p. 131) has suggested, the variation is due to the fact that, like many of the Sabaeen kings, and some of the Sabaeen priests (Mordtmann, Beiträge zur Z. für Assy. 1897, p. 75 f.), he had actually two names. There seem also to have been different traditions about his nationality; for Hobab,—whether he were really the same as Jethro, or Jethro's son,—though he is a Midianite in Nu. x. 29, is a Kenite in Jud. iv. 11 (cf. i. 16).

<sup>1</sup> Or, in iv. 18, Jether. The ð, or, as it might be vocalized, u, is doubtless the mark of the Arab. nomin., as in the numerous Arab. names (Zaidu, Sa'du, etc.) of the Sinaitic inscriptions (p. 179) of 2-3d. cent. A.D.: cf. the Arabian Gashmu, Neh. vi. 6 (called Geshem in vi. 1, 2). The name Yether (meaning apparently excellence) recurs as that of several Israelites. The corresponding Arab. form Watr (or Witr) occurs also several times in the Sabaeen inscriptions of S. Arabia, both as a principal name (CIS. iv. Nos. 10, 70, 83), and as a cognomen (Nos. 1, 37; cf. pp. 22, 77); and Witr in CIS. II. ii. 3156 (from Sinai), and RES. No. 53 (from Hauran); Οὐέπος, Waddington, *Inscr. 21. was content] or agreed; cf. Jud. xvii. 11, xix. 6.

22. Gershom] The name might conceivably be derived from גר, and mean expulsion. The writer, however, thinking, as in v. 10, of an assonance, rather than of an etymology, explains it as though it were equivalent to gēr shām, 'a sojourner there.' It was through a descendant of this Gershom that the priests of Dan claimed in later days descent from Moses (Jud. xviii. 30).

in a foreign land] This was the meaning of 'strange' (from Lat. extraneus), when the AV. was made in 1611; and the old rendering has been often retained in RV. But 'strange' has changed its meaning now, and is no longer a sufficiently clear and unambiguous rendering of the Heb. For other cases of 'strange' in the same now obsolete sense of 'foreign,' see xxi. 8 'a strange people'; 1 K. xi. 1, 8, Ezr. x. 2, 10 al. 'strange women or wives'; Gen. xxxv. 2, 4, Ps. lxxxi. 9<sup>b</sup> al. 'strange gods'; Ps. cxxxvii. 4 'a strange land,' as here. Cf. the passage in the Homilies (cited by Aldis Wright), which speaks of 'a certain strange philosopher,' meaning, not an eccentric one, but a foreign one. 'Stranger' also often occurs in EVV. in the same sense (see on ch. xii. 43). Comp. the writer's note on Mal. ii. 11 in the Century Bible; and see also DB. s.v.

to all appearance married Zipporah not long after his arrival in Midian; and 'according to J the Pharaoh must have died very soon after the birth of Gershom; for Gershom in iv. 20, 25 is represented as still quite young. J, therefore, did not picture Moses as remaining long in Midian. That is only the representation of P, according to whom (vii. 7) Moses is 80 years old when he treats with Pharaoh. If Moses was 30 (or 40) years old when he fled from Egypt, he would thus have remained in banishment 50 (or 40) years. This, however, agrees as well with the 'many' of v. 23<sup>a</sup>, as it agrees badly with the representation of J (iv. 20, 25). Dillm. will therefore be right in regarding this 'many' as a redactional addition' (Bäntsch).

CHAPTERS III. I—VI. I.

First account (JE) of the call and commission of Moses.

Moses, in a vision at Horeb, is commissioned by Jehovah to deliver His people from their oppression in Egypt (iii. 1—10). Four difficulties anticipated by him are in succession removed: Jehovah promises him His support (iii. 11—12); He declares to him His name, and assures him that, when the Israelites hear that the God of their fathers has sent him, they will listen to what he tells them (iii. 13—22); to meet the contingency of their refusing to do this, he is empowered to work three signs, for the purpose of satisfying them of his commission (iv. 1—9); and when he objects that he has no fluency of speech, to convince or persuade doubters, his brother Aaron is appointed to speak on his behalf (iv. 10—17). Moses thereupon obtains permission from Jethro to visit his brethren in Egypt; he meets Aaron in the wilderness; the two brothers return to Egypt together, and the people listen to them gladly (iv. 18—31). Moses and Aaron next ask permission of the Pharaoh for the Israelites to keep a three days festival in the wilderness, but this is peremptorily refused by him (v. 1—18): Jehovah, however, promises that He will nevertheless Himself effect His people's deliverance (v. 19—vi. 1).

3 Now Moses was keeping the flock of Jethro his father E in law, the priest of Midian: and he led the flock to the back of the wilderness, and came to the mountain of God,

The narrative, when examined closely, shews marks of composition. In ch. iii. the main narrative is E (notice the frequency of God in vv. 4, 6<sup>b</sup>, 11, 12, 13<sup>a</sup>, 14<sup>a</sup>, 15<sup>a</sup>), with shorter passages from the parallel narrative of J; in iv. 1—vi. 1, on the contrary, the main narrative is J, with short passages from E (see the notes on iv. 17—18, 20<sup>b</sup>—21, 27 f.).

iii. 1—iv. 17. Moses commissioned by Jehovah at Horeb to deliver His people. The dialogue between Jehovah and Moses, as in other cases (cf. Delitzsch on Gen. xii. 1), must be pictured, not as one audible externally, but as giving expression,—in words which are naturally those of the narrators,—to Moses' mental communings with God, through which he was gradually taught by Him that, in spite of the difficulties which he saw before him, he was nevertheless to be His appointed agent for accomplishing Israel's deliverance (cf. the dialogue in Jer. xiv. —xv.). See further, on the sense in which God is to be understood as 'speaking' to a man, the Introduction, p. xlvii f.

1—5. The vision of the burning bush. Cf. Acts vii. 30—35.

1. Moses acts as his father-in-law's shepherd. According to P (vii. 7) Moses was now 80 years of age, and some 40 years had elapsed since his flight from Egypt (ii. 11). But we must not attempt to fit the narratives of J and E to the chronological scheme of P (cf. on ii. 23).

Jethro] The name of Moses' father-in-law in E (iv. 18, ch. xviii.). In J (Nu. x. 29), as also in Jud. iv. 11 (RVm.), he is called Hobab. See on ii. 18.

behind (i.e. to the west of) the wilderness] where there was good pasture. We do not know exactly where the 'wilderness' mentioned was; but the change of place from the E. or S. of the Peninsula (ii. 15) at least brought Moses to 'Horeb.' 'On the approach of summer all the Bedawin leave the lower country, where the herbage is dried up, and retire towards the higher parts, where the pasture preserves its freshness much longer' (Burckhardt, Syria, p. 482, quoted by Kn.).

the mountain of God] i.e. a sacred mountain. So iv. 27, xviii. 5, xxiv. 13 (all E); 1 K. xix. 8†. It is possibly so called proleptically, in virtue of the sanctity acquired by it from the subsequent law-giving (ch. xix.); but more probably Ewald, Hist. ii. 43, 45, 103; Di.; W. R. Smith, Rel. Sem. p. 117 f.; Sayce, EHH. 188; DB. iv. 536<sup>b</sup>; Burney, Journ. of Theol. Studies, ix. (1908), p. 343 f.; and others), as being already an ancient sacred mountain. Lofty mountains towering towards heaven were often regarded as sacred by the Semites; and the very name 'Sinai' unto Horeb. | And the angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the suggests at once that it is derived from Sin, the name of the moon-god in Babylonian. Antoninus Placentinus (Itin. c. 38) describes how c. 570 A.D. a white marble idol, representing the moon-god, was worshipped on the traditional Sinai by the native Arabs at every new-moon.

Horeb] the name used by E (here, xvii. 6, xxxiii. 6), by the Deuteronomist (Dt. i. 2, 6, 19, iv. 10, 15, v. 2, ix. 8, xviii. 16, xxix. 1), and in 1 K. viii. 9=2 Ch. v. 10, 1 K. xix. 8; Mal. iii. 22; Ps. cvi. 19†; J and P always speak of 'Sinai' (see on xix. 1). The two names are almost interchangeable; both denote the mountain of the law-giving (comp. Dt. iv. 15 with Ex. xix. 18, 20); and there is apparently no place where 'Horeb' occurs, in which 'mount Sinai' or 'the wilderness of Sinai' ('Sinai' alone, except in poetry, occurs only in Ex. xvi. 1) could not have been used. As Di. rightly says, 'the names vary only according to the writers, or, as in Ecclus. xlvi. 7, in the parallel clauses of the same verse.' Still, it is unlikely that the two names denote exactly the same place; and probably 'Horeb' is a slightly wider term than 'Sinai,' and denotes not the mountain only, but the mountain with the circumjacent district (in Dt. iv. 10, ix. 8, xviii. 16, it must denote not 'mount Sinai,' but the 'wilderness of Sinai' (see on xix. 1), i.e. the area in front of it, where the people were standing). The name Horeb (if Semitic) means probably either dry ground, or desolation.

2. the angel of Jehovah] The 'angel of Jehovah,' or, in E (xiv. 19, Gen. xxi. 17, xxxi. 11), 'of God,' is a temporary, but full, self-manifestation of Jehovah, a manifestation usually, at any rate, in human form, possessing no distinct and permanent personality, as such, but speaking and spoken of, sometimes as Jehovah Himself (e.g. v. 4<sup>a</sup> here, comp. with v. 2; Gen. xvi. 10, 13, xxxi. 11, 13; Jud. vi. 12, 14, xiii. 21 f.), and sometimes as distinct from Him (e.g. Gen. xvi. 11, xix. 13, 21, 24, xxi. 17; Nu. xxii. 31): cf. Gray, EB. iv., THEOPHANY, § 4. As Davidson remarks (DB. i. 94<sup>b</sup>, s.v. ANGEL), the 'angel of Jehovah' differs from 'Jehovah' only in being sensibly manifest: 'the mere manifestation creates a distinction between the "angel of Jehovah" and "Jehovah," though the identity remains.' The angel of Jehovah is mentioned chiefly in the older parts of the historical books, J, E (never P), and the older narratives in Judges (ii. 1, 4, v. 23, vi. 11 f., 20—22, xiii. 3—21).

a flame of fire] A frequent form of the Divine manifestation (xix. 18, xxiv. 17; Ez. i. 27, viii. 2; and in the 'pillar of fire,' Ex. xiii. 21 f.). On the present occasion, however, the fire was not a 'devouring' fire, but only the brilliancy of fire. Cf. Hom. Od. xix. 39 f. (Kn.).

a bush] only besides Dt. xxxiii. 16 'the favour of him that dwelt in the bush.' Properly, as Aram. shews (PS. 2671; Löw, Aram. Pflanzennamen, No. 219), the bramble bush, rubus fruticosus, Linn. (so LXX. βάρος, the God of thy father] xv. 2, xviii. 4: the God worshipped by thy father, and, it is added afterwards, by thy forefathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, as well. Moses is not to introduce to his people any previously unknown God, but the God whom their fathers had worshipped, and who, it was believed, had promised to be with, and to defend, their descendants. 7. seen the affliction] iv. 31; Gen. xxxi. 42; Dt. xxvi. 7 al.

taskmasters] The Egyptian superintendents of the labour-gangs, or corvée (see on i. 11). Properly hard-pressers, rendered driver in Job xxxix. 7; oppressor in Is. iii. 12, ix. 4, xiv. 2; and exactor in Dan. xi. 20 (cf. exact for the cognate verb, Dt. xv. 2, 3): LXX. here ἐργαδιωκται. So ch. v. 6, 10, 13, 14. Not the expression used in i. 11.

8. am come down] from heaven. A frequent anthropomorphism in J: cf. Gen. xi. 5, 7; also Ex. xix. 11, 18, 20, xxxiv. 5.

J large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Amorite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite.

a land flowing with milk and honey] a frequent designation of Canaan in the Pent.: in J (here, v. 17, xiii. 5, xxxiii. 3, Nu. xiii. 27, xiv. 8, xvi. 13 [of Egypt], 14): the compiler of H (Lev. xx. 24); Dt. vi. 3, xi. 9, xxvi. 9, 15, xxvii. 3, xxxi. 20; also Jos. v. 6 (D<sup>2</sup>); Jer. xi. 5, xxxii. 22; Ez. xx. 6, 15†. Milk is an essential article of diet in the East, especially among an agricultural people: 'honey' includes probably not only the honey of bees, but also what is now called by the corresponding name in Arabic dibs, i.e. grape juice, boiled down to a dark golden-brown syrup, intensely sweet, and much used in Palestine as a condiment to food (cf. DB. ii. 32<sup>b</sup>; EB. ii. 2015).

of the Canaanite, &c.] Such rhetorical lists of the nations of Canaan whom the Israelites were to dispossess are frequent, esp. in the Hexateuch, in JE and Deuteronomic writers; see (in JÉ) Gen. xv. 19—21 (where ten are named); Ex. iii. 17, xiii. 5, xxiii. 23, 28, xxxiii. 2, xxxiv. 11; Dt. vii. 1 (seven), xx. 17; Jos. iii. 10, ix. 1, xi. 3, xii. 8, xxiv. 11 (all D<sup>2</sup>); Jud. iii. 5; 1 K. ix. 20.

the Canaanite] more particularly, it seems (see Nu. xiii. 29), the inhabitants of the sea-coast, and of the Jordan-valley: but the term is often used, esp. by J (e.g. Gen. xii. 6), in a wider sense, of the pre-Israelitish population of Canaan generally (see further the writer's note on Dt. i. 6, p. 11 f., and CANAAN in EB.).

the Hittite] The 'Hittites,'<sup>1</sup> as inscriptions now abundantly shew, were a great nation, whose home was N. of Phœnicia and Lebanon, Kadesh on the Orontes being one of their principal cities (see HITTITES in EB. and DB.; or, more briefly, the writer's note on Gen. x. 15; and cf. 1 K. x. 29, xi. 1, 2 K. vii. 6): but these Hittites were never conquered by the Israelites, and so cannot be referred to here. The reference may be to an offshoot settled in the far N. of Canaan (Jud. i. 26, iii. 3 [read Hittite for Hivite]; Jos. xi. 3 [interchange, with LXX., Hittite and Hivite]); but a belief appears gradually to have sprung up,—though how far it is grounded on fact is difficult to say (see the writer's Book of Genesis, pp. 228—30),—that there were once Hittites in the more southerly hill-country of Canaan (Nu. xiii. 29 in JE), and even in Hebron (Gen. xxiii. [P]); and it is possible that this is the view expressed in these enumerations.

the Amorite] in the Tel el-Amarna letters (c. 1400 B.C.), the 'land of Amurri' is mentioned in such a way as to shew that it was the name of a canton, or district, N. of Canaan, behind Phœnicia<sup>2</sup>. By the time of the Hebrew occupation, the Amorites appear to have extended themselves southwards; and so, in the OT., the term is used in two

Am. ii. 9, 10),—in Nu. xiii. 29 said specially to have inhabited the hill-country.

the Perizzite] named alone in Jos. xvii. 15; by the side of the 'Canaanite' only, Gen. xiii. 7, xxxiv. 30, Jud. i. 4, 5; and found also in many of the lists cited above. To judge from the first-cited passages, apparently a people of Central Palestine; but more is not definitely known of them. It is thought by some that the word is not a proper name at all, but that it is connected with perāzī, 'country-folk,' 'peasantry' (Dt. iii. 5 'besides the towns of the peasantry'; 1 S. vi. 18 'the villages of the peasantry'), and denoted the village population of Canaan, the fellahin (or 'labourers' of the soil), as they are now called.

the Jebusite] the tribe which occupied the stronghold of Jerusalem, and maintained themselves there until expelled by David (Jos. xv. 8, 63, 2 S. v. 6—9).

11 ff. In his youth (ch. ii.) Moses was confident and impulsive: but now 'a fugitive and a shepherd, without influence or position' (Kn., Di.), the greatness of the task laid before him makes him distrustful of his powers to undertake it. Accordingly the narrative which follows describes how four difficulties felt and urged by Moses are successively removed by Jehovah, vv. 11—12, 13—22, iv. 1—9, 10—17. Moses' reluctance to undertake the difficult task laid upon him is emphasised, it may be observed, by each narrator, by E in iii. 11 ff., by J in iv. 10—12, and by P in vi. 12, vii. 1.

11—12. Moses' first difficulty: he is unsuited either to treat with Pharaoh, or to become the leader of his people. Cf. Jud. vi. 15.

12. In reply God assures him that He will be with him and support him: cf. Gen. xxviii. 15, xxxi. 3; Jos. i. 5, iii. 7; and especially Jud. vi. 16. 'Certainly,' like 'Surely' in Jud. l.c., is better omitted: the Heb. kī is like the Greek ὄτι recitativum (Lex. 471<sup>b</sup> b).

E this shall be the token unto thee, that I have sent thee: when thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain. And Moses said <sup>13</sup> unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them? And God said unto Moses, <sup>14</sup> I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto token] The word usually rendered 'sign,' as iv. 8, 17, Is. vii. 11, &c. The word means here evidence or proof, as Jud. vi. 17, 1 S. xiv. 10, 2 K. xx. 9: and with reference to something not to be realised immediately, 1 S. ii. 34, Is. vii. 11, xxxvii. 30. The promise, given with all assurance, that the liberated people would worship God on the very mountain on which he was standing, though its full cogency could not be perceived till it was fulfilled, was a guarantee to Moses that God had really sent him.

13—22. Moses' second difficulty: his ignorance of the name of the God who has sent him. In reply, he is told what the name is; and is reassured with regard both to his being listened to by the Israelites (v. 18<sup>a</sup>), and to his securing ultimately the deliverance of his people (vv. 21—22). In ancient times, every deity had his own personal name; and it was of importance to know what this name was; for only if it were known, could the deity who bore it be approached in prayer and appealed to for help; the name was also often an indication of the nature and character of the deity whom it denoted. Cf. DB. v. 640<sup>b</sup>; also iv. 604<sup>a</sup>, v. 181<sup>a</sup>; and see, for illustrations, L. R. Farnell, The Evolution of Religion (1905), pp. 184—192, Frazer, Golden Bough<sup>2</sup>, i. 441 ff.

13—15. The name which, if asked, Moses is to give as that of the God who has sent him.

13. The God of your fathers] Cf. v. 6. These words shew clearly that, according to the writer, the name Yahweh was not known to the patriarchs: when the Israelites hear of the 'God of their fathers,' they do not know what His name is, and ask to have it told them. This agrees with the predominant,—and probably, when the narrative of E was in its original form, with the uniform,—usage of E in Genesis. (In J the name Yahweh (Jehovah) is used consistently from the very beginning of the history, Gen. ii. 4<sup>b</sup>, 5, &c.)

14. I will be that I will be (3rd marg.)] The words are evidently intended as an interpretation of the name Yahweh, the name,—which in form is the third pers. imperf. of a verb (just like Isaac, Jacob,

Jephthah), meaning He is wont to be or He will be,—being interpreted, as Jehovah is Himself the speaker, in the first person. The rendering given appears to the present writer, as it appeared to W. R. Smith, and A. B. Davidson, to give the true meaning of the Heb. 'Ehyeh 'asher 'ehyeh: Jehovah promises that He will be, to Moses and His people, what He will be,—something which is undefined, but which, as His full nature is more and more completely unfolded by the lessons of history and the teaching of the prophets, will prove to be more than words can express. The explanation is thus of a character to reassure Moses. See further the separate note, p. 40.

I AM] better, as before, I will be.

15. Yahweh, the Israelites are to be told, is the name of the God of their fathers, who has sent Moses to them.

this is my name, &c.] The sentence, with its two parallel clauses, has a poetical tinge: the Heb. for 'to all generations,' also, occurs elsewhere only Prov. xxvii. 24 Kt. Cf. Ps. cxxxv. 13.

memorial] The Heb. zeker means usually 'remembrance' (e.g. xvii. 14): here it is a poet. synonym of 'name'; so Hos. xii. 5; Ps. xxx. 4 = xcvi. 12 (see RVm.); Is. xxvi. 8.

16—18. Moses is to gather together the elders of Israel, and communicate to them God's purpose to lead His people into Canaan: they will listen to him; and the Pharaoh is then to be asked to allow a pilgrimage to worship Jehovah in the wilderness.

16. the elders] the older and leading men of the different families. Often mentioned as the representatives of the people: v. 18, iv. 29, xvii. 5, 6, xviii. 12 al.

visited] i.e. shewn practical interest in, noticed in some practical way (Gen. xxi. 1; Luke i. 68, vii. 16): so iv. 31, xiii. 19 (Gen. i. 24).

17. said] i.e. as often, said mentally = resolved.

bring you up] from the low-lying land of Egypt into the high ground of Canaan. So regularly (cf. i. 10).

J affliction of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Amorite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite, unto a land flowing with milk and honey. And they shall hearken to thy voice: and thou shalt come, <sup>18</sup> thou and the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The LORD, the God of the Hebrews, hath met with us: and now let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to 18. shall hearken] rather, will hearken. In EVV. 'shall' (in the 3rd person), and 'shalt' are often used where a command is out of place, and where we should now say will, wilt.

the God of the Hebrews] as opposed to the gods of the Egyptians. So v. 3, vii. 16, ix. 1, 13, x. 3 (all in the same narrative, J; cf. p. 56).

met with us] or, lighted upon us,—viz. in a sudden, unexpected way. So v. 3; cf. Nu. xxiii. 3, 4, 15, 16. Rendered happened or chanced in 2 S. i. 6, xviii. 9, xx. 1.

three days' journey] Probably a current expression for a considerable distance (Gen. xxx. 36): they ask to be allowed to worship their national God, with such rites as He may enjoin (viii. 27), at some distant spot in the wilderness where they could give no offence to the Egyptians (viii. 26). The 'wilderness' would be the broad and arid limestone plateau, now called et-Tih, extending from the E. border of Egypt to the S. of Palestine, and bounded on the S. by the mountains of the Sinaitic Peninsula. In an age in which every people had its own god, or gods, whom they worshipped in their own special way, a request to be allowed to make such a pilgrimage would seem quite natural. In the form, Let my people go, that they may serve me, it is repeated in the sequel of J seven times (see on iv. 23); comp. also v. 3, x. 7—11, 24—26.

In what sense is the request meant? If, as has been supposed, it was intended merely as an excuse for getting a good start for their subsequent flight, then it was clearly a case of deception: the Israelites would in this case have sought to obtain from the Pharaoh by a ruse what, if he had known their entire purpose, he would not have granted. It is not however said that, if the request had been acceded to, they would not have returned, when the three days' festival was over: so it may have been intended merely (Di.) to test the feeling of the Pharaoh towards the Israelites; to serve their God in their own way was in itself 'the smallest request that subjects could make of their ruler'; and if this request had been viewed by the Pharaoh favourably, the door might have been opened for further negotiations, and the people might eventually have been allowed to depart altogether: the request was not granted, and so it resolved itself in the end into a demand for the unconditional release of the people and their actual departure.

19—20. But the Pharaoh will not let Israel go, till the Egyptians have experienced the power of Jehovah's hand.

19 the LORD our God. | And I know that the king of Egypt E will not give you leave to go, no, not by a mighty hand.
 20 And I will put forth my hand, and smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and after 21 that he will let you go. And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, 22 that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty: but every woman shall ask of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment:
 and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your

19. But I know. The pron. is emphatic.

no, not by a mighty hand] not even when severely smitten by God's hand,—as in the first nine plagues. But it is strange that the tenth plague (when the Pharaoh did let them go) should be excluded. What we expect (cf. v. 20) is, 'except by a mighty hand' (so LXX.); and this ought probably to be read (N<sup>7</sup> DN for N<sup>7</sup>1). Mighty hand as vi. 1, xiii. 9, xxxii. 11; Nu. xx. 20 (of Edom): and often in Dt. (esp. in the combination 'a mighty hand and stretched out arm,' iv. 34, v. 15 al.).

20. wonders] Ex. xxxiv. 10, Jos. iii. 5.

21—22. Not only will the Egyptians then let the Israelites go, but God will give them favour in the eyes of the Egyptians, and they will bestow many valuables upon them. The verses, it is evident, must belong to the narrator who regards the Israelites as settled among the Egyptians themselves (i.e. E), not to J, who (see on viii. 22) represents them as living apart in the land of Goshen.

22. sojourneth] probably, as a slave or hired servant: cf. Job xix. 15 (RVm.), and on ch. xii. 48.

put them upon] as ornaments; cf. Gen. xxiv. 47, xli. 42.

This remarkable incident is referred to twice again: in xi. 2 f., where the people are directly commanded to make the request, and xii. 35 f., where the occurrence itself is narrated. 'According to the tradition ('Sage') as handed down by E, the Israelites at their departure received from their Egyptian acquaintances, who were favourably disposed towards them, and held Moses in honour (see xi. 3), all kinds of valuables. For what purpose is not, in the present text, stated: probably as ornaments and festal attire for the feast, such as it was usual to wear on such occasions (Hos. ii. 13). It is at the same time possible that according to the original intention of the legend, the valuables, which the Israelites used for their sanctuary (xxxiii. 6; xxxv. 22 f.), were to be regarded as spoil won from the Egyptians. But as it now stands, the chief stress appears to rest on the consideration that through God's providence the Israelites were enriched at the expense of their oppressors, and gained as it were a sort of prize of victory as a compensation for their long oppression' (Dillm.: similarly Ewald, Hist. ii. 65 f.). See further on xii. 36.

J daughters; and ye shall spoil the Egyptians. | And Moses 4 answered and said, But, behold, they will not believe me, nor hearken unto my voice: for they will say, The LORD hath not appeared unto thee. And the LORD said 2 unto him, What is that in thine hand? And he said, A rod. And he said, Cast it on the ground. And he cast 3 it on the ground, and it became a <sup>1</sup>serpent; and Moses fled from before it. And the LORD said unto Moses, Put 4 forth thine hand, and take it by the tail: (and he put forth his hand, and laid hold of it, and it became a rod in his hand:) that they may believe that the LORD, the God of 5 their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee. And the 6 LORD said furthermore unto him, Put now thine hand into thy bosom. And he put his hand into his bosom: and when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous, as white as snow. And he said, Put thine hand into thy bosom 7 again. (And he put his hand into his bosom again; and when he took it out of his bosom, behold, it was turned

iv. 1—9. Moses' third difficulty: in spite of the assurance of iii. 18<sup>a</sup>, the Israelites will perhaps not listen to him, or believe in his divine commission. To enable him to meet this contingency, he is endowed with the power of performing three signs, which may serve as credentials of his commission.

1. they (twice)] not the Egyptians (iii. 22), but the Israelites, as v. 30 shews. The verse is the sequel in J to iii. 18.

2—5. The first sign.

2. A rod] 'The rod was one of the ancient elements in the tradition. Here, in J, it is represented as the shepherd's staff which was naturally in Moses' hands, and it becomes the medium of the display of the divine power to him. In E it is apparently given him by God (v. 17), and consequently bears the name 'rod of God' (v. 20<sup>b</sup>): as such, it is the instrument with which Moses achieves the wonders, vii. 20<sup>b</sup>, ix. 23, x. 13' (C.-H.; cf. below, p. 56). In P the rod appears in Aaron's hands (cf. p. 55), and the occasion on which it is changed into a serpent is a different one (vii. 8—13).

3. a serpent] The marg. 'Heb. nāhāsh' is added for the purpose of shewing that the Heb. word used here is different from the one used in vii. 10—12 (P); see the marg. there.

6—8. The second sign.

leprous, as white as snow] cf. Nu. xii. 10. 2 K. v. 27.

was turned] an archaism for 'turned' (as Jer. xxxi. 18, 19, xxxiv. 15,

- 8 again as his other flesh.) And it shall come to pass, if they J will not believe thee, neither hearken to the voice of the first sign, that they will believe the voice of the latter sign. •
- 9 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe even these two signs, neither hearken unto thy voice, that thou shalt take of the water of the river, and pour it upon the dry land : and the water which thou takest out of the river and elsewhere : see the writer's Parallel Psalter, p. 483). The Heb. verb, as in the passages quoted, is an intransitive one, and is rendered in 2 K. v. 14 (in the same expression) 'came again.'

9. The third sign, to be resorted to only if necessary. Water taken from the Nile, and poured upon the earth, to be turned into blood.

the river (twice)] the Nile (Heb. ye'ôr) : see on i. 22.

10—17. Moses' fourth difficulty : he objects that he is not fluent, has no power to state his case, to convince or persuade the Israelites. He is promised, in reply, firstly, that God will be with him to give him words, and afterwards, as he still demurs, that Aaron shall be his spokesman.

10. Oh] In the Heb. a particle of entreaty, craving permission to speak : always followed by either Lord ('Adonai,' not 'Jehovah'), v. 13, Jos. vii. 8 al., or my lord, Gen. xliii. 20, Nu. xii. 11 al.

eloquent] lit. a man of words, i.e. able to command words, fluent. Cf. Jeremiah's objection (i. 6).

nor since, &c.] In giving him his commission, God has conferred upon him other powers (vv. 2—9), but not the gift of fluency.

heavy of mouth and heavy of tongue] i.e. slow to move them.

11. God gives man all his faculties; and therefore, it is implied, can give Moses fluency. The words are spoken in a tone of reproof.

12. God further promises that He will be with his mouth (cf. iii. 12), and teach him always what to say. Cf., of prophets, Dt. xviii. 18, Jer. i. 9.

13. Send, I pray thee, him whom thou wilt send, whoever it may be (for the idiom, see on xxxiii. 19). Moses assents, but unwillingly and ambiguously (cf. W. R. Smith [p. 40 n.], p. 163).

J thou wilt send. And the anger of the LORD was kindled <sup>11</sup> against Moses, and he said, Is there not Aaron thy brother the Levite? I know that he can speak well. And also, behold, he cometh forth to meet thee: and when he seeth thee, he will be glad in his heart. And thou shalt speak <sup>15</sup> unto him, and put the words in his mouth: and I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do. And he shall be thy spokesman unto the <sup>16</sup> people: and it shall come to pass, that he shall be to thee <sup>17</sup> E a mouth, and thou shalt be to him as God. | And thou

14. the Levite] As Moses, equally with Aaron, belonged to the tribe of Levi (ii. 1), the term, as applied distinctively to the latter, must denote, not ancestry, but profession. There must have been a period in the history of the 'Levites,' when the term was (McNeile) 'the official title of one who had received the training of a priest, regardless of the tribe of which he was a member by birth' (cf. Jud. xvii. 7, where a member of the tribe of Judah is a 'Levite'). See Moore, Judges, 383; McNeile, lxxvi—lxxviii. It was the duty of the priest to give tôrâh, or oral 'direction,' to the people (p. 79); hence some power of language might be presupposed in him. If the term has here, not a tribal sense, but the official sense just explained, there need be no anachronism in its use.

that he] unlike Moses. The pron. is emphatic.

when he seeth thee, &c.] he will be glad, not only to meet thee, but also, it is implied, to cooperate with thee.

15, 16. Aaron is to be, as it were, Moses' prophet, and to speak the words which Moses places in his mouth,—in particular, the words contained in iii. 16—17,—putting them in such a way, and supporting them with such arguments, as may satisfy the people of the reality of Moses' commission. Cf. in P vii. 1.

15. put the words, &c.] cf. Nu. xxii. 38, xxiii. 5, 12, 16.

I will be, &c.] The promise of v. 12 is extended here to both the brothers.

16. And he (emph.) shall be thy spokesman] Heb. shall speak for thee. as God] or as a god,—inspiring him, as God (or a god) inspired (or was supposed to inspire) a prophet.

17—21. Here vv. 17—18, 20<sup>b</sup>—21 are assigned to E on account of their imperfect connexion with the context: iv. 17 speaks of 'the signs' to be done with the rod, whereas only one sign to be performed with it has been enjoined in vv. 1—9; iv. 21 mentions 'portents' to be done before the Pharaoh, whereas vv. 1—9 speak only of wonders to be wrought for the satisfaction of the people. Further, v. 19, from its contents, is not fitted to be the sequel of v. 18; it in fact states an alternative ground for Moses' return into Egypt; and the name Jethro (Jethro) makes it probable that v. 18 belongs to the same current of narrative as iii. 1 and ch. xviii. (i.e. E); hence v. 19 will be referred to J. V. 20<sup>b</sup> goes naturally with v. 17 (the rod).

17 (E). this rod, &c.] Not the rod of vv. 2—4 (with which only one sign was to be wrought), but the rod often mentioned in E as borne by Moses (v. 20<sup>b</sup>, vii. 15, 17, 20, ix. 23, x. 13, xiv. 16, xvii. 5, 9). In a previous part of E, which has not been preserved, it must have been told how Moses was equipped with a wonder-working rod, and what 'the signs' were which he was to perform with it before Pharaoh (so Di.).

18—20. Moses prepares to return to Egypt.

18. He first asks permission to leave his father-in-law (in whose service he was, iii. 1), concealing his real purpose, and requesting only a temporary leave of absence.

my brethren] his own relations (the term 'brethren' including nephews, Gen. xiii. 8, xiv. 14, xxiv. 27).

19. That Moses should now be commanded by God to do what he has already both determined to do, and obtained Jethro's permission to do, is remarkable; and, as Dillm. remarks, can only be explained by the fact that the verse is by a different narrator from v. 18 (viz. J)<sup>1</sup>.

20<sup>a</sup> (J). his wife, &c.] according to E Moses went alone into Egypt, and was only joined by his wife and sons afterwards (xviii. 5).

his sons] The birth of only one son has been hitherto mentioned (ii. 22); and iv. 25 suggests strongly that only one son was with Moses at the time: Di. and others are therefore probably right in thinking that we should read his son, the plural being an alteration due to an editor or scribe who thought that account should be taken of xviii. 2—4.

20<sup>b</sup> (E). the rod of God] So xvii. 9, cf. on iv. 17.

E LORD said unto Moses, When thou goest back into Egypt, see that thou do before Pharaoh all the wonders which I have put in thine hand: but I will <sup>1</sup>harden his heart, and *J*he will not let the people go. | And thou shalt say unto <sup>22</sup>Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD, Israel is my son, my first-born: and I have said unto thee, Let my son go, that he <sup>23</sup> produce any effect upon him (v. 21), and of the threat which he is ultimately to hold out to him (v. 22 f.).

21<sup>a</sup>. He is to do the portents which God has put in his hand, i.e. not the signs of vv. 2—9 (which were to be done before the people), but those enjoined in v. 17 (E), which (v. 21) were to be done by Moses before Pharaoh, by means of the 'rod': see p. 56.

wonders] portents. The Heb. mōphēth is more than a 'wonder'; it means an unusual phenomenon,—natural or supernatural, as the case might be,—arresting attention, and calling for explanation: see 1 K. xiii. 3, 5 (EVV. sign); Dt. xiii. 1, 2, xxviii. 46, Is. viii. 18, xx. 5 (EVV. wonder); Ez. xii. 6, 11 (EVV. sign). Elsewhere in Ex. it occurs only in P (vii. 3, 9, xi. 9, 10): in Dt., coupled with 'signs,' it is often used of the 'portents' wrought in Egypt (iv. 34, vi. 22, vii. 19 al.). It is quite different from the word rightly rendered wonders in Ex. iii. 20, and elsewhere.

harden] Lit., as marg., make strong. See on vii. 13.

22—23. The substance of the demand which Moses is to make of the Pharaoh, formulated with special reference to the final and severest plague, the 10th: Israel is Jehovah's firstborn; if Pharaoh does not let Israel go, his own firstborn will be slain. The situation implied by these verses ('have said,' 'hast refused') is between the first nine plagues and the 10th; and so it has been conjectured, especially as this message to Pharaoh is never in the sequel actually given to him, that they originally stood before x. 28 (or xi. 4), as J's introduction to the 10th plague, and were removed here by the compiler, as an indication of the gist and purpose of the whole series of plagues.

22. Thus saith Jehovah] so vii. 17, viii. 1, 20, xi. 4 (all J); with the God of the Hebrews added, ix. 1, 13, x. 3 (also all J); and with the God of Israel added, v. 1, xxxii. 27 (both E). None of these expressions occurs elsewhere in the Pent. The first is a formula used constantly by the prophets (e.g. 2 K. i. 4, 6, Am. i. 3, 6); and the third is used by them sometimes (as Jud. vi. 8, Jer. xi. 3).

my son, my firstborn] Israel, treated as an individual, is brought into the closest and dearest relation to Jehovah, as his 'son' (cf. Hos. xi. 1), his 'firstborn.' In Jer. xxxi. 9 Ephraim is called Jehovah's 'firstborn,' as in v. 20 His 'dear son,' and 'delightful child.' The figure is more common in the plural of the individual Israelites; and it is then often used when the prophets desire to dwell upon the privileges bestowed on Israel by its Father, or the duties owed by it to its Father, or its unfilial behaviour towards Him: e.g. Hos. i. 10, xi. 2—4; Is. i. 2, 4; Dt. xiv. 1, xxxii. 5, 6, 18, 19, 20; Jer. iii. 14, 22, iv. 22; Is. lxiii. 8—10 (see further the writer's note on Dt. xxxii. 5, p. 352). The idea of a nation or an individual being descended from a divine ancestor was common in antiquity (cf. Nu. xxi. 29, where the Moabites are called the 'sons and daughters of Chēmōsh'): but in such cases the relation was conceived as a physical one; in Israel the idea was spiritualized, and, in virtue of Jehovah's ethical and spiritual character, made the expression of moral and spiritual relations.

23. that he may serve me] i.e. hold a religious service ('serve,' as in iii. 12 and frequently), viz. in the wilderness: cf. (also in J) vii. 16, viii. 1, 20, ix. 1, 13, x. 3.

24—26. Continuation of v. 20<sup>a</sup>. On the journey to Egypt, Moses falls dangerously ill; but his wife, Zipporah, divining the cause, saves his life by circumcising his son, and casting his foreskin at Moses' feet (thereby treating it symbolically as Moses' foreskin). A remarkable, and evidently antique narrative, noticeable also on account of the strongly anthropomorphic representation of Yahweh ('met him,' and 'sought to kill him': cf. Gen. ii. 4—iii. 24, vii. 16, xi. 5, 7: see the writer's Book of Genesis, pp. xx f., 35 f.).

24. sought to kill him] 'A primitive anthropomorphic way of saying that Moses fell dangerously ill' (McNeile). The reason is commonly supposed to have been his neglect to circumcise his child (Gen. xvii.). But, as Di. remarks, 'there is nothing in the narrative to suggest this; and an acquaintance with the command of Gen. xvii. is as little presupposed by it as by Jos. v. 9' (see further below, p. 33).

25. a flint] in accordance with the oldest custom (cf. Jos. v. 2, 3, and xxiv. 30 LXX.); because the practice of circumcision originated among peoples, or in an age, in which metal knives were either not yet in use, or used but rarely (Di.).

and made it touch his feet] to connect him with what she had done, and make her son's circumcision count as her husband's. For the Heb., cf. Is. vi. 7, Jer. i. 9.

a blood-bridegroom] Originally the expression may have denoted the bridegroom, as one who (see below) was himself circumcised. Here

J So he let him alone. Then she said, <sup>1</sup>A bridegroom of blood art thou, because of the circumcision. 26
 E And the LORD said to Aaron, Go into the wilderness to meet Moses. And he went, and met him in the mountain 27

however it is used in the sense of a bridegroom secured to his wife by the circumcision of his son.

26. let him alone] Heb. relaxed from him : cf. Jud. xi. 37, Dt. ix. 14. Then she said [viz. when she spoke the words given in v. 25<sup>b</sup>], 'A blood-bridegroom, with regard to circumcisions]' The last word is plural in the Heb. 'Blood-bridegroom' was apparently a current expression : and the passage seems to attribute to Zipporah the new sense of it explained in the last note but one.

It seems that in this narrative an archaic stage in the history of circumcision is referred to, which is not elsewhere mentioned in the OT. Circumcision is a rite which has been, and still is, largely practised in the world : among the Hebrews (besides its religious associations) its distinctive feature was that it was performed in infancy. Among the Arabs it is performed upon boys of ages varying, in different places, from 3 to 15 ; but in many parts of the world it is performed upon youths at the approach of puberty. A practice so widely diffused must rest upon some common principle : and the idea which appears generally to underlie circumcision is that it is a rite of initiation into manhood ; a youth, till he has been circumcised, is not reckoned a full member of the tribe, or (as in Australia, for instance) allowed to marry. Now the fact that the Heb. word for 'father-in-law' (hōthēn) is derived from a root which in Arabic signifies to circumcise, seems to shew that it meant originally circumciser, and to indicate that in primitive times circumcision was among the Hebrews, as among the other nations just referred to, a general preliminary to marriage, which it was the duty of the future father-in-law to see enforced. These facts throw light upon the present narrative. The reason why Moses had incurred Jehovah's wrath was because he was not a 'blood-bridegroom,' i.e. because he had not, according to established custom, submitted to circumcision before marriage : Zipporah, seizing a flint, circumcises her son instead of her husband, and so makes the latter symbolically a 'blood-bridegroom,' and delivers him from the wrath of Jehovah. At the same time, the circumcision of male infants is explained as a more humane substitute for the original circumcision of young men before marriage (Wellh. Hist. p. 340 ; EB. ii. 830, 832 ; DB. v. 622<sup>a</sup>). On circumcision, see now very fully Hastings' Encycl. of Rel. and Ethics, s.v.

27—31. Moses and Aaron together communicate their commission to the people in Egypt, and are readily believed by them.

27. Aaron (cf. v. 14) coming from Egypt by Divine command to meet Moses, finds him in the 'mountain of God,' Horeb (iii. 1). The verse is the continuation of vv. 17, 18, 20<sup>b</sup>. The 'wilderness' meant

28 of God, and kissed him. And Moses told Aaron all the E words of the LORD wherewith he had sent him, and all the Aaron went and gathered together all the elders of the 30 children of Israel: and Aaron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Moses, and did the signs in the 31 sight of the people. And the people believed: and when they heard that the LORD had visited the children of Israel, and that he had seen their affliction, then they bowed their came, and said unto Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Let my people go, that they may hold may be either the one beyond Horeb (iii. 1), or the wilderness between Horeb and Egypt.

28. words...signs] the commission and promises of iii. 10—15; and the 'signs' of iv. 17. There does not seem to be any reference to the part which Aaron is to play as Moses' spokesman (iv. 15, 16 J).

29—31. Execution of the commands given in iii. 16, iv. 2—9.

30<sup>a</sup>. Here Aaron appears as Moses' spokesman, in accordance with vv. 15, 16 (J).

30<sup>b</sup>. and did] i.e. Aaron. But the Heb. is and he did, allowing a reference to Moses, which is undoubtedly right (Di.). The 'signs' are those given to Moses in vv. 1—9.

31. The people believe in Moses' commission, as Jehovah had assured him that they would do (iii. 18<sup>a</sup>, iv. 8, 9); and bow their heads in reverence and gratitude when they hear that Jehovah has visited (iii. 16) His people.

and when, &c.] Heb. and they heard..., and they bowed. LXX. for and they heard (וַיִּשְׁמְעוּ) have and they rejoiced (וַיִּשְׂמְחוּ); no doubt rightly.

v. 1—vi. 1. The application to the Pharaoh, and its failure. V. 1—vi. 1 is for its greater part a continuous narrative from J: but at the beginning v. 3 seems to be a doublet of v. 1, and (especially) v. 5 of v. 4; hence most critics refer vv. 1, 2, 4 to E.

1—5. Moses and Aaron ask permission of the Pharaoh for the Israelites to keep a three days' feast in the wilderness. The request is refused.

1. Jehovah, the God of Israel] elsewhere in the Pent. only xxxii. 27 (E), also with Thus saith; cf. on iv. 22.

make a pilgrimage] The Heb. hag means not simply a religious 'feast' like our Easter or Christmas, for instance, but a feast accompanied by a pilgrimage to a sanctuary: such as, for instance, were the three 'haggim,' at which every male Israelite was to appear before Jehovah (Ex. xxiii. 14—17). The corresponding word in Arabic, haj,

E a feast unto me in the wilderness. And Pharaoh said, Who <sup>2</sup> is the LORD, that I should hearken unto his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, and moreover I will not J let Israel go. | And they said, The God of the Hebrews <sup>3</sup> hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God; lest he fall upon us with pestilence, or with the E sword. | And the king of Egypt said unto them, Wherefore <sup>4</sup> do ye, Moses and Aaron, loose the people from their works? J get you unto your burdens. | And Pharaoh said, Behold, <sup>5</sup> the people of the land are now many, and ye make them rest from their burdens. And the same day Pharaoh <sup>6</sup> commanded the taskmasters of the people, and their officers, denotes the pilgrimage to Mecca, which every faithful Mohammedan endeavours to make at least once in his life.

2. The Pharaoh replies contemptuously that he knows nothing of Jehovah, and need not therefore listen to His behests.

3. The request itself, as far as 'our God,' is repeated almost verbatim from iii. 18 (J). 'God of the Hebrews' is J's standing expression (see the note ibid.); contrast 'God of Israel,' v. 1.

lest he fall upon us, &c.] for neglecting the duty laid upon us.

4. The Pharaoh regards the pilgrimage as merely an excuse for a holiday; and bids Moses and Aaron no longer unsettle the people.

5. the people of the land] the common work-people; cf. Jer. lii. 25. They are already sufficiently numerous; and idleness will unsettle them, and make them dangerous to their masters.

6—9. The Pharaoh commands the Egyptian 'taskmasters' (whom he must be supposed—see v. 10—to have summoned to his presence) to increase the tasks imposed upon the Israelites: they are to find their straw themselves, and yet to make the same number of bricks. Bricks in Egypt (which in the earlier periods were much larger than our bricks, generally about  $15 \times 7 \times 4\frac{1}{2}$  in.) were made (on i. 14) from the mud of the Nile, mixed usually with chopped straw or reed, to give it coherence and prevent cracks while drying, and then dried in the sun (EB. i. 609; cf. L. and B. i. 165). These bricks remained black. Burnt red brick was first introduced into Egypt by the Romans.

6. the taskmasters] i.e. as in iii. 7, the Egyptian superintendents of the labour-gangs (LXX., as there, ἐργοδῶκται): so vv. 10, 13, 14.

officers] Heb. shōṭerim: here of minor officials appointed (see v. 14) by the Egyptian superintendents (the 'taskmasters') from among the Israelites themselves, and acting as the immediate overseers of the labour-gangs. If the word were really felt to mean writers (LXX. γραμματεῖς, 'scribes': cf. the footnote), they no doubt also kept lists of the 7 saying, Ye shall no more give the people straw to make 8 brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for them-9 selves. And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish 10 aught thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, 11 Let us go and sacrifice to our God. Let heavier work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein; and let 12 them not regard lying words. And the taskmasters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the 13 people, saying, Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw. Go yourselves, get you straw where ye can find it: for nought of your work shall be diminished. So the people were scattered abroad throughout all the land of Egypt to gather stubble for straw. And the taskmasters were urgent, saying, Fulfil your works, your daily tasks, as when there was straw.

workmen, and accounts of the work done. Elsewhere, as Nu. xi. 16, Dt. i. 15 (see the writer's note there), xvi. 18, xx. 5, the term is used of various minor judicial and military officials. The 'taskmasters' dealt directly, not with the labourers, but with these shōterim<sup>1</sup>.

8. tale] that which is told or counted: an archaism for 'number' (=Germ. Zahl). So v. 18, 1 S. xviii. 27, 1 Ch. ix. 28. Cf. Milton, L'Allegro, 67 f., 'And every shepherd tells [i.e. counts: Ps. xlviii. 12, cxlvii. 4] his tale [viz. of sheep] Under the hawthorn in the dale.' The Heb. here means properly a rightly regulated amount.

therefore they cry, &c.] Their request to be allowed to make a pilgrimage to their God is merely a pretext for idleness.

9. Let them be fully occupied with their work, and have no time to regard 'lying words,' as if God had really demanded a pilgrimage of them.

10—12. The 'taskmasters' communicate the Pharaoh's commands to the people.

10. went out] viz. from the Pharaoh's court.

12. to gather stubble] which might be difficult to find, except immediately after the harvest.

13—14. Although however the number of workers was thus materially diminished, the 'taskmasters,' carrying out the Pharaoh's injunctions, still demand the same tale of bricks; and as it is not forthcoming, the 'officers' (v. 6) of the Israelites are held responsible for the deficit, and beaten.

13. your daily tasks] Heb. the matter of a day in its day, a Heb.

<sup>1</sup> The proper meaning of shōterim is uncertain, the root not occurring in Heb. It may be writers (i.e. registrars), cf. the Ass. shafāru, to write; or it may be, from what is seemingly the primary sense of the root in Arabic, to range in order (cf. Arab. saḡara, to rule (a book), saḡr, a row), arrangers, organizers (cf. mishḡar, Job xxxviii. 33, 'ordered arrangement,' 'rule').

J And the officers of the children of Israel, which Pharaoh's<sup>14</sup> taskmasters had set over them, were beaten, and demanded, Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task both yesterday and to-day, in making brick as heretofore? Then<sup>15</sup> the officers of the children of Israel came and cried unto Pharaoh, saying, Wherefore dealest thou thus with thy servants? There is no straw given unto thy servants, and<sup>16</sup> they say to us, Make brick: and, behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people. But he said,<sup>17</sup> Ye are idle, ye are idle: therefore ye say, Let us go and sacrifice to the LORD. Go therefore now, and work;<sup>18</sup> for there shall no straw be given you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks. And the officers of the children of Israel<sup>19</sup> did see that they<sup>2</sup> were in evil case, when it was said, Ye shall not diminish aught from your bricks, your daily tasks.

idiom implying a daily portion, amount, or duty. See xvi. 4, Lev. xxiii. 37 (RV. 'each on its own day'), 1 K. viii. 59, 2 K. xxv. 30 al.

demanded] i.e. asked. 'Demand' in Old English meant simply to 'ask' (Fr. demandeur), not, as now, to ask with authority. See Aldis Wright's Bible Word-Book, or DB. s.v. So Job xxxviii. 3, 2 S. xi. 7, Mt. ii. 4, &c. Here 'and demanded' is a paraphrase, the Heb. being simply saying.

14. task] prescribed portion (or amount): cf. Prov. xxx. 8 (RVm.), xxxi. 15. Not as in v. 13, or as in 'taskmasters' (v. 6).

yesterday and to-day] i.e., by Heb. idiom, recently. So heretofore is lit. 'yesterday and the third day'; cf., in the Heb., vv. 7, 8.

15—19. The officers of the Israelites expostulate with the Pharaoh, but to no effect. Cf. Erman, 177 (a complaint of the absence of straw).

16. they say] viz. the Egyptian 'taskmasters.'

but the fault is in thine own people] The text cannot be right: not only is the Heb. ungrammatical, but the fault was not in the people, but in the king. It is better, adding one letter, to read with LXX. Pesh. Di. Bā. 'and thou sinnest against thine own people,' i.e. committest a wrong against thine own subjects, the Hebrews.

17, 18. The king impatiently turns them away, repeating the charge of idleness which he had made before (v. 8), and insisting again that they must produce the same amount of bricks as before.

19. in evil case] in having to tell their people that there was to be no abatement from their daily task.

The description here given of Egyptian brick-making is well illustrated from the monuments. The accompanying illustration (given more completely in Wilk.-B. i. 344) from the tomb of Rekhmāra, vizier of Thothmes III (1503—1449 B.C.), at 'Abd el-Kurnah, opposite to Luxor, represents Asiatic captives making bricks for the temple of Amon at Thebes. On the left we see men drawing water from a tank to moisten the mud: elsewhere there are men carrying the mud in baskets, kneading it with their feet, placing it in moulds (which would usually be stamped with the name of the reigning king), exposing the bricks to dry, piling them up in rows, and building a wall with them; in the lower picture we notice an Egyptian 'taskmaster' with his rod. The gangs of slaves, or captives, engaged upon such work, were organized almost like an army: they were under the superintendence of 'standard-bearers,' chosen out of the Egyptian army (corresponding to the 'taskmasters' here), and they had also officers of their own (corresponding to the shōferim), who were responsible to the standard-bearers. See Erman, pp. 417 f., 128. At Tell el-Maskhuta, the site of Pithom (i. 11), M. Naville found bricks, some made with chopped straw or reed, and some without it (Pithom, p. 11<sup>b</sup>). Most Egyptian bricks, however, do not contain straw; and Petrie (Egypt and Israel, 30) thinks that the straw here asked for was for dipping the hand in, or sprinkling over the still soft bricks, that they might not stick.

20—21. On coming out from their audience with the Pharaoh, they meet Moses and Aaron; and blame them for being the cause of this aggravation of the people's sufferings.

20. stood in the way] stationed themselves to meet them.

21. Jehovah look upon you, and judge] not leave you unheeded and unpunished, for the evil you have brought upon the people.

made our savour to be abhorred, &c.] lit. made our savour to stink; as we should say, brought us into ill odour with: cf. Gen. xxxiv. 30; also, in the Heb., 1 S. xiii. 4, 2 S. x. 6 al.

to put, &c.] They have simply, by asking permission for the pilgrimage, given the Pharaoh an opportunity to ruin us.

22—23. Moses expostulates with Jehovah; and asks why He has thus brought trouble upon His people, and sent Moses himself upon a fruitless mission.

entreated] an archaism for treated (ill-treated); so Gen. xii. 16, Nu. xi. 11, Dt. xxvi. 6 al. Elsewhere the same Heb. is rendered dealt ill with (Gen. xliii. 6), or brought evil upon (1 K. xvii. 20).

vi. 1. Jehovah's reply. He calms Moses with the assurance that he will now shortly see what will happen to the Pharaoh: he will soon not merely be willing to let the Israelites go, but will be eager to drive or thrust them (xi. 1, xii. 39) from his land.

Additional Note on iii. 14.

The following are the reasons which lead the present writer to agree with W. R. Smith<sup>1</sup> and A. B. Davidson<sup>2</sup> in adopting the rend. I will be that I will be for 'Ekyeh 'asher 'ekyeh. In the first place the verb hâyâh expresses not to be essentially, but to be phaenomenally; it corresponds to ἡγνοῦμαι not εἶναι; it denotes, in Delitzsch's words, not the idea of inactive, abstract existence, but the active manifestation of existence. Secondly the imperfect tense used expresses not a fixed, present state ('I am'), but action, either reiterated (habitual) or future, i.e. either I am wont to be or I will be. Whichever rend. be adopted, it is implied (1) that Jehovah's nature can be defined only in terms of itself ('I am wont to be that I am wont to be,' or 'I will be that I will be'), and (2) that, while He is, as opposed to non-existent heathen deities, He exists, not simply in an abstract sense ('I am that I am'<sup>3</sup>; LXX. ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ὢν), but actively: He either is wont to be what He is wont to be, i.e. is ever in history manifesting Himself anew to mankind, and especially to Israel<sup>4</sup>; or He will be what He will be, i.e. He will,—not, of course, once only, but habitually,—approve Himself to His people as 'what He will be'; as what is not further defined, or defined only in terms of Himself, but, it is understood, as what He has promised, and they look for, as their helper, strengthener, deliverer, &c.<sup>5</sup> The two renderings do not yield a substantially different sense: for what is wont to be does not appreciably differ from what at any moment will be. I will be is however the preferable rendering. As both W. R. Smith and Davidson point out, the important thing to bear in mind is that 'ekyeh expresses not the abstract, metaphysical idea of being, but the being of Yahweh as revealed and known to Israel. 'The expression I will be is a historical formula; it refers, not to what God will be in Himself: it is no predication regarding His essential nature, but one regarding what He will approve Himself to others, regarding what He will shew Himself to be to those in covenant with Him,' as by His providential guidance of His people, and the teaching of His prophets, His character and attributes were more and more fully unfolded to them<sup>1</sup>.

CHAPTERS VI. 2—VII. 13.

God, who had been known to the patriarchs as El Shaddai, reveals Himself to Moses as Jehovah (Yahweh), and bids him tell the Israelites that He has resolved to deliver them from their bondage, to make them His people, and to bring them into the land promised to their forefathers (vi. 2—8). The people, hopeless and disheartened, refuse to listen to him (vi. 9). He and Aaron are then commanded to demand the release of the people from the Pharaoh: upon his pleading his inability to speak, Aaron is appointed to be his spokesman with the king (vi. 10—13, 28—30, vii. 1—2). But God will harden the Pharaoh's heart, that he will not listen to their request, and that he may be made to see and feel His might (vii. 3—7). Moses and Aaron are empowered to work a portent, as a credential of their mission; but it is imitated by the Egyptian magicians, and the Pharaoh remains obdurate (vii. 8—13). The narrative is interrupted by a genealogy of Moses and Aaron, vi. 14—27.

The phraseology of this narrative shews that it is derived from P; its contents shew that it does not describe the sequel of iii. 1—vi. 1, but is parallel to it, and that it gives a partly divergent account of the commission of Moses, and of the preliminary steps taken by him to secure the release of the people. This will be apparent if the narrative be followed attentively. iii. 1—vi. 1 describes the call and commission of Moses, the nomination of Aaron as his spokesman with the people, and three signs given to him for the satisfaction of the people, if they should demand his credentials. Moses and Aaron have satisfied the people (iv. 30, 31), but their application to the Pharaoh has proved unsuccessful (ch. v.), and something further is threatened (vi. 1). The continuation of vi. 1 is, however, vii. 14: vi. 1—vii. 13 is a parallel narrative of Moses' call and commission, in which, unlike iv. 31, the people refuse to listen to him (vi. 9), and in which, upon Moses' protesting his inability to plead, not, as in iv. 10—16, with the people, but with the Pharaoh, Aaron is appointed to be his spokesman with him (vi. 11—12, 29—30, vii. 1—2). If the Pharaoh had already refused to hear him (as he would have done, had ch. v.—vi. formed a continuous narrative), it is scarcely possible that Moses should allege (vi. 12) a different, à priori ground,—a ground, moreover, inconsistent with iv. 31,—for his hesitation. The parallelism of details which prevails between the two narratives is remarkable: comp. vi. 2—8 and iii. 6—8, 14—15; vi. 12<sup>b</sup> (=30) and iv. 10; vii. 1 and iv. 16; vii. 4 f. and iii. 19 f., vi. 1.

<sup>1</sup> The rend. will be is not new: it is at least as old as the Jewish Commentator Rashi (A.D. 1040—1105), who paraphrases, 'I will be with them in this affliction what I will be with them in the subjection of their future captivities.' And Ewald, in his last work, Die Lehre der Bibel von Gott, 1873, ii. p. 337 f., explains, 'I will be it,' viz. the performer of My promises; in v. 12 God says 'I will be with thee'; v. 14 explains how: 'I will be it! I (viz.) who will be it,' will be viz. what I have promised and said. This, however, as W. R. Smith remarks, is a clumsy version: v. 14 is rendered far more naturally as is done above: I will be what I will be.

2 And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am P
3 JEHOVAH: and I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and

vi. 2—8. God, who had appeared to the patriarchs as El Shaddai, reveals Himself to Moses by His name Yahweh; and bids him tell the Israelites that, having heard their groanings in bondage, He has resolved to fulfil the covenant made with the patriarchs, to deliver them from their sufferings, to make them His people, and to bring them into the land promised to their forefathers.

2. I am Yahweh] The speaker declares His name to be 'Yahweh,' though to the patriarchs He had been known, not by this name, but as El Shaddai. It is the theory of P that the name 'Yahweh' was not known until now; and accordingly in the sections of Genesis belonging to P, Elohim, 'God,' is the Divine name regularly employed (except twice, Gen. xvii. 1, xxi. 1<sup>b</sup>, where 'Yahweh' has been introduced by a scribe or redactor), 'El Shaddai' (see the next note) being the distinctive name said to have been revealed to, and used by, the patriarchs. The Being denoted by 'Yahweh,' the special, personal name of the God of Israel, is thus identified with the 'Elohim' and 'El Shaddai' of (according to P) the pre-Mosaic period. On the name Yahweh, see on iii. 14, and p. 40.

as God Almighty] as El Shaddai. See Gen. xvii. 1 ('I am El Shaddai,' addressed to Abraham), xxxv. 11 ('I am El Shaddai,' addressed to Jacob); xxviii. 3 and xlvi. 3 ('El Shaddai' used by Isaac and Jacob). All these passages belong to P.

'El Shaddai' occurs besides in Gen. xliii. 14 (E), xlix. 25 [read with LXX. ΩΝ for ΠΝ], Ez. x. 5; 'Shaddai' alone, as a poet. name of God, in Nu. xxiv. 4, 16, Ru. i. 20, 21, Ez. i. 24, Is. xlii. 6=Joel i. 15, Ps. lxxviii. 14, xc. 1, and 31 times in Job. Shaddai is rendered conventionally 'Almighty' (LXX. 14 times in Job παντοκράτωρ; elsewhere θεός, κύριος, &c., in Gen. Ex. strangely my (thy, their) God; Vulg. mostly omnipotens); and it is true that the idea of might does suit the context in many passages in which the name occurs; but whether 'Almighty' is its real meaning is more than we can say, neither tradition nor philology throwing any certain light upon it, and all suggested explanations of it,—the 'Waster,' the 'Over-powerer,' 'My mountain' (from the Assyrian; cf. 'My rock,' Ps. xviii. 2 al.),—being open to objection of one kind or another (see the writer's Genesis, p. 404 ff.).

I was not, &c.] Or (cf. Ez. xx. 5), made I not myself known. For but, &c., a Yemen MS. of 11 cent. (Kittel), LXX., Syr., Vulg., Onk.

And I have also established <sup>4</sup>my covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their sojournings, wherein they sojourned. And <sup>5</sup>moreover I have heard the groaning of the children of Israel, whom the Egyptians keep in bondage; and I have remembered my covenant. Wherefore say unto the children <sup>6</sup>of Israel, I am Jehovah, and I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their bondage, and I will redeem you with a stretched have 'but my name J. I made not known to them' (𐤍 for 𐤍), easing the construction (Ewald, § 281<sup>o</sup>), but not materially affecting the sense.

4. I also established] without 'have,' the reference being to Gen. xvii. 7. Established means 'set up,' 'concluded,' not 'gave effect to': to 'establish a covenant' is a standing expression in P, Gen. vi. 18, ix. 9, 11, 17, xvii. 7, 19, 21 (elsewhere, in the same sense, only Ez. xvi. 60, 62). P never uses the ordinary Heb. expression, 'cut a covenant' (xxiii. 32, xxiv. 8, xxxiv. 19, &c.).

my covenant] The covenant concluded with Abraham in Gen. xvii. 1—2, 7—8 (P) that, if Abraham walked blamelessly before God, He would multiply him, be a God to him and his seed after him, and give to his descendants the land of their sojournings, Canaan (cf. Gen. xxviii. 4, xxxv. 12,—both also P).

the land of their sojournings] Gen. xvii. 8, xxiii. 4; also xxxvi. 7, xxxvii. 1 (all P), Ez. xx. 38†.

5—8. And now He has heard the groanings of the patriarchs' descendants in their bondage (v. 5); and bids Moses tell them that He is YAHWEH, and as such will deliver them from Egypt (v. 6), will make them His people (v. 7), and bring them into the land promised to their fathers (v. 8).

5. and I also. The pronoun is emphatic,—I, the same who gave the promise of v. 4.

keep in bondage] Heb. make to serve, as i. 13 (P).

remembered my covenant] as ii. 24 (P): see also Gen. ix. 15, 16 (P); Lev. xxvi. 42, 45 (H); Ezek. xvi. 60.

6. the burdens] i. 11, ii. 11, v. 4, 5.

rid] an archaism for deliver (A.S. hreddan, to snatch away; Germ. retten, to deliver). So in AV. Gen. xxxvii. 22, Ps. lxxxii. 4 (RV. in both deliver); cxliv. 7, 11 (RV. rescue); and in PBV. of the Psalms, Ps. xviii. 49, lxxi. 1.

redeem] The proper sense of the Heb. gā'al is to resume a claim or 7 out arm, and with great judgements: and I will take you to me for a people, and I will be to you a God: and ye shall know that I am Jehovah your God, which bringeth you out 8 from under the burdens of the Egyptians. And I will bring you in unto the land, concerning which I lifted up my hand to give it to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; and I will right which has lapsed, to reclaim, re-vindicate: it is thus used Lev. xxv. 25 ff. of the 'redemption' of a house or field, after it has been sold (cf. Jer. xxxii. 7, 8); and in the expression, the 'avenger (gō'el) of blood,' properly the one who vindicates the rights of a murdered man: it is also often used metaphorically of deliverance from oppression, trouble, death, &c., as here, xv. 13, Gen. xlviii. 16, Hos. xiii. 14, Ps. ciii. 4, and especially in II Isaiah, of Yahweh's reclaiming His people from exile in Babylon, Is. xli. 14, xliii. 1, &c. On the syn. pādāh, see on xiii. 13.

a stretched out arm] not again till Dt. iv. 34. Six times in Dt. (usually with 'a mighty hand'), and sometimes also besides. Cf. the verb in Ex. vii. 5; also Is. v. 25, ix. 12, 17, 21, x. 4, xiv. 26, 27.

judgements] Not the usual word. Ex. vi. 6, vii. 4, xii. 12, Nu. xxxiii. 4 in P; 10 times in Ez. (e.g. v. 10, 15); and twice besides.

7. and I will take you to me for a people] to be owned by Me, and enjoy My protection. The thought, as xix. 5 (J), Dt. xxvi. 18; cf. also Dt. xxix. 13. The common expression is 'and ye (or they) shall be to me a people,' Jer. vii. 23, Ez. xi. 20 (and often in Jer. Ez.); Zech. ii. 15, viii. 8; Lev. xxvi. 12 (H).

and I will be to you a God] to be revered by you, and also to be your all-powerful leader, protector, and benefactor. The correlative of the last expression: cf. Gen. xvii. 7, 8, Ex. xxix. 45, Lev. xi. 45, xxii. 33, xxv. 38, xxvi. 45, Nu. xv. 41 (all P or H); and together with that expression, Lev. xxvi. 12 (H), Dt. xxvi. 17, xxix. 13, Jer. vii. 23, Ez. xi. 20 (and often in Jer. Ez.), Zech. viii. 8.

and ye shall know, &c.] learn by what you witness and experience that I am Jehovah, your Deliverer; so vii. 5, xiv. 4, 18, xvi. 12, xxix. 46 (all P); cf. xxxi. 13<sup>b</sup> (H), and x. 2. Sentences of the type, 'and ye (they, thou) shall know (viz. by some signal and impressive manifestation of power) that I am Yahweh,' are extremely common in Ezek., a prophet who in other respects also displays many literary affinities with P, as vi. 7, 10, 13, 14, vii. 4, 9, &c. (more than 50 times altogether): comp. LOT. p. 266 f. (ed. 6—8, p. 295).

8. lifted up my hand] i.e. sware; the expression being derived from the custom of raising the hand to heaven when taking an oath. So Nu. xiv. 30 (P), Dt. xxxiii. 40 (the Song); and esp. in Ezek. xx. 5, 6, 15, 23, 28, 42, xxxvi. 7, xlvi. 14; Ps. cvi. 26 (misrendered in PBV. 'against'). Also, with a different verb for 'lift up,' Gen. xiv. 22. The reference is no doubt to Gen. xxiv. 7 J (cf. xv. 18 J).

P give it you for an heritage: I am Jehovah. And Moses 9 spake so unto the children of Israel: but they hearkened not unto Moses for <sup>1</sup>anguish of spirit, and for cruel bondage.

And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, Go in, speak <sup>10</sup> unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, that he let the children <sup>11</sup> of Israel go out of his land. And Moses spake before <sup>12</sup> the LORD, saying, Behold, the children of Israel have not hearkened unto me; how then shall Pharaoh hear me, who <sup>13</sup> R<sup>P</sup> am of uncircumcised lips? | And the LORD spake unto heritage] not the usual word (nahālāh), but mōrāshāh: elsewhere only Dt. xxxiii. 4 (the Blessing), and in Ezek. xi. 15, xxv. 4, 10, xxxiii. 24, xxxvi. 2, 3, 5.

I am Yahweh] a solemn asseverative formula, closing a Divine utterance. It occurs with remarkable frequency in the 'Law of Holiness' (Lev. xvii.—xxvi.), as Lev. xviii. 5, 21, xix. 12, 14, 16, 18, &c.; sometimes also elsewhere in P, Ex. xii. 12, xxix. 46 (with the addition of 'their God'), Nu. iii. 13, 41, 45. It is never found in J or E.

9. Moses communicates the Divine message to the Israelites; but they are too much disheartened and demoralized by their sufferings to pay heed to it, or credit it.

hearkened not] according to iv. 31 (J), the people listened to Moses gladly.

for impatience] the marg. is right: promises of deliverance had no meaning for them; they repelled them with impatience. See, with the corresponding verb or adj., Job xxi. 4 RV., Prov. xiv. 29<sup>b</sup> Heb., Mic. ii. 7 RVm.; and with 'soul' for 'spirit,' Nu. xxi. 4 RVm., Jud. x. 16 Heb., xvi. 16 Heb. The opposite is 'long of spirit,' i.e. patient, Job vi. 11 RV. (lit. 'make long my spirit'), Eccl. vii. 8.

cruel (lit. hard) bondage] The same expression which in i. 14 (see the note) is rendered hard service (where slaves are referred to, 'service' and 'bondage' are naturally identical).

10—13. Moses is bidden to demand of the Pharaoh the release of the Israelites. He objects that, if his own people have not listened to him (v. 9), much less will the Pharaoh do so.

11. In P (cf. vii. 2) an unconditional release of the people is asked for, not merely (as in J: see on iii. 18 and iv. 23) a temporary one, to hold a three days' feast in the wilderness.

12. In iv. 10 (J) Moses urges his inability to persuade the people; here he urges that the Pharaoh is not likely to listen to him.

of uncircumcised lips] i.e. lips closed in, which open and speak with difficulty. Cf. the same expression of the heart, when it is (in a figurative sense) closed in, and so impervious to good impressions (Lev. xxvi. 41, Jer. ix. 26, Ez. xliv. 7, 9), and of the ear, when it is, metaphorically, in a similar condition, and hears imperfectly (Jer. vi. 10). In substance, the meaning is the same as that of J's 'slow' (lit. 'heavy') of mouth and tongue (iv. 10<sup>b</sup>).

The answer to v. 12 does not follow till vii. 1, where the way is prepared for it by the repetition in substance of vv. 10—12 in vv. 28—30.

13. A summary statement, unconnected with v. 12, of the commission given to Moses and Aaron in vv. 2—6. The verse comes in abruptly; for Aaron has not in this connexion been mentioned before. No doubt, it is an addition of the compiler who inserted the genealogy, vv. 14—27 (the main object of which is to explain who Moses and Aaron were), and who intended this verse to introduce it.

14—27. Genealogies are frequent in P (Gen. v., xi., xxv. 12—16, xlv. 8—27, &c.); and here, at his first mention of Moses and Aaron, he is careful to define their position among the descendants of Jacob: they belonged to the tribe of Levi, which claimed descent from Jacob's third son, Levi, and the particulars about the descendants of the two elder sons, Reuben and Simeon (vv. 14<sup>b</sup>—15), are introduced merely for the purpose of leading up to Levi, about which tribe more circumstantial particulars are given (vv. 16—25). The particulars in vv. 14, 15, 16<sup>a</sup> are identical with those given in the list of Jacob's descendants who came down into Egypt, Gen. xlv. 9—11.

14. These are the heads of their fathers' houses] The form of superscription, as often in P; e.g. Gen. x. 1, xi. 10, xxv. 13, xlv. 8, Ex. i. 1, Nu. i. 5, xiii. 4, &c. 'Fathers' house' is an expression which occurs frequently in P and Chronicles, especially in connexion with genealogies. It means the 'house,' or family, descended, — or reputed to be descended, — from a single ancestor; it may thus denote even an entire tribe, as Nu. xvii. 2; but usually it denotes either the main subdivision of a tribe, which we might call a 'clan,' as Nu. iii. 24, or the subdivision of a clan, i.e. a family, Ex. xii. 3. Here it denotes a clan: Hānōch, Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi, were the reputed ancestors of the four main subdivisions of the tribe of Reuben, which were called by the corresponding patronymics Hānochites, Palluites, &c. (Nu. xxvi. 5 f., where 'family' is used in the largest sense of the word, equivalent to 'clan'). Cf. here, 'these are the families of Reuben.'

these are the families of Reuben] The closing subscription to such enumerations, even where it might seem superfluous, is also in the manner of P: cf. vv. 15<sup>b</sup>, 19<sup>b</sup>, 24<sup>b</sup>, 25<sup>b</sup>, Gen. x. 20, 31, 32, xxv. 16, Nu. i. 13, xiii. 16, &c.

The sons of 17 Gershon; Libni and Shimei, according to their families. And the sons of Kohath; Amram, and Izhar, and Hebron, 18 and Uzziel: and the years of the life of Kohath were an hundred thirty and three years. And the sons of Mērari; 19 Mahli and Mushi. 15. See Gen. xlv. 10, Nu. xxvi. 12 f. The clan Shaul must have had in it an admixture of Canaanite blood.

16<sup>a</sup>. See Gen. xlv. 11, Nu. xxvi. 57. Gershon, Kohath, and Merari were the reputed ancestors of the corresponding clans, who, according to Nu. iii. 21—33, 1 Ch. xxiii. 6 ff., and other late passages, exercised menial duties in connexion with the sanctuary.

according to their generations (lit. begettings) referring specially to their ages. So v. 19 (cf. xxviii. 10), Gen. x. 32, xxv. 13 (all P), 1 Ch. v. 7, vii. 2, 4, 9, viii. 28, ix. 9, 34, xxvi. 31. The word, in whatever connexion, is found only in P, Ru. iv. 18, and Chronicles.

16<sup>b</sup>. The age of Levi is not mentioned elsewhere.

17—19. The sons of Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

17. Libni and Shimei] Cf. Nu. iii. 18, 21, 1 Ch. vi. 17.

18. Amram, Izhar, &c.] Cf. Nu. iii. 19, 1 Ch. vi. 2, 18; and for families regarded as descended from them, Nu. iii. 27, 1 Ch. xv. 9—10, xxiii. 18—20, xxiv. 22—24, xxvi. 23.

19. Mahli and Mushi] Cf. Nu. iii. 20, 33, 1 Ch. vi. 19.

20—25. The descendants of Kohath's sons.

20. The family of Kohath's first son, Amram (v. 18), viz. Aaron and Moses.

Jochebed] Mentioned besides only Nu. xxvi. 59 (P). The name means probably 'Yahweh is glory' [viz. to us or to our people] (cf. the Phoen. Kabd-melkart, 'Melkart is glory'),—'Yahweh' being contracted (through Yahw, Yēhaw, Yaw), as in many other proper names (e.g. Jo'ēzer, 'Yahweh is help'), to Yō (Jo).

his father's sister] and so the 'daughter of Levi,' ii. 1, cf. Nu. xxvi. 59. Marriage with a father's sister was afterwards forbidden, Lev. xviii. 12; cf. another deviation from the later law in Gen. xx. 12. P must here preserve a genuine ancient tradition.

Aaron and Moses] Sam. LXX. Pesh. add, and Miriam; cf. Nu. xxvi. 59. Aaron, according to P (vii. 7) was three years older than Moses

21 were an hundred and thirty and seven years And the R<sup>p</sup>
 22 sons of Izhar; Korah, and Nepheg, and Zichri. And the 23 sons of Uzziel; Mishael, and Elzaphan, and Sithri. And Aaron took him Elisheba, the daughter of Amminadab, the sister of Nahshon, to wife; and she bare him Nadab and 24 Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. And the sons of Korah;

(cf. Nu. xxxiii. 39 with Dt. xxxiv. 7). Miriam's age is nowhere stated: it may be inferred from ii. 8 (presuming her to be there referred to) that she was some years older than either of her brothers.

21. The family of Kohath's second son, Izhar.

Korah] Moses' and Aaron's cousin: Nu. xvi. 1 ff. Nepheg and Zichri are not mentioned again.

22. The family of Kohath's fourth son, Uzziel. The family of his third son, Hebron, is passed by; presumably, though Hebronites are mentioned elsewhere (see on v. 18), there were no separate families which traced their descent to him.

Mishael and Elzaphan] cousins of Moses and Aaron. See Lev. x. 4; for Elzaphan, also, Nu. iii. 30 ('Elizaphan'), 1 Ch. xv. 8, 2 Ch. xxix. 13.

23—25. Of two of Kohath's grandchildren, Aaron and Korah, some further descendants are enumerated,—no doubt, on account of their later prominence in the history.

23. Aaron's family. Aaron marries a wife of the tribe of Judah, viz. the daughter of Amminadab, and sister of Nahshon, a descendant in the fifth generation from Judah (1 Ch. ii. 4, 5, 9, 10; Mt. i. 3, 4), who according to P was leader of the tribe of Judah in the wilderness (Nu. i. 7, ii. 3, vii. 12). Elisheba (LXX. Ἐλισαβεθ) is not mentioned elsewhere.

Nadab and Abihu] See xxiv. 1, 9, in J: mentioned in P as priests (with their two brethren), xxviii. 1; and as being killed for offering 'strange' fire, Lev. x. 1 f. (cf. Nu. iii. 4, xxvi. 61), and leaving no issue (Nu. iii. 4).

Eleazar and Ithamar] xxviii. 1, Lev. x. 6, 12, 16; Eleazar afterwards succeeded Aaron as chief priest (Dt. x. 6; and in P, Nu. xx. 26), and is often mentioned by P in the latter part of Numbers (e.g. xxvi. 1, xxxi. 6) and in Joshua (as xiv. 1, xix. 51). For Ithamar, see Ex. xxxviii. 21, Nu. iv. 28, 33; 1 Ch. vi. 3, xxiv. 1—6, Ezr. viii. 2.

24. Korah's family. It is stated in Nu. xxvi. 11 that the sons of Korah did not perish with their father (Nu. xvi. 32); and Korahites are mentioned in Nu. xxvi. 58. In much later days the Korahites acted as gate-keepers in the Temple (1 Ch. ix. 19, xxvi. 1—19), and also, probably (cf. 2 Ch. xx. 19; and the titles of Ps. xlii., xlv.—xlix., lxxxiv., lxxxv., lxxxvii., lxxxviii.), assisted in some way in the worship of the Temple. For the names, see 1 Ch. vi. 22, 23 (where, however, Elkanah is the son of Assir, and Ebiasaph [Abiasaph] the son of Elkanah), ix. 19 (Ebiasaph).

R<sup>P</sup> Assir, and Elkanah, and Abiasaph; these are the families of the Korabites. And Eleazar Aaron's son took him one of the daughters of Putiel to wife; and she bare him Phinehas. These are the heads of the fathers' houses of the Levites according to their families. These are that Aaron and Moses, to whom the LORD said, Bring out the children of Israel from the land of Egypt according to their hosts. These are they which spake to Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring out the children of Israel from Egypt: these are that Moses and Aaron.

25. The family of Aaron's son, Eleazar (v. 23).

Putiel] not mentioned elsewhere. Seemingly 'an Egyptian name, of a type very common from B.C. 1000 onward, but with the Heb. El, "God," instead of the name of an Egyptian deity, meaning "He whom God gave" (F. L. Griffith); cf. Potiphar = 'He whom Ra gave' (see DB. iv. 22).

Phinehas] See Nu. xxv. 7—13 (P) [cf. Ps. cvi. 30], xxxi. 6; Jos. xxii. 13, 30—32, xxiv. 33; Eleazar's successor in the priesthood, Jud. xx. 28. The name, like that of his grandfather, may be of Egyptian origin, and signify 'the negro' (i.e. the Ethiopian, Jer. xiii. 23). The name (Pi-nehas) is very common in Egyptian (EB. iii. 3304).

heads of the fathers] for 'heads of the fathers' houses' (v. 14); so Nu. xxxi. 26, xxxii. 28, xxxvi. 1, Jos. xiv. 1, xix. 51, xxi. 1 (all P); and frequently in Chr. Ezr. Neh.

26, 27. At the close of the genealogy the writer refers emphatically to Moses and Aaron, the two men on whose account the entire genealogy has been introduced.

26. These] The men whose genealogy has just been stated.

Bring out, &c.] as vv. 6, 13.

according to their hosts] The expression hosts (i.e. armies: 2 S. ii. 8, &c.), of the Israelites at the Exodus, is peculiar to P (vii. 4, xii. 17, 41, 51, Nu. i. 3, ii. 3, 4, 6, &c., ix. 10, 16, &c., x. 14, 15, 16, &c., xxxiii. 1): as Dillm. remarks, it is part of the picture that he had formed of Israel at the Exodus, as marching out and journeying through the wilderness in battle array (cf. Nu. i., ii., x.).

27. These were the men commissioned also to speak to the Pharaoh on behalf of Israel: cf. vv. 11, 13. The diffuseness, and repetitions (vv. 26, 27), are in P's style: cf. Gen. ix. 16, 17 (repetition of vv. 13—15), xvii. 26, 27 (repetition of v. 23), xxiii. 20 (see vv. 17, 18).

It is to be observed that P consistently represents Moses, or his contemporaries, as being in the fourth generation (cf. Gen. xv. 16) from one or other of Jacob's sons: thus Levi, Kohath, Amram, Moses (here, vv. 16, 18, 20); Levi, Kohath, Izhar, Korah (vv. 16, 18, 21, Nu. xiv. 1); Levi, Kohath, Uzziel, Mishaël (Lev. x. 4); Reuben, Pallu, 28—30. The stream of the narrative here, after its interruption by v. 13, and the genealogy, vv. 14—27, is resumed, v. 29 recapitulating the beginning and end of God's words to Moses, vv. 2 and 11, and v. 30 repeating Moses' objection in v. 12. Ch. vii. 1—5 is thus really the sequel, and answer, to vi. 12.

vii. 1, 2. As Moses is unable to speak fluently, Aaron is appointed to be his spokesman with Pharaoh, just as in J (iv. 15 f.) he was appointed to be his spokesman with the people.

1. a god] Cf. the parallel in J, iv. 16. Moses is to be as it were a god unto Aaron; and Aaron, like a prophet (Dt. xviii. 18, Jer. i. 9), is to speak the words which his god puts into his mouth.

2. Thou (emph.) shalt speak] viz. to Aaron: LXX. adds 'to him.' shall speak] viz. what thou tellest him. Cf. vv. 9, 19, viii. 4 f., where Aaron at least performs wonders at Moses' direction: he does not in P ever speak for Moses to Pharaoh.

3. And I (emph.) will harden, &c.] cf. iv. 21 (E). Harden (הקשה), as Ps. xcvi. 8; but used only here of the hardening of Pharaoh's heart.

my signs and my portents] alluding, probably, partly to 'portents' (see on iv. 21) performed as credentials (cf. v. 9), partly to the less severe plagues (cf. xi. 10, in P).

4. lay my hand] severely, to inflict the great 'judgements' (see on vi. 6; and cf. xii. 12), which ultimately effected Israel's deliverance.

my hosts] See on vi. 26.

5. And the Egyptians shall know, &c.] These great judgements, and Israel's triumphant exodus, will teach the Egyptians Jehovah's might, and (cf. xii. 12) His superiority to their own gods. Cf. xiv. 4, 18; and similarly Ez. xxv. 7, 11, 17, xxviii. 24, &c. On the expression, see on vi. 7.

6. A summary statement that Moses and Aaron carried out these instructions. The verse is anticipatory: the details follow in vii. 8 ff. The type of sentence is one characteristic of P: cf. Gen. vi. 22, Ex. xii. 28, 50, xxxix. 32<sup>b</sup>, xl. 16, al.: LOT. p. 124 (ed. 6—8, p. 132), No. 11.

7. The ages of the two brothers at the time of their dealings with the Pharaoh. The sentence is again of a form which often recurs in P: see Gen. xii. 4<sup>b</sup>, xvi. 16, xvii. 24, 25, xxi. 5, xxv. 26<sup>b</sup> (cf. 20), xli. 46, Dt. xxxiv. 7<sup>a</sup>. The ages themselves (which are only given by P) are, upon general grounds, higher than is probable, especially if 40 years in the wilderness have to be added to them; nor do they agree with the representation of J, according to which (see on ii. 23<sup>a</sup>) the Pharaoh of the exodus came to the throne no long time after Moses' flight into Midian.

8—13 (P). Moses and Aaron are provided by God with a wonder, which, if the Pharaoh asks for a credential of their mission, they may perform before him. Aaron performs it: but the Egyptian magicians imitate it; and the Pharaoh refuses to listen to them. In iv. 1—5 (J) Moses is empowered to perform a similar wonder before the Israelites.

9. shall speak unto you] when you come before him, as directed (vi. 11, 13, vii. 2).

Give (Dt. vi. 22, Joel ii. 30 Heb.) a portent (v. 3) for you] Or, 'Give for yourselves a portent': the pronoun is reflexive, according to a very common Heb. idiom, Gen. vi. 14 'make thee,' v. 21 'take thee,' Dt. i. 13 'give you,' &c. (Lex. p. 515<sup>b</sup>).

thy rod] the rod, which in P Aaron regularly bears, v. 19, viii. 5, 16, 17.

a serpent] The marg. is added to shew that the word here, and vv. 10, 12, is different from the one below, v. 15, and in iv. 3 (which is the ordinary one for 'serpent'). Tannin is a large reptile, generally used of a sea- or river-monster (Gen. i. 21, Ps. lxxiv. 13), but occasionally also of a land-reptile (Dt. xxxii. 33 EVV. 'dragon,' Ps. xci. 13<sup>b</sup>

 so, as the LORD had commanded: and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh and before his servants, and it 11 became a serpent. Then Pharaoh also called for the wise men and the sorcerers: and they also, the <sup>1</sup>magicians of 12 Egypt, did in like manner with their <sup>2</sup>enchantments. For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents:

'serpent'). Here the writer will mean either a land-reptile, or possibly a young crocodile.

11, 12. The Egyptian magicians do the same. The art of serpent-charming is indigenous in the East: there are allusions to it in Ps. lviii. 5, Jer. viii. 17, Eccl. x. 11; and it is practised in Egypt to the present day. Modern Egyptian serpent-charmers possess an extraordinary power over serpents, drawing them forth, for instance, by noises made with the lips, from their hiding-places, and by pressure applied to the neck throwing them into such a state of hypnotic rigidity that they can be held as rods by the tip of the tail (Lane, Mod. Eg., ch. xx., in ed. 1871, ii. 93 f.; DB. iii. 889<sup>a</sup>; EB. iv. 4394: see further references in Di.). The serpent commonly used for the purpose is a species of cobra. As Di., however, remarks, we hear elsewhere only of serpents becoming rods, not of rods becoming serpents: the latter, as also the swallowing up of the magicians' rods by Aaron's rod, is 'peculiar to the Hebrew story (Sage).'

11. wise men] cf. Gen. xli. 8, Isa. xix. 11, 12.

magicians] Heb. hartummim, a word of unknown etymology, but found only in connexion with Egypt (Gen. xli. 8, 24, Ex. vii. 11, 22, viii. 7, 18, 19, ix. 11), and (borrowed from Gen.) in Daniel (i. 20, ii. 2, 10, &c.). Rvm. in Genesis sacred scribes: and probably the word did in fact correspond to the Greek λεπογραμματοῖς,—the term applied by Numenius to Jannes and Jambres. Magic flourished in ancient Egypt; and many magical formulae are known to us from the inscriptions: see Erman, pp. 289, 308, 353 ff., 373.

with their secret arts (Rvm.)] i.e. with their usual mystic words or movements. So v. 22, viii. 7, 18 (not elsewhere in this sense).

The Jerus. Targ., both here and on i. 15, following a Jewish tradition, gives the names of the magicians whom Pharaoh called as Jannes and Jambres (cf. 2 Tim. iii. 8): the same two names are also given elsewhere, as Evang. Nicod. 5; Numenius, the Pythagorean philosopher of the 2nd cent. A.D., as cited in Eus. Praep. Ev. ix. 8; see also Buxtorf, s.v. חַרְטוּמִּים, or Levy, Chald. Wörterb. s.v. חַרְטוּ; and Schürer, § 32 (ed. 3, iii. 292 ff.), with the references.

12. swallowed up their rods] and so gave proof of Aaron's superiority to the magicians.

P heart <sup>1</sup> was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken.

13. was hardened] Heb. was strong. One of the three synonyms used in Ex. to express the idea of hardening of the heart: the three being (1) hāzak, hizzek, lit. to be and to make strong (i.e. firm, hard, unyielding, cf. Ez. iii. 7—9 Heb.), used by P (vii. 13, 22, viii. 19, ix. 12, xi. 10, xiv. 4, 8, 17), and E (iv. 21, ix. 35, x. 20, 27); (2) kābād, hikbūd, lit. to be and to make heavy (i.e. slow to move or be affected, unimpressionable, cf. of the tongue, iv. 10), used by J (vii. 14, viii. 15, 32, ix. 7, 34, x. 1); and (3) hikshāh, which is properly rendered, to harden (cf. the cognate adj. of the neck, Ex. xxxii. 9 al.), only vii. 3 (P). (1) and (2) are always distinguished in RV. of Ex. by a marg. In these passages, Pharaoh's heart is itself said to be hard in vii. 13, 14, 22, viii. 19, ix. 7, 35; Pharaoh is said to harden it himself in viii. 15, 32, ix. 34; and God is said to harden it in iv. 21, vii. 3, ix. 12, x. 1, 20, 27, xi. 10, xiv. 4, 8 (cf. 17). See further the detached note below.

and he hearkened not to them, as Jehovah had spoken] P's closing formula (p. 55), as v. 22, viii. 15<sup>b</sup>, 19, ix. 12. Had spoken, see v. 4<sup>a</sup>.

Both in P (vii. 13) and J (vi. 1), the same point has thus been reached: the Pharaoh will listen to no request to let the people go. Accordingly stronger measures are threatened; and the ten 'Plagues' follow.

On the hardening of Pharaoh's heart.

God is spoken of as 'hardening' Pharaoh's heart by E in iv. 21, x. 20, 27, by J (or RJE) in x. 1, and by P in vii. 3, ix. 12, xi. 10, xiv. 4, 8, by P also as hardening the heart of the Egyptians so that they followed Israel into the sea in xiv. 17: in iv. 21 and vii. 3 generally, in view of the whole series of coming plagues, otherwise first after the sixth plague (ix. 12). In what sense are these passages to be understood? The Hebrews, with their vivid sense of the sovereignty of God, were in the habit of referring things done by man to the direct operation of God; and it is possible that these are merely examples of the same custom: we may notice that the performance of signs and wonders in Egypt, which in x. 1 is described as a consequence of Jehovah's having 'hardened' the hearts of Pharaoh and his servants, is in xi. 9 represented as a consequence simply of Pharaoh's not hearkening himself to Moses and Aaron. In this case, the meaning will be that God 'hardened' Pharaoh just in so far as he hardened himself. But even supposing that the passages mean more than this, we must remember that, especially in His dealings with moral agents, God cannot be properly thought of as acting arbitrarily; He only hardens those who begin by hardening themselves: though the reasons for His actions are not always specified, it would be contrary to His moral attributes, and inconsistent with the character of a righteous God, if He were to harden those whose hearts were turned towards Him, and did not wish to harden themselves. The Pharaoh—whatever he was in actual history—is depicted in Exodus as from the first a self-willed, obstinate man who persistently hardens himself against God, and resists all warnings: God thus hardens him only because he has first hardened himself. And even here we must remember that the means by which God hardens a man is not necessarily by any extraordinary intervention on His part; it may be by the ordinary experiences of life, operating through the principles and character of human nature, which are of His appointment: the man who has once begun to harden himself, may thus find in the experiences of life, and even in the approaches made by God or His messengers to him, occasions and excuses for hardening himself yet more (cf. Ps. xviii. 26 'with the crooked thou shewest thyself tortuous').

The question arises again, in a slightly different form, in connexion with ix. 16, where Jehovah is said to have made Pharaoh continue in life, in order that he might experience His power. Does He, in so doing, act arbitrarily with Pharaoh? The passage is quoted, together with xxxiii. 19 (see the note), in Rom. ix. 15—18, in order to shew that God has absolute liberty of choice in selecting whom He will, either as examples of His hardening judgement, or as the recipients of His mercy. But although St Paul says (v. 18) 'He hath mercy on whom he will, and whom he will he hardeneth,' we have no right to interpret this 'will' in a sense inconsistent with God's righteousness, or to suppose that He is actuated in His choice by the motives of a despot, responsible not to a law of righteousness, but only to His own caprice. The apostle is arguing against those who maintained that because God had once chosen the Jewish nation, His hands were, so to say, tied, and, whatever they did, He could not reject them, except by being unrighteous. Against such a contention St Paul quotes two passages of the OT. in which Jehovah asserts His right to shew mercy and judgement to whom He will. But we must not exalt God's sovereignty at the expense of His justice; and so we must think of God as 'willing' to shew mercy and judgement, not arbitrarily, or where either would be unmerited, but according to character and deserts. As Bp Gore says, in the course of an illuminative discussion of the whole question (Ep. to the Romans, ii. 3—13, 31—43), 'The liberty asserted for God is wholly consistent with His being found, in fact, to have "hardened" those only who have deserved hardening by their own wilfulness. It was for such a moral cause that God hardened the hearts of the Jews, that "seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not hear." We can feel no doubt that some similar moral cause underlay the hardening of Pharaoh' (p. 38).

CHAPTERS VII. 14—XI.

The narrative of the Plagues, like that of the preceding chapters, is composite. The details of the analysis depend partly upon literary criteria, partly upon differences in the representation, which are not isolated, but recurrent, and which moreover accompany the literary differences and support the conclusions based upon them,—the differences referred to often also agreeing remarkably with corresponding differences in the parts of the preceding narrative, especially in iii. 1—vii. 13, which have already, upon independent grounds, been assigned to P, J, and E, respectively. No one source, however, it should be premised, in the parts of it that have been preserved, gives all the plagues.

The parts belonging to P are most readily distinguished, viz. (after vii. 8—13) vii. 19—20<sup>a</sup>, 21<sup>b</sup>—22, viii. 5—7, 15<sup>b</sup>—19, ix. 8—12, xi. 9—10; the rest of the narrative belongs in the main to J, the hand of E being hardly traceable beyond vii. 15, 17<sup>b</sup>, 20<sup>b</sup>, ix. 22—23<sup>a</sup>, 31—32 (perhaps), 35<sup>a</sup>, x. 12—13<sup>a</sup>, 14<sup>a</sup>, 15<sup>b</sup>, 20, 21—23, 27, xi. 1—3.

Putting aside for the present purely literary differences, we have thus a threefold representation of the plagues, corresponding to the three literary sources, P, J, and E, of which the narrative is composed. The differences relate to not less than five or six distinct points,—the terms of the command addressed to Moses, the part taken by Aaron, the demand made of the Pharaoh, the use made of the rod, the description of the plague, and the formulae used to express the Pharaoh's obstinacy. Thus in P Aaron co-operates with Moses, and the command is Say unto Aaron (vii. 19, viii. 5, 16; so before in vii. 9: even in ix. 8, where Moses alone is to act, both are expressly addressed); there is no interview with the Pharaoh, so that no demand is ever made for Israel's release; the descriptions are brief; except in ix. 10, Aaron is the wonder-worker, bringing about the result by stretching out his rod at Moses' direction (vii. 19, viii. 5 f., 16 f.; cf. vii. 9); the wonders wrought ('signs and portents,' vii. 3: P does not speak of them as 'plagues') are intended less to break down the Pharaoh's resistance than to accredit Moses as Jehovah's representative; they thus take substantially the form of a contest with the native magicians, who are mentioned only in this narrative (vii. 11 f., 22, viii. 7, 18 f., ix. 11), and who at first do the same things by their arts, but in the end are completely defeated; the hardening of Pharaoh's heart is expressed by hāzāk, hizzzēk (was strong, made strong), vii. 22, viii. 19, ix. 12, xi. 10 (so vii. 13), and the closing formula is, and he hearkened not unto them, as Jehovah had spoken, vii. 22, viii. 15<sup>b</sup>, 19, ix. 12 (so vii. 13). In J, on the contrary, Moses alone (without Aaron) is told to go in before the Pharaoh, and he addresses the Pharaoh himself (in agreement with iv. 10—16, where Aaron is appointed to be Moses' spokesman not with Pharaoh, as in P, but with the people), vii. 14—16, viii. 1, 9, 10, 20, 26, 29, ix. 1, 13, 29, x. 1, 9, 25, xi. 4—8<sup>1</sup>; a formal demand is regularly made, Let my people go, that they may serve me, vii. 16, viii. 1, 20, ix. 1, 13, x. 3 (comp. before, iv. 23); the interview with the Pharaoh is prolonged, and described in some detail; Jehovah Himself brings the plague, after it has been announced by Moses,—usually on the morrow, viii. 23, ix. 5 f., 18, x. 4,—without any mention of Aaron or his rod; sometimes the king sends for Moses and Aaron to crave their intercession, viii. 8, 25, ix. 27, x. 16; the plague is removed, as it is brought, without any human intervention; the hardening of Pharaoh's heart is expressed by kābēd, hikkīd (was heavy, made heavy), vii. 14, viii. 15, 32, ix. 7, 34, x. 1; and there is no closing formula: J also, unlike both P and E, represents the Israelites as living apart from the Egyptians, in the land of Goshen, viii. 22, ix. 26 (so before, Gen. xlv. 10, xlvi. 28 f., &c.). The narrative generally is written (just as it is in Genesis, for instance) in a more picturesque and varied style than that of P; there are frequent descriptive touches, and the dialogue is abundant.

Some other, chiefly literary, characteristics of J may also be here noticed: refuseth (יָסַד), esp. followed by to let the people go, vii. 14, viii. 2, ix. 2, x. 3, 4 (so before, iv. 23); the God of the Hebrews, vii. 16, ix. 1, 13, x. 3 (so iii. 18, v. 3); Thus saith Jehovah, said regularly to Pharaoh, vii. 17, viii. 1, 20, ix. 1, 13, x. 3, xi. 4 (so iv. 22); behold... with the participle (in the Heb.) in the announcement of the plague, vii. 17, viii. 2, 21, ix. 3, 18, x. 4 (so iv. 23); border, viii. 2, x. 4, 14, 19; thou, thy people, and thy servants, viii. 3, 4, 9, 11, 21, 29, ix. 14 (see the note, cf. x. 6; to intreat, viii. 8, 9, 28, 29, ix. 28, x. 17; such as hath not been, &c. ix. 18<sup>b</sup>, 24<sup>b</sup>, xi. 6<sup>b</sup>, cf. x. 6<sup>b</sup>, 14<sup>b</sup>; to sever, viii. 22, ix. 4, xi. 7; the didactic aim or object of the plague (or circumstance attending it) stated, vii. 17<sup>a</sup>, viii. 10<sup>b</sup>, 22<sup>b</sup>, ix. 14<sup>b</sup>, 16<sup>b</sup>, 29<sup>c</sup>, x. 2<sup>b</sup>, xi. 7<sup>b</sup>.

The narrative of E has been only very partially preserved; so it is not possible to characterize it as fully as those of P or J. Its most distinctive feature is that Moses is the wonder-worker, bringing about the plague by his rod (in agreement with iv. 17, 20<sup>b</sup>, where it is said to have been specially given to him by God), vii. 15<sup>b</sup>, 17<sup>b</sup>, 20<sup>b</sup>, ix. 23<sup>a</sup>, x. 13<sup>a</sup> (cf. afterwards, xiv. 16, xvii. 5, 9); only in the case of the darkness (x. 21 f.) does he use his hand for the purpose. This feature differentiates E from both P (with whom the wonder-working rod is in Aaron's hand), and J (who mentions no rod, and represents the plague as brought about directly, after Moses' previous announcement of it, by Jehovah Himself). E uses the same word be or make strong, for 'harden,' that P does, but he follows the clause describing the hardening of the Pharaoh's heart by the words, and he did not let the children of Israel (or them) go, ix. 35 (contrast J's phrase, v. 34<sup>b</sup>), x. 20, 27 (cf. iv. 21 E). He also pictures the Israelites, not, as J does, as living apart in Goshen, but as having every one an Egyptian 'neighbour' (iii. 22, xi. 2, xii. 35 f.), and consequently as settled promiscuously among the Egyptians.

<sup>1</sup> Aaron, if he appears at all, is only Moses' silent companion, viii. 8, 12 (see vv. 9, 10), 25 (see vv. 26, 29), ix. 27 (see v. 29), x. 8 (see v. 9). In x. 3 it is doubtful if the plural, 'and they said,' is original: notice in v. 6<sup>b</sup> 'and he turned.'

The scheme, or framework, of the plagues, as described by P, J, and E, is thus suggestively exhibited by Bäntsch:—

In P we have—

And Jehovah said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch out thy rod..., and there shall be.... And they did so; and Aaron stretched out his rod, and there was.... And the magicians did so (or could not do so) with their secret arts.... And Pharaoh's heart was hardened; and he hardened not unto them, as Jehovah had spoken.

J's formula is quite different—

And Jehovah said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith Jehovah, the God of the Hebrews, Let my people go that they may serve me. And if thou refuse to let them go, behold I will.... And Jehovah did so; and there came (or and he sent, &c.).... And Pharaoh called for Moses, and said unto him, Entreat for me, that.... And Jehovah did so...., and removed.... But Pharaoh made his heart heavy, and he did not let the people go.

The formula of E is again different—

And Jehovah said unto Moses, Stretch forth thy hand (with thy rod) toward..., that there may be.... And Moses stretched forth his hand (or his rod) toward..., and there was.... But Jehovah made Pharaoh's heart hard, and he did not let the children of Israel go.

It has long since been remarked by commentators that the plagues stand in close connexion with the actual conditions of Egypt; and were in fact just miraculously intensified forms of the diseases or other natural occurrences to which Egypt is more or less liable (see particulars in the notes on the different plagues). They were of unexampled severity; they came, and in some cases went, at the announcement, or signal, given by one of the Hebrew leaders; one followed another with unprecedented swiftness; in other respects also they are represented as having an evidently miraculous character.

What judgement, however, are we to form with regard to their historical character? The narratives, there are strong reasons for believing, were written long after the time of Moses, and do not do more than acquaint us with the traditions current among the Hebrews at the time when they were written: we consequently have no guarantee that they preserve exact recollections of the actual facts. That there is no basis of fact for the traditions which the narratives incorporate is in the highest degree improbable: we may feel very sure of this, and yet not feel sure that they describe the events exactly as they happened. 'As the original nucleus of fact,' writes Dillm. (p. 66 f., ed. 2, p. 77), 'we may suppose that at the time of Israel's deliverance Egypt was visited by various adverse natural occurrences, which the Israelites ascribed to the operation of their God, and by which their leaders, Moses and Aaron, sought to prove to the Egyptian court the superiority of their God above the king and gods of Egypt; it must however be admitted that in the Israelitish story (Sage) these occurrences had for long been invested with a purely miraculous character. And if all had once been lifted up into the sphere of God's unlimited power, the compiler could feel no scruple in combining the different plagues mentioned in his sources into a series of ten, in such a manner as to depict, in a picture drawn with unfading colours, not only the abundance of resources which God has at His disposal for helping His own people, and humiliating those who resist His will, but also the slow and patient yet sure steps with which He proceeds against His foes, and the growth of evil in men till it becomes at last obstinate and confirmed.' The real value of the narratives, according to Dillmann, is thus not historical, but moral and religious. And from these points of view their typical and didactic significance cannot be overrated. The traditional story of the contest between Moses and the Pharaoh is applied so as to depict, to use Dillmann's expression, 'in unfading colours,' the impotence of man's strongest determination when it essays to contend with God, and the fruitlessness of all human efforts to frustrate His purposes.

Dr Sanday,—whose historical bias, if he has one, always leads him to conservative conclusions,—has expressed himself recently on the subject, in an essay on the Symbolism of the Bible, in words which are well worth quoting:—'The early chapters of Genesis are not the only portion of the Pentateuchal history to which I think that we may rightly apply the epithet "symbolical." Indeed I suspect that the greater part of the Pentateuch would be rightly so described in greater or less degree. The narrative of the Pentateuch culminates in two great events, the Exodus from Egypt and the giving of the Law from Mount Sinai. What are we to say of these? Are they historical in the sense in which the Second Book of Samuel is historical? I think we may say that they are not. If we accept—as I at least feel constrained to accept at least in broad outline—the critical theory now so widely held as to the composition of the Pentateuch, then there is a long interval, an interval of some four centuries or more, between the events and the main portions of the record as we now have it. In such a case we should expect to happen just what we find has happened. There is an element of folk-lore, of oral tradition insufficiently checked by writing. The imagination has been at work.

'If we compare, for instance, the narrative of the Ten Plagues with the narrative of the Revolt of Absalom, we shall feel the difference. The one is nature itself, with all the flexibility and easy sequence that we associate with nature. The other is constructed upon a scheme which is so symmetrical that we cannot help seeing that it is really artificial. I do not mean artificial in the sense that the writer, with no materials before him, sat down consciously and deliberately to invent them in the form they now have; but I mean that, as the story passed from mouth to mouth, it gradually and almost imperceptibly assumed its present shape' (The Life of Christ in recent Research, 1907, p. 18f.).

The 'Plagues' are denoted by the following terms:—

- (1) maggēphāh, properly a severe blow, ix. 14 J (see the note).
- (2) nēgā, a heavy touch or stroke, xi. 1 E (see the note).
- (3) nēgēph (cognate with No. 1), a severe blow, xii. 13 P (by implication, of the tenth plague only).

Nos. 2 and 3 of these are rendered in LXX. πληγή, and Nos. 1, 2, 3 in the Vulg. plaga: hence the Engl. plague.

J And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh's heart is <sup>14</sup>
<sup>1</sup>stubborn, he refuseth to let the people go. Get thee unto <sup>15</sup> Pharaoh in the morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water;

They are also spoken of as:—

(4) 'ōthōth, signs, LXX. σημεῖα (proofs of God's power), viii. 23 J, x. 1, 2 J or the compiler of JE, vii. 3 P; probably also in iv. 17, 28 E. Cf. Nu. xiv. 11, 22 (JE); also σημεῖα in the NT.

In iv. 8, 9, 30 (all J) the same word is used, not of the 'plagues,' but of 'signs' to be wrought,—or, in v. 30, actually wrought,—before the Pharaoh, to accredit Moses, as Jehovah's representative. In iv. 17, 28, the reference might be similarly, not to the 'plagues,' but to the antecedent credentials, to be given by Moses.

(5) mōphēthim, portents, LXX. τέρατα (unusual phaenomena, arresting attention, and calling for explanation: see on iv. 21; and cf. Acts ii. 43, &c.), vii. 3, xi. 9, 10 (all P); also, probably, iv. 21 E.

In vii. 9 P the same word is used, not of one of the 'plagues,' but of the preliminary portent of Aaron's rod becoming a serpent, wrought before Pharaoh.

(6) niphlā'ōth, wonders or marvels (extraordinary phaenomena), iii. 20 J.

N.B. In EVV., No. 5 is in Ex. confused with No. 6; elsewhere in the OT. it is confused with both No. 4 and No. 6 (cf. on iv. 21).

14—25. The first plague: the water turned into blood. From J, E, and P. In J and E only the water of the Nile is turned to blood (vv. 17, 20), in P all the water in Egypt (vv. 19, 21<sup>b</sup>). In P, also, as in other cases (p. 55); the wonder is wrought at a signal given by Aaron with his rod (v. 19); and though the distinction is obscured as the text now stands, it is probable, that when J and E were in their original form, it was described in J as wrought, like the other plagues, by Jehovah, without human intervention, and in E at a signal given by Moses (see on vv. 15, 17, 20<sup>b</sup>; and cf. p. 56).

14. is stubborn] lit. is heavy, i.e. difficult to move, the word used by J to express the idea of hardening of the heart. See on vii. 13.

15. goeth out unto the water] for what reason is not stated. Apparently a standing custom is alluded to (cf. viii. 20; also ii. 5): to bathe<sup>1</sup> (cf. ii. 5), to pay his devotions to the Nile<sup>2</sup>, to ascertain, if it were the time (June) at which the annual inundation was beginning, how much the river had risen, have all been suggested.

<sup>2</sup> The Nile, the source of Egypt's fertility, was personified as a deity: in honour of the Nile-god, religious festivals were held, at which the Pharaoh himself sometimes officiated, especially at the time when the annual inundation was expected, and hymns addressed to him are extant (see Maspero, Dawn of Civil., pp. 36—42; cf. NILE in EB., with an illustration of the Nile-god).

the rod] The rod given to Moses by Jehovah in iv. 17, 20<sup>b</sup>. The words, which was turned to a serpent, are regarded, even by Di., as a harmonizing addition of the compiler of JE; for the wonder referred to (iv. 3 J) is not described by E.

16. The demand to be made of the Pharaoh. The terms, as elsewhere in J (viii. 1, 20, ix. 1, 13, x. 3): see p. 56.

17. The proof to be given to the Pharaoh that the God of the Hebrews is Jehovah: the waters of the Nile to be smitten and turned into blood (i.e. to assume the appearance of blood).

I will smite] As Di. remarks, the transition from the Divine 'I' just before to the 'I' of Moses is very abrupt: we expect, 'I [i.e. Jehovah] will smite the waters that are in the Nile' (cf. v. 25, 'after that Jehovah had smitten the Nile'); hence it is probable (Di.) that the words, with the rod that is in mine hand, are introduced by the compiler from the narrative of E (in which, Moses being addressed, thine will have stood originally for mine). If these words are omitted, the 'I' in 'I will smite' will of course be Jehovah.

the river] the Nile. So vv. 18 (thrice), 20 (twice), 21 (thrice), 24 (twice), 25. See on i. 22.

18. Fish was one of the principal articles of food in ancient Egypt (Erman, p. 239), so that the death of the fish in the Nile would be a serious calamity.

loathe] weary themselves (Gen. xix. 11 al.) in the vain effort to obtain drinkable water.

19-20<sup>a</sup>. Before describing how the Nile was smitten, the compiler introduces P's account of the command given to Moses. According to this, not the water of the Nile only, but all the water in Egypt, is to become blood.

19. Say unto Aaron] as regularly in P (p. 55).

And Moses and Aaron did <sup>20</sup> E so, as the LORD commanded; | and he lifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of J Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants; | and all the waters that were in the river were turned to blood. And <sup>21</sup> the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and P the Egyptians could not drink water from the river; | and the blood was throughout all the land of Egypt. And the <sup>22</sup> magicians of Egypt did in like manner with their enchantments: and Pharaoh's heart <sup>2</sup> was hardened, and he hearkened J not unto them; as the LORD had spoken. | And Pharaoh <sup>23</sup> turned and went into his house, neither did he <sup>3</sup> lay even this to heart. And all the Egyptians digged round about <sup>24</sup> the river for water to drink; for they could not drink of the

The plague is an intensification of a natural phenomenon of annual occurrence in Egypt. 'Still, each year, the water of the river becomes like blood at the time of the inundation. When the Nile first begins to rise, towards the end of June, the red marl brought from the mountains of Abyssinia stains it to a dark colour, which glistens like blood in the light of the setting sun' (Sayce, EHH., p. 168, writing with personal knowledge of the country). Other observers speak similarly<sup>1</sup>. The natives call it then the 'Red Nile.' The reddish colour continues more or less till the waters begin to abate in October. The water, while it is red, is not unwholesome. Shortly, however, before the redness begins, the Nile (called then the 'Green Nile') generally for a few days rises slightly, and becomes green (from decaying vegetable matter brought down from the equatorial swamps), and then it is unwholesome<sup>2</sup>.

As Dillm. says, however, though the recollection of an extraordinary intensification of a genuine Egyptian phenomenon is the foundation of the narrative, it is not the actual reddening of the Nile at the time of the inundation which the narrative describes, not only because there would be nothing surprising in what was an annual occurrence, but also because of the seven days' limit of time in v. 25, and because the water of the 'Red Nile' is wholesome and drinkable: but the natural local phenomenon is dissociated from its natural conditions, and transformed into something transcending all experience, by the circumstances under which it is produced, and by the consequences attending it,—the water (including in P even that in domestic vessels) becoming undrinkable, and the fish dying.

viii. 1—16. The second plague. Frogs come up out of the Nile. The narrative consists of J and P only, without any traces of E.

<sup>2</sup> See further on the annual inundation of the Nile,—which is due to the waters of the Atbara and the 'Blue Nile' being swollen by the heavy spring and summer rains in the Abyssinian highlands, and the melting of the mountain snow, and which gives the Delta its fertility,—R. ovens] The 'oven' (tannūr) was a portable earthenware stove, about 3 ft. high, of the shape of a truncated cone, heated by the burning embers being placed in it at the bottom. Ovens of this kind are still in use in the East. See DB. i. 318<sup>a</sup>; and, for an illustration, Whitehouse, Primer of Heb. Antiquities, p. 73. So Gen. xv. 17 ('furnace'), Lev. ii. 4 al.

 Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, Intreat the thee, and for thy servants, and for thy people, that the frogs be destroyed from thee and thy houses, and remain in the 10 river only? And he said, Against to-morrow. And he said,

 Be it according to thy word: that thou mayest know that

10. that thou mayest know, &c.] The removal of the plague at a time fixed by the Pharaoh himself should be conclusive evidence to him that it was sent by God. The words are intended to emphasize the religious lesson of the plague; cf. the similar sentences, v. 22<sup>b</sup>, ix. 14<sup>b</sup>, 16<sup>b</sup>, 29<sup>b</sup>, x. 2<sup>b</sup>, xi. 7<sup>b</sup> (all J); comp. on ix. 14—16, and p. 56.

Plagues of frogs in different places are mentioned by the classical writers; they are also not unknown in modern times (DB. iii. 890). In Egypt 'each year the inundation brings with it myriads of frogs, which swarm along the banks of the river and canals, and fill the night air with continual croakings' (Sayce, EHH. 168); similarly Seetzen and other travellers cited by Di. 'Accordingly here also the Hebrew tradition simply describes a miraculously intensified form of a natural phenomenon characteristic of the country. For the frogs come at the signal given by Aaron's wonder-working rod, they climb up even into the houses, and they disappear, not, as happens now, by returning to the water, or being devoured by the ibis or other water-birds, but by dying immediately, in immense numbers, upon the land' (Di.).

16—19. The third plague. The dust of the land turned to gnats. Entirely P.

16. lice] Marg. gnats. The Heb. kinnim or kinnam occurs only Ex. viii. 16—18, Ps. cv. 31, and doubtfully in the sing. Is. li. 6; and it has been differently interpreted. Both the renderings here given are ancient: gnats are found in LXX. (σκνίφες<sup>1</sup>), Vulg. sciniphes; lice in Pesh. and Targ. (so Jos. Ant. ii. 14. 3). Gnats, or, as we should say, mosquitos, are abundant in Egypt: they are generated from the water (which is full of their larvas); and in the autumn especially, when the Nile is still overflowing, and the rice-fields stand in water, they rise from it in such swarms that the air is sometimes darkened with them. Their sting occasions swelling and irritation; and the annoyance caused by them is often alluded to by travellers in Egypt. Lice, on the other hand, are nothing characteristic of Egypt. Hence most moderns (Ges., Keil, Dillm. &c.) agree that gnats is the most probable rendering. The gnats in Egypt often look like clouds of dust; accordingly, they are described here as produced from the dust.

18. This wonder the magicians (v. 7) were unable to imitate. to bring forth] viz. from the earth.

<sup>1</sup> Philo (Vit. Mos., p. 97) describes the σκνίφες as small insects, which not only pierced the skin, but also set up intolerable itching, and penetrated the ears and nostrils; and Origen (Hom. in Ex. iv. 6) as small stinging insects, i.e. mosquitos. Herodotus (ii. 95) also mentions how troublesome the κώρνες, another species of gnat, were in Egypt.

The mosquito is so well known as a plague in Egypt, that it will not be necessary to add anything to what has been said about it on v. 16. The 'gnats' described here, however, differ from the mosquito in being produced, not from water, but from the dust; and also in their appearing miraculously, like the frogs, at a signal given by Aaron.

21. swarms of flies] Heb. 'ārōb,—except here and in the sequel, only Ps. lxxviii. 45, cv. 31 (in allusions to this plague). 'Ārōb might mean a mixture (cf. 'ereb, xii. 38, a 'mixed' multitude'), and so possibly a swarm (AV. rightly kept 'of flies' in italics); but some definite insect is evidently meant; and it is best to suppose that the word, whatever its etymology may be<sup>1</sup>, denotes some particularly irritating kind of fly, LXX. κυρόμυια, or dog-fly: in Ps. lxxviii. 45 the 'ārōb is said to have 'eaten,' or devoured, the Egyptians. Flies are a common pest in Egypt, swarms are often brought up by the S. wind, settling everywhere, filling the houses, irritating men and animals alike, and often carrying with them the germs of contagious diseases, especially ophthalmia, diphtheria, and (one kind) malignant pustules (Post in DB. ii. 25). In Is. vii. 18 the 'fly' (the ordinary word) is a symbol for the Egyptian armies. The 'dog-fly' is described by Philo (Vit. M. p. 101), who lived in Egypt, as a biting insect, attacking its victim with the force of a dart, and not desisting till it had had its fill of blood and flesh.

the land of Goshen] to which, according to J, the Israelites were confined (ix. 26; Gen. xlv. 10, xlvi. 28<sup>b</sup>, 29, 34, xlvii. 1, 4, 6; 27, l. 8: all J); E pictures them as living side by side with the Egyptians (iii. 22, xi. 2). The site of Goshen has been fixed by recent discoveries. Ancient hieroglyphic lists of the 'nomes' of Egypt mention Kesem as the 20th nome of Lower Egypt, and state that its religious capital was P-saft, i.e. the modern 'Saft el-Henna,' a village about 40 miles NE. of Cairo, the ancient name of which M. Naville ascertained in 1885, from inscriptions found on the spot, to be Kes. 'Goshen' (LXX. Γεσση) must thus have been the fertile district around Saft, where the Wady Tumulât opens out at its W. end towards Bubastis, 'within the triangle lying between the villages of Saft, Belbeis, and Tel el-Kebir' (Naville), embracing an area of 60—80 sq. miles (Petrie, Sinai, p. 208), about 40—50 miles NE. of Cairo. The Wady Tumulât is a narrow strip of cultivated soil stretching out, like an arm from the Delta (see the map), across the desert, about 50 miles NE. of Cairo, to Lake Timsâh: 'in pre-historic times, a branch of the Nile ran down it<sup>1</sup>, discharging its waters into a northern extension of the Gulf of Suez' (see p. 126); within the historic period canals have been at different times constructed along it, connecting the Nile with the Red Sea (p. 4 n.); on each side of this strip of soil the country is desert, but the Wady itself is irrigated by a fresh water canal, and fertile: and the part of the Delta adjoining it on the W. (where 'Goshen' will have been) affords excellent arable land and pasture (cf. Dawson, Egypt and Syria, p. 55 f.). See further GOSHEN in DB. or EB.

On Kes, the ancient town of 'Goshen,' see Duncan, Exploration of Egypt and the OT. (1908), pp. 106 f., 113 ff.: few remains of it are now visible. The cemetery of Kes was excavated in 1905—6 by Petrie, and found by him to contain numerous tombs of the 18th and 19th dynasties; but the tombs, as the objects found in them shewed, were entirely those of Egyptians. If, therefore, as J represents (see esp. Gen. xlv. 34), the Israelites lived apart from the Egyptians, we must suppose that the Egyptians in Goshen lived only in the town, while the Israelites were in the country.

23. set redemption (RVm.) between, &c. A singular expression, interpreted to mean make a distinction by redeeming ('redemption,' as Is. l. 2, Ps. cxl. 9, cxxx. 7†). There is probably some error in the text; perhaps make a severance (p<sup>o</sup>lūth for p<sup>o</sup>dūth) should be read.

[to-morrow] Cf. ix. 5, 6, 18, x. 4; also viii. 10, 29 (p. 56).

24. grievous] lit. heavy, combining, as x. 14, the ideas of both numerous (xii. 38, Gen. l. 9, Heb.), and severe (ix. 3, 18, 24). 'Grievous' is an archaism, meaning burdensome (ultimately from Lat. gravis<sup>1</sup>): see DB. s.v.; and cf. Gen. xii. 10 (AV.), l. 11, 2 Cor. xii. 14 AV. (RV. 'be a burden to')<sup>2</sup>.

25—29. The Pharaoh, as before (v. 8), entreats for a removal of the plague. At first he will only give permission for the Israelites to hold their festival in Egypt; but afterwards, in consequence of Moses' representations, he grants leave for a journey of three days in the wilderness.

[the abomination of the Egyptians] i.e. animals which the Egyptians deemed it unlawful to sacrifice, and the sacrifice of which would consequently shock them: as the cow (which was sacred to Isis), the bull (which, according to Hdt. ii. 41, was only sacrificed by them when it was 'clean,' i.e. free from the sacred marks of Apis), sheep at Thebes,

And Pharaoh said, I will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: intreat for me. And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will intreat the LORD that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, to-morrow: only let not Pharaoh deal deceitfully any more in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD. And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and intreated the LORD. And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people; there remained not one. And Pharaoh <sup>1</sup>hardened his heart this time also, and he did not let the people go.

J Then the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD, the God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me. For if thou refuse to let them go, and wilt hold them still, behold, the hand of the LORD is upon thy cattle which is in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the herds, and upon the flocks: there shall be a very grievous murrain. And the LORD shall sever between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that belongeth to the children of Israel. And the LORD appointed a set time, saying, To-morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land. And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, and all the cattle of Egypt died: but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one. And Pharaoh sent, and, behold, there was not so much as one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. But the heart of Pharaoh was <sup>1</sup>stubborn, and he did not let the people go.

camels] Camels were not used, or bred, in ancient Egypt, nor do they appear 'in any inscription or painting before the Greek period' (Erman, p. 493; cf. W. Max Müller, EB. i. 634; Sayce, EHH. 169). They look here like an anachronism: the reference may however be to camels belonging to traders, which had brought merchandise into Egypt across the desert from Arabia, or elsewhere (cf. Gen. xxxvii. 25).

murrain] the word which, when used of a disease of men, is commonly rendered pestilence (v. 15, ix. 3, and frequently); it is applied to a cattle plague only here and Ps. lxxviii. 50.

Egypt does not seem to be often visited by cattle plagues. Pruner (Krankheiten des Orients, p. 108 ff.), and Lepsius (Letters from Eg., p. 44), cited by Kn., mention, however, a severe epidemic which began in 1842, and by June, 1843, had raged for nine months (Mrs Poole, The Englishwoman in Egypt, 1844, ii. 114 f.), causing great mortality among oxen and sheep, though it did not affect camels or horses. Pruner attributed this epidemic to the water of the Nile, which was low and impure at the time when it began: cattle which were at a distance from the Nile, and could obtain good water, were not attacked by it. There have also been cattle plagues in Egypt in recent years.

4. The land of Goshen is again, as in the case of the plague of flies (viii. 22 f.), to be immune from the visitation.

5. To-morrow] cf. viii. 23.

6. all the cattle] unless there is a real inconsistency in the narrative, the 'all' must not be pressed, but understood (as often in Heb.) merely to denote such a large number that those which remain may be disregarded (Keil); for cattle belonging to the Egyptians are mentioned afterwards, vv. 19-21, also xi. 5, xii. 29, xiii. 15.

7. was stubborn] lit. heavy; the word regularly used by J (v. 34, vii. 14, viii. 15, 32, x. 1).

And it shall <sup>9</sup> become small dust over all the land of Egypt, and shall be a boil breaking forth with blains upon man and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt. And they took ashes of <sup>10</sup> the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven; and it became a boil breaking forth with blains upon man and upon beast. 8. Take to you your two hands full of soot from a kiln. The kibshān (also v. 10, Gen. xix. 28, Ex. xix. 18),—different from both the 'oven' of ch. viii. 3, and the kūr, or furnace for smelting metals in (Dt. iv. 20, Ez. xxii. 20, Pr. xvii. 3),—was a kiln for baking pottery or burning lime (cf. in the Mishna, Kel. viii. 9, 'the kibshān of lime-burners, glass-makers, and potters'). Cf. DB. ii. 73; Wilk.-B. ii. 192 (illustr.); EB. iii. 3820f. sprinkle] toss or throw (in a volume), as from the two filled hands (properly, the hollow of the hand, or fist, as Lev. xvi. 12, Ezek. x. 2, Prov. xxx. 4). So Ezek. x. 2. The word is more commonly used of a liquid; see on xxix. 16.

9. become fine dust, &c.] i.e. be dispersed in the air over the whole land in the shape of fine dust, which settling down on men and cattle, will produce boils. For 'ābāk, fine, flying dust, cf. Is. v. 24, xxix. 5.

a boil, breaking out (Lev. xiii. 12, 20, 25) into blains, or pustules. Blain is still 'commonly used in the West Riding to denote a large pustule or boil' (Aldis Wright, Bible Word-Book). Wycliffe uses the word of Job's 'boil' (Job ii. 7). The Heb. for 'boil,' as the cognate languages shew, in which the root signifies to be hot, means an inflamed spot: it is mentioned also in Lev. xiii. 18, 19, 20 (a symptom of elephantiasis), 23 (a common ulcer), Dt. xxviii. 27 (the 'boil of Egypt'), 35, 2 K. xx. 7=Is. xxxviii. 12, Job ii. 7†. Cutaneous eruptions, of various kinds, are common in Egypt (cf. Dt. l.c.): we cannot say exactly what kind is here meant. Di. after Kn. thinks of the Nile-scab, an irritating eruption, consisting of innumerable little red blisters, which is frequent in Egypt at about the time when the Nile begins to rise in June, and often remains for some weeks upon those whom it attacks (Seetzen was attacked in this way two years running, iii. 204 f., 209, 377): it is attributed either to the unhealthy condition of the water at the time (cf. on vii. 23), or to the excessive heat. It is not known to attack animals; but that is no objection to its being intended, in what is represented by the writer as miraculous.

10. The soot of a kiln, and tossed it for 'sprinkled it up,' as v. 8.

11. The magicians (vii. 11, 22, viii. 7, 18, 19) this time are not only not able to imitate the plague, but are themselves attacked by it.

13—35. The seventh plague. The hail. From J, with short passages, probably, from E.

13, 17—18. The announcement of the plague: cf. viii. 1—3, 20—23, ix. 1—4.

13. Rise up early, &c.] cf. viii. 20.

14—16. The announcement of the plague (vv. 13, 17—18) is interrupted by a passage, intended evidently (Di.) to explain why, when so many plagues have produced no impression upon the Pharaoh, God continues to send fresh ones upon him: He does so in order to extort from him the recognition of Himself, and that His name may be made known throughout the world; had this not been His motive, He would ere now have summarily removed him from the earth. By Di. and others this explanation (vv. 14—16) is considered to be a didactic addition of the compiler's (cf. on x. 1<sup>b</sup>—2). Cf. the Introd. p. xvii.

14. this time...all my plagues] The two expressions seem hardly consistent: 'this time' shews that the hail is referred to, while 'all my plagues' points to much more than a single plague. J writes as a rule so clearly that the inconsistency is urged as one reason for supposing that vv. 14—16 are not from his hand.

plagues] Heb. maggēphāh, properly a severe stroke or blow, only here of the 'plagues' of Egypt (cf. the cognate verb 'smite' in viii. 2, xii. 23, 27, Jos. xxiv. 5); of a great defeat in war (EVV. slaughter), 1 S. iv. 17 (vv. 2, 10 the cognate verb, 'smitten'), 2 S. xviii. 7 (with 'smitten') al.; of various supernatural chastisements, Nu. xiv. 37, xvi. 48, 49, 50, xxv. 8, 9, 18, 2 S. xxiv. 21, 25, Zech. xiv. 12, 15, 18.

upon thine heart] The expression (though it might be interpreted with Di. as a reference to the Pharaoh's hardened heart) is strange: read, probably, changing one letter, all these my plagues (cf. x. i.) upon thee (אלה לך for אל לבך), and upon thy servants, &c.; cf. viii. 4, 9, 11, 21, 29.

that thou mayest know, &c.] See on viii. 10.

As yet exaltest thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go? Behold, to-morrow about 15. For now, &c.] 'had put' forth' is hypothetical: For else (i.e. except for the motive just stated) I should now have put forth, &c., would express the sense more clearly.

16. made thee to stand] i.e. maintained thee alive, the causative of to 'stand' in the sense of to continue, ch. xxi. 21, Ps. cii. 28 [Heb. 27]. The same sense is expressed by the paraphrase of LXX. thou wast preserved (διετηρήθης). St Paul quotes this verse in Rom. ix. 17, in his argument to prove the absolute sovereignty of God. He there (disregarding the LXX.) expresses the verb by ἐξήγειρά σε, raised thee up, i.e. brought thee on to the stage of history (cf. ἐξέγειρω in LXX., Hab. i. 6, Zech. xi. 16, and ἐγείρω, Jud. ii. 16, 18, iii. 9 al.),—a sense which העִמִּיךָ might have had in post-exilic Hebrew, but hardly at the date when this passage of Ex. was written<sup>1</sup>. The difference between raised up and kept alive does not, however, affect the Apostle's argument. He is arguing against the Jews (who strongly maintained that their national privileges were inalienable), that God, in rejecting Israel, is not arbitrary or unjust; and he quotes two passages from the OT. to shew the absolute character of the Divine sovereignty, Ex. xxxiii. 19<sup>b</sup> as proof that God can choose Himself the recipients of His mercy, and the present passage as proof that He may, if it pleases Him, be severe, in order to carry out His Divine purpose. See further p. 54.

to shew thee,—lit. to make thee see, i.e. experience,—my power] which might have had the effect of softening Pharaoh's heart, and did in fact lead him more than once to give God the glory (v. 27, x. 16 f.).

and that my name, &c.] Pharaoh is a signal type of the power of the world, as opposed to God; and God's victory over him will cause His name to be declared (Ps. cii. 21) and known far and wide in the world.

17. exaltest thyself] A peculiar word, found only here. The root means to cast up a way (Is. lvii. 14, lxii. 10); and the Heb. words for 'siege-mound,' and 'high-way' (properly, a 'raised way'), are derived from it; hence the meaning seems properly to be, 'raisest thyself up as a mound (or obstacle) against my people,' to oppose their release.

18. to-morrow] as vv. 5, 6. Comp. on viii. 23.

<sup>1</sup> In post-exilic Heb. העִמִּיךָ and העִמִּיךָ acquire meanings which in early Heb. are expressed by קָנַח and הִקִּים: see examples in the writer's Introduction, pp. 475, 503 (ed. 6 or 7, pp. 507, 535), Nos. 16 and 4. In early Heb. ἐξέγειρω would have been expressed by הִקִּים (as in Hab. i. 6, &c., quoted above).

19. Advice to the Pharaoh, and, implicitly (cf. vv. 20, 21), to his servants as well, to bring their cattle quickly into safety. The advice gives the Pharaoh an opportunity of shewing what his frame of mind is, according as he follows or disregards the advice. According to v. 6 the Egyptians had indeed no 'cattle' left after the murrain; but (as was remarked on v. 6) 'all' in Hebrew is not always to be taken literally. The inconsistency is however remarkable: contrast x. 5, 15.

20, 21. How the Pharaoh's servants—i.e. his courtiers and ministers—act in consequence.

23<sup>a</sup>. sent thunder] lit. gave voices. 'Voices' is a common expression in Heb. for 'thunder' (vv. 29, 33, 34, xix. 16, xx. 18, 1 S. xii. 17, 18 [with 'gave,' as here], Job xxviii. 36, xxxviii. 25; cf. Rev. iv. 5, viii. 5, xi. 15, &c.): in a thunderstorm the Hebrews imagined Jehovah, enveloped in light, to be borne along in the dark thunder cloud; the flashes of lightning were glimpses of the brilliancy within, caused by the clouds parting; and the thunder was His voice. See especially Ps. xviii. 10—13, xxix. 3—9 (where 'the voice of Jehovah' means the thunder), Job xxxvi. 29, xxxvii. 2. With 'gave voices' here, cf. 'gave (i.e. uttered) his voice' (in thunder), Ps. xviii. 13, xlvi. 6, lxxviii. 33 al.

27—33. The Pharaoh craves a third time (see viii. 8, 28) for a cessation of the plague.

27. The Pharaoh this time, impressed, it may be supposed, by the spectacle of the storm, confesses his fault, as he has never done before. His penitence, however, as the sequel shews, is not very deep.

I have sinned] x. 16.

righteous...wicked] rather, the (with the art.) one in the right...those in the wrong. The words are used not in their ethical, but in their forensic sense, as ii. 13 (where 'him that did the wrong' is lit. the wicked one), Dt. xxv. 1.

28. Intreat] viii. 8, 28, x. 17.

mighty thunderings] Heb. voices (v. 23) of God. The addition, 'of God,' does sometimes imply worthy to belong to God, i.e. mighty or noble (Gen. xxiii. 6, Nu. xxiv. 6, Ps. xxxvi. 6, lxviii. 15 RV., lxxx. 10, civ. 16); but, in view of the idiom explained on v. 23<sup>a</sup>, it is doubtful whether that is the case here.

29. spread abroad my hands] The attitude of prayer: v. 33, 1 K. viii. 22, 38 al.

that thou mayest know, &c.] cf. viii. 10, with the note.

thy servants, I know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God. J
 31 | And the flax and the barley were smitten: for the barley E?
 32 was in the ear, and the flax <sup>1</sup>was bolled. But the wheat and the spelt were not smitten: for they were not grown up.

30. that ye do not yet fear before (Hag. i. 12) Jehovah God] that ye do not yet really stand in awe of Him, so as to grant Israel's release. The meaning is not 'fear God' in a religious sense, but 'fear before' Him, be afraid of Him.

Jehovah God] The addition 'God' (not in LXX. however) emphasizes the fact that it was just Jehovah's Godhead which the Pharaoh had failed to recognize. The combination is very unusual: elsewhere in the Pent. it occurs only (for a different reason) in Gen. ii. 4<sup>b</sup>—iii.

31, 32. A supplementary notice, which interrupts the connexion between vv. 29 f. and 33, stating, more explicitly than v. 25<sup>b</sup>, what crops had suffered in the fields. On account of the information on Egyptian matters which it contains, the notice is referred by Di. and others to E. In Egypt, according to a farmer living in the Delta (cited by W. R. Smith, Journ. of Phil. xii. 300), flax blossoms and barley ripens in Jan.; but, he adds, the seasons vary, and so the travellers cited by Kn. mention mostly Feb.: wheat and spelt are ripe, in any case, about a month later. As the wheat and the spelt were not yet up, the hail will be represented as coming in Jan. (Kn.), if not earlier.

Flax was much cultivated in Egypt: for linen was worn constantly by men of rank, and exclusively by the priests (Hdt. ii. 37); wrappings for mummies were also made of it. There are many representations on the Egyptian monuments of the processes by which flax was converted into linen; and the linen itself was often of remarkable transparency and fineness (Erman, pp. 448, 449 f.; Wilk.-B. ii. 157 f., 165 f.; cf. Gen. xli. 42; Ez. xxvii. 7; Hdt. ii. 81, 105).

was bolled] was in bud. The Heb. word occurs only here in the OT.; but, as Ges. shews, this is the meaning of gib'ol in the Mishna.

'Bolled' is a now obsolete expression meaning podded (lit. swollen, akin to bow, bellows, billow, &c.) for seed. The old verb was bolnen, to swell. Aldis Wright mentions that the later of the Wycliffite versions has in Col. ii. 18 bolnyd for 'puffed up,' and that in Holland's Pliny 'bolled leekes' is the rendering of 'porrum capitatum.' He adds that 'bolled' in the sense of podded is still in use in Ireland, as it is also in Lincolnshire (Jos. Wright, Dialect Dict. i. 332): cf. the remark on the word in the Preface to RV.

32. spelt] 'bread made from spelt is frequently found in Egyptian tombs' (Lepsius, in a private letter to Dillmann). 'Spelt' (Is. xxviii. 25, Ezek. iv. 9†) is a cereal closely allied to wheat, which it much resembles (NHB. 479; and, with fuller particulars, EB. ii. 1532). LXX. δλυρα; Aq. Sym. ἕτα.

were not grown up] are late (see Ges. Thes. p. 137); i.e. are

J | And Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh, and spread <sup>33</sup> abroad his hands unto the LORD: and the thunders and hail ceased, and the rain was not poured upon the earth. And when Pharaoh saw that the rain and the hail and the <sup>34</sup> thunders were ceased, he sinned yet more, and <sup>1</sup>hardened E his heart, he and his servants. | And the heart of Pharaoh <sup>35</sup> <sup>2</sup>was hardened, and he did not let the children of Israel R<sup>P</sup> go; | as the LORD had spoken by Moses.
J And the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh: 10

habitually late in coming up: as stated above, they are about a month later than flax and barley.

34. hardened his heart] made his heart stubborn (lit. heavy), J's regular word: see on vii. 13.

35 (E). was hardened] waxed strong (or firm), the word used by E: cf. x. 20, 27, iv. 21<sup>b</sup>.

as Jehovah had spoken] This is P's formula (vii. 13, 22, viii. 15, 19, ix. 12): the clause was probably added here, on the basis of the passages quoted, by the compiler who combined JE with P.

by the hand of Moses. Moses is never said to have foretold what is here referred to him: in ix. 12 'unto Moses' is said, which agrees with vii. 3 f. Perhaps the words are intended as a reference to v. 30.

Thunder and hail are not common in Egypt: nevertheless they occur occasionally. Different travellers (see Di., or DB. iii. 891) speak of storms of heavy rain, hail, or thunder in Egypt occurring during the winter months; and Sayce (EHH. 169) states that in the spring of 1895 a violent storm of thunder and hail swept along the valley of the Nile and desolated 3000 acres of cultivated land. Vv. 31 f. shew that the plague took place in Jan., or thereabouts; and with this date agrees the statement in v. 19 that the cattle were at the time in the fields, for the cattle in Egypt are from Jan. to April on their pastures, while from May to Dec. they are commonly kept in their stalls.

x. 1—20. The eighth plague. The locusts. From J, with short passages from E.

1<sup>a</sup>. Go in unto Pharaoh] as before in J: viii. 1, ix. 1.

1<sup>b</sup>, 2. Explanation to Moses of the reason of the command. In previous cases the command to go in to the Pharaoh is followed at once by the words, and say unto him, and the demand for the release of the people (viii. 1, 20, ix. 1, 13); and it is possible that Di. and others are right in regarding v. 1<sup>b</sup>, 2 as a didactic addition (similar to ix. 14—16) made by the compiler of JE, who at the same time substituted at the beginning of v. 3 'And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him' for an original 'and say unto him' (the direct sequel to v. 1<sup>a</sup> 'Go in unto Pharaoh'). It may be noticed that in v. 6 'And he (i.e. Moses) turned,' at the end of the interview with Pharaoh, rather suggests that, for I have <sup>1</sup>hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants, J that I might shew these my signs in the midst of them:

<sup>2</sup> and that thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son's son, <sup>2</sup> what things I have wrought upon Egypt, and my signs which I have done among them; that ye may know <sup>3</sup> that I am the LORD. And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, the God of the Hebrews, How long wilt thou refuse to humble thyself before me? let my people go, that they may serve me.

—in accordance with the command in v. 1, but against v. 3 as it at present stands,—originally Moses alone 'went in' to Pharaoh.

<sup>1b</sup>. for I (emph.) have hardened] Heb. made heavy, the term used by J (see on vii. 13).

signs] cf. v. 2, vii. 3 (P), viii. 23 (J), Nu. xiv. 11, 22 (JE), and often in Dt. (iv. 34, vi. 22 al.); see p. 59. The thought, as ix. 16.

of them] Heb. of it, i.e. of the people of Egypt (iii. 20), which, however, has not been previously mentioned. 'Them' is right (so LXX. Pesh. Onk.); but it implies a change of text (בְּקִרְבּוֹ for בְּקִרְבּוֹ).

in the ears of thy son, &c.] The story is to be passed on to the children. The interest in the instruction of future generations, as Dt. iv. 9, vi. 7; comp. also ch. xii. 26 f., with the note, and Jud. vi. 13, Ps. xlv. 1, lxxviii. 5—6.

how I have mocked the Egyptians] so RVm. rightly: cf. 1 S. vi. 6 RVm. (also with reference to the Egyptians), xxxi. 4 RVm. AV. itself has the rend. mock in Nu. xxii. 29, Jer. xxxviii. 19. The word used cannot mean 'wrought': in Arabic the corresponding word means to divert or occupy oneself; the Heb. word is applied in a bad sense, to 'divert oneself at another's expense,' i.e. to make a toy of, or, by a slight paraphrase, to mock. As used here, 'it is an anthropomorphism which is not consonant with the higher Christian conception of God' (McNeile).

done] better, set, as the same verb, also of 'signs' 'set' in Egypt, is actually rendered, Jer. xxxii. 20 AV., RV., Ps. lxxviii. 43 RV., cv. 27 RV. (cf. Is. lxvi. 19).

and that (G.-K. § 112<sup>p</sup>) ye may know, &c.] cf. on viii. 10.

3—6. The announcement of the plague to Pharaoh.

4. to-morrow] cf. viii. 23, ix. 5, 6, 18.

7 I will I bring locusts into thy border: and they shall cover 5 the face of the earth, that one shall not be able to see the earth: and they shall eat the residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field: and 6 thy houses shall be filled, and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians; as neither thy fathers nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. And he turned, and went out from Pharaoh. And Pharaoh's servants said unto 7 him, How long shall this man be a snare unto us? let the locusts] A well-known plague in Palestine and neighbouring countries: see for descriptions both of their immense numbers, and of their ravages, the writer's notes on Joel (in the Camb. Bible), pp. 37—39, 48—53, 87—91. They do not however seem to visit Egypt very frequently. Niebuhr (as cited by Kn.) witnessed at Cairo in January a great swarm of locusts blown up by a SW. wind from the Libyan desert: Lepsius (Letters, p. 104) describes one in March, coming up also from the SW., which covered the whole country far and near. Denon (Voyages dans la basse et la haute Égypte, 1807, i. 287) describes one brought up by the wind from the East, which eventually, when the wind changed, was driven back into the desert.

5. they shall cover, &c.] This is literally true of locusts. As Thomson says of an invasion in the Lebanon district, 'Their number was astounding; the whole face of the mountain was black with them' (Joel, p. 89).

they shall eat, &c.] their voracity is insatiable. Cf. Joel ii. 3, with the passage cited in the writer's note from a traveller, 'On whatever spot they fall, the whole vegetable produce disappears. Nothing escapes them, from the leaves on the forest to the herbs on the plain.'

6. thy houses shall be filled, &c.] Cf. Morier, describing an invasion in Persia (ibid. p. 89), 'They entered the inmost recesses of the houses, were found in every corner, stuck to our clothes, and infested our food.'

And he turned] i.e. Moses, though Aaron also, according to v. 3, had gone in. See the note on vv. 1<sup>b</sup>, 2, at the end.

7—11. The Pharaoh's ministers suggest to him that Moses should no longer be permitted to ruin Egypt. He accordingly makes an attempt to come to terms with Moses; but when Moses declares that the whole people must go to hold the feast to Jehovah, he replies that he can only let the men go. The ministers shew by what they say that they are prompted not by religious fear, but only by solicitude for the welfare of their country, the misfortunes of which they attribute to Moses.

7. a snare] fig. for an occasion of destruction. See 1 S. xviii. 21; and cf. on ch. xxiii. 33. Lit. a fowling-instrument; and probably, in men go, that they may serve the LORD their God: knowest J 8 thou not yet that Egypt is destroyed? And Moses and Aaron were brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God: but who are they 9 that shall go? And Moses said, We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go; for we must 10 hold a feast unto the LORD. And he said unto them, So be the LORD with you, as I will let you go, and your little 11 ones: look to it; for evil is <sup>1</sup>before you. Not so: go now ye that are men, and serve the LORD; for that is what ye desire. And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

 12 And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand E over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of Egypt, and eat every herb of the land, 13 even all that the hail hath left. And Moses stretched forth fact, not a 'snare' (i.e. a noose; Germ. Schnur, a 'string') at all, but the trigger of a trap with the bait upon it<sup>1</sup>.

destroyed] i.e. ruined, viz. through all the calamities that have visited it.

8. again] back, a frequent sense of 'again' in Old English.

9. a feast unto the LORD] more naturally, Jehovah's feast.

10. The Pharaoh's good wishes are of course intended ironically (cf. Am. v. 14): Jehovah be with you, and protect you, as assuredly as I will let you go, i.e. not at all.

for evil is before you] i.e. is contemplated by you, is what ye purpose (marg.): lit. is before your faces. The 'evil' is their intention of leaving Egypt altogether.

11. men] Not the word used in v. 7, but one meaning more distinctly men, as opposed to women or children: cf. Dt. xxii. 5 Heb.

for that is what ye desire] viz. to worship Jehovah at a festival, which could be sufficiently observed by men alone (xxiii. 17).

And they were driven, &c.] With this ultimatum, that only the men might go, the interview abruptly terminates.

12. (even) all that, &c.] LXX. Sam. read, and all the fruit of the trees that, &c., perhaps rightly: cf. v. 15, and ix. 25 end.

<sup>1</sup> This must be the meaning, if the Mass. text of Am. iii. 5<sup>a</sup> ('Will a bird fall into a trap upon the earth, when there is no mōkēsh for it?') is right; but even though 'into a trap' be omitted with LXX., it still (in spite of EB, ii. 1561) seems to be a probable meaning of the word.

J his rod over the land of Egypt, | and the LORD brought an east wind upon the land all that day, and all the night; and when it was morning, the east wind brought the locusts.

E J | And the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt, | and 14 rested in all the borders of Egypt; very grievous were they; before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such. For they covered the face of the 15
E whole earth, so that the land was darkened; | and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees J which the hail had left: | and there remained not any green thing, either tree or herb of the field, through all the land of Egypt. Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron in haste; 16 and he said, I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you. Now therefore forgive, I pray thee, my sin 17 only this once, and intreat the LORD your God, that he may brought (first time)] led (iii. 1), or brought along,—the word used in Ps. lxxviii. 26<sup>b</sup> of the wind which brought the quails.

an east wind] so Ps. lxxviii. 26<sup>a</sup>, for which the parallel clause has the south wind. The word does in fact include winds at least from the SE. The 'east wind' commonly denotes the violent and scorching sirocco (from Arab. sherklyeh, 'eastern'), often described as 'drying up' vegetation, &c. (Ez. xvii. 10, xix. 12, Hos. xiii. 15); hence the Vulg. here has 'ventus urens.' 'That the wind brings locusts is stated by ancient and modern authorities alike, e.g. Agatharc. p. 42, Strabo, xvi. p. 772, Diod. Sic. iii. 28, Shaw, Travels (1738), p. 256' (Kn.).

brought (second time)] more exactly, bore along; cf. 1 K. xviii. 12 ('carried'). For the construction of the Heb., cf. Gen. xix. 23, xliv. 3; and see G.-K. § 164<sup>b</sup>, or the writer's Heb. Tenses, §§ 167—9.

14. went up] came up (v. 12).

borders (Heb. border)] i.e. territory, as viii. 2, x. 4, 19 (cf. p. 56).

15. was darkened] i.e. hidden (cf. v. 5) by the multitude of locusts resting upon it. Cf. the description of Thomson, cited on v. 5, 'the whole face of the mountain was black with them'; and of the Jaffa invasion in 1865 (Joel, p. 90), 'in parts they covered the ground for miles to a height of several inches.'

not any green thing] cf. the last note on v. 5.

16, 17. Such terrible ravages move the Pharaoh to confess his sin, in stronger terms than before (ix. 27); he prays for forgiveness, and for a fourth time intreats for the removal of the plague (cf. viii. 8, 28, ix. 28).

17. only this once] Gen. xviii. 32.

18 take away from me this death only. And he went out from J 19 Pharaoh, and intreated the LORD. And the LORD turned an exceeding strong west wind, which took up the locusts, and drove them into the Red Sea; there remained not one 20 locust in all the border of Egypt. | But the LORD <sup>1</sup>hardened E
 Pharaoh's heart, and he did not let the children of Israel go.
 21 And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be darkness over the land of 22 Egypt, <sup>2</sup>even darkness which may be felt. And Moses days: but all the children of Israel had light in their

this death only] only this terribly destructive pest. The term 'death' depicts vividly the consternation which the Pharaoh feels at it.

19. turned, &c.] i.e. caused by a change a west wind to blow.

west wind] Heb. a sea-wind. The 'west' is regularly in Heb. the sea (Gen. xii. 8, xiii. 14, &c.). The idiom must have formed itself in Palestine, where the 'sea' was on the west. It is a common fate of locust swarms to be driven away by the wind, and to perish in the sea. Cf. Joel ii. 20, with the writer's note (p. 60). Pliny (H.N. xi. 35) writes, 'Gregatim sublatae vento in maria aut stagna decidunt.' The swarm described by Denon (on v. 4) was driven back by a change of wind into the desert on the East.

20. But again, after the removal of the plague, the result was the same as before, and the Pharaoh would not let the people go. The expression, as elsewhere in E (iv. 21<sup>b</sup>, ix. 35, x. 27).

21—27. The ninth plague. The darkness. From E and J.

21. Stretch out, &c.] addressed to Moses, as ix. 22, x. 12 (both E).

even darkness which may be felt] lit. so that one may feel darkness (LXX. ψηλαφήτην σκότος; Vulg. tam densae ut palpari queant). The marg. 'feel (or grope) in darkness' is not favoured by the Heb.

23. but, &c.] What is here described is evidently miraculous: but it is said that the sand-clouds of the Hamsin (see below) sometimes travel in streaks, so that parts of the country may escape them.

The darkness was no doubt occasioned really by a sand-storm, produced by the hot electrical wind called the Hamsin, which in Egypt blows in most years intermittently,—usually for two or three days at a time,—from the S., SE., or SW. during some 50 days in spring (hence its name, hamsin=fifty). These winds spring up for the most part suddenly: they are violent, and often as hot as 'the air of an oven';

J dwellings. | And Pharaoh called unto Moses, and said, Go <sup>24</sup> ye, serve the LORD; only let your flocks and your herds be stayed: let your little ones also go with you. And Moses <sup>25</sup> said, Thou must also give into our hand sacrifices and burnt offerings, that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God. Our cattle also shall go with us; there shall not an hoof be <sup>26</sup> left behind; for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God; and we know not with what we must serve the LORD, E until we come thither. | But the LORD <sup>27</sup> hardened Pharaoh's J heart, and he would not let them go. | And Pharaoh said <sup>28</sup> and they frequently raise such an amount of sand and dust as to darken the sun, and even to conceal objects a few yards off. Men and animals alike are greatly distressed by the sand and heat: the sand penetrates everywhere; and while the storm lasts, people are obliged to remain secluded in their houses. On account of the sand and dust, the darkness is really such as 'can be felt.' See R. Pococke, Description of the East (1743), i. 195; Volney, Voyage en Syrie et en Égypte (1787), i. 55—7; DB. iii. 892<sup>a</sup>; A. B. Edwards, A thousand miles up the Nile<sup>2</sup> (1889), ch. v, p. 76 f.; Rosenm. Schol. ad loc. (a sandstorm, c. 1100, producing darkness so intense that it was thought the end of the world had come); Denon [above, p. 79], i. 285 f.; and a photograph in the Ill. London News, Feb. 17, 1906.

24—26. The Pharaoh now summons Moses again, and offers a greater concession than before (vv. 8—11): the entire people may go; only their flocks and herds must be left behind (as a security for their return). But Moses will not listen to such a compromise. The passage must belong to the same source as vv. 8—11 (J).

25. Thou also must, &c.] The pron. is emphatic. Pharaoh, besides letting the Israelites' cattle go, must also himself contribute to the sacrifices which will be offered. By 'sacrifices' (lit. slaughterings) are meant the most common kind of sacrifice, called elsewhere for distinction 'peace-offerings' (see on xx. 24): they are often, esp. in the historical books, mentioned together with burnt-offerings (see ibid.).

sacrifice] Heb. do,—used in a sacrificial sense, like šéʿev and facere, and the Ass. epēshu. So xxix. 36, 38, Dt. xii. 27, 1 K. iii. 15, and frequently (the instances in the OT. have been collected by the writer in DB. s.v. OFFER, OFFERING, No. 7, iii. 538<sup>b</sup>).

26. The Israelites' own cattle must go as well: because until they reach their destination they do not know how many sacrifices will be required.

and we know not] The pron. is emphatic.

27. The result is the same as in v. 20.

28, 29 (J). The original sequel of v. 26 (J). The Pharaoh is greatly angered at Moses' persistency; and declares peremptorily that he unto him, Get thee from me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more; for in the day thou seest my face thou shalt die. And Moses said, Thou hast spoken well; I will see thy face again no more.

11 And the LORD said unto Moses, Yet one plague more will I bring upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; afterwards he will let you go hence: <sup>1</sup>when he shall let you go, he shall surely thrust you out hence altogether. Speak now in the ears of the people, and let them ask every man of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold. And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians. Moreover the man will never admit him to his presence again. In the existing text of Exodus, Moses is admitted to the Pharaoh's presence again, viz. to deliver the message xi. 4—8 after he had received the command contained in xi. 1—3: the difficulty is removed by the supposition that originally xi. 4—8 was the immediate sequel of x. 28, 29, and that the connexion was interrupted by the compiler's insertion of xi. 1—3 from E.

28. from me] Heb. from upon me, i.e. from being a trouble to me; cf. Gen. xiii. 11, Nu. xx. 21, 2 S. xiii. 17 (Lex. p. 759<sup>a</sup>). Not the 'from' [Heb. from with = παρὰ with a gen.] of viii. 12, 29, 30, ix. 33, x. 6, 18, xi. 8.

see my face] i.e. be admitted to my presence; cf. Gen. xliii. 3, 2 S. xiv. 24, 28, 2 K. xxv. 19.

1. plague] Heb. nēgā', from nāgā', to touch; lit. (severe) touch or stroke, Gen. xii. 17, 1 K. viii. 37, 38, Ps. xxxix. 10; most commonly, of the severe stroke of leprosy (Lev. xiii.—xiv.). Not the word used in ix. 14, or xii. 13: see p. 58.

when, &c.] the marg. is preferable: when he does let you go altogether (without, for instance, keeping back the flocks and herds, x. 24), he will be glad to be rid of you, and will even thrust you out: see xii. 39, also xii. 33, vi. 1 Heb.

2, 3<sup>a</sup>. Before the last plague comes, the Israelites are to make the request of the Egyptians, as directed in iii. 21, 22; cf. xii. 35, 36.

2. every man] in iii. 22 only the women are to make the request.

and jewels of gold] LXX. Sam. add and raiment (as iii. 22, xii. 35). It must be supplied, or understood, from xii. 36, to be included.

3<sup>a</sup>. gave, &c.] according to the promise of iii. 21<sup>a</sup>; cf. xii. 36.

3<sup>b</sup>. Cf. Nu. xii. 3 'Now the man Moses was very meek,' &c.; also,

J And Moses said, Thus saith the LORD, About midnight 4 will I go out into the midst of Egypt: and all the firstborn 5 in the land of Egypt shall die, from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the firstborn of the maidservant that is behind the mill; and all the firstborn of cattle. And there shall be a great cry throughout all the 6 land of Egypt, such as there hath been none like it, nor shall be like it any more. But against any of the children 7 of Israel shall not a dog <sup>1</sup>move his tongue, against man or beast: that ye may know how that the LORD doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel. 4. And Moses said] viz., as v. 8<sup>b</sup> shews, to the Pharaoh.

5. the mill] The Heb. word is a dual, properly, no doubt, the two mill-stones (though the root-meaning of rēhaim is not known). The reference is to the hand-mill, consisting of two circular stones, 18 inches or two feet in diameter, the lower one being fixed on the ground, while the upper one is turned round by a woman—or sometimes (cf. Mt. xxiv. 41) by two women—kneeling or sitting beside it. The mill is fed by grain being poured in through an opening in the centre of the upper stone. The hand-mill is still in daily use in practically every household in an Eastern village. In the houses of the rich, the work of the mill fell to the female slaves; cf. Is. xlvii. 2 where the command to 'take the mill-stones and grind meal' is a prophecy of impending slavery. Captives were also sometimes compelled to do the same work (Jud. xiv. 21, Lam. v. 13).

6. such as, &c.] cf. ix. 18<sup>b</sup>, 24<sup>b</sup>, x. 6<sup>b</sup>, 14<sup>b</sup>; and p. 56.

7. shall not a dog whet his tongue] A proverbial expression, implying that not only should they suffer no actual harm, but no unfriendly sound should even be heard against them. Cf. Judith xi. 19; and, with 'no man' as subject, Jos. x. 21.

put a difference] in the Heb. a single word, the verb rendered 'sever' in viii. 22, ix. 4.

thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down<sup>J</sup> themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people that follow thee: and after that I will go out. And he went out from Pharaoh in hot anger.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh will not<sup>P</sup> hearken unto you: that my wonders may be multiplied in

8. Then the Pharaoh's ministers themselves will come humbly to Moses, and beg him and his people to leave Egypt; cf. xii. 31—33.

come down] 'from the palace, where the writer thinks of the ministers as assembled, after hearing the tidings of the calamity, and which he pictures as elevated above the surrounding city and country (cf. 2 S. xi. 9, 2 K. vi. 33, vii. 17)' (Di. from Kn.).

that follow thee] Heb. that are at thy feet: Dt. xi. 10 Heb., Jud. iv. 10, viii. 5 Heb. al.

9—10. The close of P's account of the 'portents' hitherto done before the Pharaoh. They had failed to produce any effect upon the king; and more, and more convincing ones, must in consequence follow.

9. wonders] portents, as vii. 3 (see on iv. 21). The whole verse is nearly the same as vii. 4<sup>a</sup>, 3<sup>b</sup>; but, if it is in its right place, the 'portents' here can be only those which happened subsequently to the ninth plague. (The rend. as a pluperfect, had said, is contrary to grammar.)

10. these portents] The 'portents' described before in P (vii. 8—13, and the 'plagues' narrated by P), not those referred to in v. 9. 'It is only in P that Moses and Aaron do the signs, and that before Pharaoh, vii. 9, ix. 8' (Di.).

but Jehovah hardened, &c., emphasizing the fact that the portents had had no effect upon the Pharaoh. Cf. p. 53 f.

The last Plague. The departure from Egypt. Laws relating to the Passover, Mazzoth, and the First-born. Journey to Etham.

Regulations for the observance of the Passover, xii. 1—13 (P), and of the feast of Mazzoth (i.e. Unleavened Cakes), xii. 14—20 (P); communication to the people by Moses of directions (not the same as those given to him in xii. 1—13) for the observance of the Passover, xii. 21—28 (J); the death of the Egyptian first-born, and preparations of the Israelites for the Exodus, xii. 29—36 (J and E); their journey from Rameses to Succoth, xii. 37—42 (E and P); supplementary regulations respecting the Passover, xii. 43—51 (P); the dedication of the first-born to Jehovah, xiii. 1—2 (P); promulgation by Moses to the people of directions respecting the feast of Mazzoth, xiii. 3—10 (J), and the dedication of the first-born, xiii. 11—16 (J); the journey from Succoth to Etham, xiii. 17—22. The double origin of the laws in this section of Exodus is particularly evident; the marks of P in the passages assigned to him are very numerous and clear; and regulations respecting the Passover, Mazzoth, and the first-born, are all given in duplicate. xii. 25—27<sup>a</sup>, xiii. 3, 5, 8—9, 11, 14—16 may be parenthetic expansions of the original text by the compiler of JE: they approximate in style and tone to Deuteronomy. Cf. the Introd. p. xvii.

xii. 1—13. Regulations for the Passover, according to P.

1. unto Moses and Aaron] Together, as often in P: v. 43, vii. 8, ix. 8, Nu. ii. 1 al.

in the land of Egypt] The locality is specified, because this and the following regulations are the only ones stated to have been given in Egypt.

2. This month, &c.] The 'month' is the one corresponding to our Mar.—Apr., called in J and E (xiii. 4, xxiii. 15, xxxiv. 18) and Dt. (xvi. 1) 'Abib,' and in the later post-exilic writings (Neh. ii. 1, Esth. iii. 7) by its Bab. name, Nisan. P never, like the older pre-exilic writers, calls the months by their Canaanitish or Phœnician names, Abib (ll. cc.), Ziv (1 K. vi. 1, 37), Ethanim (ib. viii. 2), Bul (ib. vi. 38); but, as do the late parts of Kings (1 K. xii. 32, 33 [compiler], 2 K. xxv. 1, 3, 8, 25, 27), Jer. (i. 3, xxviii. 1, 17, xxxvi. 22 al.), Ezek. (i. 1, viii. 1 al.), Hag. (i. 1, 15, ii. 1), Zech. (i. 1, 7, vii. 1, 3), and Chron., denotes them by numbers (Ex. xvi. 1, xix. 1, xl. 1, Lev. xvi. 29, &c.). The old Hebrew year began in autumn (Ex. xxiii. 16; cf. xxxiv. 22, 1 S. i. 20); and P here refers the later custom of beginning it in spring (see Jer. xxxvi. 22) to the time of the institution of the Passover in Egypt. The Bab. year began in spring; but whether the Hebrew custom was due to Rab. influence is uncertain. The earliest clear cases of the Heb. year beginning in spring are in the dates quoted above from Kings and Jer.; but 2 K. xix. 29 (=Is. xxxvii. 30) perhaps presupposes it. As the passages from Kings and Jer. shew, the reckoning from spring was more than a merely ecclesiastical calendar, it was used also for dating civil events. See further Nowack, Arch. i. 217 ff., DB. iv. 764; EB. iv. 5365 f.; König, ZDMG. lvi. (1906), p. 624 ff. There is a survival in P of the old mode of reckoning in the first day of the seventh month being celebrated as New Year's day (Lev. xxiii. 24).

3. the congregation] P's standing expression for Israel, as an organized religious community, or 'church.' It occurs in P more than 100 times, usually alone ('the congregation'), sometimes with the addition of 'of Israel' (as here, vv. 6, 47, Lev. iv. 13), or 'of the children of Israel' (xvi. 1, 2, &c.). Except in P and the allied narrative of Jos. xxii., it occurs in the historical books only in Jud. xxi. 10, 13, 16, 1 K. viii. 5 (not in LXX.) = 2 Ch. v. 6, 1 K. xii. 20.

the tenth day] perhaps (Di. Bā.) some sanctity attached to the day which closed the first decade of the month: the 10th day of the seventh month was the Day of Atonement (Lev. xxiii. 27); in Islam, also, as Di. observes, the 10th day of the 12th month is the day of the great sacrifice at the Mecca pilgrimage; cf. Benzinger, Arch.<sup>2</sup> p. 169.

a lamb] The Heb. seh denotes a single head of the Isōn, or smaller cattle (including both sheep and goats), without reference to age or sex; and may be used of either a sheep or a goat (hence RVm.): see v. 5<sup>b</sup>; and comp. Nu. xv. 11<sup>b</sup> (lit. 'or for a seh among the lambs or the goats'), Dt. xiv. 4<sup>b</sup> (lit. 'the seh of lambs and the seh of goats').

fathers' houses] A 'father's house' is a common expression in P and Chr. for a family: see on vi. 14.

a lamb for an household] The Passover was to be a domestic institution: each lamb was to be partaken of only by members of one family, or (in the case provided for in v. 4) of two families living side by side.

4. too little for a lamb] According to the later Jews, fewer than ten (cf. Jos. Bf. vi. 9. 3; and Targ. Ps.-Jon. here), in accordance with the Rabb. exegesis of Nu. xiv. 27, that ten was the smallest number that could constitute a 'congregation' (the 'congregation' there being interpreted of the ten murmuring spies).

according to every man's eating, &c.] In determining the number of

P Your lamb shall be without blemish, a male of the first year: ye shall take it from the sheep, or from the goats: and ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall persons sufficient for one lamb, you are to be guided by the usual measure or amount of their eating,—according, for example, as they are adults or children, healthy or infirm, &c.

5. Characteristics of the animal chosen: it is to be (1) without blemish (like sacrificial animals in general, Dt. xvii. 1, Lev. xxii. 19, 21 [H]); (2) a male, as superior to a female, and therefore more appropriate as an offering to Jehovah (so for burnt-offerings, in H and P, Lev. i. 3, 10, xxii. 19; for peace- and sin-offerings females were allowed); (3) one year old (cf. the same regulation xxix. 38, Lev. ix. 3, and elsewhere); (4) either a lamb or a kid (cf. on v. 3); later usage declared in favour of a lamb.

[of the first year] Heb. 'the son of a year.' The meaning is disputed. The Rabbis interpret of the first year, i.e. from 8 days old (Lev. xxii. 27 H) to a full year; modern commentators generally, a year old (LXX. ἐνιαύσιος). The Hebrew idiom (of human beings as well as of animals) occurs constantly (Gen. xxi. 4, 5, xxv. 26, &c.): the same age as here is appointed for sacrifices, esp. for burnt-offerings, Lev. ix. 3, xii. 6 ('a son of its year'), xxiii. 12, 18, 19, and elsewhere.

6. ye shall keep it up] Heb. it shall be to you for a keeping: cf. xvi. 23, 32—34, Nu. xvii. 10 [Heb. 25], xix. 9.

[the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel] Cf. for the pleonasm Nu. xiv. 5.

[between the two evenings] one of P's technical expressions: of the Passover, as here, Lev. xxiii. 5, Nu. ix. 3, 5, 11; of the time for offering the evening burnt-offering, Ex. xxix. 39, 41, Nu. xxviii. 4, 8; of the time for lighting the lamps in the Tabernacle, Ex. xxx. 8; and Ex. xvi. 12†. The meaning is disputed. (1) Onkelos renders בין שמשׁ וּבֵין שְׁמֶשׁׁ 'between the two suns,' which is explained in the Talm. to mean the time between sunset and the stars becoming visible; cf. Ibn Ezra (as cited by Kalisch), 'We have two evenings; the first, sunset, the second, the ceasing of the light which is reflected in the clouds; and the interval between them is about an hour and 20 minutes' (so Ges. Keil). The Italian astronomer, Schiaparelli (Astronomy in the O.T., 1905, p. 92 f.), arrives at nearly the same explanation. He supposes that the expression arose out of the custom of watching for the first appearance of the crescent moon to mark the beginning of the new month; and thinks that the 'first' evening would be the half-hour between sunset and the average time at which in the latitude of Palestine the crescent moon would appear, and that the 'second' evening would be the hour afterwards, from the appearance of the crescent to complete darkness: 'between the two evenings' would thus mark the time about half-an-hour after sunset. Cf. Dt. xvi. 6, where the Passover is to be sacrificed 'at 7 kill it <sup>1</sup>at even. And they shall take of the blood, and put <sup>P</sup> it on the two side posts and on the lintel, upon the houses

8 wherein they shall eat it. And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roast with fire, and unleavened bread; with the going down of the sun,' i.e. at sunset. (2) Saadiah (d. A.D. 942), Rashi and Kimchi understand the 'first' evening to be the time when the sun first begins to decline to the west, and the shadows begin to lengthen, and the 'second' evening to be the beginning of night. But this interpretation gives a very forced sense to the 'first' evening. (3) The traditional explanation, adopted by the Pharisees and the Talmudists (Pesāhim 61<sup>a</sup>) was that the 'first' evening was when the heat of the sun begins to decrease, about 3 P.M., and that the 'second' evening began with sunset. So Josephus (B.J. vi. 9. 3) says that in his day the Passover was sacrificed 'from the 9th to the 11th hour' (i.e. from 3 to 5 P.M.). The Mishna (Pesāhim v. 1) seems to imply that the Passover was usually killed half-an-hour after the 8th hour, i.e. at 2.30 P.M.<sup>1</sup>: the time however appears to have been variable; for ibid. § 3 it is merely said that if offered 'before noon,' it was not valid. (1) is the most natural explanation of the Heb. expression, and has also the support of Dt. xvi. 6: but (3) is certainly the sense that was traditionally attached to it.

7. The blood of the slain lamb to be applied to the doorposts and lintel of the house in which it is eaten,—as it were, to consecrate the house, and protect its inmates against destruction. This rite is probably a survival of an earlier, perhaps pre-Yahwistic stage, of usage. The Bedawin of the present day, when a new house is dedicated, sprinkle its doors and front with the blood of a goat slaughtered at the ceremony. See p. 411; and Lees, The Witness of the Wilderness (1909), p. 180.

8. in that (Heb. this night] the night between the 14th and the 15th. roast with fire] over the fire, on a spit, not in an oven.

unleavened cakes] not 'bread,' for the Heb. word is plural. They were a kind of biscuit, which could be baked rapidly, as for an unexpected visitor (Gen. xix. 3, Jud. vi. 19—21, 1 S. xxviii. 24), or when there was no time to use leaven (below, v. 39); and they are still the ordinary food of the Bedawin. They were used in other ritual besides that of the Passover (v. 15, xxix. 2, Lev. ii. 4, vii. 12, Nu. vi. 15 al.). Unleavened cakes are now usually made in Syria by the thin dough being clapped on to the heated interior side of the tannūr (viii. 3), after the embers have been removed: they may be thinner than pasteboard, and 1—1½ ft. in diameter (EB. s.v. BREAD; L. and B. iii. 219). The unleavened cakes made by modern Jews for the Passover are round, about ¼ in. thick, and 12 in. in diameter (Jewish Encycl. viii. 394).

<sup>1</sup> In Ex. xxix. 39, 41 'between the two evenings' is also assigned as the time at which the daily burnt-offering was to be offered: when the two collided, the daily burnt-offering was offered an hour earlier (slaughtered, half-an-hour after the 7th hour, and sacrificed half-an-hour after the 8th hour), Pes. v. 1.

For the probable reason why leavened bread was avoided, see on xxiii. 18<sup>a</sup>. In Dt. xvi. 3 the unleavened cakes (of the Passover and Mazzoth together) are called the 'bread of affliction,' and explained symbolically as a memorial of the mingled hurry and alarm (ἵππῶν) with which the Israelites left Egypt (cf. below, vv. 11, 34, 39), and as adapted to lead Israel to a grateful recollection of its deliverance.

bitter herbs] only besides Nu. ix. 11 (also of the Passover); and Lam. iii. 15 (fig. of severe suffering). LXX. πικρῶδες, which is differently explained by the ancients (see Kn. ap. Di.; Nowack, Arch. ii. 173) as meaning either wild lettuce (cf. Vulg. Lactuca agrestis) or wild endive,—both plants indigenous in Egypt and Syria. The Mishna (Pes. ii. 6) mentions five species of herbs any one of which would satisfy the present injunction: lettuce, wild endive, garden endive (?), nettles, and bitter coriander (?). The intention of the bitter herbs is uncertain: perhaps they were meant simply as a condiment, or salad: the later Jews (Gamaliel in Pesāhim x. 5; Rashi) explained them as a memorial of the Israelites' lives being 'made bitter' in bondage (ch. i. 14).

9. Eat not of it raw] lest the blood should be eaten at the same time, against the standing prohibition, Lev. vii. 26 f., xvii. 10—12, &c.

nor boiled at all with water] Sacrifices partaken of by the worshipper are elsewhere regularly represented as boiled: see (in P) Ex. xxix. 31, Lev. vi. 28, viii. 31, Nu. vi. 19; cf. also 1 S. ii. 15, Zech. xiv. 21, and the 'boiling-places' in Ezekiel's restored Temple, Ez. xlvi. 20, 24: there must thus be some reason for roasting being here so emphatically enjoined. What the reason was must remain matter of conjecture. Di. thinks that it was because in this case the fat (which might not be eaten, Lev. iii. 17, vii. 23—25, and had not, as in the case of the peace-offering, been removed previously, and burnt upon the altar, Lev. iii. 3—5, 9—11, 14—16) might drip down and be consumed in the fire. G. F. Moore, art. SACRIFICE in EB. iv. 4187, thinks it a survival of archaic usage. 'In the earliest times the carcass of the victim was probably roasted whole either over an open fire, or in a pit in the earth (as by the modern Samaritans), and the flesh sometimes eaten half raw or merely softened by fire. Dt. xvi. 7 (see RVM.) prescribes that it shall be boiled, like other sacrifices partaken of by the worshipper. This, however, did not prevail; and P preserves the primitive custom.'

its head with, &c.] i.e. it is not to be divided (like the burnt-offering, for instance, xxix. 17, Lev. i. 8, 9), but to be roasted whole (cf. v. 46).

10. Nothing of it to be left over to the morning. An injunction given generally in the case of sacrifices, and intended to guard against eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, <sup>P</sup> and your staff in your hand: and ye shall eat it in haste: <sup>12</sup> it is the LORD'S passover. For I will go through the land of Egypt in that night, and will smite all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgements: <sup>13</sup> I am the LORD. And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and there shall no plague be profanation of the sacred flesh: xxiii. 18=xxxiv. 25; Dt. xvi. 4 (of the Passover); Lev. vii. 15 (cf. v. 17).

11. The Israelites are to partake of the Passover completely prepared for their departure.

your loins girded] The long and loose robes of Orientals, when they wish to move rapidly, are fastened up round the waist with a strong girdle: cf. 1 K. xviii. 46, 2 K. iv. 29, ix. 1.

your sandals on your feet] ready for a journey. Sandals were not worn in the house.

your staff in your hand] a staff was regularly used in walking.

and ye shall eat it in trepidation] in mingled hurry and alarm. 'Haste' alone is not adequate: notice the cognate verb in Dt. xx. 3 ('tremble'), 1 S. xxiii. 26, Ps. xlvi. 5 (RVm.). Cf. the same word in Dt. xvi. 3, and Is. lii. 12 (where the coming exodus from Babylon is not to be 'in trepidation').

it is a passover (Heb. pēsah) to Jehovah. The form of sentence, as vv. 27, 42, xxix. 18<sup>a</sup>, 18<sup>b</sup>, xxx. 10, &c. In vv. 13 (see note), 23, 27, the term pēsah is explained by means of the cognate verb in the sense of a passing over (cf. Aq. here ὑπερβασις); but it is uncertain whether this is the original meaning of the term. The LXX. render by πάσχα, 'pascha,' from the Aramaic form of the word: so in NT. (e.g. Mt. xxvi. 17). The Vulg. has in the OT. Phase, in the NT. Pascha; hence our adj. 'Paschal.' On the Heb. word, see further p. 408.

12. And I will go through, &c.] cf. xi. 4.

and against, &c.] cf. Nu. xxxiii. 4 (P); for 'judgements,' also, see on vi. 6.

13. pass over] The Heb. is pāsah, cognate with pēsah, 'passover.' Except here, and vv. 23, 27, the word occurs only in Is. xxxi. 5 'As birds flying, so will Jehovah protect Jerusalem: he will protect and deliver, he will pass over and rescue.' The word is not found in this sense in the cognate languages: there is a presumption that it is the same word as pāsah, to limp (1 K. xviii. 21, 26); see p. 408.

a token] Cf. xiii. 9, 16, xxxi. 13, 17; Gen. ix. 12, 13, 17, xvii. 11; Jos. ii. 12.

plague] Heb. négeph (lit. a striking or blow), usually of a calamity inflicted on those who have aroused God's anger: xxx. 12, Nu. viii. 19,

P upon you <sup>1</sup>to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt.

And this day shall be unto you for a memorial, and ye <sup>14</sup> shall keep it a feast to the LORD: throughout your generations ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance for ever.

xvi. 46, 47, Jos. xxii. 17 (all P). Cf. the cogn. verb ('smite'), vv. 23, 27, viii. 2, xxxii. 35, Jos. xxiv. 5 ('plagued'). Not the word rendered 'plague' in xi. 1; but cognate with maggēphāh, ix. 14: see p. 58.

to destroy you] This is a paraphrase: the Heb. may be rendered either (RVm.) for a destroyer (cf. v. 23), or for destruction (cf. Ez. v. 16, ix. 6 RVm.). As P regards Jehovah as the destroyer (v. 12), the latter rend. is preferable (Di.).

On the history and significance of the Passover, see further p. 405 ff. By Di. and others the Passover is thought to have been originally a pre-Mosaic spring-offering of propitiation and communion with the Deity, offered annually for the purpose of protecting tents and flocks from pestilence or other misfortune during the coming year, and of renewing by the common sacred meal a sense of communion with the Deity: the observance was gradually associated by tradition with the deliverance of Israel from the plague which attacked the Egyptians; and it thus became an annual commemoration of the Exodus.

14—20. Regulations for the pilgrimage of Mazzoth (or Unleavened Cakes) according to P. Unless the writer has expressed himself loosely, vv. 14—20 can hardly be the original sequel of vv. 1—13: as Di. observes, not only is there nothing in vv. 1—13 to which 'this day' in vv. 14, 17 can refer, but a memorial day (v. 14) would not be appointed before the event which it was to commemorate had taken place, and v. 17 speaks of this as past: it is possible, therefore, that in the original text of P vv. 14—20 stood somewhere after v. 41, perhaps before v. 50. The feast of Mazzoth, though it followed immediately after the Passover, was quite distinct from it (Lev. xxiii. 5, 6): it lasted (v. 15) seven days. Its original intention was in all probability to celebrate the beginning of harvest: cf. p. 241, and on xxiii. 15<sup>a</sup>.

14. this day] not, as might seem at first sight, the 14th of the month, the day on which the Passover was observed, but the 15th, the first day of the feast of Mazzoth.

a memorial] viz. of the Exodus (v. 17): 'memorial,' as Nu. xvi. 40, Jos. iv. 7.

a feast] a pilgrimage (see on v. 1): as xxiii. 15, 17 shew, a pilgrimage to a sanctuary was an essential feature in the feast of Mazzoth.

throughout your generations...an ordinance for ever] both standing expressions of P. 'Ordinance for ever' (hok 'ōlām, also rendered 'statute for ever,' 'perpetual statute') recurs v. 17, xxvii. 21, xxviii. 43, xxix. 9, and 17 times in Lev., Nu. 'Generations' (dōrōth) means successive generations: cf. v. 42, xxvii. 21, xxx. 10, 21, xxxi. 13, 16, xl. 15.

- 15 Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses: for whosoever eateth leavened bread from the first day until the 16 seventh day, that soul shall be cut off from Israel. And in

15. Seven days] from the 15th to the 21st of the first month. unleavened cakes] See on v. 8. So vv. 17, 18, 20 (on v. 39, see note).

even] rather, surely: cf. in the Heb. xxxi. 13, Lev. xxiii. 27, 39, Nu. i. 49.

put away] Heb. make to cease. The later Hebrews were very punctilious in carrying out this injunction; and even before the Passover (which was also eaten with unleavened cakes, v. 8), the house was elaborately searched with candles in order to discover and remove any 'leaven' (i.e. fermented dough, or certain articles made of fermented grain: see EB. iii. 2753) that might be in it (Pesâhim i.—iii.). See an illustration of the search for leaven, from a drawing of 1725, in the Jewish Encyclopaedia, ix. 548; or, on a smaller scale, in Oesterley and Box, The Religion and Worship of the Synagogue (1907), p. 210.

leaven] Heb. s<sup>o</sup>br,—in practice (see LEAVEN in EB.; cf. i. 604), a piece of sour (i.e. fermented) dough, reserved for the purpose from the previous day's baking.

Leaven was regarded as produced by corruption (cf. on xxiii. 18<sup>a</sup>, and Plut. Quaest. Rom. 109 'Now leaven is itself the offspring of corruption, and corrupts the lump (φύραμα) with which it is mixed'); and so in the NT. it becomes a figure of corrupt teaching or practice, Mt. xvi. 6 (=Mk. viii. 15=Lk. xii. 1), 11: St Paul twice quotes the saying, 'A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump' (1 Cor. v. 6, Gal. v. 9), with reference to moral corruption: and in 1 Cor. v. 7, 8, with evident reference to the injunction here, bids Christians 'clear away the old leaven,' and 'keep the feast' of their Passover, Christ (i.e. live the Christian life), with the 'unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.'

that soul shall be cut off from Israel] a formula, with slight variations (as he or that man for that soul; and from his father's kin or from the congregation for from Israel), very common in P: v. 19, Gen. xvii. 14, Ex. xxx. 37, 38, xxxi. 14, Lev. vii. 20, 21, 25, 27, xvii. 4, 9, xviii. 29, xix. 8, xx. 17, 18, xxii. 3, xxiii. 29, Nu. ix. 13, xv. 30, 31, xix. 13, 20† (cf. with the first person, I will cut off..., Lev. xvii. 10, xx. 3, 5, 6†; I will destroy..., Lev. xxiii. 30†). The offence for which this is the penalty is usually neglect of some ceremonial observance, and only occasionally a moral offence, or idolatry. The punishment intended is not death by the civil power (which would be out of the question in many of the cases in which 'cutting off' is prescribed, and which is moreover denoted regularly by the formula, 'shall be put to death'), but excommunication (cf. Ezr. x. 8), combined with a threat of divine interposition to root out the evil-doer, as is clear from the variants in which the first person is used (Di. on Gen. xvii. 14).

P the first day there shall be to you an holy convocation, and in the seventh day an holy convocation; no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every man must eat, that only may be done of you. And ye shall observe the 17 feast of unleavened bread; for in this selfsame day have I brought your hosts out of the land of Egypt: therefore shall ye observe this day throughout your generations by an ordinance for ever. In the first month, on the fourteenth 18 day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even. Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses: 19 for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be

16. On the first and seventh day there was also to be a 'holy convocation,' i.e. an assembly at the sanctuary for religious purposes. The expression occurs besides only in the two calendars of P, Lev. xxiii. 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 21, 24, 27, 35, 36, 37, Nu. xxviii. 18, 25, 26, xxix. 1, 7, 12; and, without 'holy,' Is. i. 13, iv. 5 (EVV., each time, 'assemblies'). The assembly was 'called' together by silver trumpets (see Nu. x. 2 [where 'calling' is in the Heb. the same as 'convocation' here], 3, 7, cf. 10): Kalisch reminds us how in Mohammedan countries festivals are announced by heralds from conspicuous places, especially the towers of mosques.

save that which, &c.] The prohibition of work was thus not as strict as for the sabbath (xvi. 23, xxxv. 3), or the day of atonement (Lev. xxiii. 28). Cf. Lev. xxiii. 7, 8.

17—20. The essential parts of the institution repeated and insisted on again, in P's manner; see on vi. 27.

17. selfsame day] A peculiar expression,—lit. the bone (i.e. the substance) of the day, the day itself, the very day (cf. xxiv. 10 'the heaven itself,' and Job xxi. 23 Heb.),—found only in P (vv. 41, 47, 51, Gen. vii. 13, xvii. 23, 26 al.) and Ezek. (ii. 3, xxiv. 2, xl. 1).

have I brought forth, &c. The pilgrimage is to be observed in commemoration of the day of the Exodus from Egypt. Cf. v. 14<sup>a</sup>.

your hosts] P pictures the Israel of the Exodus as a vast army: see on vi. 26.

18. The more precise determination of the '7 days' of v. 15. They were to begin with the evening of the day on which the Passover was killed, and to last till the evening of the 21st day.

19. Repeated, with slight alterations of phraseology, from v. 15, and with the new regulation that what has been laid down is to apply equally to the 'sojourner,' or resident foreigner (see on v. 48), and to the native Israelite.

20 a sojourner, or one that is born in the land. Ye shall eat P nothing leavened; in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.

21 Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel, and said J unto them, <sup>1</sup>Draw out, and take you <sup>2</sup>lambs according to your families, and kill the passover. And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the 20. in all your habitations] i.e. throughout the land generally. Another of P's standing expressions: xxxv. 3, Lev. iii. 17, vii. 26, xxiii. 3, 14, 21, 31, Nu. xxxv. 29; cf. Ez. vi. 6, 14.

21—27 (J). Moses gives the people directions for the observance of the Passover. As Di. has shewn, the passage cannot be the real sequel to vv. 1—13. Moses does not here repeat to the elders, even in an abridged form, the injunctions before received by him; but while, with the one exception of the application of the blood to the lintel and side posts of the door, nearly all of the many particulars laid down in vv. 1—13 are omitted, fresh points (the hyssop, the basin, none to leave the house till the morning), not mentioned before, are added. The inference is irresistible that xii. 21—23 is really part of a different account (i.e. J's) of the institution of the Passover, which 'stands to xii. 3—13 in the same relation in which the regulations respecting Mazoth in xiii. 3—10 stand to those in xii. 14—20' (Di. p. 100; ed. 2, p. 111).

21. Draw out] viz. out of the folds. The intrans. sense Move along (RVm. 'Go forth' is much too free), viz. (Di.) to your several homes, to get the lambs, found in Jud. iv. 6, v. 14 (perhaps), xx. 37, Job xxi. 33, is here scarcely suitable.

according to your families] If the writer were the same as in vv. 1—13, it is hardly likely that he would represent Moses, when communicating his instructions to the people, as taking no notice of the particulars on which such stress is laid in vv. 4—6.

the passover] See on v. 12. The word is introduced here as if the institution were already well known.

22. hyssop] A small plant, growing out of walls (1 K. iv. 33), a wisp of which was well adapted for sprinkling, and is accordingly prescribed to be used in various purificatory rites (Lev. xiv. 4, 6, 49—51, Nu. xix. 6, 18 [Heb. ix. 19]: cf. Ps. li. 7). What plant the 'hyssop' is, is, however, disputed; but it is in any case not our hyssop (Hyssopus officinalis, Linn.), which is not a native of Palestine. Saadiah (10 cent.) rendered by sa'tar, i.e. some species of satureia, or (as Kimchi explains) origanum, marjoram; so also Abul-Walid, Maimonides, Kimchi; and this explanation is adopted by Ges., Di., and others. The Pesh. supha also means the same plant (Löw, Aram. Pflanzennamen, No. 93)<sup>1</sup>.

basin, and strike the lintel and the two side posts with the blood that is in the basin; and none of you shall go out of the door of his house until the morning. For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you. And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever. And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land which the LORD will give you, according as he hath

Post (DB. s.v.) thinks that the particular species meant is the Origanum Maru, Linn. This grows in clefts of rocks, in chinks of old walls, and on the terrace walls throughout Palestine: it has straight, slender, leafy stalks, with small heads, several of the stalks growing from one root, so that a bunch or wisp suitable for sprinkling a liquid with could readily be broken off. Tristram (NHB. 456 ff.) argues in favour of the Caper (Capparis spinosa), a bright green creeper, which climbs out of fissures of rocks in the Sinaitic valleys, and hangs in abundance from the walls of Jerusalem, and the stalks of which, bearing from three to five blossoms each, would likewise be suitable for the same purpose; but the former interpretation has very strong support in ancient tradition, and there appears to be no sufficient reason for deserting it<sup>1</sup>.

John xix. 29 ἡσάπρω περιθίντες (where Mt. xxvii. 48 = Mk. xv. 36 have περιθεῖς καλάμῳ) does not seem to have any bearing on the question which plant is meant. Different traditions may have been current; or the term 'reed' may have been used widely to denote the stalk of either marjoram, which may reach to 3 ft. (Löw, p. 16), or the caper.

The tenth plague, like the preceding ones, has also its connexion with the natural conditions of the country. Malignant epidemics are of not unfrequent occurrence in Egypt; and Di. quotes from Kn. (see also DB. iii. 892<sup>b</sup>) numerous references to travellers and others, who state that they usually break out in spring, and are often worse at the time of the Hamsin wind (see on x. 23; and cf. Lane, Mod. Eg.<sup>5</sup> i. 2); they are also sometimes accompanied by very great mortality. But, as Di.

And the <sup>33</sup> Egyptians were urgent upon the people, to send them out of the land in haste; for they said, We be all dead men. continues, 'the plague here, by its momentary suddenness, as also by its carrying off as its victims exclusively the first-born of the Egyptians, bears a wholly supernatural character. This particular form of the tradition (Sage) evidently first arose partly through the influence of the Isr. spring-offering of the Passover, partly through that of the Isr. custom of dedicating the first-born, which together brought into the tradition the sparing of the houses and first-born of the Israelites, and transformed the Egyptians who perished in the plague into first-born' (Di. on v. 29, slightly abridged). Cf. pp. 410, 412.

31, 32. The Pharaoh hastily summons Moses and Aaron, and gives permission for the people to go and serve Yahweh with their flocks and herds, as they had requested. 'The passage has sometimes been deemed inconsistent with x. 29. But there is a difference between seeking an audience to demand leave to depart or threaten chastisement, and response to the urgent summons of the stricken king' (C.-H.).

31. as ye have said] iii. 18, v. 3, vii. 16 (all J). It seems therefore (Di.) that the Pharaoh only gives leave for a temporary absence.

32. as ye have said] See x. 9, 26 (J).

and bless me also] viz. at the festival which you are about to hold: include me as well as yourselves in the blessings which you will then invoke.

33. We be all dead men] cf. (though the terms are milder) x. 7.

34. The people had not time to leaven their dough, but took it with them before it was leavened. The notice, taken in conjunction with the one in v. 39, is evidently intended as an explanation of the origin of the Mazzoth-feast: cf. Dt. xvi. 3; and p. 91, above.

in their clothes] rather, in their mantles. The simlāh was the large square outer garment, made of woollen cloth, which served as a covering by night (ch. xxii. 26 f.), and was also often used for carrying things in (Jud. viii. 25, Ru. iii. 15). See DRESS 3 b in DB. (i. 625).

36. let them have] lit. let them ask (viz. successfully), i.e. granted them, let them have, not necessarily 'lent' them. So 1 S. i. 28 (lit. 'let one ask him for Jehovah'), the correlative of 'ask' in vv. 17, 27, as of the same word here in v. 35. Still, it is remarkable that the ordinary word for 'gave' is not used: and it cannot be denied that 'let ask' may, as in Syriac (Luke xi. 5 Pesh.), have had in Heb. the meaning lent. In this case, we must suppose that the things were 'lent' for use at the festival in the wilderness; Pharaoh's subsequent pursuit of the Israelites put their return out of the question, and so they 'spoiled' the Egyptians (Ewald, Hist. ii. 66). Dillm. writes: 'In reality the fundamental idea of the narrative is this: God, in His contest for the oppressed and against the oppressor, brings it about by His judgments that the enemy is obliged not only to allow the people to hold their festival in the wilderness, but also at their request to provide them willingly with garments and ornaments to wear at it (cf. on iii. 21 f.); and eventually even to give these things up to them, as lawful spoil, and also, probably, as a reward for long and hard service (so Jubilees xlvi. 18, Philo, Vit. Mos. i. p. 103, Clem. Al. Strom. i. p. 345, Iren. iv. 49, and other Fathers), and as partial compensation for what the Hebrews left behind them in Egypt.'

Succoth] No doubt the Eg. Thke, with the determinative of a foreign place, prob. (Griffith) a foreign name, the sing. of Succoth, 'Booths,' and to be read Thukke. Thukke is often mentioned in inscriptions found at Tell el-Maskhuta (= Pithom: see on i. 11); and seems to have been both a name of Pithom itself, the capital of the nome (so in these inscriptions, and in the geographical lists), and also to have denoted the region surrounding Pithom (so in the Anastasi papyri, dating from Dyn. xix., in which it has moreover the determinative of a borderland inhabited by foreigners): see Naville, Pithom, ed. 4, pp. 6, 7<sup>b</sup>; cf. W. Max Müller, EB. ii. 1436, and s.v. PITHOM. Indeed Dillm. (on Ex. xiv. 2) had already, before Naville's discoveries, pointed out that this was the situation required for Succoth.

six hundred thousand] The same number is given in Nu. xi. 21 (also J). If it stood alone, it might be understood as a round number, current traditionally, for a very high figure: but P commits himself to J men, beside children. And a mixed multitude went up<sup>38</sup> also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle. details, giving the numbers of the various tribes, the whole number being, at the first census in the wilderness (Nu. i. 46), 603,550 males above 20 years old, besides 22,000 Levites above one month old, or 8580 between 30 and 50 years old (Nu. iii. 39, iv. 48). 600,000 men implies a total, including women and children, of at least 2,000,000 souls. These numbers are incredible: they are not consistent either with the limits of Goshen<sup>1</sup>, or (as has been most recently shewn by Petrie, Researches in Sinai, 1907, pp. 206—8) with the number that could be maintained in the Sinaitic Peninsula (similarly Di. Numbers, p. 6)<sup>2</sup>: the details given by P are, moreover, inconsistent and impossible in themselves (see G. B. Gray, Numbers, pp. 12—15). The figures do not come to us from eye-witnesses; and tradition, in the course of years, greatly exaggerated the numbers of the Israelites at the Exodus.

38. a great mixed multitude] cf. Nu. xi. 4 (the Heb. word different). Non-Israelites (cf. the same word in Neh. xiii. 3) of various kinds are meant: e.g. Egyptians who had intermarried with Israelites (cf. Lev. xxiv. 10), other Semites who had found their way into Egypt, and prisoners taken in war who had been employed in the corvée (i. 9).

<sup>2</sup> Petrie's own solution of the difficulty (that 'eleph in the lists in Numbers has been understood wrongly in the sense of 'thousand' instead of in that of 'family') is improbable in itself ('eleph' itself meaning 'clan' rather than 'family,' and even in that sense being very rare, and never occurring in statistical lists), besides leaving many passages unexplained. <sup>2</sup> Or, this same night is a night of watching unto the LORD for all &c.

Whether it is historically correct is more than we can say: not only is Egyptian chronology itself uncertain, but we do not know the Egyptian king under whom Jacob went down into Egypt; hence we have no independent data for fixing with precision the interval between Jacob's migration into Egypt and the Exodus. The chronology of P (from whom all systematic dates in the Pent. are derived) is artificial, and in many of its particulars entirely undeserving of confidence: still this figure may itself be correct. It is however inconsistent with the many passages of P (see on vi. 27), which place Moses and his contemporaries in the fourth generation from Jacob's sons. P himself may have been unconscious of the inconsistency; for he may have reckoned—of course, falsely—a generation at 100 years (cf. Gen. xv. 16, comp. with 13). In a later age it appears to have been noticed; and in all probability the reading of LXX. Sam. here 'in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, was 430 years,' originated in an endeavour to lessen it: for, as the period from Abraham's migration into Canaan to Jacob's descent into Egypt was (according to P) 215 years (Gen. xii. 4, xxi. 5, xxv. 26, xlvii. 9), this reading reduces the period of the sojourn in Egypt to half of that stated in the Heb. text. The reading of Sam. LXX. was followed by St Paul in Gal. iii. 17, by Jos. Ant. ii. 15. 2, and by many ancient Jewish and Christian authorities; but it cannot be the original text; not only has Israel's sojourn in Egypt alone to do with the present context, but until the birth of Jacob's sons there were no 'children of Israel' to dwell in Canaan at all. Cf. the Intro. p. xlv.

41. the selfsame day] See on v. 17.

the hosts of Jehovah] cf. v. 17; and see on vi. 26.

42. The night is to be observed in perpetuity as a night of watching, or of vigil, unto Jehovah; cf. Is. xxx. 29. Both the margins are preferable to the text. ↳, however, cannot mean for (i.e., apparently, in return for), though it might mean with regard to; but its natural meaning here would be in order to; hence Bu. Bâ. may be right in rendering, A night of watching was it for Yahweh to bring them out, &c.; Jehovah Himself was on the watch that night to protect His people from the destroyer, and to bring them safely out of Egypt: v. 41<sup>b</sup> will then be a later addition, transforming the night of vigil kept by Jehovah, into a night of vigil kept to Him (cf. Nowack, Arch. ii. 149). throughout your generations. See on v. 14.

P And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, 'This is the ordinance of the passover: there shall no alien eat thereof: but every man's servant that is bought for money, when thou hast circumcised him, then shall he eat thereof. A sojourner and an hired servant shall not eat thereof. In one house shall it be eaten; thou shalt not carry forth aught of the 43—51 (P). Regulations respecting the Passover, supplementary to those in vv. 1—13, and intended principally to define what persons were or were not authorised to eat it. No foreigner, temporary 'settler,' or (foreign) hired servant is to eat of it: a slave, and a 'sojourner,' i.e. a protected foreigner, when they have been circumcised, may eat of it (vv. 43—45, 48 f.).

43. no alien] or foreigner, i.e. a foreigner temporarily resident in Israel. It was a distinctively Israelitish observance.

44. But a foreigner, bought as a slave into an Israelitish family, may eat of it, if he is made a member of the Isr. community by circumcision. Slaves were regarded as members of the family, and, as such, were circumcised (Gen. xvii. 12, 13, P), so that they might join in the family religious rites. 'That is bought for money' distinguishes the slave here referred to from the slave 'born in the house' (cf. Gen. xvii. 12, 23, 27), i.e. born of parents who were themselves slaves in the same establishment: a slave of the latter kind would, as a matter of course, be circumcised, and have a right to partake of the Passover.

45. The settler (tôshâb) and hired servant are not to eat of it. The technical distinction between the tôshâb and the gêr (v. 48) is not altogether clear. To judge from the etymology, the tôshâb was a foreigner, more permanently 'settled' in Israel than an ordinary gêr, and also perhaps (Lev. xxii. 10, xxv. 6) more definitely attached to a particular family (LXX. usually πάροικος), but, like the gêr, without civil rights, and dependent for his position on the good-will of his patronus (cf. Gen. xxiii. 4, Lev. xxv. 23, Ps. xxxix. 12, 1 Ch. xxix. 15): the word also occurs Lev. xxv. 35, 40, 45, 47 (twice), Nu. xxxv. 15. RV. 'sojourner,' except Lev. xxv. 6, 45 'stranger.' See further Bertholet, Die Stellung der Isr. zu den Fremden (1896), p. 157 ff. (cf. 172 f.), Bâ. p. 107, EB. iv. 4818. The 'hired servant' is associated, as here, in Lev. xxii. 10, xxv. 6, 40, with the tôshâb, and in Lev. xxii. 10 with the gêr as well, as having both similar disqualifications, and (xxv. 39 f.) similar rights; evidently he is to be thought of as a foreigner (cf. Lev. xxv. 6 'that sojourn with thee'), whose rights are limited, and who is hired by his master, for fixed wages, for a longer or a shorter time. Why the same permission is not given to the 'settler' as to the 'sojourner' (v. 48) to partake of the Passover, if he is circumcised, is more apparent; perhaps (cf. Bertholet, 159) he is included in v. 48 in the more general term gêr (cf. Lev. xxv. 6 end).

46. Three regulations designed to emphasize the unity of the company partaking of each passover (cf. vv. 4, 9; 1 Cor. x. 17): one lamb was flesh abroad out of the house; neither shall ye break a bone <sup>P</sup> thereof. All the congregation of Israel shall <sup>1</sup>keep it. And when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: but no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof. One law shall be to him that is homeborn, and always to be eaten in one house; no part of the flesh was to be carried out of the house; and (in dressing the Paschal lamb) no bone in it was to be broken (cf. Nu. ix. 12; also John xix. 36, Ps. xxxiv. 20).

47. All Israelites are to keep the Passover (cf. Nu. ix. 13).

hold it] Heb. do it: not in the sacrif. sense noticed on x. 25, but in that of hold, keep: so v. 48, Nu. ix. 2—6, Dt. xvi. 1 al., and ποιεῖν Mt. xxvi. 18, Heb. xi. 28; cf. with pilgrimage, ch. xxxiv. 22, Dt. xvi. 10, 13, 1 K. viii. 65, and with sabbath, ch. xxxi. 16, Dt. v. 15.

48. The 'stranger,' or, better, sojourner, Heb. gēr, i.e. the protected foreigner, if he is circumcised, may keep the Passover. The gēr was like the Arab jār, i.e. 'a man of another tribe or district, who coming to sojourn in a place where he was not strengthened by the presence of his own kin, put himself under the protection of a clan or of a powerful chief' (W. R. Smith, Relig. of the Semites, p. 75 f.; cf. his Kinship and Marriage in Early Arabia, pp. 41—43). 'Stranger' is the conventional rendering of gēr; but it is inadequate: a better word would be sojourner, which would also preserve the connexion with the corresponding verb in such passages as v. 49, Gen. xii. 10, xix. 9, xlvii. 4. In the legislation of JE and Deut. the gēr has no legal status in Israel, and is represented as liable to oppression (Ex. xxii. 21, xxiii. 9, Dt. i. 16, &c.): in P (cf. Ez. xlvii. 22) he is placed on practically the same footing as the native Israelite, he enjoys the same rights (Nu. xxxv. 15 'for the sojourner and for the settler' [above, on v. 45]; Lev. xix. 34 'thou shalt love him as thyself'), and is bound by the same laws (ch. xii. 19, Lev. xvi. 29, xvii. 8, 10, 12, 13, 15, xviii. 26, xx. 2, xxii. 18, xxiv. 16); the principle, 'One law shall there be for the homeborn and for the gēr,' is repeatedly affirmed (ch. xii. 49, Lev. xxiv. 22, Nu. ix. 14, xv. 15, 16, 29). Indeed, in P the term is already on the way to assume the later technical sense of 'proselyte,' the foreigner who, being circumcised and observing the law generally, is in full religious communion with Israel.

come near] to take part in the sacred rite. So often in P, as xl. 32, Lev. ix. 5, 7, 8 (EVV. 'draw near'), xxi. 17 f. ('approach'), Nu. xvi. 40.

one that is born in] lit. a native of; the word, when standing alone, is rendered homeborn (v. 49). It denotes the native Israelite, as distinct, especially, from the gēr, or foreigner settled in Israel; cf. v. 19, Lev. xvi. 29, xvii. 15, xviii. 26, xix. 34, xxiii. 42, xxiv. 16, 22, Nu. ix. 14, xv. 13, 29, 30.

P unto the stranger that sojourneth among you. Thus did all the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they. And it came to pass the selfsame day that the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt by their hosts.

P And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, Sanctify unto me all the firstborn, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and of beast: it is mine.

49. Cf. Lev. xxiv. 22, Nu. ix. 14, xv. 15, 16, 29.

50. Thus did, &c.] The words seem unsuitable where they stand; for as the passover had been already eaten (v. 28), the injunction given in vv. 43—49 could not possibly now be at once carried out. Perhaps (Di.) they were once preceded by vv. 14—20 (see on these verses).

51. A repetition of the substance of v. 41<sup>b</sup> (cf. vi. 30 repeated from vi. 12), intended seemingly to close the account of the departure from Egypt.

xiii. 1, 2. P's law of the sanctity of the firstborn. The firstborn in Israel, both of men and cattle, were sacred to Jehovah. Here the principle is stated in its most general form: special details, not always consistent, are given elsewhere. In the 'Book of the Covenant' (E), see xxii. 29<sup>b</sup>, 30: in xiii. 12 f. (|| xxxiv. 19 f.: both J), it is provided that only firstborn males are to be Jehovah's, that the firstborn among men are to be redeemed, and the firstling of an ass (as an unclean animal) to be either redeemed by a lamb or killed; other firstlings are sacrificed to Jehovah (v. 15). In Dt. xv. 19—23, the firstling males of the herd and of the flock, if free from defect, are to be sacrificed at the central sanctuary, and the flesh eaten by the owner and his household at a sacred meal (cf. xii. 6 f., 17 f., xiv. 23): in Nu. xviii. 15—18 (P) the firstborn of men and unclean beasts generally are to be redeemed, the former at 5 shekels a head; the firstling of ox, sheep, or goat is to be sacrificed, the flesh being—not the owner's, as in Dt. xv. 19—23, but—the perquisite of the priests: the two laws evidently reflect the usage of two different periods of the history (see the writer's Deut. p. 187). According to the (unhistorical) representation of P, the Levites, at the first census in the wilderness, were taken by Jehovah in lieu of the firstborn of the other tribes, Nu. iii. 11—13, 40—51, viii. 16—18. Both J (or J<sup>E</sup>) and P assign as the ground of the custom the fact that Jehovah slew the firstborn of the Egyptians, both man and beast (xii. 12, 29), at the Exodus,—the former (ch. xiii. 15) making it a memorial of the event, and the latter stating that Jehovah then 'sanctified' to Himself all the firstborn in Israel, both man and beast, Nu. iii. 13, viii. 17 (P). On the question whether this was the real origin of the custom, see p. 409 f.

2. whatsoever openeth] i.e. first openeth; Heb. péter, a technical term: so vv. 12, 13 (|| xxxiv. 19, 20), 15; Nu. iii. 12, viii. 16, xviii. 15; Ez. xx. 26†. The law is cited (but not verbally) in Luke ii. 23.

3 And Moses said unto the people, Remember this day, J in which ye came out from Egypt, out of the house of 1 bondage; for by strength of hand the LORD brought you out from this place: there shall no leavened bread be eaten.
 4 This day ye go forth in the month Abib. And it shall be 5 when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Amorite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite, which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee, a land flowing with milk and honey, that thou

3—16. Moses' promulgation to the people of directions respecting
 (a) Mazzoth, vv. 3—10, and (b) the sanctity of the firstborn, vv. 11—16.
 Both passages approximate in style and tone to Deuteronomy (cf. on xii.
 25—27<sup>a</sup>); and it is probable that they are both parenthetic expansions, by the compiler of JE, of a simpler original in J, contained perhaps in vv. 3<sup>a</sup> (to people), 4, 6—7, 10, 12—13.

(a) 3—10. Mazzoth. Regulations respecting Mazzoth have already been given to Moses by Jehovah in xii. 14—20 (P); but the differences, both material (no mention of a 'holy convocation,' with restrictions from work, on the 1st and 7th days; different name, 'Abib,' for the month; the 7th, not the 1st day, the 'pilgrimage') and linguistic, shew that the regulations found here cannot be by the same writer, but that they have been taken by the compiler from the source J. Cf. the note on xii. 21—27.

3—4. No leavened bread to be eaten on the day of the Exodus.

3. this day] i.e. the 15th of Abib.

house of bondage (lit. of bondmen or slaves)] so v. 14, xx. 2; and hence often in Dt. (v. 6 [= Ex. xx. 2], vi. 12, vii. 8, viii. 14, xiii. 5, 10), and Jos. xxiv. 17 (D<sup>2</sup>); also Mic. vi. 4†. The expression means a place in which slaves are confined (Lat. ergastulum), such as Egypt was to the Hebrews in bondage.

strength of hand] so vv. 14, 16†. The usual expression is a strong hand (v. 9): see on vi. 1.

4. ye go forth] lit. are going forth. The Exodus is represented as in process of taking place. The participle is constantly used similarly in Deuteronomy.

the month of Abib, i.e. the month of fresh young ears (Lev. ii. 14 Heb.); mentioned again in xxiii. 15=xxxiv. 18, Dt. xvi. 1†. It is the old Canaanitish name of the month called by P the 'first month' (see on xii. 2).

 Canaan.

Thou shalt keep this service in this month. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the LORD. Unleavened bread shall be eaten throughout the seven days; and there shall no leavened bread be seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee, in all thy borders. And thou shalt tell thy son in that day, saying, It is because of that which the LORD did for me when I came forth out of Egypt. And it shall be for a sign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial

[this service] as prescribed in vv. 6, 7.

6. Unleavened cakes to be eaten for 7 days (xii. 15), with a hag on the 7th day. In P the hag is on the first day, and there is a 'holy convocation,' with restrictions from work, on the 1st and 7th days: xii. 14, 16, Lev. xxiii. 6—8. On the use of unleavened cakes in general, see on xii. 8; on their use in this observance, see pp. 241, 242.

8. The children to be instructed (cf. on xii. 26) on the meaning of the festival: it is to remind Israel in perpetuity of the duties which it owes to Jehovah, in gratitude for its deliverance out of Egypt.

9. It is to have the same value as a religious mark branded or tattooed upon the hand, or as a memorial-token marked (or worn) upon the forehead, to keep Jehovah's law in Israel's continual remembrance, and remind Israel of its duty towards Him; cf. v. 16. The reference here and v. 16 being to observances, the expressions cannot be meant literally (cf. Prov. i. 9, iii. 3, vi. 21, vii. 3): on Dt. vi. 8, xi. 18, see below, on v. 16.

[sign] The allusion is doubtless to the practice, not uncommon among primitive races, of 'tattooing or branding various parts of the body with the name or symbol of the deity to whom one wishes to dedicate oneself, and whose protection it is desired to secure' (DB. iii. 871<sup>b</sup>): cf. Hdt. ii. 113 (στυγυατα λεπα on a person taking asylum, as a mark of dedication to the deity), 1 K. xx. 41, Lucian, de Dea Syria, 59 (στυγυατα on the neck and wrists of the priests), 3 Macc. ii. 29; and expressions suggested by the same custom in Is. xliv. 5 (RVm.), xlix. 16<sup>a</sup>, Ez. ix. 4, 6 (hence Psalms of Sol. xv. 8, 10), Gal. vi. 7 (στυγυατα), Rev. vii. 3 f., xiii. 16 f.: see further CUTTINGS IN THE FLESH (Lev. xix. 28, xxi. 5) in DB. or EB. In Israel the regular observance of Mazoth is to serve the same purpose as such a religious mark in other ancient cults: it is to be an outward and visible token of the connexion subsisting between Israel and its God.

[memorial] This might either be a synonym of 'sign,' or denote some sacred badge worn upon the forehead ('between the eyes,' as Dt. xiv. 1). The word is often used of an object employed to preserve a religious in thy mouth] that thou mayest be ever talking of it (cf. for the thought Dt. vi. 7, xi. 19, Jos. i. 8 [D<sup>2</sup>]). The passage cannot refer simply to vv. 6, 7, but must have been written at a time when a considerable body of 'Jehovah's law,' or 'direction' (see p. 161 f.), existed.

for &c.] and consequently has the strongest claims upon thy obedience.

10. Thou shalt therefore keep] Heb. And thou shalt keep.

in its season] in the month of Abib (v. 4); cf. xxiii. 15, where the same Hebrew word is rendered 'in the time appointed of the month of Abib.'

from year to year] מִיָּמִים יָמִים: so Jud. xi. 40, xxi. 19, 1 S. i. 3, ii. 19†.

(b) 11—18. Firstborn males, both of man and beast, to belong to Jehovah. The firstling of an ass is to be either redeemed by a lamb or killed; the firstborn of men are also to be redeemed: other firstlings were sacrificed to Jehovah. Like vv. 3—10, an older law of J (v. 12f., cf. xxxiv. 19f.) in a parenetic setting. 'The passage is related to v. 1f.
 (P) as vv. 3—10 (J) are related to xii. 14—20 (P), and xii. 21—27 (J) to xii. 2—13 (P)' (Di.).

11. See on v. 5.

12. thou shalt cause to pass over unto Jehovah] The word is not the ordinary Heb. for 'set apart'; and its use here is remarkable. In Nu. xxvii. 7f. (P); cf. 2 S. iii. 10, it is indeed used in the simple sense of transferring or making over (an inheritance): but it is also the word regularly used of causing to pass over children in fire to Molech (2 K.
 xvi. 3, Ez. xx. 31 al.), and with 'to Molech' alone, Lev. xviii. 21 (H), Jer. xxxii. 35, cf. Ez. xvi. 21, xxiii. 37 ('to them,' i.e. to the idols), and esp. xx. 25, 26 (the same expression as here) 'in that they caused to pass over (viz. in the fire) all that first openeth the womb.' It may be (cf.
 p. 409) that this heathen practice determined the use of the same verb here: Jehovah claimed the firstborn; and the Israelite was to cause his firstborn to pass over to Him: the child was not, however, retained by Him, or offered to Him as a sacrifice, but was to be 'redeemed' by its father (v. 13).

and every firstling, &c.] lit. and all that first openeth [the womb], (even) the casting (רָצַף) of beasts, that thou shalt have: shéger (the root is preserved in the Aram. shégar, to 'cast'), denotes a newly born animal, Dt. vii. 13, xxviii. 4, 18, 51†. The 'beasts' meant (as the parallel, xxxiv. 19, states explicitly) are ox and sheep.

13. The ass, not less than the ox and sheep, was a common domestic animal (xx. 17, xxii. 9, 10, &c.): but it was regarded as 'unclean' (the terms of Lev. xi. 3 P exclude it from the 'clean' animals), and could not consequently be either eaten, or offered in sacrifice (Lev. i. 2, xxii. 19). Nevertheless its firstling was claimed by Jehovah, and could only be retained for its owner's use by being redeemed with a lamb. 'The present law must date from a time when the ass was the only unclean domestic animal: the later, but juristically more exact P, puts for it (Lev. xxvii. 27, Nu. xviii. 15) unclean beast generally' (Di.). The lamb would be of less value than the ass: the provision of Lev. xxvii. 27, which prescribes that the firstling of an unclean animal, unless it is sold, is to be valued, and redeemed at  $1\frac{1}{2}$  of its valuation, is more favourable to the priests.

redeem] Heb. pādāh (not gā'al, as vi. 6), the word used regularly of redeeming a person, or animal, from death or servitude (cf. xxi. 8, and, as here, Nu. xviii. 15—17, Lev. xxvii. 27<sup>a</sup>; also 1 S. xiv. 45, Ps. xlix. 7, 15).

lamb] marg. Or, kid: see on xii. 3.

break its neck] Unless redeemed, it could not be retained for use by its owner. It was not to be killed by shedding of blood, because in old Israel 'the slaughter of an animal in the ordinary way implied a sacrifice, which was impossible in the case of an ass' (Bä.).

all the firstborn of man, &c.] The price of their redemption is not fixed: perhaps in early times it varied (as offerings also did, Dt. xvi. 10, 16f.), according to the position and circumstances of the father. In a later age, the price was fixed definitely at 5 shekels a head (Nu. xviii. 15, cf. iii. 12, viii. 18,—all P).

14—15. The children to be instructed (as in v. 8) on the meaning of the observance: it is a memorial of the deliverance from Egypt, and of Jehovah's slaughter of the firstborn of the Egyptians at the time.

14. in time to come] Heb. to-morrow: so Gen. xxx. 33, Dt. vi. 20, Jos. iv. 6, 21, xxii. 24, 27, 28†.

By strength of hand, &c.] See on v. 3.

 came to pass, when Pharaoh <sup>2</sup>would hardly let us go, that the LORD slew all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both the firstborn of man, and the firstborn of beast: therefore I sacrifice to the LORD all that openeth the womb, being 16 males; but all the firstborn of my sons I redeem. And it shall be for a sign upon thine hand, and for frontlets between thine eyes: for by strength of hand the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt.

15. would hardly, &c.] Heb. dealt hardly in letting us go (or made it hard to let us go), i.e. made difficulties in letting us go: cf., for the Heb., Gen. xxxv. 16.

16. Like Mazgoth (v. 9), the redemption of the firstborn is to serve the same purpose as a ritual mark, or badge, in reminding Israel constantly of what Jehovah had done for them.

frontlets] Heb. šōtāphōth (properly, perhaps,—from the Arabic šāfa, to make a circuit,—circlets or headbands<sup>1</sup>): Dt. vi. 8, xi. 18†. The word takes the place of the ‘memorial’ in v. 9. Originally, as the comparative study of religions makes probable, the ‘frontlet’ was some kind of badge worn upon the forehead as a mark of belonging to the national Deity, by which he might know who were his, and (like an amulet) guaranteeing them his protection, and also reminding those who bore it of their ceremonial duties towards him. Here it is merely said that the redemption of the firstborn is to be for (i.e. to serve the same purpose as) a ‘sign,’ or ritual mark (see on v. 9) upon the head, and ‘frontlets’ on the forehead, in reminding Israel of its duties towards Jehovah. In Dt. vi. 8, xi. 18, where the same two expressions are used, but the reference is to words, it has been generally supposed that material objects are meant (see, however, against this view the strong arguments of A. R. S. Kennedy, art. Phylacteries in DB. p. 871 f.: it is not clear that ‘these words’ in vi. 6 refer to vv. 4, 5 alone; cf. xi. 18<sup>2</sup>); and the later Jews gave effect to this interpretation of the passage by inscribing Ex. xiii. 1—10, 11—16, Dt. vi. 4—9, xi. 13—21 on small scrolls of parchment, which were enclosed in cases, and bound with leathern thongs to the forehead and left arm. These are the šōphillim,

<sup>2</sup> LXX. also (in Dt. as well as in Ex.) interpret figuratively, ἀσάλευτον πρὸ ὀφθαλμῶν σου, i.e. ‘something immoveably fixed before [not ‘between’] thine eyes,’ ever present to thy thoughts.

E And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not by the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt: but God led the people about, by the way of the wilderness by the Red Sea: and the children of Israel

'prayers,' of the later Jews, the φυλακτήρια (i.e. preservatives against demons, amulets: cf. Targ. on Cant. viii. 3, where protection against demons is expressly said to be the object of binding on the εφθαλίτιν), mentioned in Mt. xxiii. 5 (see further DB. l.c.).

17—22. Journey from Succoth (xii. 37) to Ethlam.

17, 18. Why Israel did not take the shortest route to Canaan, which was also the one usually followed by both caravans and armies, across the North end of the isthmus of Suez, and then along the sea-coast, to Gaza, the most south-westerly of the Philistine cities, here called, 'the way to the land of the Philistines.' Because the Philistines were a warlike and aggressive people, it was feared that Israel might be alarmed at meeting them, and be tempted to return to Egypt. Whether, however, the alleged reason was the real reason, is very doubtful: the Philistines in point of fact do not appear to have settled in Canaan till the reign of Rameses III (EB. iii. 3717 f.; Sayce, EHH. 291 f.; Wade, OT. Hist. 108): the use of the term here is consequently an anachronism (cf. Gen. xxi. 34, xxvi. 1). It is remarkable that no mention is made of the forts and guards (pp. 127, 141), which might have formed a real obstacle to the Israelites leaving Egypt by the isthmus.

17. the way of, &c.] We say idiomatically the way to, which ought to be read similarly in v. 18, Gen. iii. 24 (cf. xvi. 7 RV.), Nu. xxi. 33 (cf. v. 4 RV., and the || Dt. iii. 1), Dt. i. 2, &c. E emphasizes elsewhere also the providence of God: cf. Gen. xlv. 5, 7 f., l. 20.

18. Instead of leading them straight on, across the N. part of the isthmus of Suez, by the direct route mentioned above, God led the people about (or round), in the direction of the wilderness,—i.e. the Egyptian wilderness, S. of the Wādy Ṭumilāt, and West of the N. end of the Gulf of Suez (a shallow extension of which reached perhaps at this time as far N. as L. Timsāh: see p. 125 ff.),—to the Red Sea (the Gulf of Suez, or its ancient Northern extension, just referred to).

the Red Sea] Heb., as always, the Sea of sūph; probably, the Sea of reeds. The origin of the name is uncertain. Sūph (outside this expression) is used of reeds or rushes (cf. Luther's Schilfmeer, 'Reed-sea') growing along the Nile (ii. 3 [see note], 5, Is. xix. 6†), and of seaweed (Jon. ii. 6†): it seems also to correspond to the late Eg. thuf, Copt. joouf, 'papyrus.' Reeds or rushes however do not grow in the salt water of the Red Sea, though (Di.) clumps of them have been found on spots S. of Suez, where fresh water mixes with the salt; but they abound in Lake Timsāh. 'This lake with its large marshes full of reeds, exactly at the entrance of Goshen, would fulfil all con-the bones of Joseph with him: for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you; and ye took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in 21 the edge of the wilderness. | And the LORD went before J them by day in a pillar of cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; that they ditions for the Exodus and for the Heb. name' (W. M. Müller, EB., RED SEA). If it is true that there was once a shallow extension of the Gulf of Suez reaching to L. Timsāh, it is possible that it was called by the Hebrews, from these growths, the 'Sea of reeds'; and that afterwards the name was extended to the 'Red Sea' generally (so Di. as well as W. M. Müller).

armed] The Heb. word is a rare one (Jos. i. 14, iv. 12, Jud. vii. 11†; read also conjecturally by many in Nu. xxxii. 17), and its precise meaning is uncertain. It in any case implies that the Israelites were prepared for hostile encounters.

19. See Gen. i. 25; and cf. Jos. xxiv. 32.

20. The form of the verse is that usual in P's itineraries: cf. xvii. 1, xix. 2, Nu. xxi. 10 f., xxii. 1, and esp. xxxiii. 5—49.

Etham] On the 'edge (lit. end) of the wilderness,' i.e. of the wilderness on the East of the Isthmus of Suez (in Nu. xxxiii. 8 [P] called the 'wilderness of Etham,' in which the Israelites journeyed for three days after the passage of the Red Sea); the 'edge' of this wilderness here meant will be the N. part of what we call the Isthmus of Suez. The precise site of Etham on this 'edge' is, however, quite uncertain, as the name has not been satisfactorily identified. Khetem in Egyptian means a 'closed place, fortress, castle'; and there was a 'Castle (Khetem) in Zaru (or Zalu),' corresponding to the Selle of the Roman itineraries, often mentioned in the Inscriptions as passed by the Eg. kings on their expeditions into, or return from, Asia (see Maspero, ii. 122, 123, 370; and cf. the writer's essay, with citation of inscriptions, in Hogarth's Authority and Archaeology, pp. 58—61), which has been supposed to be the place meant. Selle is the modern Tell Abu-Séfeh, at the N. end of L. Ballāh, 18 miles N. of L. Timsāh (Masp. i. 75, 201 n. 4; see further ref. in DB. s.v. Shur). This however seems to be too far to the N.: a stronger guttural than š would also have been expected at the beginning of "Etham," if it had been the transcription of the Eg. khetem. A site more to the S. seems to be more probable: Di. suggests the E. end of the sand-ridge el-Gisir, 3 miles N. of L. Timsah (see p. 126); Dawson and Naville the N. end of L. Timsāh.

21, 22. How Jehovah, in a pillar of cloud by day, and in a pillar of fire by night, guided the Israelites in their journeyings. For cloud, and fire, as symbols of the Divine presence, cf. on iii. 2, ix. 28, xix. 9, 18, xx. 18. The Pent., however, contains three representations of the Divine presence in the cloud, corresponding to the three sources: in J the pillar of cloud by day and fire by night precedes the Israelites continuously to guide them in the way (so here, xiv. 19<sup>b</sup>, 24<sup>a</sup>, Nu. xiv. 14<sup>b</sup>, Dt. i. 33; comp. Neh. ix. 12, 19, Ps. lxxviii. 14): in E the pillar of cloud is not spoken of as a guide, but it descends from time to time and 'stands' at the entrance to the Tent of Meeting, and Jehovah speaks in it to Moses (so Ex. xxxiii. 9 f., Nu. xi. 25, xii. 5, Dt. xxxi. 15; cf. Ps. xcix. 7): in P (who does not speak of a 'pillar') the cloud covers the Tent of Meeting immediately upon its erection, and remains there, with fire in it by night, till the camp is to be moved, when it is lifted up above it (xl. 34—38, Nu. ix. 15—22, x. 11 f.: cf. v. 34, xiv. 14 [the words, 'and thy cloud standeth over them': comp. Ps. cv. 39; also Is. iv. 5], Lev. xvi. 2, Nu. xvi. 42, and on Ex. xvi. 10). The fiery cloud thus formed an imposing visible symbol of the spiritual presence of God, guiding (J), protecting (P), or (E) speaking in Israel, during its journey through the wilderness. But, as in other cases, the symbolism had no doubt some natural basis; and it is thought by Di., McNeile and others that it was suggested by the variously attested custom of a brazier filled with burning wood being borne along at the head of a caravan of pilgrims, or an army (see ref. in Di. and McN.), or of a chief having a fire blazing before his tent (T. H. Weir, Expositor, July 1910, p. 81 f.), or carried before him (cf. Ebers, Gosen, 530, 2544).

J might go by day and by night: <sup>1</sup>the pillar of cloud by day, <sup>22</sup> and the pillar of fire by night, departed not from before the people.

21. went] In the Heb. a ptep., implying 'went continually.'

22. departed not] The tense used expresses what was habitual (cf. xxxiii. 7—11). The marg. is not necessary: cf. xxxiii. 11 Heb.

CHAP. XIV.

The passage of the Red Sea.

The narrative is composite, and shews the same, or similar, characteristics to that of the Plagues. It may suffice here to point to some of the features which connect the parts assigned to P with each other, or with P's narrative elsewhere: v. 1 And Jehovah spake unto Moses, saying, as vi. 10, 29, xiii. 1, xxv. 1, and frequently; vv. 2, 15 Speak unto the children of Israel, as xxv. 2, Lev. i. 2, iv. 2, &c.; vv. 4, 8, 17 hissēk for 'harden' as vii. 13, &c.; get me honour, vv. 4, 17, 18, Lev. x. 3; vv. 4, 18 and...shall know, as vi. 7, vii. 5, xvi. 12; vv. 9, 23 and the Egyptians pursued; vv. 22, 29 'the dry ground' and 'the wall'; vv. 16, 21 divide; the repetitions, in the manner of P, in vv. 17, 18 as compared with v. 4, in v. 28<sup>a</sup> as compared with v. 23, and in v. 29 as compared with v. 22.

- 14 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, Speak unto P 2 the children of Israel, that they turn back and encamp before Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, before Baal-zephon: over against it shall ye encamp by the sea.
 And Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel, They are 3 entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.

The two principal narrators, while agreeing with each other and with the Song in the main facts, viz. that the Israelites passed safely, while the Egyptians perished in the waters, give different representations of some of the details. In particular, in effecting the parting of the waters, Jehovah in J acts through natural causes: by a strong east wind (v. 21<sup>b</sup>) He drives along the waters of the Red Sea, so that a part of the bottom is laid bare; in the morning the sea returns to its wonted flow, and the pursuing Egyptians are drowned in it (v. 27<sup>b</sup>): in P Moses lifts up his hand, as in E (v. 16<sup>a</sup>) his rod, and at the signal the waters divide automatically, forming a pathway, with a wall of water on each side; upon the signal being given a second time, the waters reunite, and close upon the Egyptians (vv. 21<sup>a, c</sup>, 22, 27<sup>a</sup>, 28<sup>a</sup>). In P,—and also in E probably (for but little of E has been preserved),—the miracle is thus much greater than in J. The Song (ch. xv.) agrees with J in emphasizing the operation of the wind (v. 8, cf. v. 10): whether the expressions in v. 8 about the waters standing up as a heap are to be taken literally, and regarded as supporting the representation of P, may be doubted: the language may be hyperbolic; nor is it certain (see p. 130 f.) that the poem is contemporary with the events. See further p. 123 ff.

1—4 (P). The sequel in P to xiii. 20 (P). In Etham the Israelites are bidden turn back, and encamp on the W. side of the sea (i.e. either of the Gulf of Suez, or of an ancient northern extension of it: see p. 126 f.) in order that the Pharaoh, seeing them shut in, with the sea in front of them, may be tempted to pursue after them, and that God may get Him glory by his overthrow.

2. turn back] viz. from the route past Etham, straight on to Palestine. The 'turn' is the same as that mentioned by E in xiii. 18. The motive assigned for it is however a different one: in xiii. 17 fear lest the Israelites should shrink from facing the Philistines; here (v. 4), that Jehovah might get Himself glory by the overthrow of the Egyptians. See further the last note on v. 4.

Pi-hahiroth, &c.] None of these places have been as yet identified: they consequently afford no help in determining the place where the passage of the Red Sea took place. M. Naville's identification of Pi-hahiroth with Pi-kerehet, which he argues was on the SW. edge of Lake Timsah, depends upon most precarious grounds (see p. 122). And no independent data whatever exist for determining the sites of Migdol and Baal-zephon: their sites can only be fixed conjecturally, after the place of the passage has been already fixed upon other grounds.

3. entangled, &c.] rather, perplexed, confused (Est. iii. 15, Joel

P And I will <sup>1</sup>harden Pharaoh's heart, and he shall follow after <sup>4</sup> them; and I will get me honour upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; and the Egyptians shall know that I am the J LORD. And they did so. | And it was told the king of <sup>5</sup> Egypt that the people were fled: and the heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was changed towards the people, and they said, What is this we have done, that we have let Israel go from serving us? And he made ready his <sup>2</sup>chariot, and <sup>6</sup> took his people with him: and he took six hundred chosen <sup>7</sup> chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt, and captains over all P of them. | And the LORD <sup>3</sup>hardened the heart of Pharaoh <sup>8</sup>

i. 18) in the land: they do not know which way to turn in order to escape: the wilderness (the Egyptian wilderness, S. of Wādy Tūmilāt) hath shut them in: the implicit thought being, 'They will not dream of crossing the sea; so we have but to follow them (v. 4), and they will be in our power.'

4. harden] lit. make strong or firm: P's regular word (on vii. 13). follow] better, pursue, as vv. 8, 9, 23.

get me honour (or glory)] viz. by Pharaoh's overthrow: cf. especially Ez. xxviii. 22, xxxix. 13 (EVV. 'will be glorified'). So vv. 17, 18. and the Egyptians shall know, &c.] as vii. 5. Cf. on vi. 7.

V. 4 is not to be understood as giving the actual reason why the Israelites 'turned back' (for which see xiii. 17): rather (Di.) 'it gives merely the ideal ground, deduced correctly from the event, that God would get Him glory by the Egyptians' overthrow.'

5—7 (J). The Pharaoh prepares to follow after them.

5. were fled] i.e. were not gone merely on a pilgrimage, to 'serve' Jehovah (iv. 23, vii. 16, &c.), but had departed altogether.

the heart...was changed] i.e. their mind, or opinion, was altered; they regretted that they had given the permission of xii. 31 f.; they felt that they had lost the services of the Israelites, and wished, if possible, to get them back.

6. made ready] Heb. bound, i.e. attached to the horses (Gen. xli. 29 al.).

chariot] marg. 'Or, chariots.' The Heb. word may be used either of an individual chariot (2 K. ix. 21, 24), or collectively (vv. 7, 9, 17, &c.). Here, however, the Pharaoh's own chariot appears to be meant.

his people] i.e. his warriors (Nu. xxi. 23 al.).

7. all the chariots] i.e. all the other chariots. and knights upon (not 'over') all of them] The Heb. shālīsh is not the word usually rendered 'captain'; but denotes apparently some superior kind of military officer: in 2 K. vii. 2, 17, ix. 25, x. 25, king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel: P for the children of Israel went out with an high hand. And the Egyptians pursued after them, | all the horses and Gl. chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen, and his army, | and P

xv. 25 it is used of a military attendant of the king,—or, in the plural, of a body of such attendants,—such as we might, for distinction, call a knight: the same rend. would suit also Ex. xv. 4, Ez. xxiii. 15, 23, 2 Ch. viii. 9 (in 2 S. xxiii. 8=1 Ch. xi. 11 RVm. 'three' [שלושה] should probably be read for 'captains' [שליש]). From the resemblance of the word to the Heb. for 'three' it has often been supposed to denote the third man in a chariot (cf. LXX. in Ex. and Kings, τροισάριος), i.e. the shield-bearer (by the side of the driver and the bowman). But (1) as appears from pictorial representations (see ill. in Wilk.-B. i. 223 f.), the Egyptian war-chariot was manned, except in triumphal processions (Wilk.-B. l.c.; EB. i. 726), by only two occupants, the driver and the bowman (EB. l.c.; Erman, p. 547); the chariots of the Hittites had three occupants (see ill. in EB. i. 729, or Erman, l.c.), but this, at the battle of Kadesh on the Orontes, under Rameses II, surprised the Egyptians (Erman, l.c.); the Assyrian chariots also carried only two occupants. (2) The shālîshîm are not in any of the other passages where they are mentioned specially associated with chariots,—even in 2 K. ix. 25, Bidkar is not necessarily Jehu's chariot-attendant; and in Ex. xv. 4 the expression, 'the choice of his shālîshîm,' would seem to suggest some more select and distinguished body than those who took only the third place in the chariots. We cannot be sure of the precise sense which was felt to attach to the word; but knight seems to suit all the passages in which it occurs. It may mean properly (Di.) 'a man of the third rank.'

with an high hand] i.e. proudly and defiantly; cf. Nu. xxxiii. 3 (P): in Nu. xv. 30 used of sins committed wilfully, in deliberate defiance of God's will. The 'high hand' is properly the hand uplifted to deliver a blow: cf. Job xxxviii. 15 ('the high arm is broken'), Mic. v. 9, Dt. xxxii. 27 (the same Heb.). The representation of P differs from that of J (so Di.): in J the Israelites 'flee' (v. 5) after obtaining the Pharaoh's leave for a temporary absence (xii. 31 f.): in P they from the first leave Egypt defiantly, regardless of the Pharaoh's wishes. Cf. on vi. 11.

9. In the Heb. the order is, 'And the Egyptians pursued after them, and overtook them encamping by the sea, [all the horses (and) chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen, and his army,] by Pihahiroth, before Baal-zephon'; and the awkward position of the bracketed words makes it almost certain that they are a misplaced gloss upon 'the Egyptians,' suggested by the similar words in vv. 17<sup>b</sup>, 18<sup>b</sup>, 23<sup>b</sup>, 26<sup>b</sup>, 28.

horsemen] so vv. 17, 18, 23, 26, 28, xv. 19, Jos. xxiv. 6. The term

P overtook them encamping by the sea, beside Pi-hahiroth, before Baal-zephon. | And when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the Egyptians marched after them; and they were sore afraid: E J | and the children of Israel cried out unto the LORD. | And they said unto Moses, Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to bring us forth out of Egypt? Is not this the word that we spake unto thee in Egypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? For it were better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness. And Moses said unto the people, Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, which he will work for you to-day: <sup>1</sup>for the seems to be an anachronism: the Egyptians used chariots in warfare; and though barbarians are represented on the monuments as fleeing on horseback, 'we have no representations of Egyptians on horseback' (Erman, p. 492). 'For a much later time Egyptian cavalry is indeed attested by Is. xxxi. 1, xxxvi. 9; and so it is the more intelligible, when later Biblical writers presuppose it also for the Mosaic age' (Di.). There is a similar anachronism in Gen. 1. 9.

10—14. The sequel to vv. 5—7. The alarm of the Israelites, as they see the Egyptians approaching, and their encouragement by Moses, 'told very graphically by J' (Di.).

10. the Egyptians marched] Heb., more graphically, Egypt was marching. Cf. on v. 25, and v. 30. cried out, &c.] cf. Jos. xxiv. 7 (E).

12. They even declare that while they were still in Egypt they had been unfavourable to Moses' plan. This is not mentioned before: in iv. 31 they listen to Moses gladly; at most, they had blamed Moses when they found increased labour imposed upon them (v. 21). Even in vi. 9 (P) nothing like the words here used is placed in their mouth.

13. stand still] rather, stand firm, without fleeing; cf. Dt. vii. 24, xi. 25, 2 S. xxi. 5. Comp. the quotation in 2 Ch. xx. 17 (EVV. set yourselves [not 'stand still']).

salvation] The Heb. word is used here in its original etym. sense—which, as Arabic shews, was properly breadth, spaciousness, freedom—of a material deliverance; so 1 S. xiv. 45, Ps. iii. 2 (EVV. help), 8 (see RVm.), xviii. 50, xxviii. 8, Job xxx. 15 (EVV. welfare), Is. xxvi. 18, 14. shall fight for you] Cf. v. 25. Hence often in Dt. (i. 30, iii. 22, xx. 4), and the Deuteronomic sections of Joshua (x. 14, 42, xxiii. 3, 10).

15—18 (in the main P). The Israelites are commanded to advance through the sea, by a path to be opened for them through it: the Egyptians will enter in after them, to their destruction.

15. Wherefore criest thou unto me?] This has not been mentioned before in the existing narrative. Moses, after what he had said in v. 13 f., would hardly have occasion to appeal to Jehovah: so the words will not be from J: probably (Di.) they are a notice from E (cf. xv. 25, xvii. 4,—both E).

16. And thou (emph.), lift up thy rod] For the rod in Moses' hand, as a mark of E, see on iv. 17, and p. 56.

divide] So v. 21. Cf. Is. lxiii. 12, Neh. ix. 11, Ps. lxxviii. 13.

17, 18. The Pharaoh's heart is still further 'hardened,' in order that he may be emboldened even to enter the sea after the Israelites. The expressions are substantially as in v. 4.

get me honour (or glory)] See on v. 4.

18. when I have gotten, &c.] For the form of sentence, cf. vii. 5.

19, 20. The angel of God, and the pillar of cloud, instead of being, as hitherto, in front of the Israelites, now take their place behind them. 'That here two accounts of the same thing have been placed side by side, is as clear as anywhere (e.g. Gen. xxi. 1)' (Di.). The parts relating to the 'angel of God' (Gen. xxi. 17, xxxi. 11) will belong naturally to E; those referring to the pillar of cloud, as in xiii. 21 f., to J.

J went behind them; | and the pillar of cloud removed from
E before them, and stood behind them: | and it came between <sup>20</sup>

20. and he came] viz. the 'angel of God' (v. 19<sup>a</sup>). 'Came' follows 'went' (v. 19<sup>a</sup>) better than 'stood' (v. 19<sup>b</sup>).

and there was, &c.] The rend. (in 'yet') is forced; the Heb. would naturally be rendered, and it lit up the night, viz. so as to deter the Egyptians from approaching the Israelites. There must be some error in the text. 'And when it was dark, the cloud lit up the night' (We.) would in itself yield a suitable sense: but the existing Heb. text is not an easy corruption of it. According to Jos. xxiv. 7 (E) Jehovah 'put thick darkness [ma'aphēl] between' the Egyptians and the Israelites.

east wind] In our ignorance of the exact topography of the place at which the crossing took place, it is difficult to be certain what precisely was the effect of the E. wind. A strictly E. wind would be directly in the face of the advancing Israelites: so probably a NE. wind is to be thought of, such as at a shallow ford might cooperate with an ebb tide in keeping a passage clear (cf. DB. i. 802<sup>b</sup>). See further p. 124 ff.

21<sup>c</sup>. and the waters were divided] The immediate sequel of v. 21<sup>a</sup> in P: cf. v. 16<sup>b</sup> 'stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it.' In P there is no thought of any wind: the waters divide automatically at the signal given by Moses.

22. and the waters were a wall, &c.] 'A very summary poetical and hyperbolic (xv. 8) description of the occurrence, which can at most be pictured as the drying up of a shallow ford, on both sides of which the basin of the sea was much deeper, and remained filled with water' (Di.).

24, 25. Premonitory warnings of the disaster about to fall upon the Egyptians.

24. the morning watch] The Hebrews divided the night into three 'watches,' each of about four hours, the 'morning watch' (also r S. xi.

And he <sup>1</sup>took off their chariot wheels, <sup>2</sup>that they drave them heavily: so that the Egyptians said, Let us flee from the face of Israel; for the LORD fighteth for them against the Egyptians.

looked forth] Notice the graphic anthropomorphism. Perhaps the idea is, with fiery flashes, startling the Egyptians, and throwing them into a panic. The author of Ps. lxxvii. 17—19 pictured torrents of rain, with brilliant lightnings and loud thunder (cf. lxxxii. 7), as accompanying the passage of the Red Sea: Jos. Ant. ii. 16. 3 describes it similarly.

host (twice)] Heb. camp, as v. 10. Not the word (hayil) rendered 'host' in vv. 4, 17, 28, and 'army' in v. 9.

discomfited] i.e. threw into panic or confusion: xxiii. 27, Dt. ii. 15, vii. 23, Jos. x. 10 al.

25. removed. The marg. bound (Sam. LXX. Pesh.; וַיִּבְרַח for וַיִּסְרֹךְ), i.e. clogged,—presumably by their sinking in the wet sand,—is probably to be preferred (so Di. Bā.).

and made them to drive (them) heavily. The marg. is preferable, for grammatical reasons.

and Egypt said, Let me flee. The same idiomatic and forcible singular as in v. 10. So frequently, as Nu. xx. 18, 19, Dt. ii. 27—29, Jos. xvii. 14 f., 17 f., besides often in the prophets (cf. LOT. p. 390).

26, 27<sup>a</sup>. The sequel in P to v. 23. The waters are to return, as they were divided (v. 21<sup>a, c</sup>), at the signal given by Moses' hand.

26. come again] come back; the word rendered 'returned' in vv. 27, 28. 'Again' in EVV., as in Old English generally, often means back.

27<sup>b</sup>. and the sea returned, &c.] By the cessation of the E. wind (v. 21<sup>b</sup>); or, if xv. 10 is to be pressed, by a contrary wind beginning.

to its wonted flow] The marg. is right: lit. to its perennial state. The word signifies properly overflowing (Am. v. 20 RVm., Ps. lxxiv. 15 RVm., Dt. xxi. 6 RV.); but its meaning was lost by the Jews; and as

J appeared; and the Egyptians fled against it; and the LORD P<sup>1</sup> overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea. | And the waters returned, and covered the chariots, and the horsemen, even all the host of Pharaoh that went in after them into the sea; there remained not so much as one of them. But the children of Israel walked upon dry land in the midst of the sea; and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left. | Thus the LORD saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians; and Israel saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea shore. And Israel saw the great work which the LORD did upon the Egyptians, and it occurs in many passages in which the rend. mighty, or strong, strength, would satisfy the context, the Jews interpreted it by these words, and hence the usual rendering of it in AV. The true meaning of the word was not recovered till in the 18th cent. Arabic began to be studied and compared with Hebrew, when Albert Schultens pointed out that the root in Arabic was used of a stream, and signified to be perennial, ever-flowing. Cf. the writer's note on Am. v. 24; and Lex. p. 450<sup>b</sup>.

and the Egyptians, &c.] The Heb. is more forcible: and (=as) the Egyptians were fleeing against it.

shook off] The marg. is again right, 'overthrew' being a paraphrase: see Neh. v. 13, where 'overthrow' for 'shake out' would obviously be impossible. Cf. the allusion in Ps. cxxxvi. 15 RVm. (the same word). (In xv. 7 the Heb. word is different.)

the people feared the LORD: and they believed in the LORD,<sup>J</sup> and in his servant Moses.

believed in] 'The idiom rendered "he believed in" (בַּהֲאִמֵּן) is a very striking one: the belief intended is, not merely a crediting of a testimony concerning a person or a thing (this would be לְהִאֲמִין), but a laying firm hold morally on a person or a thing, without the help of any intermediate agency' (Cheyne, s.v. FAITH in EB.). Cf. Gen. xv. 6. The root idea of אִמָּן is to show firmness or steadiness towards (לְ) or on (בְּ) a person or a word: cf. Job xxxix. 24 RVm., and the cognate subst. in ch. xvii. 12 (lit. 'Moses' hands were firmness').

his servant] A title applied to Moses elsewhere in the Pent. only Nu. xii. 7, 8, Dt. xxxiv. 5 (both JE). It is very common in the book of Joshua (mostly in parts which are the work of the Deuteronomic editor): i. 1, 2, 7, 13, 15, viii. 31, 33, ix. 24, xi. 12, 15, xii. 6, xiii. 8, xiv. 7, xviii. 7, xxii. 2, 4, 5.

On the sites of Pi-hahiroth, Migdol, and Baal-zephōn (xiv. 2).

(1) Pi-hahiroth. M. Naville identifies Pi-hahiroth with the Egypt. Pikerehet or Pikeheret. In lists of the 'nomes' of Egypt (Naville, Pithom, ed. 4, p. 24<sup>b</sup>, cf. pp. 6<sup>b</sup>, 8<sup>a</sup>), sometimes the temple of Pithom, sometimes that of Pikerehet or Pikeheret, is mentioned as the principal sanctuary of the 8th nome of lower Egypt, in the 'region of Thukke' (Succoth: Ex. xii. 37); and in the Inscription of Ptolemy II, found by M. Naville at Pithom (ibid. p. 18<sup>b</sup>), this temple of Pikeheret is mentioned as an abode of Osiris; and it is stated (l. 7; ibid. p. 19<sup>b</sup>) that Ptolemy, in his 6th year, went to Nesfer ab (i.e., probably, the capital of the nome, Heroopolis), visited the temple of Pikerehet, and dedicated it to 'his father Etōm (see on i. 11), the great living god of Thukke, at the festival of the god.' A temple of Osiris would be called by the Greeks a Serapeum; and as the Itinerary of Antonine mentions a Serapiu, 18 miles from Heroopolis, and 50 from Klysmā (Kolzum, a little N. of the modern Suez), M. Naville identifies the temple of Pikerehet with this, and places it at the foot of Jebel Mariam, on the SW. edge of L. Timsāh, 12 miles E. of Pithom (p. 25; cf. p. 22<sup>a</sup>, and see the Map at the end of his volume). Not only, however, does Pikerehet not agree phonetically with Pi-hahiroth as closely as could be desired; but the arguments by which M. Naville seeks to fix its site are anything but cogent: in fact (Griffith) such data as we possess all tend to shew that the temple of Pikerehet was the shrine of a serpentine god (Kerh(et) = 'serpent') in Pithom itself, and not 12 miles E. of it (cf. W. M. Müller in DB. ii. 1439, n. 5)<sup>1</sup>.

(2) Migdol is a Heb. word meaning tower; and in the Egypt. form

Mektol occurs frequently in the inscriptions; but the situation of these 'towers' is mostly either uncertain, or unsuited to the present context<sup>1</sup>. There is however one which, if the Israelites really crossed the sea at or near L. Timsāh, may be the 'Migdol' here mentioned. In the reign of Merenptah's successor, Seti II, an officer who had been sent to overtake two fugitive slaves tells us that he followed them first to the sgy (fortified enclosure) of Thukke (see on xii. 37), then, turning to the S., to the khetem, or castle (see on xiii. 20), of Thukke, and afterwards to 'the northern wall of the mektol of Seti' (see Authority and Archaeology, p. 60 f.; W. Max Müller, MIGDOL in EB.)<sup>2</sup>. This mektol must certainly have been somewhere E. of Thukke (or Pithom): it might therefore well be near L. Timsāh, and so would fulfil all conditions for those assuming that the 'sea' which the Israelites crossed was a northern extension of the Gulf of Suez, at a point a little S. of this lake.

(3) The site of Baal-zēphōn is quite unknown; all that can be said of it is that as the Israelites were to encamp over against it, i.e. (as we should now say) opposite to it, it will have been on the Asiatic side of the sea, opposite to Migdol (wherever 'Migdol' was).

The name 'Ba'al-zephon' is interesting. We know that there were many local Baals (Ba'al of Lebanon, of Tarsus, &c.), some of whom gave their names to places (as 'Ba'al of Peor'). Ba'al-zephon either means 'Baal of the North,' or is a combination of Baal with the Phoen. god Zaphon (Rel. Sem.<sup>2</sup>, p. 95); cf. Baal-Gad. We know, now, from a treaty between Esarhaddon (B.C. 681—668) and the Phoenicians, that there was a Tyrian god, bearing the same name, viz. Baal-sapūna (KAT.<sup>3</sup> 357), and also, from the annals of Tiglath-pileser and Sargon (ib. p. 479), that there was a mountain Ba'li-sapūnah, evidently so named from this deity. The place, Ba'al-zephon, no doubt, either was, or had been, a sanctuary of the same deity. In Egypt itself, also, among the deities worshipped at Memphis, mention is made of a goddess Ba'alath-zaphon (EB. s.v. BAAL-ZEPHON; W. M. Müller, As. u. Eur. 315), who may have had some connexion with the corresponding male deity.

On the passage of the Red Sea.

The fact of the passage of the Red Sea can be questioned only by an extreme and baseless scepticism. As was remarked above (p. 114), on the principal facts involved, the successful passage of the Israelites, and the destruction of the pursuing Egyptians in the returning waters, the principal narratives, and also the Song, all agree: they differ only in details (on the uncertainty as to the place of crossing, see p. 124 ff.). Dillm. (p. 133, ed. 2, p. 146) remarks that these details are described most simply, if only we do not understand as prose what is intended to be poetry, in the Song (which is regarded by him as older than any of the prose narratives): a strong wind drives back the waters in such a way as to permit the Israelites to pass through (xv. 8); another wind, suddenly arising in an opposite direction (v. 10), causes the water to return and close upon the pursuing foe. 'That natural causes were in operation, is taken for granted: Jehovah is glorified for setting them in action, and achieving by such simple means the salvation of His own people, and the destruction of their foes. The marvel lay in the deliverance of the people, whom its leader had ever taught to trust in its God, in the extremity of danger, without its own cooperation (cf. xiv. 13 f., 31 J), this was also the reason why the event had such immense significance in the subsequent history of the people.' But the story of the great deliverance, as it was handed down from generation to generation in the mouths of the people, was variously embellished by the unconscious play of the imagination. And so in the later writers the occurrence is attributed far more to the direct supernatural power of God. While J,—no doubt following the Song,—still mentions a strong east wind as the cause, E and P represent the water as dividing and forming two walls, and afterwards as reuniting, at a signal given by the hand or rod of Moses, in E and J the angel, or pillar of cloud and fire, cooperates to keep the two hosts apart, and throw the Egyptians into a panic, the passage of the whole body of Israelites, and the destruction of the Egyptians, take place in a single night, and not one of the enemy is left alive. 'It would be unjustifiable,' continues Dillmann, 'on account of such differences between the narrators, and because of such purely legendary traits, to deny the reality of the occurrence itself; but it would be still more foolish to seek to maintain the strictly historical character of the details as described by these narrators. Especially the idea that a people numbering some 2,000,000 souls, with their tents and baggage, and large flocks and herds (xii. 37 f.), could have crossed the sea, however broad the ford was, in the course of a single night, must be entirely given up; either the numbers were very much smaller, or the narrative must be supposed to speak of only the principal body of the Israelites.'

The actual point at which the passage of the Red Sea took place can be fixed only by conjecture; for the site suggested for Pi-haḥiroth (p. 122) is too conjectural, and that suggested for Migdol is too uncertain, to be used for the purpose of determining it, and the site of Baal-zēphōn depends entirely upon those adopted for these two places. Formerly, indeed, it used to be supposed, on the strength of the expressions in Ex. xiv. 22, xv. 8, that the passage took place in the deep water, some miles S. of Suez, that the sea there literally parted asunder, and that through the chasm thus formed the Israelites passed, with a sheer wall of water on each side of them. But, if only for the reason that it is impossible to understand how any 'wind' could have produced a chasm of this kind, or, even if it could have done so, how any man or body of men could have stood against it, this view has now been for long entirely abandoned. The following are the two views that have been more recently advocated. (1) That the passage took place near the modern Suez, either in the narrow arm of the gulf, some  $\frac{3}{4}$  mile broad, which extends now about 2 miles N. of Suez, but,—to judge from the character of the soil, consisting of sand blown in from the desert on the East,—in ancient times probably extended further (Rob. i. 49), or a little S. of Suez: above Suez the water is shallow, and there are parts which can be crossed at low tide (Ebers saw Arabs crossing them, Gosen, p. 530; cf. Rob. p. 50); immediately below Suez also there is a shoal, 1 mile broad, dry at low water<sup>1</sup>. The Gulf of Suez is at this part enclosed by a range of hills on each side—the Jebel 'Atāka on the W. coming close down to the sea, and the ridge of er-Rāḥah, 12—15 miles off on the E.; and partly on account of these hills the ebb and flow of the tide is here unusually dependent on the direction of the wind. 'As is well known to observant men accustomed to navigate the Red Sea, a north-easterly gale, on reaching Suez, would then be drawn down between the high ranges which bound the gulf on either hand, in such a manner as to change its direction from NE. to N., or even a little W. of N. It would gather strength as it advanced, and by its action on an ebb tide would make it abnormally low, and prevent, while it lasted, at least for a time, the return of the usual flood tide. In this way a good passage across the channel might soon be laid bare, and remain so for several hours. In the morning, a shift of wind to the S., probably of a cyclonic nature, takes place: the pent-up flood-tide, now freed from restraint, and urged on by the S. gale "returns to its wonted flow," and sweeps suddenly up the gulf, probably in a "bore" or tidal wave, and so overwhelms the pursuing Egyptians.'<sup>2</sup>

(2) The other view takes the Israelites across a presumed ancient northern extension of the Gulf of Suez, which is considered highly probable by many modern authorities. The isthmus of Suez, at its narrowest part, is 70 miles across<sup>3</sup>. Near the N. end of the Gulf of Suez there extends for some ten miles a 'sort of marshy lagoon' (Murray's Guide); then comes the Shalûf, a plateau 20—25 ft. above the sea-level, and 6 miles long; after this, stretching in a NW. direction, the two 'Bitter Lakes,' altogether about 25 miles long by 2—6 broad, connected by a shallow marshy channel a mile long, which, until an immense volume of water was let into them at the opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 from the Medit. Sea, were nothing more than two great salt marshes, though 20—40 ft. deep in many parts; at the N. end of these Lakes there is again for 8 miles a stretch of sand, rising in parts into dunes, with a stelè of Darius in the middle, which, from the ruins found there being supposed by the French engineers to have been a temple of Osiris, is now known as the Serapeum; then comes Lake Timsāh (the 'Crocodile Lake'), at the E. end of W. Tūmilāt, 5 miles long by  $\frac{1}{2}$ —2 miles broad, which, like the Bitter Lakes, till it was flooded for the Suez Canal, was another salt marsh, filled with reeds: 3 miles N. of Lake Timsāh, the land rises to about 50 ft. above the sea, and the highest point between the Medit. Sea and the Gulf of Suez is reached, called el-Gizr ('the Embankment'), the cutting through of which for the Suez Canal was a work of immense labour: two or three miles N. of el-Gizr is Lake Ballāh; and N. of this, between L. Ballāh and L. Menzaleh, was the isthmus called el-Ḳantara, or the 'Bridge,' over which went the old caravan route between Egypt and Palestine.

<sup>2</sup> Abridged from Major Palmer's Sinai (S.P.C.K.), p. 169f. Ewald (Hist. ii. 73), 'if the Red Sea had then its present limits,' and Ebers (Gosen, p. 102 f.) would also place the passage across the fords N. of Suez. Robinson (i. 58 f.) supposes that the wind drove the water off the shallow shoals, either just above or just below the present Suez, and so made them passable, while leaving the deeper water N. and S. of these shoals unaffected.

There is no doubt that in remote pre-historic times (before the Pleistocene period) the Gulf of Suez and the Medit. Sea were connected with each other (see the map in EB. ii. 1205—6); and it has been supposed that in ancient historic times the Gulf of Suez extended as far N. as L. Timsāh, on the S. of the ridge el-Gizr, just referred to: Sir J. W. Dawson, for instance, writing as a geologist, points out that the ground S. of L. Timsāh is for the most part lower than the Red Sea, and is composed of recent deposits holding many Red Sea shells (Egypt and Syria, pp. 67—69). And so it has been held that the passage of the Israelites was made at some part of this northern extension of the Red Sea. Thus the French engineer Linant, R. S. Poole the Egyptologist (in Smith's DB., 1863, i. 599<sup>b</sup>, iii. 1016<sup>a</sup>, 1017<sup>a</sup>), and M. Naville in his Store-City of Pithom and the Route of the Exodus<sup>1</sup>, 1903, p. 31 (see also his art. Exodus in Smith's DB., vol. i., ed. 2, with maps) suppose them to have crossed by what is now the neck of land between L. Timsāh and the Bitter Lakes, a little N. of the 'Serapeum,' where (Naville) 'the sea was not wide, and the water probably very shallow,' and 'liable to be driven back under an east wind'; while Sir J. W. Dawson (l.c. p. 65) thinks that the best place for the passage would have been at the S. end of the Great Bitter Lake<sup>1</sup>, where 'it is narrow, and its shallow part begins, and a N.E. wind, combined with a low tide, would produce the greatest possible effect in lowering the water.' Dillm., after a full discussion of the question, reached in 1880 substantially the same conclusion, thinking it probable that there was some extension of what is now the Gulf of Suez as far as L. Timsāh, both upon independent grounds (see below), and also because, if at the time of the Exodus the distribution of land and water upon the isthmus was as it is now, it is not apparent why Moses should have led the Israelites S. of the N. end of the Gulf of Suez, instead of crossing the isthmus between the N. end of the Gulf and the Bitter Lakes, by the present pilgrim track to the desert of Arabia: he did not, however, define more closely where the crossing took place, but thought it might be at any point N. of the present gulf, where the water was fairly shallow (p. 144 f., ed. 2, p. 159).

Did this N. extension of the Gulf of Suez exist, however, as late as the time of the Exodus, in the 13th cent. B.C. ? (1) The 'Bitter Lakes' seem to have existed already in the time of the 12th dynasty. Sinuhit, a political exile from Egypt under Useratesen I (B.C. 1980—1935 Breasted), in describing his flight, says (Petrie, Egypt. Tales, i. 100 f.<sup>1</sup>) that he 'reached the walls (anbu) of the Ruler, built to repel the Sati,' then after 'crouching in a bush for fear of being seen by the guards doing duty there, who watch on the top,' he 'set forth at night-fall, and at day-break reached Peten, and came to the island of Kem-uër,' i.e. the 'Great Black (water).'<sup>2</sup> Now Ptolemy II is said, in l. 20 of the inscription found at Pithom by M. Naville (Pithom, ed. 4, p. 20<sup>b</sup>), to have gone to Kem-uër, and founded there a large city in honour of his sister, which can be only Arsinoë; and this is stated by Strabo (p. 804; xvii. 1. 26) to have been near Heroopolis, i.e. (see below) Pithom, 10 miles W. of L. Timsāh. These data seem to shew that Kem-uër must have included L. Timsāh. The sequel (ll. 22—24), now, speaks of vessels going from Kem-uër to the Red Sea, and returning again, with elephants and other imports, to Kem-uër. Though Kem-uër is distinguished from the Red Sea, there seems thus to have been some water-connexion between them: L. Timsāh was apparently united with the Bitter Lakes, forming the 'Great Black (water)'; and there was some navigable connexion between this and what is now the Gulf of Suez (cf. W. M. Müller, Asien u. Eur. nach den Aeg. Denkm. p. 42; Di. pp. 140, 145, ed. 2, pp. 153, 159; Naville, p. 25 f.). Geology offers no demur to this conclusion. Geologists generally are agreed that the whole of the isthmus from el-Gisir to Suez is a recent (Quaternary) formation; and Th. Fuchs, who examined it carefully in 1876, and whose conclusions are summarized by Guthe (ZDPV. 1885, 222—9, esp. 225; cf. PRE.<sup>3</sup> xii. 499), writing purely as a geologist, regards it as quite possible that 'the Bitter Lakes, even in historical times, were connected with the Red Sea.' In particular, Fuchs (against Fraas and others)<sup>3</sup> denies that the Shalūf plateau (p. 125) is as a whole a formation of the Miocene period; and says that such isolated Miocene rocks as may have been found in it could never have formed a real barrier between the Medit. and the Red Seas (p. 225). Comp. Guthe's statement (p. 227 f.), with which the well-known geologist, Credner, is stated fully to agree. The land, from L. Timsāh southwards has gradually risen, causing the waters of the Red Sea gradually to recede.

'Αράβιος κόλπος or the Red Sea (e.g. Strabo, p. 767 ἀπὸ Ἡρώων πόλεως ἥτις ἐστὶ πρὸς τῷ Νεῖλῳ μυχὸς τοῦ Αραβίου κόλπου; cf. 803), as giving its name to this gulf, and as the place at which voyagers embarked on the 'Arabian Gulf' (Theophr. Plant. iv. 7. 2 ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ τῷ καλουμένῳ Ἡρώων, ἐφ' ὃν καταβαλνουσιν οἱ ἐξ Αἰγύπτου). Pithom is 10 miles W. of L. Timsāh; so these statements would seem to shew that the 'Arabian Gulf' in classical times extended as far N. as that lake<sup>1</sup>. M. Naville (p. 25<sup>b</sup>) even judges, from the appearance of the soil, that the head of the gulf extended westwards from L. Timsāh to within three miles of Heroopolis itself<sup>2</sup>. This conclusion would be clear, and, as Di. remarks, a welcome confirmation of the conclusion reached by him, upon independent grounds, in his Commentary (pp. 139 f., 144 f., ed. 2, pp. 152 f., 159), were it not for a passage of Pliny (HN. vi. § 165), which seems to imply that there were 34 (al. 37) miles from the Red Sea to the Bitter Lakes: if this is correct, the Gulf of Suez must have ended where it does now (see further Dillm.'s full discussion in his review of Naville's Pithom, ed. 1, in SB.Ak. 1885, p. 889 ff.). Perhaps, however, too much weight ought not to be attached to an isolated statement, not made in a detailed description of the country<sup>3</sup>.

As there is no reason (Pithom, ed. 4, p. 23 f.) for supposing either of the stones found by M. Naville to have been moved appreciably from its original site, they establish the identity of Heroopolis with the place at which they were found, i.e. with Pithom. The ancient Klysmā, according to the Arabian geographers (see Di. l.c.), was at the extreme head of the Gulf of Suez (N. of the modern town of Suez; see the Map): if this, therefore, be the Klysmā meant, Heroopolis must have been some 50 miles distant from it, instead of 9, as stated on the milestone. The supposition made by Mommsen (SB.Ak. 1885, p. 898, 1887, p. 364) for overcoming this difficulty, viz. that the inscription means not '9 miles from Ero to Klysmā' but 'the 9th mile on the way from Ero to Klysmā,' being negated by the improbability (Naville, l.c.) that the stone had been removed from its original place, Naville (p. 24<sup>a</sup>) argues that Klysmā (properly 'a place washed by the sea') means here not the 'Klysmā' near Suez, but the sea-beach of L. Timsāh, which would be about 10 miles from Pithom.

On the whole, the language of the ancients, with the exception of the one passage of Pliny, is best satisfied by the supposition that, as late as classical times, the Gulf of Suez extended as far N. as L. Timsāh.

CHAP. XV.

The ode of triumph (xv. 1—18) is one of the finest products of Hebrew poetry, remarkable for poetic fire and spirit, picturesque description, vivid imagery, quick movement, effective parallelism, and bright, sonorous ('Klangvoll,' Bantsch) diction. V. 1<sup>b</sup> states the theme: the praise of Jehovah for the glorious overthrow of Israel's foe. The theme is developed in the verses following: first (vv. 2—5) the poet praises the mighty God, who had brought His people deliverance, and overwhelmed their enemies in the sea; then (vv. 6—10) he dwells on the details of the deliverance, how by the blast of His nostrils, the waters had parted to let the Israelites pass through, and then, at another blast, had closed upon the pursuing Egyptians, and snatched from them the prize, when it seemed already in their grasp; lastly (vv. 11—18), after once again (vv. 11—12) celebrating Jehovah as their deliverer, he describes how in His goodness He had led Israel through the wilderness, and planted it securely in its home in Canaan, while neighbouring nations looked on in silent amazement, powerless to arrest His people's advance. The song is thus virtually the poetical development of two thoughts: (1) the destruction of the Egyptians in the sea, vv. 1<sup>b</sup>—12; (2) Jehovah's guidance of Israel, till it was settled in Canaan, and a sanctuary established in its midst, vv. 12—18.

As regards the metre and strophical arrangement of the poem, there is at present little unanimity among scholars (see particulars in Haupt, A/SL. 1904, p. 150 f.). Haupt himself, p. 155 f., with several omissions of words and some additions, and also one or two transpositions, arranges it very systematically into three strophes, each strophe consisting of three stanzas, each stanza of two couplets, each couplet (as v. 1<sup>b</sup>, v. 6, v. 7) of two lines, and each line, in the Heb., having 2+2 accented syllables or 'beats.' As the poem stands, the lines, it is true, do mostly fall naturally into couplets (vv. 1<sup>b</sup>, 3, 4, &c.); sometimes, however, they form triplets (vv. 8, 9, 15, 17), twice quatrains (vv. 2, 16), and one stands by itself (v. 18): they also (in the Heb.) consist usually (but not always) of four words (forming two clauses, each of two words), with 2+2 accented syllables, or 'beats.' We cannot be sure that greater uniformity than this was designed by the original poet. It is wisest, under the circumstances, to leave the poem as it stands; and, so far as the strophes are concerned, simply to divide it, after v. 1, as Di. and Bā. do, in accordance with the natural breaks in the development of the thought, into three paragraphs, vv. 2—5, 6—10, 11—18.

There are several examples of alliteration or assonance in the poem: the fuller forms of the pron. suffix to the verb (-āmō, -ēmō), for the usual -ām, -ēm, are another poetical ornament which the author loves (9 times; cf. also -enhū in v. 2, and 'emālhāh in v. 16): while the quick, short clauses,—generally of two words each,—which are not common in Heb. poetry, each suggesting some vivid image, give the poem a force and brightness of its own.

Is the poem, however, Mosaic? That vv. 12—17 are later than Moses' time is admitted by even such a conservative scholar as Strack: as he says, it clearly presupposes the conquest of Canaan, and it refers to this conquest, not in a tone of prediction, but as an accomplished fact (cf. on vv. 13—17). 'In its present form,' says Strack, 'it is a festal hymn, perhaps,' as Ewald suggested (see below), 'composed for a pass-over at the sanctuary shortly after the conquest of Canaan, to keep alive the recollection of Israel's great deliverance'; vv. 11—17 are, however, older than the time of David, and vv. 1—10 are Mosaic. Dillm., agreeing substantially with Ewald (Dichter des alten Bundes, i. 1, p. 175; cf. Hist. ii. 354), doubts whether vv. 11—17 can be separated from vv. 4—10, on the ground that v. 10 forms no proper close, and the whole poem seems by its structure to be designed for its present compass: hence he considers that the ode, as we have it, is the poetical development, made at the time and for the object just stated, of an older Mosaic nucleus, to which in any case v. 1<sup>b</sup> belonged, if not vv. 2, 3 as well. More recent scholars (as Wellh. Hist., p. 352, Bā., Moore, EB. ii. 1450 f., Duhm, EB. iii. 3797, Haupt; cf. Budde, DB. iv. 11<sup>b</sup>) go further; and while allowing v. 1<sup>b</sup>—or rather v. 21—to be ancient, and even Mosaic, argue that vv. 2—18 are written in the style of the Psalms, lack the personal and local colouring, such as appears so distinctly in the older historical poems, Jud. v., 2 S. i. 19 ff., Nu. xxi., and have many affinities, both literary and religious, with the later Heb. literature: 'the emphatic assertion of Jehovah's eternal sovereignty in v. 18,' for instance, 'implies an advanced stage of the doctrine of the Divine Kingship, such as had found fresh expression during and after the exile' (Carpenter, The Hexateuch, i. 160 [ed. 2, p. 307 f.]). Those who argue thus suppose accordingly that the whole of vv. 2—18 is the poetical expansion of v. 1<sup>b</sup>, composed at a relatively late date, not earlier than c. 600 B.C.

It is true, there are several words and forms in the poem, which otherwise occur first c. 600 B.C., and are most frequent in Psalms and other writings which are, certainly or probably, later than this. Thus the plur. 'deeps' (vv. 5, 8) occurs elsewhere 12 times, first in Dt. viii. 7 (7th cent.), then Is. lxiii. 13, and in later writings (Pss., Prov. iii., viii.); 'depths' (v. 5) recurs 11 times, first in Mic. vii. 19, then in Pss., Zech. x. 11, Job., Jon., Neh. [a quotation from here]; 'floods' (v. 8) recurs 6 times, first in Jer. xviii. 14, Cant. iv. 15 (of uncertain date), then in Is. xliv., Pss., Prov. v.; 'heart' (fig. for 'midst'), v. 8, occurs besides, with sea(s), Ps. xlv. 2, Pr. xxiii. 34, xxx. 19, Ez. xxvii. 4, 25, 26, 27, xxviii. 2, 8, Jon. ii. 3 (לבב) (but cf. with oak 2 S. xviii. 14, and לבב) with heaven Dt. iv. 11); הרקיק 'draw' (the sword), lit. empty out (v. 9), recurs only Lev. xxvi. 33 (7th cent.), Ps. xxxv. 3, and 5 times in Ezek.; the pron. zū (vv. 13, 16) recurs 13 times, first in Ps. xxxii. 8, or

Hab. i. 11, then only in II. Is. and Pss.; the rare term. -enhu (v. 2) appears elsewhere only in Jer. v. 22, Dt. xxxii. 10 (7th cent.), Ps. lxxii. 15; the verbal suff. -āmō, -ēmō (here 9 times) occurs elsewhere 14 times, once in prose (Ex. xxiii. 31), otherwise only in the Pss. (ii., v., xxi., xxii., xlv., lix., lxxiii., lxxx., lxxxiii., cxl.). (The only ἀπαξ εἰρημένα are הַיְיָ v. 2 (text very dub.), וַיִּצְרָח v. 8, and (perhaps) לַיְיָ v. 10.)

With Hab. iii. before us, it cannot be denied that a fine ode might be written in the 6th cent. B.C.: at the same time in poetic freshness and power, and absence of conventional phrases, this ode seems to resemble the earlier Psalms (such as xviii., xxiv., xxix., xlvi.), rather than the later ones: where the same occasion is referred to, the parallels in the later Pss. seem to be reminiscences of this; and though it is curious that several of the words found here do not recur till the 6th cent. B.C. or later, it must be remembered that, if (as the present writer also thinks) there are very few Psalms earlier than the age of Jeremiah, the pre-exilic poetry with which this ode could be compared is small in amount, and words not otherwise represented in the extant poems might easily have been in use: the forms in -mo might also have been chosen by the poet as a rhetorical ornament. On the whole, while acknowledging in the poem a combination of features pointing to a relatively late date, the present writer, in view of the considerations just urged, especially the freshness of vv. 3—10, hesitates to regard them as conclusive; and thinks it more probable that vv. 2—18 are not later than the early years of the Davidic dynasty (cf. on v. 17<sup>d</sup>). V. 18, also, might easily be a subsequent addition.

Reminiscences of the ode are not met with certainly before the 7th cent. B.C.; they cannot consequently be taken to prove more than its relative antiquity. The following are the principal ones:—Is. xii. 2<sup>b</sup> (ch. xii. is probably later than Isaiah), and Ps. cxviii. 14 (v. 2<sup>a, b</sup>); Josh. ii. 9<sup>b</sup> ('and that,' &c.), 24<sup>b</sup> [both additions of the Deut. editor] (vv. 15<sup>c</sup>, 16<sup>a</sup>); Ps. lxxiv. 2 (v. 16<sup>d</sup> 'purchased'); lxxvii. 13 ('was in holiness,' v. 11<sup>b</sup>; 'Who, &c.,' v. 11<sup>a</sup>), 14 (vv. 11<sup>c</sup>, 2<sup>a</sup>), 15<sup>a</sup> (v. 13<sup>a</sup>), 16<sup>b, c</sup> 'were in pangs...', trembled' (v. 14 'trembled, Pangs'), 16<sup>c</sup> 'depths' (= 'deeps,' vv. 5<sup>a</sup>, 8<sup>c</sup> Heb.), 20 (v. 13<sup>a</sup> 'Thou leddest the people'); lxxviii. 13<sup>b</sup>, 53<sup>b</sup>, 54 RVm. (vv. 8<sup>b</sup>, 10<sup>a</sup>, 13 end, 16 end, 17<sup>a</sup>); cvi. 12<sup>b</sup> (note 12<sup>a</sup> = ch. xiv. 31<sup>b</sup>, shewing that the author of the Psalm read Ex. xv. in its present connexion); cxviii. 28 (v. 2<sup>a, d</sup>); Neh. ix. 11<sup>b</sup> (v. 5<sup>b</sup>; cf. v. 10 end [but in Neh. עָוִי, not עָוִיִּים]).

To the latest times, the passage of the Red Sea was remembered with a glow of triumph and enthusiasm, as a signal example of the power of Israel's God: see Dt. xi. 4, Jos. xxiv. 6, 7, Is. li. 10, lxiii. 11—13, Ps. lxxvi. 6<sup>a</sup>, lxxiv. 13, 14, lxxx. 7<sup>a, b</sup>, lxxxix. 10, cvi. 9—12, cxiv. 3<sup>a</sup>, 5<sup>a</sup>, cxxxvi. 13—15; also, for expressions or imagery suggested by it, Is. x. 26<sup>b</sup>, xi. 11 RVm., 15, 16, xliii. 16 f., Nah. i. 4<sup>a</sup>. Cf. also Rev. xv. 3.

The Exodus, in the broader sense of the term, was also ever afterwards regarded as the birthday of the nation, and as the event which secured

- 15 Then sang Moses and the children of Israel this song J unto the LORD, and spake, saying,
 I will sing unto the LORD, for he <sup>1</sup>hath triumphed gloriously:
 The horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

the nation's independence: hence it is often referred to as the beginning of the national (Jud. xix. 30, 1 S. viii. 8, 2 S. vii. 6 al.) and religious (Hos. xii. 9, xiii. 4) life of Israel; and the deliverance from 'the house of bondage' was appealed to both as the great event of which Israel should ever be mindful, and for which it owed gratitude to its God (see, besides many of the passages already quoted above, Ex. xii. 27, xiii. 8 f., 14, 16, xx. 2, xxxiv. 18, Am. ii. 10, iii. 1, Hos. xi. 1, xii. 13, Mic. vi. 4, Dt. iv. 34, vi. 21—23, vii. 8, 19, xi. 3 f., xv. 15, xvi. 1, 3, 6, xxvi. 8, Neh. ix. 9—12); also as the basis of an appeal to God (Ex. xxxii. 11 f., Dt. ix. 26—29, Jer. xxxii. 21), and as the guarantee of deliverance in subsequent troubles (Mic. vii. 15, Is. lxiii. 11—14).

xv. 1<sup>a</sup>. Then sang, &c.] cf. Nu. xxi. 17. (In Jud. v. 1 the Heb. is simply, And.) hath triumphed gloriously] This fine paraphrase is based upon the triumphando magnifice egit of Seb. Münster, in his Latin version of the O.T. (1534—5). A more lit. rendering would be hath risen up (see, for the rare word, Job viii. 11, x. 16, Ez. xlvi. 5) majestically or proudly: the root idea of the word is to rise up loftily; but derivatives have generally the fig. senses of majesty or pride (see e.g. v. 7, Ps. xcvi. 1).

The horse, &c.] Thus briefly, but completely, is the ruin of the Pharaoh's army described: its chariots and horses, the mainstay of its strength, are, by Divine might, cast irremediably into the sea.

and his rider] רִכְבָּן means both to ride a horse, and to ride in a chariot (Jer. li. 21 'the horse and his rider,... and the chariot and its rider'; similarly Hag. ii. 22): hence, as the Egyptians at this time had no cavalry (on xiv. 9), if the verse is contemporary with the Exodus, either 'rider' must be understood of the rider in the chariot, or (as the pron. rather distinctly connects the 'rider' with the horse: cf. Gen. xlix. 17, and Jer. l.c.) we may read for רִכְבָּן either רִכָּב (so LXX.), i.e. 'The horse and the rider' (viz. in the chariot), or (Haupt) רִכָּב, i.e. 'The horse and the chariot' (xiv. 9).

2—5. Jehovah is the object of the poet's praise, Jehovah, the potent and irresistible 'man of war,' who has overwhelmed His enemies in the sea.

- J <sup>1</sup>The LORD is my strength and song,
 And he is become my salvation:
 This is my God, and I will praise him;
 My father's God, and I will exalt him.
 The LORD is a man of war:
 The LORD is his name.
 Pharaoh's chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea:
 And his chosen captains are sunk in the Red Sea.
 The deeps cover them:

2. Yah is my strength and a song] i.e. the source of my strength and the theme of my song. Yah, the abbreviated form of Yahweh, occurs otherwise in xvii. 16, Is. xii. 2 (in a citation of the present verse), xxvi. 4 (post-exilic), xxxviii. 12 (Hezekiah's song), Cant. viii. 6; otherwise only in late Psalms (40 times, mostly in 'Hallelu-yah').

my.. I] The poet speaks, as Hebrew poets often do (e.g. Is. lxi. 10; Ps. xlv. 4, 6, cxviii. 5—21, 28), in the name, and as the representative, of the nation.

is become my salvation] lit. is become to me a salvation, i.e. a source of deliverance ('salvation,' as xiv. 13): cf. exactly the same Heb. in 2 S. x. 11 'then thou shalt be to me for salvation,' EVV. 'thou shalt help me.' This and the last line are cited in Is. xii. 2<sup>b</sup>, and Ps. cxviii. 14.

praise] The Heb. word occurs only here. If correct, it would seem to mean beautify or adorn (viz. with praises). But this is a great deal to supply; and probably, by a slight change, we should read acknowledge or thank (Ps. ix. 1, &c.; and especially cxviii. 28<sup>a</sup>). AV. prepare him an habitation follows the Targ. and Rabbis in treating hinwāh, improbably, as a denominative from nāweh, 'habitation' (v. 13).

My father's God] my ancestral God; cf. on iii. 6.

I will exalt him] Ps. xxx. 1; and especially cxviii. 28<sup>b</sup>.

3. a man of war] one who understands how to fight, and to vanquish his foes. The same figure, of Jehovah, Is. xlii. 13 ('a man of wars'), Ps. xxiv. 8 ('the mighty man [gibbōr] of battle [or of war]'); cf. also ch. xiv. 14.

Yahweh is his name] an exultant ejaculation: 'Yahweh' is to the poet the great and powerful God, who helps, defends, and delivers His people. Cf. Am. v. 8, ix. 6; and 'Yahweh of hosts is his name,' Am. iv. 13, v. 27, Is. xlvi. 4, xlvi. 2 al.

4. and his host] Cf. xiv. 4, 9, 17, 28.

And his chosen (Heb. the choice of his) knights] See on xiv. 7.

5. The deeps] chiefly a poet. word: Ps. lxxvii. 16, cvi. 9, Is. lxiii. 13 (all with reference to the passage of Red Sea); and elsewhere.

did cover them] The tense used represents the action vividly as it

- They went down into the depths like a stone. /
- 6 Thy right hand, O LORD, is glorious in power, Thy right hand, O LORD, dasheth in pieces the enemy.
- 7 And in the greatness of thine excellency thou overthrowest them that rise up against thee:

was taking place, something in the manner of the Greek imperfect. So vv. 6, 7. It cannot be reproduced idiomatically in English. 'Cover' is probably meant by the Revisers to be a historical present: but even this is inadequate; and the word is very liable to be misunderstood as an actual present ('cover them now').

the depths] Mic. vii. 19, Ps. lxxviii. 22, cvii. 24, Neh. ix. 11 (an allusion to the present passage), al. Properly, perhaps, the gurgling-places (cf. on v. 10). Quite a different word from 'deeps,' vv. 5, 8.

6—10. How Jehovah, by His power, had annihilated the foe: elated with the hope of plunder, and confident of victory, they pursued Israel into the path cut through the sea; He but blew with His wind, and the waters closed upon them.

6. Thy right hand, O Yahweh glorious in power,

The text can only be so rendered, 'glorious' (which is masc.) agreeing with 'Yahweh' (cf. v. 11), and the subject, 'Thy right hand,' being repeated for emphasis in v. 6<sup>b</sup> before the predicate (just as in Ps. xcii. 9, xciii. 3, xciv. 3). If we desire to render as in RV., we must read נִאֲדָרָה לְנִאֲדָרָה. The figure of the 'right hand,' as Is. li. 9, Ps. cxviii. 15, 16 al.

glorious] Cf. v. 11; and the cognate adj. נִרְבָּה, of Jehovah, Is. x. 34 (EVV. a mighty one), xxxiii. 21 (RV. in majesty), Ps. lxxvi. 4 (render, 'Illumined [but read probably Terrible, as vv. 7, 12] art thou and glorious'), xciii. 4 (EVV. mighty); cf. Ps. viii. 1, 9 (render, 'How glorious is thy name in all the earth!'). The idea of the word is noble, grand, magnificent.

did dash in pieces] only besides Jud. x. 8 (EVV. weakly vexed: render, 'brake and crushed'); cf. the same word in Jud. ix. 53 Targ.

7. In the greatness of thy majesty] cognate with 'risen up majestically' in v. 1: cf. Is. ii. 10, 19, 21, xxiv. 14, where the same word (gā'ôn) is rendered majesty in both AV. and RV. The retention of excellency in RV. is unfortunate. It is true, in 1611, when the AV. was made, it still had the etymological force (Lat. excello, to rise up out of) of surpassingness, pre-eminence; but even that is an imperfect rendering of the Heb. here; and now the word suggests little more than a mild type of superiority, just as the cognate 'excellent' has been weakened into a term of mild commendation, superior, meritorious. See the note on both 'excellency' and 'excellent' in the writer's Joel and Amos (in the Camb. Bible), p. 238 f., or (with a fuller synopsis of their occurrences, including those in the N.T.) in his Daniel, p. 33 f.

J Thou sendest forth thy wrath, it consumeth them as stubble.
 And with the blast of thy nostrils the waters were piled up,
 The floods stood upright as an heap;
 The deeps were congealed in the heart of the sea.
 The enemy said,
 I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil:
 My lust shall be satisfied upon them;
 I will draw my sword, my hand shall destroy them.

wall or building (Jud. vi. 25 'throw down'; Ez. xxvi. 4, 12; and frequently): the solid, compact masses of the foe are represented as broken to pieces, and thrown in ruins on the earth. The figure is more forcible than when we speak of an army being 'overthrown.' The word is quite different from the one rendered 'overthrew' in xiv. 27.

Thou sentest forth thy wrath, it consumed (or devoured: lit. ate) them as stubble] God's wrath is pictured as a fire, consuming the foe as quickly as if they were dry stubble (cf. Is. v. 24, Ob. 18, Nah. i. 10).

8. the blast of thy nostrils] Fig. for the wind (v. 10), as Ps. xviii. 15. were piled up] The hyperbole, as xiv. 22 (the 'wall'). The Heb. word occurs only here. 'Heap' in Ru. iii. 7 is cognate.

floods] or streams, lit. the flowing ones. A poet. word; cf. Ps. lxxviii. 16, 44, Cant. iv. 15, Is. xlv. 3.

an heap] Cf. Jos. iii. 13, 16; Ps. lxxviii. 13.

congealed] or, solidified (cf. Zeph. i. 12 RVm.,—the same word).

the heart of the sea] Cf. Ps. xlv. 2, Ez. xxvii. 4.

9. The enemy's confidence of victory, dramatically expressed in a series of quick, abrupt sentences, describing the rapid succession of one stage after another of the expected triumphant pursuit.

divide the spoil] A result of victory always looked forward to with satisfaction; cf. Jud. v. 30, Is. ix. 3, xxxiii. 23, Ps. lxxviii. 12.

My soul shall be filled with them] i.e. sated, or glutted with them. The 'soul,' in the psychology of the Hebrews, is the seat of desire, and especially of appetite or greed; see Dt. xii. 15, xiv. 26, xxiii. 24 ('thou mayest eat grapes thy fill according to thy soul'), Is. xxix. 8, xxxii. 6, Ps. xvii. 9 ('my greedy enemies,' lit. 'my enemies in soul'), xxvii. 12 ('give me not over unto the soul of my enemies, so xli. 2), lxxviii. 18 ('by asking food for their soul'), Prov. xxiii. 2 ('a man given to appetite,' lit. 'the possessor of a soul'), Eccl. vi. 7, Is. lvi. 11 ('greedy dogs,' lit. 'dogs strong of soul'). See further the Glossary in the writer's Parallel Psalter, p. 459 f.

- 10 Thou didst blow with thy wind, the sea covered them: /
They sank as lead in the mighty waters.
- 11 Who is like unto thee, O LORD, among the gods?
Who is like thee, glorious in holiness, Fearful in praises, doing wonders?
- 12 Thou stretchedst out thy right hand,
The earth swallowed them.

10. God did but blow with His wind, and all their hopes were in a moment shattered; they sank and perished in the returning waters.

sank] The word occurs nowhere else in this sense: to judge from its derivatives, the root will have meant to whir, whiz, clang, &c.: so perhaps the idea is whizzed down, or (cf. Southey's poem, The Inchcape Rock, l. 37, of a bell sinking) sank with a gurgling sound. The usual Heb. word for 'sink' is the one in v. 4<sup>b</sup>.

in the mighty waters] The adj. cognate with the ptc. rendered glorious in vv. 6, 11. Neh. ix. 11 uses the more ordinary word 'azzim' ('strong').

11—17. Jehovah, the Incomparable One, thus saved Israel from its foes (vv. 11—12); and afterwards, in His goodness, led His people whom He had redeemed to their promised home, while the nations of Canaan and surrounding regions looked on, awestruck and powerless to arrest their advance.

11. No god is comparable to Jehovah, whether among the gods of Egypt or those of any other country. Cf. xviii. 11; Ps. lxxi. 19<sup>c</sup>, lxxvii. 13, lxxxvi. 8, lxxxix. 6, 8, xc. 3, xcvi. 4, xcvi. 9; Jer. x. 6.

glorious (v. 6) in holiness] i.e. in loftiness, greatness, unapproachableness,—in a word in all the transcendent attributes which combine to constitute the idea of supreme Godhead; the ethical ideas which we associate with 'holiness' seem hardly to be thought of in passages like this. Cf. 1 S. vi. 20; and Skinner in DB. ii. 396 f.; Davidson, OT Theol. pp. 145 ff., 155; and below, on xxii. 31.

Fearful in praises] i.e. in praiseworthy attributes; so Ps. ix. 14, lxxviii. 4, Is. lx. 6, lxxiii. 7. Cf. Ps. lxxvi. 5 'fearful in operation.'

doing wonders] The Heb., as Ps. lxxvii. 14 (with allusion to the Exodus), lxxviii. 12 ('In the sight of their fathers he did wonders'), Is. xxv. 1.

12. The poet, before proceeding to the main theme of the paragraph (v. 13 ff.), reverts for a moment to the thought of Jehovah's destruction of the foe.

The earth swallowed them] In the Heb., the imperfect, attached ἀσπυδέρως, expresses vividly how the result followed at once the stretching out of Jehovah's hand. Exactly so v. 14 'the peoples heard, they trembled'; Ps. lxxvii. 16 'the waters saw thee, they were in pangs.' The 'earth' must here be understood as inclusive of the sea. 'Swallowed,' i.e. engulfed: cf. Nu. xvi. 32, Ps. cvi. 17 (of Dathan and Abiram).

J Thou in thy mercy hast led the people which thou hast redeemed: 13

Thou hast guided them in thy strength to thy holy habitation.

The peoples have heard, they tremble: 14

Pangs have taken hold on the inhabitants of Philistia.

Then were the dukes of Edom amazed; 15

13—17. Israel's providential guidance through the wilderness to its home in Canaan. As translated in RV., vv. 13—16 describe, in anticipation, as if completed, the journey to, and settlement in, Canaan; but it is far from natural to understand the past tenses (in the Heb.) in vv. 13—15, except as referring to events actually past; and there is little doubt that the verses were really written long after Israel was settled in Canaan, as a poetical description of their journey through the wilderness, and establishment in Canaan (cf. Dt. xxxii. 10—14). The verbs should therefore all be rendered as aorists.

13. Thou didst lead in thy mercy the people which thou hadst redeemed; Thou didst guide them in thy strength to thy holy habitation. lead] As xiii. 17, 21, xxxii. 34, Ps. lxxvii. 20, lxxviii. 14,—all of the Divine guidance of Israel in the wilderness.

redeemed] See on vi. 6.

guide] Properly, it seems, to judge from the Arabic, to lead to a watering-place; of Jehovah leading His servant, or His people, as a shepherd, Ps. xxxiii. 2 (to 'waters of rest'), Is. xl. 11 (EVV. 'gently lead'), xlix. 10 (to 'springs of water').

habitation] Heb. מִדְּבָרָא, properly homestead, or abode of shepherds and flocks (Is. lxxv. 10, Jer. xxxiii. 3); but often used in poetry of a habitation in general (as Pr. iii. 33, Is. xxxiii. 20). Here Canaan is probably meant (cf. Jer. x. 25, Ps. lxxix. 7), though the reference might be to Zion (2 S. xv. 25).

14—16. The poet pictures the neighbouring nations as seized with alarm, when they hear that Israel is advancing on its way to Canaan. The description is idealized: Edom, for instance, according to Nu. xx. 18—21, was in no fear of Israel whatever.

14. The peoples heard, they trembled;

Pangs] Properly, as of a woman in travail. Cf. Ps. xlvi. 6, Jer. vi. 24, l. 43.

15. Then were the chiefs of Edom dismayed;

The mighty men of Moab, trembling took hold upon them;

All the inhabitants of Canaan melted away (in fear).

Then] when they heard the tidings of the great disaster to the Egyptians. The terror thus inspired into them continued till Israel had passed by them and entered Canaan (v. 16). The Israelites did, 40 years afterwards, pass round Edom and Moab on the S. and E. of the Dead Sea: see Nu. xx. 21, xxi. 4, 13; Dt. ii. 1—9, 18.

All the inhabitants of Canaan are melted away.

16 Terror and dread falleth upon them ;

By the greatness of thine arm they are as still as a stone ;

Till thy people pass over, O LORD,

chiefs] Properly, clan-chiefs, or heads of clans (from <sup>1</sup>eleph, a family or clan, Jud. vi. 15, 1 S. x. 19, Mic. v. 2) ; a word used specially of the clan-chiefs of Edom (see Gen. xxxvi. 15—19, 21, 29, 30, 40—43 [= 1 Ch. i. 51—54]), and rare besides (Zech. ix. 7, xii. 5, 6, only). In EVV., here and in Gen. xxxvi., ‘duke’ represents the Lat. dux (which in its turn is based upon the ἡγεμῶν of the LXX.), and means simply leader.

dismayed] as Ps. xlviii. 5, for the same Heb. ‘Amazed’ (AS. amasian, to perplex ; connected with maze) meant formerly bewildered (cf. ‘to be in a maze’) or confounded by any strong emotion, especially by fear (cf. Jud. xx. 41, for the same word as here ; Job xxxii. 15 for אַתָּוּן ; and ‘amazement’ for πτόσις in 1 Pet. iii. 6, RV. ‘terror’ ; also ‘amazing,’ i.e. bewildering, ‘thunder’ in Shakespeare, Richard II. i. 3. 81) ; but now it suggests a wrong meaning (‘astonished’).

mighty men] The same rare word recurs 2 K. xxiv. 15, Ez. xvii. 13, xxxi. 11, 14, xxxii. 21 (‘strong’). It seems to be identical with the Heb. word for ‘ram’ : if this is really the case, it must have come to be used figuratively for leader ; cf. the similar use of ‘he-goats’ in Is. xiv. 9 (see RVm.).

trembling (רָעַד) took hold upon them] Cf. Ps. xlviii. 6 (רָעַדָּה, —both rare words).

melted away] fig. for, were incapacitated and helpless through terror and despair. Cf. Jos. ii. 9<sup>b</sup>, 24<sup>b</sup> (reminiscences of the present passage), Is. xiv. 31, Nah. ii. 6 (EVV. ‘is dissolved,’ to be understood in its old fig. sense of relaxed, enfeebled : the Heb. word is the same as here).

16. Terror and dread fell upon them ;

By the greatness of thine arm, they were as still as a stone :

Till thy people passed through, O Yahweh,

Till thy people passed through, which thou hadst purchased.

Terror, &c.] Cf. Jos. ii. 9 ‘and that your terror is fallen upon us.’

as still as a stone] i.e. at once motionless (Jos. x. 13 Heb.) and silent (Ps. xxxi. 17) through fear. For the comparison, cf. the ‘dumb stone’ of Hab. ii. 19.

passed through] viz. the nations through whom they passed on their progress to Canaan (Di. Bā., &c.) : cf. for the expression Dt. xxix. 16 ‘and how we passed through the midst of the nations through which ye passed.’ The poet idealizes the past ; and pictures the neighbouring peoples terror-struck, unable to move a hand to resist Israel, as it marched on to take possession of its inheritance in Canaan. The words do not refer, as the rend. of EVV. would imply that they do, to the passage of the Jordan.

purchased] The word does mean (marg.) to get (Gen. iv. 1, Prov. xvi. 16 al.) or acquire; but it is commonly used in the sense of to get by purchase, or buy (Gen. xxxiii. 19, &c.). And this no doubt is its meaning here; the idea being that Jehovah has 'redeemed' Israel (v. 13, vi. 6), like a slave, from servitude, and purchased it as His own possession (cf. Neh. v. 8 RVm.). The word is used similarly of Israel in Is. xi. 11 (see RVm.), Ps. lxxiv. 2 (cf. lxxviii. 54<sup>b</sup>).

17. Thou didst bring them in, and plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance,

*The place which thou hadst made for thee to dwell in, O Yahweh,
 The sanctuary, O Lord, which thy hands have established.*

The final goal of Israel's triumphant progress through the nations (v. 14—16): viz. its settlement in Canaan, with Jehovah's sanctuary established in its midst.

plant them] fix them in firmly: the figure, as 2 S. vii. 10, Am. ix. 15, Ps. xliv. 2, and elsewhere.

the mountain of thine inheritance] i.e. Canaan, called a 'mountain' on account of the mountainous character of many of its most important parts (Judah, Benjamin, and Ephraim, for instance). Cf. Dt. iii. 25, Is. xi. 9, Ps. lxxviii. 54<sup>b</sup> (with allusion to this passage).

of thine inheritance] in so far as it was His possession: cf. Jer. ii. 7, Ps. lxxix. 1; and (of the people) 1 S. x. 1, xxvi. 19, 2 S. xiv. 16, xx. 19, xxi. 3.

a place..for thee to dwell in] These words, exactly as 1 K. viii. 13 ('I have surely built thee an house of habitation, a place for thee to dwell in for ever'), in the poetical fragment (v. 12, 13), excerpted, it is almost certain (see Skinner's note on the passage in the Century Bible, or Barnes' in the Cambridge Bible), from the ancient 'Book of Jashar' (hence also the expression, 'place of thy (or his) dwelling,' in 1 K. viii. 39, 43, 49, Ps. xxxiii. 14). Di. thinks that the reference is to the sanctuary of Shiloh (which must have been a substantial building, 1 S. i. 3, 9, iii. 3, 15): others think that the terms used point rather to the Temple on Zion (with 'established,' in the next line, cf. Ps. xlviii. 8, lxxxvii. 5). Of course, the entire people was not 'planted' at either of these places: but the poet, as he goes on, narrows his outlook, and fixes his thoughts on Jehovah's earthly dwelling, the religious centre of the nation.

18. With this short concluding verse, 'glancing at Jehovah's lasting kingship (Dt. xxxiii. 5) over His people, settled round His sanctuary, the hymn is brought to a fine and effective close' (Di.). The thought of Jehovah as King occurs already in Dt. xxxiii. 5, and in the seemingly early Psalms, xxiv. 7—10, xxix. 10; but the stress laid on His active exertion of sovereignty occurs first in Mic. iv. 7, but is chiefly later, Is. lii. 7 (hence Ps. xciii. 1, xcvi. 10, xcvi. 1, xcvi. 1), Is. xxiv. 23 (post-exilic), Ps. cxlvi. 10 (with 'for ever,' as also Mic. iv. 7).

19. Probably an addition by the compiler who united together JE and P, emphasizing once again, in words adapted from xiv. 23, 28, 29 (P), the great deliverance which the poem celebrated.

brought again] brought back. Cf. on xiv. 26.

and the children of Israel, &c.] verbatim as xiv. 29<sup>a</sup>.

dry land] better, dry ground, to agree with xiv. 22, 29<sup>a</sup>.

20, 21. How the opening verse of the Song was sung by Miriam.

20. the prophetess] See Nu. xii. 2; and cf. Jud. iv. 4 (of Deborah).
the sister of Aaron] Miriam being more closely associated with Aaron than with Moses: cf. Nu. xii. 1 ff., where Miriam and Aaron act together, even against Moses. See also on ii. 1.

a timbrel] or hand-drum, i.e. a ring of wood or metal, covered with a tightly-drawn skin, held up in one hand, and struck by the fingers of the other. The same Heb. is sometimes rendered tabret. The hand-drum was used on joyous occasions, as Gen. xxxi. 27, 2 S. vi. 5, and with dances, as here, Jud. xi. 34, 1 S. xviii. 6, Jer. xxxi. 4. For women celebrating a victory, see Jud. xi. 34 (Jephthah's daughter), Ps. lxxviii. 11 (RV.), and esp. 1 S. xviii. 6, 7.

dances] For dancing on joyous religious occasions, cf. xxxii. 19, Jud. xxi. 21, 2 S. vi. 14, Ps. cxlix. 3, cl. 4. 'In the East dancing was, and is, the language of religion. David, to shew his fervour, danced before the Ark with all his might. In Hellas dancing accompanied every rite and every mystery. The choral dance afforded the outlet to religious enthusiasm which elsewhere is provided by services' (K. J. Freeman, Schools of Hellas 600—300 B.C., 1907, p. 143 f.).

21. answered] The word means (note the h), answered antiphonally

The horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

E And Moses led Israel onward from the Red Sea, and <sup>22</sup>they went out into the wilderness of Shur; and they went in song, even if,—as some think, connecting it with the Arab. ghanā (Lex. 777<sup>a</sup>),—it does not mean simply sang (comp. Nu. xxi. 17<sup>b</sup>; and esp. 1 S. xviii. 7, xxi. 11, xxix. 5 [where the same word is rendered, 'sing one to another']).

them] The pron. is masc., so the reference might seem to be to the men (v. 1<sup>a</sup>), after they had sung v. 1<sup>b</sup>. But this antecedent is rather remote: and as in the 2nd and 3rd plur. the masc. form is often used with reference to women (G.-K. § 135<sup>o</sup>), it is probably better (with Bā.) to suppose the women in v. 20<sup>b</sup> to be referred to; cf. 1 S. xviii. 7.

22—27. The journey from the Red Sea to Elim.

22. led...onward] properly, made...to journey (xii. 37); so Ps. lxxviii. 52<sup>a</sup>.

from the Red Sea] The Arabs regard 'Ayūn (or 'Oyūn) Mūsā, the 'springs of Moses,' 9 miles below Suez, on the E. side of the gulf, and 1½ miles from the coast, as the station at which the Israelites first halted, after their passage of the Red Sea. 'Ayūn Mūsā is a small oasis, where Robinson (i. 62), in 1838, counted 7 fountains, some evidently mere recent excavations in the sand, in which a little brackish water was standing, and saw about 20 stunted, untrimmed palm bushes, and a small patch of barley, irrigated from one or two of the fountains. More recently (cf. Ordnance Survey of Sinai, p. 73; Palmer, Desert of the Ex., 1871, p. 34 f.) the irrigation has been artificially improved: several acres of garden ground, containing fruit and vegetables, have been brought under cultivation, which supply the Suez market; and palms and tamarisk trees are more abundant. Whether however 'Ayūn Mūsā was really the Israelites' halting-place, or was only assumed to be such on account of its convenient situation opposite the supposed crossing-place, must remain uncertain: if the passage was made either through, or N. of, the Bitter Lakes (p. 126), 'Ayūn Mūsā, being 35, or 50, miles distant, would be too far off for at least the first stopping-place.

Shur] The name of the district on the E. frontier of Egypt (i.e. E. of a line extending from Suez to what is now Port Said), mentioned also in Gen. xvi. 7, xx. 1, xxv. 18 (where 'before,' or 'in front of,' means East of), 1 S. xxvii. 8. On theories of the origin of the name see SHUR in DB. Shur in Heb. means a 'wall'; and hence it has sometimes been supposed to denote the 'wall' built by the Egyptians, at least as early as Useratesen I, of the 12th dynasty, to protect their E. frontier against invaders from Asia. But it is uncertain whether the Egypt. word means a wall or only a line of military posts or fortresses; Shur also is the regular word for 'wall' only in Aramaic, in Heb. it occurs only twice, in poetry (Gen. xlix. 22; Ps. xviii. 29=2 S. xxii. 30): so it is very doubtful if this theory of the meaning of the name is correct (see further DB. s.v., with the references).

the wilderness] In the itinerary of P in Nu. xxxiii. 8, 'the wilderness of Etham': i.e., if this interpretation is correct, the part of the wilderness of Shur that was near Etham (xiii. 20).

23. Marah] Burckhardt, Travels [1810—11] in Syria, &c., 1822, p. 472, suggested that this might be the well of Howarah (or [Palmer] Hawwārah), about 47 miles SE. of 'Ayūn Mūsā, and 7 miles from the coast, on the usual route to Mt. Sinai, with water so bitter as to be undrinkable,—though at times (Palmer, Des. Ex. 40) it is palatable. It is 'a solitary spring of bitter water with a stunted palm-tree growing near it, and affording a delicious shade.' The identification has been accepted by many since Burckhardt: but it is far from certain (it need hardly be said that there is no etym. connexion between Hawwārah [said by Palmer to mean a small pool of undrinkable water] and Marah). In itself the site would be suitable, supposing that the Israelites crossed the sea at or near Suez: but it agrees badly with Nu. xxxiii. 8 (P), if Marah is here correctly placed in the 'wilderness of Etham' (see on xiii. 20), and it would be much too far, if the Israelites made their crossing at or near the Bitter Lakes: by those who adopt the latter view, 'Ain Nāba (also called el-Ghūrkhūdeh), a fountain with a considerable supply of brackish water (Rob. i. 61 f.), about 10 miles SE. of Suez, and 50 miles from Lake Timsāh, has been suggested for Marah, and 'Ayūn Mūsā (though this is only 6 miles SW. of 'Ain Nāba) for Elim (v. 27). Under the circumstances, as Di. says, it is impossible to speak with any certainty respecting the site of Marah.

24. murmured] as xvi. 2, 7, 8, xvii. 3, Nu. xiv. 2, 27, 29, 36, xvi. 11, 41, xvii. 5, Jos. ix. 18†. Cf. 'murmurings,' Ex. xvi. 7, 8, 9, 12, Nu. xiv. 27, xvii. 5, 10†.

25. cried unto Jehovah] Cf. xiv. 15, xvii. 4.

a tree] 'That there might be a bush or tree, whose leaves, fruit, bark or wood were able to sweeten bitter water is not impossible (see on such means adopted by the Tamils and Peruvians, Rosenm. Alt. u. neues Morgenland, ii. 28 f.); from the Bedawin of the present time, travellers have not been able to hear of such a tree (Rob. i. 67 f., Ebers, Gosen, 116 f.): according to de Lesseps (as quoted by Ebers, pp. 117,

E into the waters, and the waters were made sweet. There he made for them a statute and an ordinance, and there he proved them; | and he said, If thou wilt diligently hearken <sup>26</sup> to the voice of the LORD thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his eyes, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of the diseases upon thee, which I have put upon the Egyptians: for I am the LORD that healeth thee.

E And they came to Elim, where were twelve springs <sup>27</sup> of water, and threescore and ten palm trees: and they 531), however, a kind of barberry growing in the wilderness is so used' (Di.). Comp. Eccus. xxxviii. 5. Josephus' account of the incident (Ant. iii. 1, 2) is curious: see on this and other traditions, or interpretations, E. A. Abbott, Indices to Diatessarica (1907), pp. xi—lxiii.

There set he them, &c.] Cf. Jos. xxiv. 25 (the same words). 'Statute and ordinance,' as often (in the plur.) in Dt. (iv. 1, 5, 8, 14, &c. [in these passages rendered 'judgement'; see on xxi. 1]). What 'statute and ordinance' is meant, is not stated: apparently some duty, by the observance or non-observance of which, Israel's loyalty could be 'proved' (cf. on xvii. 2). The notice seems imperfectly connected with what precedes; and the second clause reads as if it were originally intended as an explanation of the name Massah ('Proving'), differing from the one given in xvii. 7.

26. Encouragement to Israel, to obey the commandments laid upon them. The verse approximates in style and tone to Deuteronomy, and is probably one of the parenetic additions of the compiler of JE (see on xiii. 3—16); notice Hearken to the voice, as Dt. xv. 5, xxviii. 1 al. (but with א, not ה, as here); Jehovah thy God, as Dt. i. 21, 31, and constantly; that which is right &c., as vi. 18, xii. 25, 28 al.; give ear, as i. 45 (elsewhere nearly always poet.); commandments...and statutes, as iv. 40, vi. 17, x. 13, &c.; keep, as iv. 40, xxvi. 17.

I will put, &c.] Dt. vii. 15 is based upon this passage (in spite of the Heb. word for 'diseases' being different).

that healeth thee] Cf. Ps. ciii. 3; also ch. xxiii. 25. The thought seems to be suggested by the incident of v. 25<sup>a</sup>: unwholesome or bitter water that has been made sweet is sometimes spoken of as 'healed' (2 K. ii. 21, 22, Ez. xvii. 8).

27. Elim] i.e. Terebinths, or perhaps Sacred trees in general (the word is quite possibly derived from 'el, 'god'), supposed by the common people to be inhabited by a deity, and venerated accordingly. When a tree or grove of trees is specially mentioned in the OT., a sacred tree, or grove, is often meant (cf. Is. i. 29): e.g. Gen. xii. 6 (see the writer's note ad loc.), xxxv. 4, 8, Jud. ix. 6, 37: see further NATURE-WORSHIP, §§ 2, 3, in EB. To the present day Palestine abounds in trees, esp.

16 encamped there by the waters. | And they took their P journey from Elim, and all the congregation of the children oaks, supposed to be 'inhabited,' or haunted by spirits (jinn); and the superstitious peasants hang rags upon them as tokens of homage (L. and B. ii. 104, 171 f., 222, 474).

Elim has been usually, since Burckhardt (p. 473 f.), identified with some spot in the Wady Gharandel<sup>1</sup>, a valley running down from the mountains about 7 miles SE. of Hawwárah, and forming a grateful contrast to the 54 miles of arid wilderness, which the traveller has passed through since leaving 'Ayün Mūsā. Two miles below the point at which the route by Hawwárah enters the valley, there are springs which form the usual watering-place for caravans passing along this route: lower down, as the valley comes within 2 or 3 miles of the coast, 'water rises in considerable volume to the surface, and nurtures a charming oasis,' in which waterfowl and other birds are abundant, and there are 'thickets of palms and tamarisks, beds of reeds and bulrushes, with a gurgling brook and pools' (Ordn. Survey, p. 75): the thorny shrub called Gharkhad, with a juicy and refreshing berry, of which the Arabs are very fond, is also frequent in it (Burckh. l.c.; cf. Rob. i. 68 f.). The identification must not however be regarded as certain: there is no similarity of name to support it; and as Di. remarks, if the passage of the Israelites took place either through, or N. of, the Bitter Lakes, Elim would be more suitably located at 'Ayün Mūsā.

CHAP. XVI.

The journey to the wilderness of Sin. Manna and Quails given.

In the main from P, with short passages from the parallel narrative of J. The marks of P are particularly evident in the parts assigned to him in the text: some (not all) are pointed out in the notes. The general representation is the same in both narratives: but only P mentions the quails (in J the quails are given later, after a complaint of the monotony of the manna, Nu. xi. 4—34), and only J the disobedience on the seventh day of some of the people (vv. 27—30). Both narratives bring the gift of manna into connexion with the sabbath, and make it an occasion for inculcating its observance (vv. 22—26; 27—30); J also (v. 4<sup>b</sup>, cf. v. 28) makes it a means of testing Israel's obedience. Vv. 33 f., if not vv. 9 f. (see the notes) as well, presupposing the existence of the Tent of Meeting, seem to indicate that P's account of the manna (v. 2 ff.) stood originally at a later point in his narrative (Bä.), after the erection of the Tabernacle had been described, perhaps (Ew. Hist. ii. 174; Di. p. 165 [<sup>2</sup>181], and, on v. 2; Kittel), after Nu. x. Cf. S. A. Cook, Jewish Quart. Rev. 1906, p. 742 ff.

xvi. 1. the congregation] P's standing expression (xii. 3). So v. 2 &c.

P of Israel came unto the wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of Egypt. And the the wilderness of Sin] xvii. 1, Nu. xxxiii. 11, 12†. In Nu. xxxiii. 10 the people are said to have halted, between Elim and the wilderness of Sin, at the Red Sea. Accepting the oasis in W. Gharandel as Elim (on xv. 27), the 'Red Sea' station can hardly have been anywhere but at or near the mouth of Wādy Taiyibeh,—perhaps in the littoral plain of el-Murkheiyeh, just beyond it. There is no passage along the coast from W. Gharandel to W. Taiyibeh, the abrupt projecting cliffs of the lofty Jebel Hammam Far'un ('Mountain of Pharaoh's Bath,'—1570 feet) effectually stopping it: the Israelites, if they came in this direction, must have retraced their steps up the W. Gharandel to the point where (see on xv. 26) W. Hawwārah enters it (Ordn. Surv. 75, 76), and then have turned to the right for 12 miles over the desert uplands at the back of J. Hammam Far'un, till they arrived at the top of W. Shebeikah (the 'Wādy of network'), by which they could descend, 'through an amazing labyrinth of chalky hillocks and ridges,' to the head of W. Taiyibeh, and so pass straight down to the coast—in all 21 miles (O.S. 156). In W. Taiyibeh, a little above its mouth, there are a few brackish springs, with some stunted palms growing near them (O.S. 81).

From the mouth of W. Taiyibeh there are two principal routes to Jebel Serbāl and Jebel Mūsā—one, the northern route, back up to the head of W. Taiyibeh again (4 miles), then to the right along the W. Hamr (18 miles), to the long upland plain called Debbet er-Ramleh (the 'Plain of sand'), and thence through a succession of mountain valleys to either J. Mūsā or J. Serbāl; the other, the coast route, on to the broad flinty plain of el-Markhā, and then, either leaving this plain on the E., up the Seiḥ Sidreh, and afterwards along the W. Mukatteb into the Wādy Feiran, or else keeping along the coast for 7 miles beyond the SE. end of el-Markhā, and there ascending the W. Feiran from its mouth,—in either case, the W. Feiran leading on to both Serbāl and J. Mūsā. Knob., followed by Keil and Canon Cook, advocated the former of these routes, supposing the 'wilderness of Sin' to be the Debbet er-Ramleh. But, if the Israelites were already on the 'Red Sea' (Nu. xxxiii. 10), at the mouth of W. Taiyibeh or beyond, the latter is much the more natural route for them to have followed (so Rob. i. 73, 120; and the members of the Ordnance Survey Expedition): in this case el-Markhā will be the wilderness of Sin. But it must be admitted that neither Debbet er-Ramleh nor el-Markhā is at all naturally described, as a glance at the map will shew, as 'between' Elim and Sinai, at least if Elim be in the W. Gharandel.

4, 5 (J). Jehovah promises that He will give the people bread from heaven. The promise here, it is to be noted, relates only to the 'bread' (i.e. the manna); the 'flesh between the two evenings' (i.e. the quails) is promised only in P (v. 12).

4. Then] The Heb. is simply, And (Jehovah said &c.). rain, &c.] Cf. Ps. lxxviii. 24 f. ('rained,' 'corn of heaven,' 'bread of the mighty,' i.e. angels), cv. 40 ('bread of heaven'), Neh. ix. 15, Wisd. xvi. 20 (ἀγγέλων τροφή, 'angels' food'), John vi. 31.

that I may prove them (Dt. viii. 2, xiii. 3: see on xvii. 2), &c.] it will be a test of their obedience, if they are attentive to carry out the injunction which I lay upon them. Cf. Dt. viii. 16, and below, p. 156. my law] properly, my direction; see p. 162.

5. prepare] viz. for eating (see Nu. xi. 8); cf. Gen. xliiii. 16 ('make ready').

twice as much] The meaning seems to be that, as the supply will be more abundant on the 6th day, so every one will naturally gather more; and when they come to prepare it, they will find that it is just twice as much as they gather usually.

Vv. 9—12 should follow here. The verses are accidentally misplaced: as they stand, the message given to the people (vv. 6—8) precedes the command to deliver it (vv. 9—12).

6—8. Moses communicates to the people Jehovah's intention (vv. 9—12) of giving them food twice a day, viz. flesh in the evening, and bread in the morning.

6. that Jehovah, &c.] and not Moses and Aaron (v. 3) only: the

P land of Egypt: and in the morning, then ye shall see the glory of the LORD; for that he heareth your murmurings against the LORD: and what are we, that ye murmur against us? | And Moses said, This shall be, when the LORD shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full; for that the LORD heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him: and what are we? your murmurings are not against us, but against the LORD.

P | And Moses said unto Aaron, Say unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, Come near before the LORD: for he hath heard your murmurings. And it came to pass, as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel, that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the LORD appeared in the cloud. And the word in the Heb. is in an emphatic position. They will know this, by the food which He will then provide.

7. see the glory, &c.] His might and greatness will be declared by His gift of manna.

and what, &c.] i.e. since what &c.: we are merely His agents; your murmurings therefore are really against Him. Cf. Nu. xvi. 11<sup>b</sup> (P).

8. 'An explanatory gloss of the compiler on vv. 6, 7' (Di).

This shall be] i.e. Ye shall know and see what I have told you (v. 6 f.).

9—12. The sequel to v. 3: the murmurings have been heard by Jehovah: the people are told to draw near to Him, while He gives His answer to them; and He communicates His reply to Moses.

9. Come near] for the sacred purpose: cf. xii. 48, xxxvi. 2.

before Jehovah] at the place where He manifests Himself. The expression commonly means, especially in P (e.g. v. 33, xxvii. 21, Nu. xvi. 7, 16, 17), before the Ark or the Tent of Meeting; and if, as is probable from v. 33 f., P's account of the manna once stood at a later point in his narrative, this will be the meaning here (so Di).

10. that they looked, &c.] Cf. the very similar passage, Nu. xvi. 42. The 'wilderness' is however remarkable: as Di remarks, they were in the wilderness (vv. 1, 2, 3), so that some more definite direction would be expected: originally, as he suggests, probably 'toward the sanctuary,' or 'the tent of meeting' (as Nu. l.c.), stood here (so Bä., McNeile).

the glory of Jehovah, &c.] A brilliant glow of fire (cf. on xiii. 21 f.), symbolizing Jehovah's presence, gleamed through the cloud, resting (if the conjecture in the last note be accepted) upon the Tent of Meeting. The cloud shrouds the full brilliancy of the glory, which human eye could not behold. The 'glory of Jehovah' is often mentioned in P in the same sense: xxiv. 16 f.; and in connexion with the Tent of Meeting, xxix. 43, xl. 34, 35 (cf. 1 K. viii. 11, Ez. xliii. 4, 5); and especially Lev. ix. 6, 23, Nu. xiv. 10, xvi. 19, 42, xx. 6. 11. Jehovah, who has thus manifested Himself, now declares His will to Moses. Notice 'flesh,' as well as 'bread,' here, as against 'bread' alone in the promise of v. 4 (J).

After v. 12, vv. 6—8 should follow: see above.

13<sup>a</sup>. In the evening the quails came up with the wind (cf. Nu. xi. 31) in such numbers that they covered the camp. Quails belong to the partridge family. They are migratory birds; and in March and April come up from Arabia and other southern countries and cross the Mediterranean,—from the Levant to Malta,—in vast numbers; and return southwards from Europe in even more enormous flights towards the end of September. They always fly with the wind (cf. Nu. xi. 31). When they alight, which they generally do at night, they cover the ground (cf. Nu. xi. 31<sup>b</sup>, 32<sup>a</sup>); and being usually exhausted, can be captured by hand in great numbers. By the Egyptians they were not cooked, but cured (Hdt. ii. 77); cf. Nu. xi. 32<sup>b</sup> (spread out to dry in the sun). See further NHB. p. 229 ff.

13<sup>b</sup>—15<sup>a</sup>. Description of the manna (perhaps from J). There are other descriptions in v. 31 (P), and Nu. xi. 7—9 (JE), the latter given when it is told how the Israelites afterwards became tired of such poor food.

14. The Hebrews conceived dew to fall from heaven (Dt. xxxiii. 13, 28, Prov. iii. 20 al.); and the manna falls with it (so Nu. xi. 9): cf. v. 4, where it is said to be rained 'from heaven.'

a thin flake (RVm.)] properly, it seems, from the Arabic, 'a thin scab or scale-like thing' (see Di., and Lex.). The word is a peculiar one, and occurs only here: but 'round' (Saad., Kimchi, EVV.) has no philological support.

15<sup>a</sup>. What is it?] Heb. mān hū? The question is intended as a

P Moses said unto them, It is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat. popular etymology of 'manna' (Heb. mān). Mān, however, in the sense of What? is not a Hebrew word, though, as a contraction from mā dēn, 'what, then?' (mā being the ordinary Aramaic for what?) it is common in Syriac; and man (not mān) in both Aram. and Arab. means Who? Mān is evidently used here merely for the sake of the etymology: and, though we do not know how early the Aram. contraction mān came into use, the verse seems to have been written by one who was acquainted with it. The real origin of the Heb. mān, Arab. man, 'manna,' is not known: Ebers, 226—8, identifies it with mannu in two (Ptolemaic?) inscriptions at Edfu; but, though this may be 'manna,' it is still uncertain if it is an Egyptian or (Ebers) Bedawi word.

bread] The manna is always spoken of as bread (v. 4): it was a substitute, not for other food (e.g. flesh), but, as Nu. xi. 8 especially shews ('ground' in the hand-mill, and made into 'cakes'), for corn, or other grain.

16. This is the thing which Jehovah hath commanded] so v. 32. One of P's standing formulae: xxxv. 4, Lev. viii. 5, ix. 6, xvii. 2, Nu. xxx. 2, xxxvi. 6†.

according to his eating] as xii. 4. So vv. 18, 21. This, the rest of the verse goes on to state, would amount on an average to an omer a head in a family.

an omer] only found in this chapter. The Arab. ghumar is a small drinking-cup or bowl, said to be used by Arabs when travelling in the desert: in Heb., it seems, the corresponding word was specialized to denote a measure. The tenth of an ephah (v. 36) would be about 6½ pints (Kennedy, DB. iv. 912). It is remarkable that everywhere else, even in the same source P, the expression used is 'the tenth part of an ephah' (4 times), or the special word 'issārōn (28 times [all P]). Perhaps 'omer' was an old word handed down with the story; the use in P of other expressions in its place seems to imply that when P was written, it was not in general use. Cf. v. 36 (though this might be an explanatory gloss, added afterwards).

a head] Heb. a skull (gulgōleth; cf. 'Golgotha'). Used similarly in enumerations, by P (Ex. xxxviii. 26, Nu. i. 2, 18, 20, 22, iii. 47 [E.V. polls]), and in 1 Ch. xxiii. 3, 24.

persons] Heb. souls (see on i. 5): cf. the same phrase in xii. 4 (P).

18 some more, some less. And when they did mete it with an P omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man 19 according to his eating. And Moses said unto them, Let 20 no man leave of it till the morning. Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank: and Moses 21 was wroth with them. And they gathered it morning by morning, every man according to his eating: and when the 22 sun waxed hot, it melted. And it came to pass, that on the sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for each one: and all the rulers of the congregation came 23 and told Moses. And he said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath spoken, To-morrow is a solemn rest,

17. some more, some less] according to the number in their family.

18. They gathered, as well as they could judge roughly, according to the size of their families; when they afterwards measured what they had gathered, they found to their surprise that they had each gathered exactly an omer a head. The verse is quoted in 2 Cor. viii. 15.

had...over] The Heb. verb is unusual, and found only in P (v. 23, xxvi. 12, 13, Lev. xxv. 27, Nu. iii. 46, 48, 49f).

19, 20. None to be left over till the morning. The manna was to be the daily food of the Israelites in the wilderness, and so to be eaten fresh every day. In the East, it is the custom to bake bread daily, and yesterday's bread is not eaten.

22—26. Another surprise. On the 6th day they discover that they have gathered, without knowing it, a double quantity. Moses gives directions what is to be done with it; and draws from it a lesson on the observance of the sabbath.

22. the rulers of the congregation] A standing phrase of P's: see xxxiv. 31, Nu. xvi. 2, xxxi. 13 al.; and often rulers (also rendered princes: lit. one lifted up above others, i.e. chief, ruler, &c.) alone.

23. This is that which Jehovah hath spoken] Lev. x. 3 (P), also introducing an explanation of something unexpected.

a solemn rest] a cessation or resting; Heb. shabbāthōn (analogous in form to shiddāphōn, blasting, Dt. xxviii. 22, timmahōn, astonishment, ib. v. 28, zikkārōn, memorial, Ex. xii. 14, &c.), akin to shabbāth ('sabbath'): there is nothing in the word to suggest the idea of 'solemn.' The term is a technical one in P: it is used of New Year's Day, Lev. xxiii. 24, of the first and eighth days of the Feast of Booths, ib. v. 39, and of the sabbatical year, Lev. xxv. 5; also, in the expression shabbath shabbāthōn, 'sabbath of cessation' (intensifying the idea of cessation from work), of the sabbath, Ex. xxxi. 15, xxxv. 2, Lev. xxiii.

P a holy sabbath unto the LORD: bake that which ye will bake, and seethe that which ye will seethe; and all that remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning. And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade: and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein. And Moses said, Eat that to-day; for to-day is a sabbath unto the LORD: to-day ye shall not find it in the field. Six days ye shall gather it; but on the seventh day is the sabbath, in it there shall be none. | And it came to pass on the seventh day, that there went out some of the people for to gather, and they found none. And the LORD said unto Moses, How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws? See, for that the LORD hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day. So the people rested on the seventh day. | And the house of Israel called to be kept] Heb. for a keeping, as xii. 6 (see the note), Nu. xix. 9; and (for a permanency) vv. 32, 33, 34 below, Nu. xvii. 10. Another of P's technical expressions.

27—30 (J). From the disregard shewn by some of the people to the promise of v. 5 (which was followed, presumably, in J, when J's narrative was intact, by an express prohibition to gather the manna on the seventh day), Moses takes occasion to inculcate the observance of the sabbath.

28. How long, &c.] Cf. the similarly introduced reproachful question, Nu. xiv. 11 (J); also Jos. xviii. 3.

my commandments and my laws] There has been no mention before the present chapter of the Israelites' refusal to obey Jehovah's commands. But P's account of the manna probably stood originally (see p. 144) at a later point of the narrative.

29. in his place] where he is: see in the Heb. x. 23, Hab. iii. 16 al. (Lex. 1065<sup>b</sup> 2 a). His place in the following clause is in the Heb. quite different.

Coriander is an umbelliferous plant, which grows wild in Egypt and Palestine, producing small greyish-white round seeds, about the size of a peppercorn, with a pleasant spicy flavour. The seeds are used largely in the East as a spice to mix with bread, and to give an aromatic flavour to sweetmeats (NHB, p. 440). In Nu. xi. 8 the manna is also said to have resembled bdellium (Gen. ii. 12), i.e. the transparent wax-like gum or resin, valued for its fragrance, called by the Greeks βδέλλα.

[wafers] Only here: LXX. ἐγκρις, i.e. (Athen. xiv. 54, p. 645, cited by Kn.) pastry made with oil and honey. The root means in Arab. and Eth. to spread out. In Nu. xi. 8 the taste of the manna is said to have been like a rich oily cake (חֶמֶץ וְשֶׁן, i.e. oily richness; LXX. ἐγκρις ἐξ ἐλαίου, Vulg. panis oleatus; RVm. cakes baked with oil). Travellers state that the manna gathered from trees (see below) is used by the natives of the Sinaitic Peninsula as 'a dainty instead of honey.'

36. An explanatory note: cf. on v. 16.

P manna, until they came unto the borders of the land of Canaan. Now an omer is the tenth part of an ephah. 36

The manna of the Peninsula of Sinai is the sweet juice of the Tarfa, a species of Tamarisk. It exudes in summer by night from the trunk and branches, and forms small round white grains, which (as observed by Seetzen in 1809) partly adhere to the twigs of the trees, and partly drop to the ground: in the early morning it is of the consistency of wax, but the sun's rays soon melt it (cf. v. 21, above), and later in the day it disappears, being absorbed in the earth. A fresh supply appears each night during its season (June and July). The Arabs gather it in the early morning, boil it down, strain it through coarse stuff, and keep it in leather skins: they 'pour it like honey over their unleavened bread; its taste is agreeable, somewhat aromatic, and as sweet as honey' (Burckh., p. 600). In a cool place it keeps for long: the monks of the Sinai monastery store samples of it, which they sell or give to travellers and pilgrims (Rob. i. 115; Ebers, p. 225), as their predecessors did, 13 centuries ago, to Antoninus (Itin. § 39). According to Ehrenberg (Rob. i. 590) it is produced by the puncture of an insect (now called Gossyparia mannifera). It softens in the heat of the hand, and consists almost entirely of sugar; so it cannot be 'ground,' or made into 'cakes' (Nu. xi. 8). It is not found in all parts of the Peninsula; W. Gharandel, W. Taiyibeh, W. Feiran, W. Sheikh (leading round on the N. from J. Serbāl to J. Mūsā: see on xix. 1), and W. Naṣb (8—10 miles S.E. of J. Mūsā), are named as parts in which it is abundant. It is found only after a rainy spring, and hence frequently fails altogether. The quantity yielded by the Peninsula in modern times is small—according to Burckhardt (in 1816), 500—600 pounds annually<sup>1</sup>.

The manna described in the Pentateuch thus resembles the manna produced naturally in the Peninsula, in, approximately, the place (El Markhā, between Wādy Taiyibeh and Wādy Feiran,—if this was really the 'wilderness of Sin') of at least its first appearance; in colour, appearance, and taste (vv. 14, 31, Nu. xi. 8); in being found and gathered in the early morning; in melting in the sun; and in being called by the same name which is still used in Arabic: it differs from it in being represented as found not under the tamarisk trees, but on the surface of the wilderness generally, after the disappearance of the dew; as falling in sufficient quantity to feed daily an immense multitude of people; as adjusting itself automatically to the household needs of each person who gathered it; as not falling on the sabbath, the needs of that day being supplied by a double amount being provided on the previous day; as being not confined to wet years, or to the districts on the W. of the Peninsula, but as lasting, apparently continuously, for forty years, throughout the whole journeyings of the Israelites to the border of Canaan; as being capable of being 'ground' and made into 'cakes,' like meal; and as putrefying if kept (except on the 6th day of the week) till the next morning. It is evident that the Biblical manna, while on the one hand (like the Plagues) it has definite points of contact with a natural phenomenon or product of the country, differs from the natural manna in the many praeternatural or miraculous features attributed to it. According to Dillmann, 'the intention of the story (Sage) followed by the writer was to explain how the Hebrews, during their long journey through the wilderness, where there is no corn, obtained their most important means of life. The question was solved by the supposition that God, in His infinite power, had sent them bread from heaven, in the shape of manna, which was of such a nature that it could be used as earthly corn.'

The narrative is to be taken as a signal and beautiful symbolical illustration of the great truth of God's ever-sustaining providence: He supplies His people with food, He cares for them in their needs, and He makes the food which He gives them the vehicle of spiritual lessons. The writer of Deuteronomy (viii. 3, 16f.) points to the manna as illustrating the discipline of the wilderness; Israel was 'humbled' by being suffered to feel a want, and then by its being taught how, for its relief, and for its own very existence, it was dependent upon the (creative) word of God; it was further 'proved,' by the opportunity thus afforded it of shewing whether or not it would accommodate itself, trustfully and contentedly (contrast Nu. xi. 6, xxi. 5), to this state of continued dependence upon an ordinance of God. In St John (vi. 31 ff.), our Lord, after the reference made by the Jews to the manna eaten by the fathers in the wilderness, uses imagery suggested by the manna to denote Himself as the 'bread of life,' which 'cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.' For other later allusions, see Wisd. xvi. 20 (with the last words here, 'agreeing to every taste,' cf. the Rabb. legend that the manna adapted itself to the taste of every individual, tasting like what he himself desired it to be: see Jewish Encycl. s.v.), xix. 21; 1 Cor. x. 3 (πνευματικὸν βρῶμα); and Taylor, Sayings of the Jewish Fathers, ed. 2, p. 178f. In Apoc. Bar. xxix. 8, Sib. Orac. vii. 149 (cf. Rev. ii. 17) it is to be the food of the elect in the future Messianic kingdom.

*The Israelites reach Rephidim. Water given to them at Massah.
The victory over Amalek.*

V. 1<sup>a</sup> (to Rephidim) has all the marks of P: the rest of the chapter belongs in the main to E (notice in particular the 'rod' in vv. 5, 9): but v. 3 reads like a doublet of v. 1<sup>b</sup>, 2<sup>a</sup>; and the double question in v. 2, the corresponding double name for the same place in v. 7, and the double explanation in the same verse, suggest somewhat strongly an amalgamation of two sources. It looks as if a Meribah-story from E—a doublet to J's Meribah-story preserved fragmentarily in Nu. xx. 1—13 (vv. 1<sup>b</sup>, 3<sup>a</sup>, 5)—had been here, on account of the similarity of motive, combined with a Massah-story from J.

The stations between the wilderness of Sin and Rephidim, at which the Israelites thus halted, were, according to Nu. xxxiii. 12—14 (P), Dophkah and Alush (both unidentified). 'Journey' (from journée) is probably used here in its old sense of a day's travel.

according to the commandment (Heb. mouth) of Jehovah] A frequent expression in P: Nu. iii. 16, 19, 51, iv. 37, 41, &c.

Rephidim] Probably in the upper part of the broad and long Wādy Feiran, the 'finest valley in the Peninsula' (Burckh.). As was mentioned on xvi. 1, W. Feiran could be reached from the plain el-Markhā, either from the middle of the plain up the Seiḥ Sidreh on the E., or, 7 miles beyond the end of the plain, from the mouth of W. Feiran itself: the two routes converge at a point about 16 miles from the mouth of W. Feiran. The W. Feiran leads up Eastwards into the heart of the Peninsula. At about 30 miles from its mouth (see the Map), the traveller sees, 3 miles on his right, between W. 'Ajeleh and W. 'Aleyat, the lofty peaks of J. Serbāl; continuing up W. Feiran, he reaches, after 30, 37, or 41 miles, according to the route taken (see p. 182), J. Mūsā. At the junction of W. 'Aleyat with W. Feiran are ruins of the ancient episcopal town of Pharan, and of the churches and monasteries connected with it. For about 4 miles above these ruins there extends the oasis of W. Feiran, watered by a never-failing stream, in which the date palm is largely cultivated: Burckhardt (p. 602) says that the gardens and date plantations, nearly every one irrigated by its own well, extended uninterruptedly along the whole of the 4 miles: cucumbers, melons, gourds, also, as well as acacias, tamarisks, and other trees grew there (cf. Palmer, Desert of the Ex., pp. 154, 158, who describes this as the most fertile part of the Peninsula). The name Rephidim has not been preserved: but it is placed by Eusebius (Onom. 145. 25) near Pharan, and identified with it by Cosmas Indicopleustes, c. 535—40 A.D. (Rob. i. 126; Ordn. Surv. p. 199); and Antoninus (Itin. § 40), writing c. 570 A.D., states that a chapel was shewn there, the altar in which was supposed to stand upon the stones which supported Moses' hands. This identification of Rephidim has been accepted by Lepsius, Ebers, and the members of the Ordnance Survey party (except the Rev. F. W. Holland), the Israelite encampment, it is supposed, having been, not as far up the valley as the oasis itself (in which water would hardly have been needed, v. 1<sup>b</sup>), but 3 or 4 miles below it, and the Amalekites having come down the valley to prevent the Israelites from gaining possession of the oasis (Major Palmer, Sinai,<sup>2</sup> pp. 107 f., 86). A hill, on the N. edge of the Wādy, about 720 feet high, called Jebel el-Tahuneh (the 'Mount of the Windmill'), covered with remains of chapels, cells, and tombs, has been suggested as the spot from which Moses viewed the battle (Ordn. Surv. p. 212; Prof. Palmer, Desert of the Ex. p. 162, with view, and map opposite p. 165; Major Palmer, Sinai, p. 138). (The Rev. F. W. Holland and Canon Cook (Speaker's Comm. pp. 138—40) placed Rephidim some 27 miles beyond Feiran, at the narrow defile el-Watīyeh; and Keil placed it even beyond el-Watīyeh, at the point where W. Sheikh enters the plain er-Rāhah, just N. of J. Mūsā.) Dillm. describes the different views that have been taken about the situation of Rephidim; but wisely makes no attempt to decide between them.

1<sup>b</sup>—7. Water given to the people from the rock in Horeb.

2. Wherefore] the Heb. is simply And.

strove, i.e. disputed, expostulated. The word means properly to argue a case in a court of law; but it is often used more generally. Cf. as here, in the similar narrative, Nu. xx. 3, 13; also Gen. xxvi. 20, 21, 22, xxxi. 36 ('chode'), Jud. xi. 25. (Not the word so rendered in ii. 13, xxi. 22, which means to quarrel or fight.)

why [as just before] do ye put Jehovah to the proof?] by doubting, viz. (v. 7) whether He is really in your midst (cf. Nu. xi. 20, xiv. 14), and able to supply your needs. Tempt is a misleading rendering: for to 'tempt,' in modern English, has acquired the sense of provoking or enticing a person in order that he may act in a particular way: whereas the Heb. nissāh is a neutral word, and means to test or prove a person to see whether he will act in a particular way (xvi. 4), or whether the character he bears is well established (1 K. x. 1). God thus 'proves' a person, or puts him to the test, when He subjects him to a trial, to ascertain what his character is, or whether his loyalty to Him is sincere (xvi. 4, Dt. viii. 2, xiii. 3; cf. Gen. xxii. 1, Ex. xv. 25, xx. 20: so the 'temptations' of Dt. iv. 34, vii. 19, xxix. 3 are really trials, or *proving*s, of Pharaoh's disposition and purpose); and men test or 'prove' God when they act as if questioning, and so challenging Him to give proof of, His word, or promise, or ability to help; so here and v. 7 (cf. Dt. vi. 16, Ps. xcvi. 9), Nu. xiv. 22, Ps. lxxviii. 18 (see v. 19 f.), 41, 56, cvi. 14, cf. Is. vii. 12: in all these passages 'tempt' obscures the meaning.

If the analysis of the ch., adopted above, is correct, this clause will have stood originally after v. 3.

3. murmured] see on xv. 24.

Wherefore, &c.] cf. Nu. xx. 4, 5; also Ex. xiv. 11 f., xvi. 3.

6. stand before thee] be present with My omnipotence (Di): a fine and striking anthropomorphism.

in Horeb] The statement occasions great difficulty,—at least for those who place Rephidim in W. Feiran, and identify Sinai (substantially = Horeb) with J. Mūsā, by the shortest route 24 miles (see above) beyond W. Feiran. If Sinai were J. Serbāl, the mountain above W. Feiran, on the S., there would be no difficulty; nor would there be any, if Sinai were J. Mūsā, and Rephidim were where Keil places it, at the SE. entrance to the plain er-Rāhah, just N. of J. Mūsā. 'Horeb,' however, is equally with 'Sinai' the scene of the lawgiving (see Dt. iv. 15); so, even though (see on iii. 1) it may have been a somewhat wider term than 'Sinai,' it is scarcely likely that it will have included territory separated from it by a rough mountainous country, and only to be reached by a mountain valley at least 24 miles long. If, therefore, Rephidim is rightly placed in W. Feiran, and J. Mūsā is rightly identified with Sinai, the most natural supposition is that the author wrote without an accurate knowledge of the topography, and did not realize how far 'Horeb' was from 'Rephidim.' It is, however, a question whether ch. xvii.—xviii. did not originally stand at a later point of the narrative, after ch. xxxiv. (cf. p. 162), in which case Rephidim might be near 'Horeb.'

Meribah] i.e. 'Strife' (Gen. xiii. 8), from rib, to 'strive,' v. 2. In Nu. xx. 1—13 (J and P) there is a similar account, which reads like a variant tradition, of water produced by Moses from a rock (sela, not sūr as here) at Kadesh ('Ain Qadish, 50 miles S. of Beersheba), the spring being afterwards called, from the fact that the Israelites 'strove' there with Jehovah, the 'waters of Meribah' (vv. 3, 13 al.), or 'of Meribath-Kadesh' (Nu. xxvii. 14, Ez. xlviii. 28 al.). It is strange in the present narrative that one place should receive two names; it is doubtless due, as suggested above, to the combination of two narratives. Massah is mentioned besides in Dt. vi. 16, ix. 22, xxxiii. 8 (|| 'the waters of Meribah,' Nu. xx.), Ps. xcv. 8 (|| 'Meribah').

8—16. The victory over the Amalekites. The Amalekites were what we should call a nomad Bedawi tribe, who are spoken of as having their home in the desert S. of Palestine: in the 'Negeb,' or 'South,' of Judah, Nu. xiii. 29, xiv. 25, 43, 45, about Kadesh Gen. xiv. 7, and in the same neighbourhood in 1 S. xv. 7, xxvii. 8, xxx. 1: they corresponded in fact very much to the Azāzimeh tribe, who now inhabit a large part of the elevated limestone plateau, called the Tih, between the mountains of the Sinaitic Peninsula and the Mediterranean Sea. Their appearance here in the Sinaitic Peninsula is not a substantial difficulty: as Di. remarks, 'a branch of them may have been settled in or about the oasis in W. Feiran (Leps., Ebers); or they may in May or June have led their flocks up into the cooler and fresher pastures in the mountains (Kn. Ke.); or they may even have made a raid against Israel from their homes on the Tih (Bunsen)': whichever supposition is the correct one, 'it was natural enough that the nomads, who lived on the scanty products of this region, should do their utmost to expel the intruders. That the narrative, in spite of its legendary features, has a historical foundation, cannot be doubted' (Nöldeke, EB. i. 128).

8. Then] Heb. And (Amalek came &c.). The immediate sequence expressed by Then is not necessarily implied in the Heb.

journt with Israel] In Dt. xxv. 18 it is said in particular that Amalek 'met Israel in the way,' and 'cut off at the rear (lit. tailed) in thee all that were fagged behind thee, when thou wast faint and weary,' exhausted by heat or other accident of the journey.

9. Joshua] mentioned here for the first time. Afterwards he appears

E of the hill with the rod of God in mine hand. So Joshua 10 did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur went up to the top of the hill. And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that 11 Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed. But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a 12 stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun. the rod of God] as iv. 20.

10. Hur] Although mentioned besides only in xxiv. 14, Hur must have been a man of some importance at the time of the Exodus. No particulars are given about his family. It is not probable that he is identical with the grandfather of Bezal'el, of the same name, xxxi. 2, &c. Later Jewish tradition (Jos. Ant. iii. 2. 4) makes him Miriam's husband.

11. held up, &c.] a gesture suggestive partly of strenuousness and energy, partly of appeal for help to God.

12. steady] Heb. steadiness (G.-K. § 141<sup>d</sup>); elsewhere always in a moral sense, steadfastness, faithfulness. See the writer's note on Hab. ii. 4 in the Century Bible.

13. discomfited] rather, disabled, or (in a fig. sense) prostrated (RVm.); lit. weakened<sup>1</sup>. The verb occurs otherwise in Heb. only Job xiv. 10<sup>a</sup> ('man dieth and is powerless'), and Is. xiv. 12 (על־שׁוֹרֵשׁ cannot mean 'lay low': read probably, '(lying) powerless on the corpses'): but it is found in the Targums; the cognate adj. weak occurs in Joel iv. 10, and is common in Aramaic; and the substantive weakness in Ex. xxxii. 18.

with the edge of the sword] lit. according to the mouth of the sword, i.e. as the sword devours (2 S. xi. 25), = without quarter. So always. 'With the edge' is not correct.

14, 15. Provision made for the remembrance of the victory to be handed down to future generations.

in a book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua: <sup>1</sup>that I will utterly blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven. And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it <sup>2</sup>Jehovah-nissi: and he said, <sup>3</sup>The LORD hath sworn: the LORD will have war with Amalek from generation to generation.

in a book] The Heb., as pointed, is, in the book, whence it has often been supposed that the reference is to the history which Moses had already begun to write. But though this might be the meaning of the Heb., it is certainly not the necessary meaning: 'the Hebrew always writes in the book, Nu. v. 23, 1 S. x. 25, Jer. xxxii. 10, Job xix. 23 (cf. Est. ix. 25 Heb.)' (Di.); an object being conceived as definite in Heb. not only because it is already known or has been mentioned before, but also because it is taken for a particular purpose, and so made definite in the speaker's or writer's mind. See numerous examples in G.-K. § 126<sup>b</sup>: e.g. Ex. xvi. 32 the omerful, xxi. 20 with the rod, Nu. xxi. 9 put it on the pole, Jos. ii. 15 with the cord, &c.; in all such cases we naturally say a.

rehearse] Heb. place; the meaning being, impress it upon Joshua. 'Rehearse,' at least as understood now, is not very suitable. It means properly (from Fr. reherser) to harrow over again, fig. to go over repeatedly: in Jud. v. 11, 1 S. xvii. 31, it is used in the sense of tell, recite.

for (marg.) &c.] The memory of the incident is to be preserved, because, on account of the unfriendliness shewn in it by Amalek, it is Jehovah's purpose to blot out their name from under heaven.

I will utterly blot out, &c.] Repeated, in the form of an injunction laid upon Israel, in Dt. xxv. 19. To 'blot out from under heaven,' also, Dt. ix. 14, xxix. 20.

15. Moses erects an altar, to offer upon it a sacrifice of thanksgiving to Jehovah, and to preserve the memory of the victory for the future. For other examples of commemorative altars, with names, see Gen. xxxiii. 20 (unless, as the verb used here suggests, 'standing-stone' (ch. xxiv. 4) should be read for 'altar'), xxxv. 7, Jos. xxii. 34, Jud. vi. 24.

Yahweh-nissi] i.e. Yahweh is my banner, as though to say, He is our Leader; we fight under His banner (Ps. xx. 5 [the Heb. for 'banner' different], 7); His name is the motto on our standards (Kn.).

15. A solemn poetical utterance of Moses, swearing war for ever on Jehovah's part against Amalek.

Yah hath sworn] This rendering cannot be right. The Heb. is, A hand upon (or to [as ix. 22, 23 Heb.]) the throne of Yah! i.e. I (Moses) swear, with my hand raised to Jehovah's throne in heaven (see on vi. 8). So Ew. (Hist. i. 251), Di. But many scholars, as Clericus, J. D. Mich., Ges., Kn., Bantsch, read nēs 'banner' for the otherwise unknown kēs (for kissē, 'throne'), i.e. A hand on the banner (v. 15) of Yah! let it ever be faithful to this banner, and ready to bear it in the future battles against Amalek. This reading has the advantage of bringing Moses' words into direct relation with the name of the altar in v. 15.

This unfriendliness of Amalek to Israel was remembered afterwards with some bitterness. In 1 S. xv. 2 f. it is assigned as the ground for Saul's expedition against them; and in Dt. xxv. 17—19 Moses is represented as exhorting Israel to remember it, and, when their possession of Canaan is secured, to be careful to recollect the injunction of Ex. xvii. 14, and 'blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven.' Cf. also Nu. xxiv. 20. Saul's raid, however, in spite of the terms used in 1 S. xv. 8; did not exterminate the entire tribe: see 1 S. xxvii. 7, xxx. 1 ff. (where a band of them make a raid upon Ziklag, and are smitten afterwards by David, though 400 escape, v. 17), 2 S. viii. 12, 1 Ch. iv. 43 (the remnant of them smitten by 500 Simeonites, in the time of Hezekiah).

CHAP. XVIII.

The visit of Jethro to Moses. Appointment of judges to assist Moses in the administration of justice.

Entirely, or with unimportant exceptions (as perhaps in vv. 9—11), from E: notice the predominance of God. The chapter is one of great historical interest: it presents a picture of Moses legislating. Cases calling for a legal decision arise among the people: the contending parties come to Moses to have them settled; he adjudicates between them; and his decisions are termed 'the statutes and directions (ibroth) of God.' It was the function of the priests in later times to give oral 'direction' upon cases submitted to them, on matters both of civil right (Dt. xvii. 11)<sup>1</sup>, and of ceremonial observance (ib. xxiv. 8)<sup>1</sup>; and here Moses himself appears discharging the same function, and so creating the primitive nucleus of Hebrew law. He is not represented as giving the people a finished code, but as deciding upon cases as they arose: decisions given in this way, especially in difficult cases (v. 26), would naturally form precedents for future use (cf. on xxi. 1): an increasing body of civil and criminal law would thus gradually grow up, based upon a Mosaic nucleus, and perpetuating Mosaic principles, but augmented by the decisions of later priests or judges, framed to meet the needs of a wider and more varied national life. Collections of such laws, dating, as we have them, from post-Mosaic times, are preserved in the 'Book of the Covenant' (xx. 23—xxiii. 33), and in the Code embedded in the discourses of Deuteronomy.

18 Now Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses' father in law, E heard of all that God had done for Moses, and for Israel his people, | how that the LORD had brought Israel out of RJE

The Hebrew tôrâh ('law') had a threefold character: it was viz. judicial, ceremonial, and moral. The ceremonial and moral tôrâh as well as the judicial tôrâh is represented in the 'Book of the Covenant,' and in Dt.; the moral tôrâh also in parts of the 'Law of Holiness' (Lev. xvii.—xxv.); and the ceremonial tôrâh especially in P (the ceremonial laws of Lev. Nu.); but the tôrâh of Ex. xviii. 15, 20, as the context shews, are exclusively judicial.

Tôrâh, it may be worth while here further to explain, is derived from the verb hôrâh, to point out, direct, mentioned in footnote 1; and means properly pointing out, direction. It may be used of oral direction given by prophets (as Is. i. 10, v. 24, xxx. 9); but it is used especially of oral direction given by the priests to the laity, in accordance with a traditional body of principles and usages, chiefly on points of ceremonial observance; in process of time the term came further to denote a body of technical direction (or 'law') on a given subject (e. g. on leprosy, Lev. xiv. 2, 32, 54, 57), and finally to denote 'the law,' as a whole. For examples of the use of both the verb (EVV. teach) and the subst. (EVV. law) in the senses explained, see Lev. x. 11, xiv. 57, Dt. xvii. 10, 11 ('according to the direction wherewith they shall direct thee'), xxiv. 8, xxxiii. 10, Mic. iii. 11, Jer. xviii. 18, Ez. vii. 26, xlv. 23, Hag. ii. 11 (render, 'Ask, now, direction of the priest'), Mal. ii. 6, 7, 8, 9 (see the writer's notes in the Century Bible); and see further DB, iii. 65 f.

It is another point of interest that Moses, in the establishment of his judicial system, adopted as his instructor a foreigner (Midianite or Kenite: see the note on ii. 18). Hobab (= Jethro) is in Nu. x. 29—32 invited to be the Israelites' guide through the wilderness; and the Kenites actually accompanied them into Judah (Jud. i. 16). The contact with the family and people of Moses' father-in-law was thus considerable; and the fact has led to the conjecture that their influence upon early Israel may have been greater than is actually described in our extant narratives, and may have even extended to religious matters (pp. xlix f., lxiv n.; comp., with reserve, ATLAE.<sup>2</sup> 413 f., 433).

There are strong reasons for thinking that this episode stood originally at a later point in the narrative. (1) In v. 5 the 'wilderness where he was encamped, at the mount of God,' cannot be Rephidim (xvii. 1), but can only be the 'wilderness of Sinai,' the arrival at which, however, is not mentioned till xix. 1, 2<sup>a</sup>. (2) The Deuteronomist quite clearly places the episode at the close of the Israelites' sojourn at Horeb: he describes viz. the appointment of these judges (i. 9—18), after the Israelites have been told that they have remained long enough in Horeb, and are directed to leave it (i. 6—8), and before the statement that they did leave it (i. 19). Hence it is almost certain that this narrative stood originally in E immediately before E's account of the departure of Israel from Sinai (narrated in our existing Pentateuch only by P, Nu. x. 11 ff., and J, Nu. x. 33); and that it was still read there by the writer of Dt. (Nu. x. 29—32 seems to be J's account of another incident connected with the same visit of Hobab (i. e. Jethro: see on ii. 18) to Moses.) xviii. 1—7. Meeting of Jethro and Moses.

2—4. In all probability an addition of the compiler, made for the purpose of harmonizing the statement in v. 5 that Moses' sons (in the plural) and his wife were with Jethro, with ii. 25 (J) which mentions the birth of Gershom only, and iv. 25 (J) which implies that Moses had no other son, and with iv. 20<sup>a</sup>, 24—26 (also J), where it is stated that Moses took Zipporah back with him to Egypt. The compiler removes the first of these difficulties by supplying the name of Moses' younger son, and the second by the statement that Moses had 'sent' Zipporah 'away,' i.e. had sent her back to Midian at some time after the incident iv. 24—26.

3. I have been a sojourner in a foreign land] Repeated verbatim from ii. 22. Eliezer is mentioned only here.

from the sword of Pharaoh] cf. ii. 15.

5. into the wilderness, &c.] The 'mount of God' (iii. 1) is Horeb, the 'wilderness' consequently can be only the 'wilderness of Sinai,' 'in front of the mount,' which, however, the Israelites do not reach till xix. 1, 2, and which (if Rephidim be in W. Feiran, and Jebel Mūsā be Sinai) was at least 24 miles beyond Rephidim (see on xix. 1<sup>b</sup>, 2). The passage affords a strong argument for the supposition (see above) that Ex. xviii. stood originally at a later point in the narrative.

6. am come] rather, am coming (the ptcp.; cf. Gen. xxix. 6 'cometh,' lit. is coming). 'Said' must mean here, 'said by the hand of messengers'; see the next verse. Perhaps it is better, however, to read, with LXX. Sam. Pesh., ׀׀׀, 'Behold,' for ׀׀, 'I'; i.e. 'And one said (Gen. xlviii. 1 Heb.) unto Moses, Behold, thy father-in-law, Jethro, is come,' &c.

7. Moses receives his father-in-law with the usual Oriental etiquette. did obeisance] lit. bowed himself down, in Eastern fashion: cf. Gen. xxiii. 7, 12, xxxiii. 3, 6, 7, xlii. 6, &c.

 rejoiced for all the goodness which the LORD had done to Israel, in that he had delivered them out of the hand of the hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh; who hath delivered the people 11 from under the hand of the Egyptians. Now I know that the LORD is greater than all gods: yea, in the thing wherein 8—12. Jethro rejoices to hear of the deliverances vouchsafed to Israel; and offers in thankfulness a sacrifice (v. 12), in which Aaron and the elders of Israel take part as his guests.

8. the travail] lit. weariness: cf. Nu. xx. 14 (in a similar connexion), Lam. iii. 5, Neh. ix. 32†.

9. rejoiced] A very rare word in Heb., occurring besides only Job iii. 6, and (in the causative conj.) Ps. xxi. 6<sup>b</sup>; but common in Aramaic.

delivered them out of the hand of the Egyptians] cf. iii. 8.

10, 11. Jethro is moved to bless and praise Jehovah for Israel's deliverance.

10. from under the hand] as 2 K. viii. 20, 22, xiii. 5, xvii. 7.

11. greater than all gods] cf. xv. 11.

for in (or by) the thing wherein they dealt proudly against them...] The end of the sentence has accidentally dropped out; and something like he hath destroyed them must be supplied. Jehovah's superiority to other gods was shewn by His overthrow of the Egyptians; and this was a consequence of their proud pursuit of the Israelites.

dealt proudly against them] cf. the reminiscence in Neh. ix. 10.

12. a burnt offering and sacrifices] see on xx. 24.

to eat bread] i.e. to take part in the sacred meal accompanying the sacrifice: the 'sacrifice' here meant being of the nature of the later 'peace-offering,' an essential part of which was the accompanying sacred meal, in which the worshipper and his friends partook, and by which they entered symbolically into communion with the Deity (Lev. vii. 15; Dt. xii. 7, 18, xxvii. 7). For other cases in which 'eating' (sometimes accompanied by 'drinking') is to be understood similarly of the sacred meal, see Gen. xxxi. 54; Ex. xxiv. 11, xxxii. 6, xxxiv. 15 (in the worship of heathen gods: so Nu. xxv. 2, Ps. cvi. 28); 1 S. ix. 13; Ps. xxii. 26, 29.

And when Moses' father in law saw all that he <sup>14</sup> did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou doest to the people? why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand about thee from morning unto even? And <sup>15</sup> Moses said unto his father in law, Because the people come unto me to inquire of God: when they have a matter, they <sup>16</sup> come unto me; and I judge between a man and his neighbour, and I make them know the statutes of God, and his laws. And Moses' father in law said unto him, The <sup>17</sup>

13—23. Jethro's advice to Moses, to appoint officers to assist him in the administration of justice.

13. to judge the people] Moses discharged the duties which the sheikh, or head of a tribe, still does among the Bedawin.

15. to inquire of God] i.e. to obtain from Him a legal decision. In early times judgement was a sacred act; legal decisions were regarded as coming from God, the judge being his representative, or mouthpiece (cf. v. 16 end)<sup>1</sup>, accordingly 'God' is sometimes used, where we should say 'judge' see on xxi. 6). Perhaps in very primitive times the decision was given by the sacred lot (cf. the use of the Urim and Thummim in 1 S. xiv. 41 LXX. [see Kennedy's note in the Century Bible, or DB. iv. 839<sup>b</sup>]; and the 'breastplate of judgement,' ch. xxviii. 15): but the same view of the nature of judgement prevailed, even after this method of obtaining it was given up, or only resorted to exceptionally. To inquire of (or seek) God (שׁוֹרֵךְ) in later times, means often to seek Him generally, in prayer and worship; but it means also, particularly in the early language, to resort to Him for the sake of obtaining an oracle, either in answer to some particular question, or, as here, a legal decision (LXX. ἐκζητῆσαι κλίσειν παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ): see Gen. xxv. 22 (the answer follows in v. 23), 1 S. ix. 9, 1 K. xxii. 8, 2 K. iii. 11, viii. 8, xxii. 13, 18, Jer. xxi. 2 (so, of inquiring of the dead, or of heathen gods, 1 S. xxviii. 7, 2 K. i. 2, Dt. xviii. 11, Is. viii. 19 al.).

16. a matter] i.e. a matter in dispute, cf. xxii. 9, xxiv. 14. So vv. 22, 26 ('cause' in vv. 19, 26, is also the same Heb.: lit. word).

the statutes of God and his directions] "Statutes" (hukkim) were definite rules, stereotyped and permanent; "laws" (toroth) were "directions" or pronouncements delivered as special circumstances required them [see p. 161]. The present passage must belong to the period after Moses received the divine statutes on the mountain [cf. p. 162]

18 thing that thou doest is not good. Thou wilt surely wear E away, both thou, and this people that is with thee: for the thing is too heavy for thee; thou art not able to perform it 19 thyself alone. Harken now unto my voice, I will give thee counsel, and God be with thee: be thou for the people to 20 Godward, and bring thou the causes unto God: and thou shalt teach them the statutes and the laws, and shalt shew them the way wherein they must walk, and the work that 21 they must do. Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating (McNeile). Observe that the decisions of Moses on civil disputes are here called distinctly the 'directions (tôrôth) of God' (cf. on v. 15, and pp. 161, 162).

18. wear away] The word usually means to fall and fade as a leaf (Ps. i. 3); in Ps. xviii. 45 rendered fade away (fig. of foes failing in strength and courage).

19, 20. be thou (emph.) to the people in front of God] i.e. be thou (as hitherto) God's representative to the people, and bring thou (again emph.) the causes,—i.e., from the context (cf. vv. 22, 26), the more important or difficult cases,—unto God for decision; and warn them of the statutes and the directions, and make them to know the way wherein they should walk, and the work that they should do. All this relates to what Moses has done already: he is, as he has already done, to bring important cases to God, and to advise the people of the general laws which follow from their determination (as, for instance, from a particular case of damage, there might result a decision which would give such a law as Ex. xxi. 33, 34), and so make known to them how they are to act when such cases arise. Jethro's fresh suggestions for the future follow in vv. 21—23.

and God be with thee] or, more probably (G.-K. § 109<sup>f</sup>), that God may be with thee to assist thee—as He hardly will be, if thou undertakest what is altogether beyond thy powers.

21—23. But all minor cases Jethro counsels him no longer to deal with himself, but to leave to the decision of subordinate judges appointed for the purpose.

21. Observe the stress laid on the moral qualifications of the judges selected.

provide] a peculiar usage. The Heb. word itself (רָאָה, 'see') is very unusual in prose; and never elsewhere occurs in the sense of look out, provide. The usual word for 'see' (רָאָה) occurs in the same sense Gen. xxii. 8, xli. 33, and elsewhere. E uses sometimes rare words.

able] or, capable, worthy: the expression implies moral and physical efficiency, rather than intellectual ability: it is rendered worthy, 1 K. i. 42, 52, virtuous, Ruth iii. 11, Prov. xii. 4; and often valiant, as 1 S. xiv. 52.

E unjust gain; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens: and let them judge the people at all seasons: and it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge themselves: so shall it be easier for thyself, and they shall bear the burden with thee. If thou shalt do this thing, and God command thee so, then thou shalt be able to endure, and all this people also shall go to their place in peace. So Moses hearkened to the voice of his father in law, and did all that he had said. And Moses chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens. And they judged the people at all seasons: the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves. And Moses let his father in law depart; and he went his way into his own land.

rulers] or, overseers (cf. on i. 11): in Dt. i. 15 rendered 'captains.' Not the word rendered 'ruler' in xvi. 22. Except in Dt. i. 15 (repeated from here), the word (sar), when followed by 'of thousands,' &c., is used only in connexion with the army, being then rendered 'captain' (1 S. viii. 12, 2 K. i. 9: 'captains of tens,' however, occurs only here and Dt. i. 15). Such an organization of the people for judicial purposes seems strange; and it is difficult to understand how it would work practically. If the ten, fifty, &c. mean so many individuals, the number of judges appointed seems excessive; hence it has been supposed (though there is nothing in the text to suggest it) that the numbers are intended to denote not individuals, but heads of families: but even so, as each individual Israelite would belong apparently to four groups, and be under the jurisdiction of four judges, it is not clear which of these judges particular cases would come before for trial.

22. at all seasons] i.e. in all ordinary cases.

so &c.] Heb. and make it light off thyself, i.e. relieve thyself.

23. this thing] Their position in the Heb. shews that these words are emphatic.

command thee so] i.e. approve and sanction thy doing this.

go to their place in peace] return quickly to their houses satisfied, without having to stand all the day before Moses (v. 14).

24—25. Moses listened to Jethro's counsel, and appointed the assistant judges accordingly.

25. The tenses are all frequentative; and describe their custom.

27. into his own land] Midian: see on ii. 15. Cf. Nu. x. 30.

CHAP. XIX.

Arrival of Israel at Sinai. Jehovah's purpose to make Israel a people to Himself. The theophany on Sinai.

The account of the sojourn of the Israelites in the wilderness of Sinai extends from Ex. xix. 1 to Nu. x. 10. So far as Exodus is concerned, it embraces the establishment of the theocracy on the basis of the Decalogue, and the 'Book of the Covenant' (xix.—xxiv.), directions for the construction of the Tabernacle, and consecration of the priests (xxv.—xxxi.), the episode of the Golden Calf (xxxii.—xxxiv.), and the erection of the Tabernacle according to the directions given in xxv.—xxxi. (xxxv.—xl.). In xix.—xxiv., only xix. 1, 2<sup>a</sup> and xxiv. 15—18<sup>a</sup> belong to P; in the rest of these chapters the main narrative (including the laws in chs. xx.—xxiii.) is E; but there are parts of it which are certainly derived from J. Thus in xix. 3<sup>a</sup> Moses 'goes up' into the mountain, but in v. 3<sup>b</sup> he is apparently below, and the natural sequel to 'went up' in v. 3<sup>a</sup> would be, not 'came' in v. 7, but 'went down' in v. 14; v. 13<sup>b</sup> is isolated, and not explained by anything that follows; vv. 20—25 interrupt the connexion between v. 19 and xx. 1; the preparations for the theophany are complete, and it has indeed already begun (vv. 14—19), when Moses is called to the top of the mountain, and fresh directions are given for the behaviour of the people; in vv. 22, 24 directions are given relating to the priests and Aaron, which, if the chapter had been a unity, would have been expected earlier; v. 25 'and said unto them' (not 'and told them') should be followed by a statement of the words said, and is quite unconnected with xx. 1; on the other hand xx. 1 is the natural continuation of xix. 19. It seems evident that two parallel narratives of the theophany on Sinai have been combined together—vv. 2<sup>b</sup>—3<sup>a</sup>, 10—11<sup>a</sup>, 14—17, 19 belonging probably to E (notice God in vv. 3<sup>a</sup>, 17, 19, and the resemblances to xx. 1<sup>a</sup>, 18—21), and vv. 3<sup>b</sup>—9, 11<sup>b</sup>—13, 18, 20—25 to J. The two narratives do not agree entirely in representation. In E Moses goes up the mountain to God, and is commanded to sanctify the people for a theophany on the third day. He goes down, and does this: on the 3rd day he brings the people out to the foot of the mount; the people are timid; he remains with them there; God speaks with them; and the sequel is xx. 1—21. In J Jehovah calls to him at the foot of the mountain, announces to him the covenant, and commands the people to be kept from the mountain by bounds, for on the 3rd day Jehovah will descend upon it. Jehovah does so, and calls Moses up to Him, but at once sends him down again to prevent the people—who are here not timid, but inquisitive—from breaking through the bounds. The sequel follows in xxiv. 1—2, 9—11.

On the question of the site of Sinai, see p. 177 ff.

xix. 1, 2<sup>a</sup> (P). Arrival of the Israelites at Sinai. The 'when' in v. 2 is intended to remove a difficulty: the Heb. is, And they took their journey..., and came..., and pitched, &c.; these words, however, beginning with the departure from Rephidim, would naturally precede

P In the third month after the children of Israel were 19 gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day came they into the wilderness of Sinai. And when they were 2 departed from Rephidim, and were come to the wilderness
E of Sinai, they pitched in the wilderness; | and there Israel camped before the mount. And Moses went up unto God, 3
J | and the LORD called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the v. 1, which, stating the new fact of the date of their arrival at Sinai, would as naturally then follow. And this doubtless was the original order, viz.: And they took their journey (xvi. 1) from Rephidim, and came to the wilderness of Sinai, and pitched in the wilderness: in the third month after, &c., came they into the wilderness of Sinai. For the form of v. 2<sup>a</sup>, comp. now xvi. 1, Nu. xxxiii. 16.

1. the same day] The day of the month must in some way have fallen out in the early part of the verse.

the wilderness of Sinai] The area in front of the mountain, whether 'Sinai' be J. Serbāl or J. Mūsā (see p. 186 ff.): so v. 2, Lev. vii. 38<sup>b</sup>, Nu. i. 1, 19, iii. 14, ix. 1, x. 12, xxvi. 64, xxxiii. 15, 16 (all P). If Sinai be J. Serbāl, the 'wilderness' will be the stretch of W. Feiran,  $\frac{2}{3}$  mile long, between W. 'Ajeleh and W. 'Aleyat (cf. on xvii. 1<sup>a</sup>), 3 miles N. of J. Serbāl, and separated from J. Serbāl itself by a chaos of rugged hills (cf. p. 182, and see the map): if Sinai be J. Mūsā, then the 'wilderness' will be the plain er-Rāhah, about 1½ mile long, and ½ mile broad, fronting it on the NW., and, according to the best route (p. 182), 37 miles above Feiran. Er-Rāhah, it may be added, is 3000 ft. above Feiran, and 5000 ft. above the sea.

2<sup>b</sup>. camped] The Heb. is the same as 'pitched,' just before. Major Palmer's argument, founded on the supposed difference between the two expressions (Sinai, p. 201, ed. 2, 1906, p. 209), thus falls to the ground.

3<sup>a</sup> (E). The mountain is the abode of God (cf. on v. 4): so Moses, immediately upon the Israelites' arrival at Sinai, naturally goes up it to Him. The original sequel follows in v. 10.

3<sup>b</sup>—6. Jehovah calls to Moses 'out of' (or 'from') the mountain—so that he is apparently still below—and tells him of the exalted future which, if Israel will but be obedient, He has in store for it, and of the special relation to Himself in which, upon the same condition, it is His intention to place it. The words are (McNeile) 'a very beautiful expression of God's relations with His people, written by a religious thinker of the Deuteronomic school'; and (Di.) 'the locus classicus of the OT. on the nature and aim of the theocratic covenant: they have, at least at the beginning, an elevated, poetical form; and the rhythmical articulation of v. 3<sup>b</sup> explains the expression "house of Jacob," which occurs nowhere else in the Pent.'

3. Thus shalt thou say] iii. 14, 15, xx. 22.

the house of Jacob] Is. ii. 5, 6, viii. 17, x. 20, &c. 'Jacob,' as a poet.

4 children of Israel; Ye have seen what I did unto the / Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings, and my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a synonym of 'Israel,' occurs also often besides in the prophets; in the Pent., only in Gen. xlix. 7, Nu. xxiii. 7, 10, 21, 23, xxiv. 5, 17, 19, Dt. xxxiii. 4, 10, 28.

4. Ye] the pron. is emphatic: in xx. 22 expressed by Ye yourselves.
on eagles' wings] A fine figure for the swiftness, the security, and the affectionate care with which the deliverance from Egypt had been effected. Cf. the development of the same figure in Dt. xxxii. 10, 11. 'Eagle,' though it suffices in a popular version, is not however an exact rend. of the Heb. nésher. As Tristram has shewn (NHB. p. 172 ff.), nésher, on account especially of the term 'baldness' in Mic. i. 16, must denote really the griffon-vulture, a large and majestic bird, very abundant in Palestine, and constantly seen there circling in the air.

unto myself] i.e. to my abode in Sinai, the 'mount of God' (Di.; cf. on iii. 1).

5, 6. The promise. The high privileges in store for Israel, if it but listens to Jehovah's voice, and observes His covenant. The verses, in style and thought, approximate to Dt. (cf. on xii. 25—27<sup>a</sup>), and may have been expanded by the compiler of JE.

5. obey] lit. hearken to. So always. Cf. xv. 26; Dt. xiii. 4, 18, xxvii. 10, &c.; and especially xi. 13, xv. 5, xxviii. 1 (in these three passages hearken diligently unto is in the Heb. the same as obey indeed here), xxx. 10.

my covenant] the covenant of xxiv. 7, 8, described there as concluded on the basis of the 'Book of the Covenant' (i.e. the injunctions in xx. 23—xxiii. 19): if Israel observes the terms of this covenant, Jehovah promises that He will bring it into a relation of special nearness to Himself.

This is a point on which the representation of both J and E differs from that of P. Both J and E speak of a covenant concluded between Jehovah and Israel at Sinai: P says nothing of such a covenant; the only covenant mentioned by him in this connexion is the covenant with the patriarchs, to which Jehovah gives effect by delivering their descendants from Egypt, and settling them in Canaan (see Ex. vi. 4—8).

a peculiar treasure] Heb. šgullāh, i.e. a special possession; see 1 Ch. xxix. 3, Eccl. ii. 8, where the word is used of a private treasure (of gold, silver, &c.) belonging to kings. The rend. 'peculiar' we owe to Jerome, who states that Symmachus had used peculiaris in one place: it means 'specially one's own,' being used in its old etymological sense, derived from the Lat. peculium, the private property of a child or slave.

the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of 6 priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel. And Moses 7 came and called for the elders of the people, and set before them all these words which the LORD commanded him.
And all the people answered together, and said, All that the 8 LORD hath spoken we will do. And Moses reported the words of the people unto the LORD. And the LORD 9 said unto Moses, Lo, I come unto thee in a thick cloud,

With the addition of 'people,' 'a people of special possession,' the word occurs, borrowed from here, in Dt. vii. 6, xiv. 2, xxvi. 18; and alone also in Ps. cxxxv. 4: in Mal. iii. 17 (RV.) it is transferred to the faithful Israelites of the future. The LXX. here, xxiii. 22 (in an addition to the Heb.), Dt. vii. 6, xiv. 2, xxvi. 18, render by λαὸς περιούσιος; and in Ps. cxxxv. 4, Eccl. ii. 8 by περιουσιασμός: hence λαὸς περιούσιος in Tit. ii. 14. Λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν in 1 P. ii. 9 (cf. Eph. i. 14) is also based upon the same expression: cf. εἰς περιποίησιν for ḥgullāh in Mal. iii. 17 LXX., and δ περιποίημα in 1 Chr. xxix. 3. (Περιούσιος means apparently being over and above, and so exceptional, special; see Lightfoot, On a Fresh Revision of the Engl. N. T., p. 234 ff.)

[from among] lit. out of; but as what is taken specially out of a number is preferred to the rest (cf. ἐξαιρετός, eximius, egregius), the meaning above (marg.) is also implied. So Dt. vii. 6, xiv. 2.

[for all the earth is mine] and so I can choose which I will of the nations upon it. Cf. ix. 29, Dt. x. 14.

6. And ye (emph.) in contrast to the other nations.

[a kingdom of priests] i.e. a kingdom whose citizens are all priests, living wholly in God's service, and ever enjoying the right of access to Him. Comp., of the ideal future, Is. lxi. 6; and in the NT., of Christians, 1 P. ii. 5, 9, Rev. i. 6, v. 10, xx. 6.

[an holy nation] separated from other nations, and holy to Jehovah. The expression implies not a promised privilege only, but also a duty: Israel, enjoying this privilege, is also (as is developed more fully in Dt.) under the obligation to make it a reality, to keep itself free from everything heathen, and fulfil the ideal of a holy nation upon earth. The expression is taken up in Dt. in the form 'a holy people,' Dt. vii. 6, xiv. 2, 21, xxvi. 19; cf. Is. lxiii. 12 (the ideal of the future), 1 P. ii. 9.

7—8. Moses communicates Jehovah's purpose to the people. They express their readiness to fulfil the conditions imposed.

9. Jehovah declares that He will so speak to Moses as to satisfy the people that he is His accredited messenger.

[I come] more clearly, I am coming, i.e. am about to come. The first announcement of the coming theophany.

[a thick cloud] Heb. the thickness of a cloud (or, of the clouds).

 or man, it shall not live: when the <sup>2</sup>trumpet soundeth long,

and may believe thee also] the pron. is emphatic. Stress is laid also on the people's believing Moses in iv. 1—9, 31, xiv. 31 (all J).

And Moses told, &c.] The words of the people have been already reported to Jehovah in v. 8, and no other words have followed since. The clause is probably a misplaced variant of v. 8<sup>b</sup>.

10—13. Preparations to be made in view of the approaching theophany. The people are to be sanctified (E), and (J) barriers set about the mountain, to prevent its being desecrated by idle intruders.

10. sanctify] viz. by enjoining ablutions and abstinence from anything that would render 'unclean' (cf. v. 15<sup>b</sup>): comp. Nu. xi. 18 (in preparation for the approaching manifestation of Jehovah's power), Jos. iii. 5, vii. 13, 1 S. xvi. 5.

wash their garments] often enjoined, as a purificatory rite, in the later ceremonial legislation, e.g. Lev. xi. 25, 28, 40, &c.

12. border] Heb. extremity, or edge (xiii. 20).

shall be surely put to death] Gen. xxvi. 11, Jud. xxi. 15; and often in the laws, as ch. xxi. 12, 14, 15, 16, &c.

13. no hand, &c.] i.e. he is not to be followed, and seized on the mount, but to be stoned or shot from a distance. Possibly the underlying idea may be (Bä.) that the trespasser, having touched sacred ground without proper authority, becomes thereby taboo—i.e. dangerous to touch, on account of the supernatural penalties that would be thereby incurred (see DB. ii. 395<sup>b</sup> n., iv. 826 ff.)—and forfeits his life to the deity, and anyone touching him afterwards is liable to become taboo likewise (cf. on xxix. 37). RVm. it means the mountain; but this is not probable.

13<sup>b</sup>. the ram(s horn)] Heb. yōbēl, as Jos. vi. 5 (קרן היובל), also with 'soundeth long'; 4, 6, 8, 13 (שופרות (ה)ויבליים). Not the word rendered 'trumpet' in vs. 16, 19, xx. 18.

they (emph.) may come up into (Heb., as v. 12) the mount, &c.] It may be doubted whether this clause is in its original position. Where

E they shall come up to the mount. | And Moses went down <sup>14</sup> from the mount unto the people, and sanctified the people; and they washed their garments. And he said unto the <sup>15</sup> people, Be ready against the third day: come not near a woman. And it came to pass on the third day, when it was <sup>16</sup> morning, that there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of a trumpet exceeding loud; and all the people that were in the camp trembled. And Moses brought forth the people out of the <sup>17</sup> camp to meet God; and they stood at the nether part of the J mount. | And mount Sinai was altogether on smoke, be- <sup>18</sup> cause the LORD descended upon it in fire: and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and the whole E <sup>19</sup> mount quaked greatly. | And when the voice of the trumpet waxed louder and louder, Moses spake, and God it stands, it apparently refers to what may be done when the signal is given by the 'ram's horn' at the end of the solemnity. Bacon would transfer vv. 11<sup>b</sup>—13 to v. 24, to follow priests (as in the note): 'they shall come' would then refer to the priests, and, vv. 23, 24 (to down) being rejected as a gloss, vv. 20—22, 24<sup>a</sup>, 11<sup>b</sup>—13, 24<sup>b</sup> would read consecutively (cf. McNeile, pp. xxvi, 113).

14—15. The sequel in E to vv. 10, 11<sup>a</sup>. Moses comes down from the mountain, and sanctifies the people as instructed in vv. 10, 11<sup>a</sup>.

16<sup>b</sup>. Cf. 1 S. xxi. 4; and the Minaean inscr. cited in ATLAE.<sup>2</sup> p. 433.

16—19. On the third day the theophany takes place; and the people are brought forth by Moses to the foot of the mountain to meet God.

16. thick] dense; lit. heavy (cf. on viii. 24). Not the word used in v. 9. a trumpet] Heb. shōphār (so v. 19, xx. 18), properly a horn—used especially (cf. the note on Am. ii. 2 in the Camb. Bible) to give a signal or summons in war (Jud. iii. 27), or to announce or accompany an important public event (1 K. i. 34; 2 S. vi. 15). Not the yōbēl of v. 13<sup>b</sup>.

17. stood] better, took their stand.

18. on smoke] For the archaism, see Wright's Bible Word-Book, s.v. ON; and cf. Hamlet v. 1. 211 'on a roar,' 2 S. ix. 3 'lame on his feet,' Ps. lxxviii. 14 (P. B. V.) 'on an heap,' lxxix. 1 'on heaps.'

the smoke of a kiln] as ix. 8, Gen. xix. 28 ('the steam of a kiln').

quaked] The word rendered 'trembled' in v. 16 end. LXX. and 9 Heb. MSS. have people for mount (as v. 16<sup>b</sup>); and it is true (Di.) that hārēd is not used elsewhere of the merely physical movement of inanimate objects.

19. and the voice of the trumpet waxed louder and louder: Moses kept speaking, and God kept answering him with a voice] i.e. with

20 answered him by a voice. And the LORD came down / upon mount Sinai, to the top of the mount: and the LORD called Moses to the top of the mount; and Moses went up.
 21 And the LORD said unto Moses, Go down, charge the people, lest they break through unto the LORD to gaze, and 22 many of them perish. And let the priests also, which come near to the LORD, sanctify themselves, lest the LORD break 23 forth upon them. And Moses said unto the LORD, The people cannot come up to mount Sinai: for thou didst charge us, saying, Set bounds about the mount, and sanctify 24 it. And the LORD said unto him, Go, get thee down; and thou shalt come up, thou, and Aaron with thee: but let not thunder. Moses is of course below with the people. The tense of the two last verbs implies reiteration: the repeated thunderings were interpreted as God's part in a dialogue with Moses. The sequel is xx. 1.

20—25. After the theophany has begun (v. 18, 20<sup>a</sup>), Moses is summoned to the top of the mountain, where he is told to go down again at once and check the too eager curiosity of the people, and when he has done this to come up again with Aaron (v. 24). In E the people, so far from evincing any desire to trespass upon the mountain, are in alarm, and 'tremble' (v. 16; cf. xx. 18).

20. came down] according to v. 18, Jehovah had already done this. Perhaps (Bä.) v. 18 is misplaced, and stood originally after v. 20<sup>a</sup>.

21. break through] viz. the barriers that had been erected (v. 12). Lit. pull or tear down (Jud. vi. 25 al.). So v. 24.

perish] lit. fall, i.e. be struck down suddenly by the lightning.

22. Even the priests, whose duty it is to come near (Lev. xxi. 21) to Jehovah, must sanctify themselves like the rest (vv. 10, 14), lest He make a breach in them (2 S. vi. 8 AV., 1 Ch. xv. 13), i.e. work destruction among them. The word is quite distinct from that rendered 'break through' in v. 21.

It appears from this passage that J recognizes priests before the legislation of Sinai—just as he recognizes similarly sacrifices and altars (e.g. Gen. xii. 7, xiii. 18, xxvi. 25; in P priests appear first in Lev. viii.); but the representation is hardly consistent with xxxii. 29.

23, 24. Moses reminds Jehovah that the barriers (v. 12) will effectually prevent the people from trespassing: but he is nevertheless commanded to repeat the warning.

23. thou] the pron. is emphatic, thou thyself.

24. thou, and Aaron with thee, &c.] This command is nowhere stated to have been carried out: in xx. 21 (E) Moses goes in before God alone; in xxiv. 1, 9 Moses and Aaron are accompanied by Nadab and Abihu and seventy elders.

with thee: but, &c.] Or, with thee, and the priests: but let not the people break through, &c.: cf. v. 22<sup>a</sup> ('which come near to Y.'), and on v. 13<sup>b</sup>.

J the priests and the people break through to come up unto the LORD, lest he break forth upon them. So Moses went<sup>25</sup> down unto the people, and told them.

25. and said unto them] The paraphrase 'told' is illegitimate. The word always means to 'say'; and is followed regularly by the words said. The narrative is here broken off in the middle. What originally followed must have been the substance of the commands given in vv. 21—24. The next excerpts from J are xxiv. 1—2, 9—11.

A 'covenant' is a compact or agreement, concluded—at least on important occasions—under solemn religious sanctions, and implying mutual undertakings and obligations. For instances of covenants between men, see Gen. xxvi. 26—31, xxxi. 44—54, 1 K. xv. 19 ('league'), xx. 34. In a religious sense, a 'covenant' is the most formal, and, so to say, official expression of the gracious relation subsisting between God and men: God promises that, if man observes the conditions laid down by Him, He will bestow upon him certain specified blessings. In references to a covenant of this kind, the stress may rest, according to the context and purpose of the writer, either on the Divine promise (e.g. Dt. iv. 31), or on the human obligation (e.g. Dt. iv. 23). The following are the 'covenants' referred to in the Pentateuch:—

In J:—1. The covenant with Abraham, Gen. xv. 18.

2. The covenant of Ex. xxxiv. 10, 27, 28 (see p. 364 f.), concluded with Israel on the basis of the laws contained in xxxiv. 14, 17—26.

In E:—1. The covenant of Ex. xxiv. 7, 8, concluded with Israel on the basis of the 'Book of the Covenant' (xx. 22—xxiii. 33). The same covenant is also referred to in xix. 5 (compiler of JE).

In Dt.:—1. The covenant with the patriarchs, iv. 31, vii. 12, viii. 18.

2. The covenant concluded with Israel at Horeb on the basis of the Decalogue, Dt. iv. 13, 23, v. 2, 3, vii. 9, xxix. 1<sup>b</sup> (hence the Deut. expression, 'the tables, and ark, of the covenant,' ix. 9, 11, 15, x. 8, xxxi. 9, 25, 26, Jos. viii. 33 D<sup>2</sup>: in Nu. x. 33, xiv. 44 J, 'the covenant of' is probably an addition made by one familiar with the Deut. phraseology; cf. often in Jos. iii., iv., vi. 6, 8). The terms of this covenant are stated in Dt. xxvi. 17 f. Dt. is silent as to any covenant made at Horeb, and based on the 'Book of the Covenant.'

3. The covenant concluded with Israel in the steppes of Moab, on the basis of the Deuteronomic legislation itself, Dt. xxix. 1<sup>a</sup>, 9, 12, 14, 21, 25 (cf. 2 K. xxiii. 2, 21, where this legislation is called the 'book of the covenant').

4. In the 'Blessing of Moses,' xxxiii. 9, the covenant with the tribe of Levi (i.e. their consecration to the priesthood, which was probably once narrated after Ex. xxxii. 29). Cf. Mal. ii. 4, 5, 8.

In P:—1. The covenant with Noah, Gen. vi. 18, ix. 9—16.

2. The covenant made with Abraham and his seed, Gen. xvii. 2, 4, 7, 9, 10; with Isaac and his seed, vv. 19, 21; with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Ex. ii. 24, vi. 4 (see the note), 5.

See also (in H) Lev. xxvi. 9, 15, 42, 44, 45; and (in P) Ex. xxxi. 16 (of the sabbath), Lev. ii. 13, xxiv. 8 (of the shewbread), Nu. xviii. 19 (of the priestly dues), xxv. 12 f. (with Phinehas).

In P, as was remarked on xix. 5, God confirms a former covenant by bringing His people out of Egypt, and He gives Israel a body of ceremonial regulations at Sinai; but there is not in P any mention of a covenant made by Him with Israel at Sinai. See further A. B. Davidson's art. COVENANT in DB.

The Theophany on Sinai.

In view of the many considerations which combine to shew that the narratives of the Exodus are not contemporary with the events described, it becomes a question whether we must not see in Ex. xix. another example of that 'symbolism of the Bible,' which was referred to in connexion with the narratives of the Plagues (above, p. 58). As Dillm. remarks, the 'natural foundation' of the description in vv. 16, 18 (cf. xx. 18) is evidently a thunderstorm. A thunderstorm is one of the most imposing of natural phenomena: and it was habitually regarded by the Hebrews as a manifestation of Jehovah's presence (see on ix. 23<sup>a</sup>). 'The description here given of Jehovah's descent upon Sinai,' writes Dr Wade<sup>1</sup>, 'finds a parallel in many rhetorical passages of the Psalms and Prophets<sup>2</sup>, and is doubtless to be explained similarly. In these any signal event in which the hand of God is discerned is depicted as accompanied by disturbances in the elements and by convulsions of nature. In the light of such, it seems reasonable to regard the narratives recounting the delivery of the Law at Sinai as a dramatic picture, the details of which are not to be pressed. The divine communications made to Moses were presumably internal rather than external; and were imparted through the avenues of reflection and conscience rather than by the outward hearing. Yet it is highly probable 'that in the locality where the events are placed, there really occurred natural phenomena which are reflected in the narrative. To the race, and to the age, to which Moses belonged, all that was startling or exceptional in nature unmistakably manifested divine power; and lightning and tempest, in particular, were associated by the Hebrews with Jehovah's presence. Consequently the storms that occasionally burst,' with exceptional impressiveness and grandeur<sup>3</sup>, 'round the top of Sinai may easily have impressed the spirit of the Israelite leader with a sense of God's nearness; whilst the thunder may have been to him something more than a mere symbol of the divine voice (cf. Ps. xxix. 3—9).<sup>1</sup> To the same effect Dr Sanday, after speaking of the nucleus of judgements and decisions given by Moses in God's name, continues<sup>1</sup>, 'And then the imagination played round the idea of divine legislation, and invested it with what seemed more adequate circumstances of solemnity and sanctity.' The thunderstorm was considered to be a special manifestation of God's presence; and so the Decalogue, addressed to all Israel, was pictured as uttered by God, in a voice of thunder, out of the storm. But 'these (the smoke and fire, &c.) are just poetic accessories, emblematic of the central fact that the words proceeded from God. The literal truth was that God spoke to the heart of Moses<sup>2</sup>: the poetic truth was that He spoke in thunder and lightning from the crest of Sinai.'

<sup>3</sup> See the account of the storm, with almost continuous lightnings, and deafening peals of thunder, witnessed by Ebers in 1871, about 12 miles N. of J. Serbäl (cited by Di. on v. 16, from Ebers, Gosen, p. 433); and of the one in W. Feiran, witnessed by the Rev. F. W. Holland in 1867, as given in the writer's notes on Habakkuk in the Century Bible, p. 99 f.

The site of Sinai.

The Sinaitic Peninsula<sup>3</sup> consists of a huge wedge-shaped block of mountains, intersected by numerous gorges and valleys, lying between the Gulfs of Suez and Akaba. On the north, the lofty desert table-land, 2000—2500 ft. above the Medit. Sea, called the Bādīyet et-Tih, or the 'Wilderness of wandering,'—itself, however, not of uniform height, but containing many hills and valleys—projects into it in the form of a crescent, ending in a long range of almost perpendicular limestone cliffs, 1—2000 ft. in height, which marks the N. limit of the Sinaitic mountains. The mountains of the Peninsula are rugged and lofty. Jebel Mūsā, almost exactly in the centre of the wedge, is at its summit 7636 ft. in height, Jebel Catharina, 2 miles to the SW., 8536 ft., and the highest peak of J. Serbāl, 20 miles to the NW., 6734 ft. The mountains consist chiefly of granite or porphyry, and sandstone, which give a rich and varied colouring, of red, grey, lilac, purple, &c., to the landscape. The higher parts of the mountains are uniformly bare: lower down, the valleys and plains are generally 'clothed more or less sparsely with varieties of the aromatic and almost sapless herbs peculiar to dry barren soils': the same hardy plants may also be sometimes seen springing out of fissures in the rugged hill sides; and occasionally patches of grass are also visible. This herbage, meagre as it is, provides pasture for the camels, goats, and sheep, kept by the Bedawin who inhabit the region. Only in a few of the wādys are there perennial streams, the courses of which are marked by mosses, rushes, and acacias : the most fertile of these is the oasis of W. Feiran, described above on xvii. 1<sup>a</sup>. Not unfrequently also there are springs, which fertilize the soil around them, and diversify the general barrenness by patches of grateful verdure. As a whole, however, the aspect of both the wādys and the mountains of the Peninsula is one of extreme barrenness and desolation : even photographs are sufficient to shew the bareness of the mountain-sides, and the huge rocks and boulders which in many cases strew the surface of the wādys. As a rule, the air is clear and dry ; but between December and May sudden and violent rain- and thunderstorms are apt to burst over the Peninsula, giving rise to highly destructive floods, or seils, which sweep down the valleys in torrents, ten, twenty, or even thirty feet deep, carrying away with them, not trees only and cattle, if they happen to be in their way, but huge boulders, and often completely altering the face of the wādy (see a description of one in the notes on Habakkuk in the Century Bible, p. 100). The mountains of the Peninsula, as a whole, are called by the Arabs et-Tur ('the Mountain'); the population consists of Bedawin of various tribes, numbering (without women and children) 4—5000, and called locally Towāra, 'mountaineers' (from Tūr, 'mountain').

Assuming (see below) that Mt. Sinai was where, at least since the 4th cent. A.D., tradition has located it, and that the Israelites really journeyed through the 'Sinaitic' Peninsula, let us, so far as this has not been done already, describe briefly the places that they may have halted at, or passed near, on their presumed route from Egypt. Enough has been said with regard to 'Ayūn Mūsā and 'Ain Nāba (see the note on xv. 22), Hawwārah (xv. 23); the route up W. Gharandel (xv. 26), and then along Wādy Shebeikeh, and down W. Taiyibeh to the plain el-Markhā by the sea (xvi. 1); and the route thence up W. Feiran to the ruins of the ancient town of Feiran (xvii. 1<sup>a</sup>), 3 miles N. of the imposing peaks of J. Serbāl.

The route to W. Feiran through Seiḥ Sidreh (xvi. 1) passes through two interesting localities, which deserve a few words in passing. At Maghārah, about half-way up Seiḥ Sidreh (see the Map), and at Serābit el-Khādīm, 10—12 miles N. of this, are the remains of the celebrated turquoise and copper mines worked at intervals by the Egyptians from the 3rd to the 20th dynasty (c. B.C. 2900 [Breasted]—1100), the stelae and inscriptions of many Egyptian kings, and (at Serābit el-Khādīm) the great Temple to Hat-hor, founded by Usertesen I (B.C. 1980—1935), and added to by Thothmes III (1501—1447) and other kings till c. 1100 B.C. These Egyptian antiquities have been most recently and most completely explored by Prof. Petrie in 1905; and they have since been very fully described by him in his Researches in Sinai (cf. on ii. 15; see also Maspero, i. 355—58, and the briefer account in Major Palmer's Sinai,<sup>2</sup> pp. 92—106 [only partially contained in ed. 1]).

After Maghārah the route passes through the famous Wādy Mukatteb (the 'Written Valley'), so called from the numerous inscriptions cut out, some on the lower part of its sandstone sides, but most on the fallen blocks of rock with which the floor of the valley is strewn.

Although the clue to the decyphering of these inscriptions had been found by E. F. F. Beer in 1840, the Rev C. Forster in 1851 made himself a by-word by publishing a book in which he maintained that they were written by the Israelites, and contained notices of the quails, manna, &c.: but as soon as the script and language of the neighbouring Nabataean inscriptions, in NW. Arabia, became known, it was at once seen that these Sinaitic inscriptions were of the same type, and the substantial correctness of Beer's interpretations was fully confirmed. About 500 were copied by Prof. E. H. Palmer, when he visited Sinai as a member of the Ordnance Survey Expedition in 1868; his copies were never published, but he satisfied himself with regard to the character of the inscriptions. A collection of 677 was edited afterwards by Julius Euting, of Strassburg, in 1891; and more recently (1902, 1907) 2744 have been published and explained in the Paris Corpus of Semitic Inscriptions (Part II. vols. i. and ii. Nos. 490—3233). Only about 700 of these inscriptions are from W. Mukatteb itself: of the rest, about 450 are from W. Naṣb and W. Suwig, 12 miles to the N., and from W. Sidreh and other valleys about Maghārah, 1350 are from W. Feiran and other Wādys N. of J. Serbāl, and 250 from near J. Mūsā (see the Maps, ibid. i. 352, 358, ii. 2, 152, 179). All are thus on the W. and NW. parts of the Peninsula. The language of the inscriptions is Aramaic, though—as in the case of the allied Nabataean inscriptions—with a strong admixture of Arabic in the proper names. They consist principally of short formulae of greeting, or blessing, or commemoration. Here are a few specimens: 'Greeting! Uwaisu, son of Faṣiyyu, good luck!' 'Remembered in welfare and peace be Sa'adu, son of Garm-al-ba'ali for ever!' 'Blessed be Wa'ilu, son of Sa'ad-allāhi! This is year 85 of the eparchy' (= A.D. 189). Only a few of the inscriptions are dated: but all belong probably to the 2nd and 3rd centuries of our era (C/S. ii. 353 f.). They must have been the work of Nabataeans (whose proper home at this time was in or about Edom), who—probably for some commercial purpose—visited the Peninsula. When, a century or two later, a Christian population sprang up in it, crosses and other Christian emblems were in many cases attached to the inscriptions. See further Palmer, Sinai,<sup>2</sup> pp. 114—127; G. A. Cooke, North-Semitic Inscriptions, 1903, p. 258 ff.

As the route up W. Feiran approaches Feiran (the 'Pharan' of Eusebius, see on xvii. 1<sup>a</sup>), 2000 ft. above the sea, there emerges, as the mouth of W. 'Ajeleh is reached on the right, about 3 miles to the S., towering up above the mountains in front of it, the imposing range of J. Serbāl<sup>1</sup>. This, 'though not so high as several eminences further inland, is without doubt, viewed as a whole, more grand and striking than any other mountain in the country. It culminates in a noble ridge, 3 miles long and about 6500 ft. above the sea, running nearly E. and W., and rising far above the surrounding hills' (Palmer, Sinai, p. 178). The ridge consists of 5 massive and lofty peaks (besides 6 or 7 less conspicuous ones), the highest of which is 6734 ft. above the sea. There is no plain at the foot of J. Serbāl, but only 3 miles or so of mountains, terminating on the N. in a stretch, about  $\frac{3}{4}$  mile long, of W. Feiran on the N. The base of the mountain may be approached from W. Feiran either by W. 'Ajeleh on the W., or by W. 'Aylet on the E., each about 3 miles long, and each, but especially the former, 'a wilderness of boulders and torrent-beds,' passable only with the greatest difficulty by the pedestrian (Ordn. Survey, p. 90). The ascent of the principal peak can be made from some palm trees in the upper part of W. 'Aylet in about 3 hours (ibid.): it was hence that both Burckhardt (Syria, p. 607 f.) and Stanley (S. and P. p. 72 f.,—in the shilling edition (1910), p. 56 f.) ascended J. Serbāl.

From Feiran, Jebel Mūsā can be reached by three routes (O. S. p. 155). By either route the traveller will first pass through the oasis above Feiran, mentioned on xvii. 1<sup>a</sup>; he may then (1) turn, at the top of W. Feiran, to the NE., up W. Sheikh, and ascending this, as far as (4022 ft.) the defile el-Watīyeh, 10 miles N. of Jebel Mūsā, turn off through this defile to the right, and so, still ascending the same wādy, enter the plain er-Rāhah, NW. of J. Mūsā, from the NE., in all 37 miles; or (2) turn off to the SE. at the top of W. Feiran, and pass up W. Solaf across the low hills to the same point, El-Watīyeh, and then on as before, in all 41 miles; or (3) follow, as in (2), W. Solaf, but only as far as Nagb Hawā (the 'Pass of the Wind'), 5—6 miles NW. of er-Rāhah, and ascend the pass which there begins; this route is not more than 30½ miles, but Nagb Hawā is not passable for waggons or heavily laden camels. The plain er-Rāhah (rāhah means the palm of the hand, hence fig. a flat open area) is 4850—5150 ft. above the sea, and consequently some 3000 ft. above Feiran. It is about 1½ mile long by ½ mile broad, so that it covers an area of about 400 acres; and it directly faces the NW. end of the huge oblong granite block known as Jebel Mūsā ('Moses' Mount'). At the SE. end the cliffs of the N. end of Rās Šufsafeh—the 'Head, or Summit, of the Willow'—so called from an ancient willow growing upon it, near the 'Chapel of the Holy Zone' (of the Virgin Mary)—rise suddenly and steeply more than 1600 ft. above the plain (from 4900 ft. to 6541 ft.). Rās Šufsafeh is the long narrow NW. extremity, about 500 ft. broad by a mile long, of the huge granite block, spoken of above, which bears the general name of Jebel Mūsā ('Jebel Mūsā' itself being properly only the lofty peak at its SE. extremity). This granite block is about 2 miles long from NW. to SE., and a mile broad from NE. to SW.: on the NE. it slopes down into the deep narrow glen called, from the Convent of St Catharine standing in it, Wādy ed-Deir, the 'Convent Valley'—sometimes also, from its having been supposed to have been the spot in which Moses tended his father-in-law's sheep, Wādy Sho'eib, the 'Valley of Hobab' or Jethro: 'on the SW. Wādy Shureij, a still narrower ravine, divides it from the long subordinate ridge of Jebel Fera', which again is cut off on its SW. by Wādī el-Lejā from the huge red bluffs of Jebel el-Hamr' (the 'Red mountain'). J. Mūsā, J. Fera', and J. el-Hamr' are all composed mainly of red or pink syenitic granite. The central and highest part of Rās Suṣsafeh is 6937 ft. above the sea; the ridge SE. of this sinks in the middle to 6744 ft.; but at its extreme SE. end it rises into the single pointed peak, called specifically Jebel Mūsā, 7363 ft. above the sea. This peak, though 400 ft. higher than Rās Suṣsafeh, lies too far back to be visible from any part of the plain of er-Rāḥah. On the slopes of J. Mūsā and in the neighbouring hills and valleys there is 'a fair abundance of perennial springs and streams': the Convent of St Catharine, for instance, contains two good wells: there is also 'enough herbage for the support of large flocks of goats and sheep' (Palmer, Sinai,<sup>2</sup> p. 187).

The wādys which surround J. Mūsā on the E., W., and S. are extremely wild and rocky. W. el-Lejā is filled with enormous fragments and boulders of granite; W. Shureij is even worse towards its mouth, though it improves higher up; in W. ed-Deir, at least as far as the Convent, there are fewer boulders, and walking is easier. The principal ascent of J. Mūsā is by the Sikket Syednā Mūsā, the 'Path of our lord Moses.' This route, leaving the Convent of St Catharine (5013 ft.) in a southerly direction, climbs the mountain-side by a steep ravine, till it reaches, after an ascent of about 1500 ft., the so-called Chapel of Elijah (6589 ft.), enclosing a small grotto in which the prophet is said to have dwelt (1 K. xix. 8, 9), close to the foot of the peak of J. Mūsā. 'It is the track which has been followed by monks and pilgrims for many centuries past—a rude flight of rocky steps,' said to number in all 3000, 'formed of huge blocks of granite, but now destroyed at many points by the fall of rocks or rush of torrents. Its course lies amid the wildest and grandest natural features, tremendous masses of fallen granite, towering precipices, and mighty peaks and pinnacles of rock.'

From Elijah's Chapel, a further flight of steps leads straight on up to the summit peak of J. Mūsā (7363 ft.), with the Chapel and Mosque of Moses just below it, the latter built over a cave in which he is said to have dwelt during the forty days. To reach Rās Şuřsafeh, however, we must turn off at Elijah's Chapel to the right: the route thence is extremely difficult (Rob. i. 107); first there comes (O. S. 115) 'a rough scramble for a mile or more along the mountain basin to the back of the bluff, over a rugged path, now ascending, now descending, and passing in and out between enormous domes of granite; then a breathless climb of 3—400 ft. up a steep rocky ravine which divides the two westernmost bluffs till at its crest,' through a cleft opening out between the rocks [see view in Palmer's Desert of the Ex. i. 110], the plain of er-Rāḥah, 2000 ft. below, with the panorama of mountains surrounding it, bursts suddenly into view. The N. end of Rās Şuřsafeh, immediately above the plain, is 6541 ft. above the sea: but actually its highest part (6937 ft.), the point just mentioned, which affords the finest view, is about  $\frac{1}{3}$  of a mile to the S. The mountains round J. Mūsā, though few are higher than the summit peak of J. Mūsā (7363 ft.), form an imposing spectacle: they consist of a number of peaks, with a network of valleys between them, varying from about 6000 ft. in height to the two highest (on the SW.), J. Catharina (8536 ft.), and J. Zebir (8551 ft.). The view from J. Catharina is much more comprehensive than that from any part of J. Mūsā, embracing practically the whole Peninsula (see Rob. i. 110—112).

There are also two other tracks up J. Mūsā from W. ed-Deir, and one from W. Shureij on the W.; but these are much less frequented. The one from the mouth of W. ed-Deir, near the so-called 'Aaron's Hill,' is the shortest from er-Rāḥah, and was often used by the members of the Survey expedition. The one from W. Shureij was in the 18th cent. shewn to pilgrims as the one which Moses was accustomed to use. A winding path, less rocky and precipitous than the Sikket Syednā Mūsā, starting from the deserted Convent of el-Arba'in ('The Forty,' i.e. 40 monks said to have been once killed by Arabs) in W. Lejā, SW. of the summit peak of J. Mūsā, is however much used by pilgrims in making the descent from the Chapel and Mosque of Moses on this peak, after they have ascended from the Convent of St Catharine.

As early as the 4th cent. of our era, Christians began to settle in the Sinaitic Peninsula in considerable numbers, some resorting to it as a refuge from persecution, but the majority seeking in its solitude from the world. The celebrated anchorite St Antony, Athanasius' friend, the 'founder of asceticism,' thus made it his home from about 285 till his death, c. 350. Early in the 4th cent. monasteries began to spring up about both J. Serbāl and J. Mūsā; and many anchorites began to plant their cells in the secluded valleys around the same mountains. In 324 we hear of a Bishop of Sinai; Nathyras was Bishop of Pharan (see on xvii. 1<sup>a</sup>) c. 400: for other bishops see Weill, 221 f. The hermit, Ammonius, and the ascetic, Nilus, describe the barbarous massacres of monks and anchorites perpetrated by ferocious bands of Saracens, in 373 and at about 400 A.D., respectively. The monasteries flourished for some centuries; of many the ruins are still visible; and one, that of St Catharine, is inhabited by monks to the present day. J. Mūsā and the neighbouring valleys and mountain sides contain naturally many sites connected by monkish tradition with events in Moses' life: but the legends possess no historical value, and need not therefore here be further noticed (see S. and P. pp. 44—48; Palmer, Sinai,<sup>2</sup> pp. 127—137). The Convent of St Catharine is, however, too famous to be passed by without a few words. It is a large fortified enclosure, containing a church, library, refectory, chapels, cells, &c. (see Rob. i. 93 ff.), built originally by Justinian in 527, on a site where already, it is said, a small church existed, to protect the monks from the incursions of the Arabs. In the Church is the so-called 'Chapel of the Burning Bush.' Attached to the Convent is a large garden, containing two wells of excellent water (one declared to have been the one mentioned in Ex. ii. 15), and abounding in vegetables and fruit-trees of various kinds. The St Catharine from whom the Convent is named is affirmed by mediaeval tradition to have been a virgin martyred at Alexandria in 307, of whose real history, however, no single fact seems to be certain (see the Dict. of Christian Biogr. s.v.): her body, it was said, had been carried by angels to the top of the mountain which was thenceforth called after her, J. Catharina; and her supposed relics, consisting of a skull and hand, were also said to have been afterwards transferred by the monks to their own Convent, where they are still shewn (Rob. i. 96 f.). It was from this Convent that a MS. of large parts of the LXX. and of the whole of the NT. (the 'Codex Sinaiticus') was obtained by Tischendorf in 1844 and 1859, and a valuable MS. of the old Syriac Version of the Gospels by Mrs Lewis and Mrs Gibson in 1892.

The 'Sinai' of the OT. has commonly been supposed to have been some part of J. Mūsā. J. Serbāl has, however, found its advocates, especially Lepsius (Letters from Egypt, Engl. Tr., 1853, pp. 303 ff., 532 ff.), Ebers (Durch Gosen zum Sinai, 1872), and most recently Mr Currelly in Petrie's Sinai, 1906, pp. 247—254. It must be remembered that there is nothing in the Bible, which fixes the site of Sinai: the 'eleven days' journey from Horeb to Kadesh' of Dt. i. 2 would suit many other localities besides J. Mūsā; of the places mentioned in Nu. xxxiii. 6—35 between Succoth and 'Ezion-geber, the name of only one, Kadesh, has been preserved to the present day; the sites of the places between Succoth and Sinai depend thus entirely upon the position assigned to Sinai; the only site of which we can be said to have any ancient tradition at all is Rephidim, which Eusebius says was near Pharan (in W. Feiran; see p. 155). Nor can we be sure that the Israelites had any continuous tradition of the site of Sinai: from the time of Moses onwards, the only Israelite who is mentioned as visiting it is Elijah (1 K. xix. 8). All that Josephus tells us is that Moses, having fled to a Midianite city, situated by the Red Sea (Ant. ii. 11. 1), led Jethro's flocks to the mountain called Sinai, 'the loftiest mountain in these parts,' with good pasture, but never before trodden even by shepherds, on account of its being supposed to be inhabited by God, and difficult to climb or even to see, on account of its great size and its precipitous crags (ib. ii. 12. 1, iii. 5. 1). This description does not distinctly say that Sinai was in the Peninsula, but rather implies that it was in Midian, on the E. of the Gulf of 'Aḩaba (see on ii. 15); if the Peninsula, however, is meant, then the highest mountain in it would be J. Zebir (p. 184); to the eye, however,—for it is certain that the ancients never took the actual heights of the mountains,—J. Serbāl is twice as lofty (4000 ft. above W. Feiran) as J. Mūsā (2000 ft. above er-Rāḩah). St Paul's statement (Gal. iv. 25) that he visited 'Sinai in Arabia' tells us nothing definite as to its situation. And such traditions as we possess respecting the sites of Sinai and connected places cannot be traced back beyond the beginnings of the monastic period, in the 3rd cent. A.D.

The principal arguments that have been advanced in support of J. Serbāl's being 'Sinai' are (1) that it was the earliest centre of Christian life in the Peninsula, and identified with Sinai by the oldest monastic tradition; a narrative dating from c. 400 (Ebers, 413 f.) seems to imply that 'Sinai' was very near Pharan; (2) Ex. xvii. 1, 6, xix. 2 imply that Sinai was not far from Rephidim, which is already by Eusebius placed near Pharan; (3) J. Mūsā, though an imposing mountain, is only one of a number of imposing mountains (including some loftier and more imposing than itself) centred round the plain er-Rāḩah; J. Serbāl is a single imposing range of peaks, towering far above any of the mountains near it, and as seen by a spectator below (see above) far loftier; it is thus a more appropriate site for the great events described in Ex. xix. than J. Mūsā (Ebers, p. 389 f.); (4) the great cold of er-Rāḩah (4900 ft. above the sea) in winter, causing the water to freeze in a single night to the depth of an inch, renders it unsuitable for a year's stay for people including many women and children (Currelly, p. 248; cf. Lepsius, p. 545). The first of these arguments had force when Ebers wrote in 1872 and (ed. 2) 1881; but the discovery in 1887 of the Peregrinatio Silviæ—the narrative of a journey through various sacred places in Egypt, Sinai, and Palestine by a lady of Aquitania at about A.D. 385—in which the description given of Sinai, as 35 miles distant from Feiran, and as being seen across a large plain<sup>1</sup>, suits J. Mūsā, but not J. Serbāl, shews that J. Mūsā was identified with Sinai earlier than Ebers supposed<sup>2</sup>. (2) If J. Serbāl be Sinai, it is as much too near Rephidim—4 miles below Pharan, if Ebers' site (pp. 222, 188) at Hesy el-Khattatin be accepted (see Palmer, Sinai, pp. 208 n., 86)—as J. Mūsā (30, 37, or 41 miles: see p. 182) is too far—at least for a single day's march. (3) J. Serbāl may be more imposing than J. Mūsā, but it is difficult to argue that J. Mūsā is not sufficiently imposing for the events of Ex. xix. to be associated with it. (4) To the present writer, this appears to be the most serious objection to J. Mūsā; but he must allow that, not having visited the spot, he is not in a position to estimate it at its proper value. We may add (5) in favour of J. Mūsā that the plain er-Rāḥah is much better adapted as a camping-ground, even for a body of 5000 Israelites, than the comparatively narrow valley of W. Feiran, at the foot of the cluster of mountains in front of J. Serbāl (see p. 182). The argument would of course be stronger if the numbers of the Israelites at all approached 2,000,000; for as the engineers of the Ordnance Survey are careful to point out, the plain er-Rāḥah contains 1,936,000 square yards, which would allow nearly a square yard of standing ground for each person, while the adjacent valleys, containing 2,357,080 square yards, or more, would afford ample space for the tents, animals, and baggage. But, though the springs and streams about J. Mūsā are, no doubt, more numerous than those about J. Serbāl, the descriptions of them (e.g. O.S. 113 f.; cf. above, p. 177 f.) leave it very doubtful whether they would supply water sufficient for the needs of such an immense host, so that either the Israelites never came to J. Mūsā, or their numbers were very much less than tradition relates (cf. on xii. 37). Even, however, though their numbers were more moderate, if difficulty (4) can be overcome, J. Mūsā would seem to have on the whole better claims than J. Serbāl to be regarded as the Sinai of the OT. (so also Di., after an impartial discussion of the question, especially on account of the superior water and pasturage about J. Mūsā, but admitting the uncertainty of any decision on account of our having no evidence of the sites of many of the places mentioned, or of the existence of a continuous tradition respecting them).

Was Sinai, however, in the 'Sinaitic' Peninsula at all?

(1) It has been repeatedly urged by Prof. Sayce (Monuments, 1894, pp. 263—272; E.H.H., 1897, pp. 186—190) that 'Sinai' was on the E. side of the Gulf of 'Aḳaba: the Peninsula, at the time of the 19th dynasty, was an Egyptian province, with Egyptian garrisons stationed about the copper and turquoise mines in it [but see p. 14]; fugitives from Egypt would thus naturally avoid it, and flee rather across the desert et-Tih—approximately along what is now the regular pilgrim track from Suez to 'Aḳaba—in the direction of Edom: the land of Midian (see on ii. 15) was on the E. of the Gulf of 'Aḳaba, and the presence of Midianites in the Peninsula (cf. p. 14) rests upon no independent testimony, but is simply a corollary of the assumption that Sinai was a mountain in it; the natural home of the Amalekites also was the steppes S. of Canaan (see on xvii. 8—16), and their presence in the Peninsula (xvii. 8) is again merely a corollary of the same assumption: Dt. xxxiii. 2 'Jehovah came from Sinai, And beamed forth from Seir unto them; He shone forth from mount Paran, And came [as ought almost certainly to be read] from [or to] Meribath-Kadesh' (viz. to lead His people into Canaan), Jud. v. 4, and Hab. iii. 3 (where He is similarly represented as coming from Edom, and Teman [in Edom], and mount Paran [some mountain in the SE. of the desert et-Tih]), all suggest that Sinai was in the direction of Edom, NE. of the Peninsula (between 'Aḳaba and the Dead Sea). Those who adopt this view place Marah somewhere between Suez and 'Aḳaba, identify Elim with Eloth (1 K. ix. 26; the modern 'Aḳaba), the 'Red Sea' station (Nu. xxxiii. 10; cf. on ch. xvi. 1) with some spot on the east shore of the Gulf of 'Aḳaba, and place Rephidim, Sinai, &c. in the region S. or SE. of this. No objection can be raised against this view from the usually accepted sites of Marah, Elim, Rephidim, &c.; for, as has been explained above, these all depend purely upon the situation assumed for 'Sinai.' There is however no evidence that there were Amalekites on the E. of the Gulf of 'Aḳaba. The country S. and SE. of 'Aḳaba has not yet been sufficiently explored for definite sites to be proposed for Rephidim, &c.

(2) Other recent writers place Sinai in the neighbourhood of Ḳadesh, on the W. border of Edom (Nu. xx. 16). The site of Ḳadesh may be regarded as established by Trumbull: it was the modern 'Ain Ḳadis, about 50 miles S. of Beer-sheba. Now 'Sinai' is very closely associated with Ḳadesh: (a) if it may be assumed that the Meribah of Ex. xvii. 7 is the same as the Meribah of Nu. xx. 13, which was at Ḳadesh (Nu. xxvii. 14), Sinai, which was certainly near the Meribah of Exod. xvii., must have also been near Ḳadesh; (b) the wilderness of Paran, in which Ḳadesh is located (Nu. xiii. 26), is the first stopping-place of the Israelites after Sinai in P (Nu. x. 12), as it is the third in J (Nu. xii. 16, cf. xi. 34, 35): the wilderness on Paran, however, would be something like 80 miles from Jebel Mūsā; (c) Ḳadesh being on the W. border of Edom, if Sinai were near it, the parallelism of Sinai and Seir (Edom) in Dt. xxxiii. 2 would be as easily explained as if Sinai were SE. of Edom; (d) the country about Ḳadesh was the home of the Amalekites, so, if Sinai were near it, the mention of them in Ex. xvii. 8 would occasion no difficulty (McNeile, pp. cii—civ). To (b) it might be replied that the narratives in Nu. x.—xii. may not be detailed: Nu. xxxiii. 16—36 (P) mentions 20 stations between Sinai and Ḳadesh, and Nu. x. 12 also implies a series of stages; it remains, however, strange that there is no notice of any of these places in Nu. xi.—xii. (JE). Dt. i. 2 seems, however, to present a fatal objection to this view: if Horeb was 11 days' journey from Kadesh, how could it be near it? The objection can hardly be said to be satisfactorily met (ibid. p. cv f.) by distinguishing Horeb altogether from Sinai, and placing it at J. Harb, some 120 miles S. of 'Akaba, on the E. of the Gulf; such a site, being in, or near, the true 'land of Midian,' would of course suit Ex. iii. and xviii.; but it seems hardly likely that the two names, associated as they are in the Biblical traditions with the same events, should have denoted in reality places so distant from each other.

On the whole, while difficulties and uncertainties must be admitted, Jebel Mūsā seems, with our present knowledge, to be the most likely site for the 'Sinai' of the OT. But we are not entitled to dogmatize on the subject; and the opinion advocated by Prof. Sayce has undeniably points in its favour<sup>1</sup>.

CHAPTER XX. 1—21.

The Decalogue. Introduction to the Book of the Covenant.

The Decalogue is a concise but comprehensive summary of the fundamental duties of an Israelite towards God, and his neighbour. Jehovah is to be the only God recognized by Israel: He is to be worshipped under no material form; His name is to be revered; and the 'sabbath' is weekly to be kept holy in His honour. Respect is to be paid to parents; murder, adultery, theft, and false witness,—the commonest, perhaps, of the graver offences,—especially in a society in which the hand of the law is not strong,—are forbidden; the Israelite is not even to entertain the desire to possess anything of a neighbour's. Within a brief compass, the Decalogue thus 'lays down the fundamental articles of religion (sovereignty and spirituality of God), and asserts the claims of morality in the chief spheres of human relationship (home, calling, society).' By a few salient and far-reaching precepts, pointedly expressed, and easily remembered, it covers the whole religious and moral life; and provides a summary of human duty, capable of ready expansion and adjustment even to the highest Christian standards, and unsurpassable as a practical rule of life. The Decalogue moreover brings morality into intimate connexion with religion; and in an age when popular religion was only too readily satisfied with a formal ceremonialism, it emphasized, not ritual, but spirituality, reverence, and respect for the rights of other men (cf. Rom. xiii. 9), as what was pleasing in God's sight, and demanded by Him (cf. the later teaching of the prophets, Am. v. 24, Hos. vi. 6, Mic. vi. 8, &c.). Cf. further DB. i. 582.

The Decalogue, though assigned to 'E,' was naturally derived by him from a pre-existing source, and incorporated by him in his narrative.

At the time when E wrote, it was believed traditionally to have been inscribed by Jehovah on two tables of stone (xxiv. 12, xxxi. 18<sup>b</sup>, xxxii. 16), and (though this is first distinctly stated in Dt. x. 5) to have been placed by Moses in the Ark. The Decalogue appears also in Dt. v. 6—21, in what purports (vv. 5, 22) to be a verbal quotation; but there are several differences, especially in the 4th, 5th, and 10th Commandments. The most noticeable differences consist of additions, evidently the work of a Deuteronomic hand, and intended to emphasize thoughts or principles to which in Dt. importance is attached (as vv. 12, 16 the words 'as Jehovah thy God commanded thee,' cf. Dt. xx. 17, xxiv. 8, xxvi. 18; v. 14<sup>b</sup> 'that thy man-servant and thy maid-servant may rest as well as thou,' cf. for the philanthropic motive Dt. xii. 7, 12, 18, xiv. 29; v. 16<sup>b</sup> 'that it may be well with thee,' cf. Dt. v. 29, vi. 18, xii. 25, 28, xxii. 7): Ex. xx. 11 ('For in six days,' &c.) is, however, not found in Dt., and the motive given for the observance is a different one ('And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt, and Jehovah thy God brought thee out thence by a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm: therefore Jehovah thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath day'; cf. Dt. xv. 15, xvi. 11, 12, xxiv. 18, 22). It may however be doubted whether even the text of Exodus exhibits the Decalogue in its primitive form. It is an old and probable conjecture (Ewald, Hist. ii. 159, Di. al.) that the Commandments were originally all expressed in the same terse and simple form in which the first, and the sixth to the ninth still appear, and that the explanatory comments appended in certain cases were only added subsequently. The prefatory sentence (v. 2), and most of the comments, shew strong literary affinities (see the notes) with J (vv. 5<sup>b</sup>, 6, cf. xxxiv. 7, 14), or the compiler of JE (v. 2, cf. xiii. 14<sup>b</sup>), and (esp. in vv. 2, 4<sup>b</sup>, 5<sup>a</sup>, 10<sup>b</sup>, 12) with Dt.; hence it is probable that these parts are due, partly, like other parenetic passages of Ex. (cf. on xiii. 3—16, xv. 26), to the compiler of JE, and partly to a writer influenced by Dt. V. 11 stands upon a different footing from the other comments: it is in style unlike both JE and Dt., but it presupposes Gen. i., and agrees largely in expression with Ex. xxxi. 17<sup>b</sup>, Gen. ii. 3<sup>a</sup> (both P). As it is scarcely likely that the author of Dt. would have omitted the verse, had it formed part of the Decalogue as he knew it, it is probable that it was introduced into the text of Ex. subsequently, on the basis of the passages of P just cited. If these suppositions are correct, the Decalogue will have reached its present form by a gradual growth, explanatory or parenetic comments, derived from, or based upon, J, the compiler of JE, Dt., and P, having been successively introduced into it with a didactic purpose. On the Nash papyrus of the Decalogue, see p. 417.

1. The Ten Words: Dt. iv. 13, x. 4; and probably (see the note) Ex. xxxiv. 28.

The Greek equivalent, 'Decalogue' (ἡ δεκάλογος), is used first by Clem. Al. (Pædag. iii. 89 al.).

E And God spake all these words, saying, 20
R<sup>D</sup> I am the LORD thy God, | which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of <sup>1</sup>bondage.

2. The Testimony (or attestation, averment, viz. of God's will; see on xxv. 16): 36 times in P (cf. ibid.). Elsewhere in this sense only 2 K. xi. 12 (but doubtfully: see Skinner in the Century Bible, and Barnes in the Cambr. Bible), and 2 Ch. xxiv. 6 (as Nu. xvii. 7, 8 al.).

3. The Covenant: esp., and probably first, in Dt. and Deuteronomic writers (cf. above, p. 175): Ex. xxxiv. 28 (?; see the note); Dt. iv. 13 'his covenant' (cf. 23, v. 2, 3); and in the expressions, 'the tables of the covenant,' Dt. ix. 9, 11, 15, 1 K. viii. 9 LXX. (see Skinner); and 'the ark of the covenant (of Jehovah),' Dt. x. 8, xxxi. 9, 25, 26; Jos. iii. 3, 6, 8, 11, 14, 17, iv. 7, 9, 18, vi. 6, 8, viii. 33 (all JE or D<sup>2</sup>); Nu. x. 33, xiv. 44 (both JE); Jud. xx. 27; 1 S. iv. 3, 4, 5, 2 S. xv. 24; 1 K. iii. 15, vi. 19, viii. 1, 6; and several times in Chr. (In the occurrences in JE and other pre-Deuteronomic writers, 'the covenant of' is probably the addition of a redactor or scribe familiar with the Deut. expression<sup>1</sup>.)

xx. 1. And God spake, &c.] the sequel in E to xix. 19.

2. Introduction. The commandments are introduced by the statement who it is that gives them: One, viz., who is Israel's God and who has also been Israel's benefactor; and who has thus both the right to impose them, and a claim upon Israel for obedience to them.

Jehovah thy God] so vv. 5, 7, 10, 12, xv. 26 (see note), xxiii. 19 = xxxiv. 26, xxxiv. 24, and frequently (more than 200 times) in Dt. Not elsewhere in Ex.—Nu.

which brought thee out, &c.] and consequently has a claim upon thee for gratitude and obedience; cf. xiii. 3, 9, 14, 16: the same motive, also, Dt. v. 15, vi. 12, viii. 14, xiii. 5, 10; Am. ii. 10; Hos. xiii. 4 (RVm.). the house of bondage (lit. of slaves)] as xiii. 3 (see note), 14; and often in Dt. (cf. esp. vi. 12, viii. 14, xiii. 10, just quoted).

3. The first commandment, against polytheism. The fundamental principle of Israel's faith, presupposed throughout the OT., but specially insisted on when there is any danger of other gods, esp. Canaanite gods, being preferred to Jehovah, or worshipped equally with Him.

other gods] so xxiii. 13; cf. in the singular xxxiv. 14 (אֱלֹהִים אֲחֵרִים). Very frequent in Dt. and Deuteronomic writers (compilers of Judges and Kings; and Jer.), as Dt. vi. 14, vii. 4, viii. 19 al.; Jud. ii. 12, 17, 19; 1 K. ix. 6, 9, xi. 4, 10; Jer. i. 16, vii. 6, 9, 18 al. Otherwise first in E (Jos. xxiv. 2, 16), 1 S. xxvi. 19, 2 K. v. 17, Hos. iii. 1 (not in other prophets, except Jer., and never in P).

before me] or, more distinctly, in front of me,—obliging Me (un-

<sup>1</sup> This supposition is not arbitrary: because—at least as far as we know—until Dt. was written, the conditions for calling the ark the 'ark of the Covenant' did not exist: no covenant is concluded on the basis of the Decalogue in Ex.; this is first said to have been done in Dt. (cf. Chapman, Introd. to the Pent. p. 113 f.).

4 Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image, | nor the R<sup>L</sup>
likeness of any form that is in heaven above, or that is in the 5 earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity willingly) to behold them, and also giving them a prominence above Me.

4-6. The second commandment, against image-worship. The prohibition is general; and includes both images of Jehovah,—who, as a spiritual Being, cannot be represented by any material likeness (see the development of this thought in Dt. iv. 15-19),—and also those of other gods, or of deified creatures, or objects of nature. Images were widely used by worshippers of Jehovah till the times of the prophets: on the bearing of this upon the date of the Decalogue, see p. 415 f.

4. a graven image] an image of carved wood (sometimes enclosed in a metal casing, Is. xxx. 22) or stone, such as were common in antiquity, and are so, of course, still among heathen nations. Cf. Dt. iv. 16 f.

the likeness of any form, &c.] By an inexactness of language, the Heb. identifies the 'form' made with the 'form' (in heaven, &c.) upon which it is modelled: RV. eases the sentence by inserting 'the likeness of.'

heaven above...the earth beneath] The same combination (with reference to Jehovah being God in both), Dt. iv. 39, Jos. ii. 11, 1 K. viii. 23 (both Deuteronomic).

the water under the earth] cf. Dt. iv. 18. The waters meant are the huge abyss of subterranean waters, on which the Hebrews imagined the fiat surface of the earth to rest (Gen. xlix. 25, Ps. xxiv. 2, cxxxvi. 6), and which they supposed to be the hidden source of seas and springs (see further the writer's note on Gen. i. 9, 10). Fish, at least in certain places, or of certain kinds, were regarded as sacred, and forbidden to be eaten, in Egypt, Syria and elsewhere; and Xen. (Anab. i. 4. 9) says that the fish in the Chalus, near Aleppo, were looked upon as gods. See Rel. Sem.<sup>2</sup> pp. 174-6, 192 f.; EB. ii. 1530 f.

5. The command of v. 4 developed and emphasized.

bow down...serve] The same combination, Dt. iv. 19, viii. 19, xi. 16, xvii. 3, xxix. 26, xxx. 17, Jud. ii. 19 (D<sup>2</sup>); and several times in Jer. ['worship' in these passages is in the Heb. bow down, as here].

a jealous God] who will not tolerate that the reverence due to Him, should be given to another,—whether to another god (xxxiv. 14), or, as here, to an image worshipped, or, if an image of Himself, likely to be worshipped, as Divine,—and whose jealousy is described elsewhere as burning like fire against those who thus dishonour Him. Occurring, as it does here, in a comment on the original command (see p. 192), the expression is derived probably from xxxiv. 14. It recurs Dt. iv. 24 (with 'a devouring fire'), vi. 15, Jos. xxiv. 19 (E), each time in a similar connexion; cf. the verb in Dt. xxxii. 16, 21 (the Song; hence Ps. lxxviii.

R<sup>D</sup> of the fathers upon the children, upon the third and upon the fourth generation of them that hate me; and shewing<sup>6</sup> mercy unto<sup>1</sup> thousands, of them that love me and keep my commandments.

58). Jehovah's honour is, however, intimately connected with that of His people: so his 'jealousy' may also be exerted, if circumstances permit it, on His people's behalf, as Is. ix. 7, xlii. 13; cf. Joel ii. 18, Nah. i. 2, Zech. i. 14, with the writer's notes.

5, 6. visiting... and doing...] a further definition of Jehovah's ethical character, as displayed in His attitude towards sin and goodness, respectively. The definition is based (Di.) upon xxxiv. 7 (cf. Nu. xiv. 18, Jer. xxxii. 18), only with the two clauses transposed, so as to give the warning the first place, as the context here demands.

5. of them that hate me] The term is a strong one, and denotes those who persistently and defiantly oppose themselves to God.

6. unto thousands, of them, &c.] i.e. not thousands consisting of them that love me, but (notice the comma added in RV.) thousands belonging to them that love me (Heb. le, just as in v. 5, properly 'belonging to them that hate me'). The antithesis is between the narrow limits, the third or fourth generation of descendants, within which the sin is visited, and the thousands belonging to,—i.e. primarily, descended from, though possibly those 'belonging to' in a wider sense, as servants or other dependents, may be included,—such as love God, who, in virtue of this relation, and for the sake of those who thus love Him, experience His mercy. The intention of the passage is thus to teach that God's mercy transcends in its operation His wrath: in His providence the beneficent consequences of a life of goodness extend indefinitely further than the retribution which is the penalty of persistence in sin. Naturally 'thousands' is not to be understood literally: it is simply intended to convey an impressive idea of the greatness of God's mercy. It is not apparent how it can mean (RVm.) 'a thousand generations': Dt. vii. 9 is a rhetorical amplification, not an exact interpretation, of the present passage.

that love me] shew towards Him the pure and intense affection and devotion which we denote by the term 'love.' The thought is one strongly characteristic of Deuteronomy. 'Love to God is in Dt. the essence of religion, and the primary motive for obedience to His commands. In no other stratum of the Hexateuch is this lofty conception of religion to be found' (Bä.). See Dt. vi. 5 [Mk. xii. 30, Luke x. 27], x. 12, xi. 1, 13, 22, xiii. 3, xix. 9, xxx. 6, 16, 20, Jos. xxii. 5, xxiii. 11 (both Deuteronomic); and cf. the writer's Deuteronomy, pp. xxi, xxviii, lxxviii, 9r. Love to God is not mentioned elsewhere in the Hexateuch, except in the parallel, Dt. v. 10 (cf. vii. 19: see, however, Jud. v. 30).

It is, of course, not through extraordinary or miraculous interferences that the sins of parents are visited upon their children, but through the natural providence of God, operating through the normal constitution of society, which in its turn takes its organization and form from the character of human nature, which is His appointment. History and experience alike teach how often, and under what varied conditions, it happens that the misdeeds of a parent result in bitter consequences for the children. The principle here asserted is not in conflict with Dt. xxiv. 6 (children not to be put to death for the fathers): the legislator is not there dealing with a principle involved in the constitution of society itself; he is laying down a rule for the administration of justice by the State. See, on the distinction between the two cases, Mozley's Ruling Ideas in Early Ages, Lect. V.

7. The third commandment. The name of God to be treated with reverence.

take...in vain] properly, take up (viz. upon the lips, as xxiii. 1, Ps. xv. 3, xvi. 4)...for unreality (Di. 'zur Nichtigkeit')—i.e. make use of it for any idle, frivolous, or insincere purpose. The root idea of shāw', is what is groundless or unsubstantial: hence in a material sense it means unreal, vain (Ps. lx. 11); and in a moral sense it denotes what is empty, frivolous, or insincere: cf. xxiii. 1 'Thou shalt not take up a groundless report'; Ps. xxiv. 4 'hath not lifted up his soul (i.e. directed his desires) unto unreality' (i.e. to what is either frivolous or insincere): in the Psalms it is generally rendered vanity, but it often really means what we should call insincerity, as xii. 2, xli. 6 (see the Glossary in the writer's Parallel Psalter, p. 464). God's name is to be treated with reverence; it is not to be desecrated either by false swearing (Lev. xix. 12 (H), Jer. v. 2, vii. 9, Zech. v. 4, Mal. iii. 5), or by being used disrespectfully for any other frivolous or idle purpose, as in cursing or reviling, or to support false pretensions of being able to use magic or divination, or to predict the future (Jer. xxvii. 15).

hold...guiltless] i.e. leave unpunished, as 1 K. ii. 9 shews is implied, and as the word is sometimes actually rendered, e.g. Prov. vi. 29, Jer. xxv. 29. Cf. xxxiv. 7, with the note.

8—11. The fourth commandment. The observance of the sabbath.

8. Remember] 'Think of it always, so as never to forget it, as a day to be distinguished from ordinary days, and held sacred: remember, as xiii. 3' (Di.). Dt. v. 12 substitutes the more ordinary 'Observe.'

sabbath] Heb. shabbāth. The derivation is uncertain. As a Hebrew word, it would naturally be connected with shābath, to desist, cease,—see Is. xiv. 4, xxiv. 8; with from, Gen. ii. 2, 3: where the sabbath is thought of, either with 'from work' understood, or as a 'denominative,' to 'keep sabbath,' Ex. xvi. 30, xxiii. 12<sup>a</sup>, xxxi. 17, xxxiv. 21, Lev. xxvi.

R<sup>D</sup> shalt thou labour, and do all thy work : but the seventh day is a sabbath unto the LORD thy God : in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger R<sup>P</sup> that is within thy gates : for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and 34, 35—and suggest the idea of cessation from work. The verb shābath denotes ‘rest,’ not in the positive sense of relaxation or refreshment (which is nūāh, see v. 11, xxiii. 12<sup>b</sup>), but in the negative sense of cessation from work or activity : but it is at least possible that the word ‘sabbath’ is of Babylonian origin (p. 198), though of uncertain etymology (see DB. iv. 319<sup>a</sup>; note also, on the etym., the reserve expressed by Zimmern, ZDMG. 1904, p. 202). Even, however, though this should be its origin, the word might well have been connected by the Hebrews with the Heb. shābath, and regarded by them as suggesting the idea of cessation. See further, on the Bab. and Heb. ‘sabbath,’ KAT.<sup>3</sup> 592—4.

keep...holy] elsewhere rendered hallow, as v. 11 end, Gen. ii. 3<sup>a</sup>, Jer. xvii. 22 al. Comp. Is. lviii. 13 (‘my holy day’).

9, 10. Explanation how the sabbath is to be kept holy.

9. work] more precisely, business.—the word regularly used of the ‘work’ or ‘business’ forbidden on the sabbath (xxxi. 14, 15, Jer. xvii. 22, 24 al. : cf. Gen. ii. 2), or other sacred day (xii. 16).

10. The rest is to be a general one : no work is to be done either by the Israelite himself, or any member of his household (including his servants), or by his cattle, or by the ‘sojourner’ settled in his cities.

in it] LXX. Vulg. express this; Sam. and the Nash papyrus read it. manservant...maidservant] bondman...bondmaid : the meaning is (as always) male and female slaves. Cf. xxi. 2, 7.

stranger] sojourner, or foreigner settled in Israel (see on xii. 48) : he also is to enjoy rest from his toil on the sabbath. Cf. the injunction not to oppress him (xxii. 21, with the note). For the enumeration, cf. Dt. xii. 12, 18, xvi. 11, 14.

thy gates] i.e. thy cities, a distinctively Deut. expression, occurring 26 times in Dt., and only 1 K. viii. 37 = 2 Ch. vi. 28 (Deut. compiler) besides; comp. esp. (with ‘within’) Dt. xii. 12, 18, xiv. 21, 27, 29, xvi. 11, 14, xxiv. 14, xxxi. 12. In Dt. v. 14 a clause is added, emphasizing the humanitarian purpose of the observance; cf. Dt. xii. 7, 12, xiv. 29.

11. Why the sabbath is to be observed. The reason is based upon Gen. ii. 3, cf. Ex. xxxi. 17<sup>b</sup> (both P). The motive may have operated with the writer of the comment; but it cannot state the real reason for the observance of the sabbath. ‘P’s story of the Creation, with the six days followed by the sacred seventh, is not the cause of the Sabbath, but the result of the fact that the week ending with the Sabbath was an existing institution. P adjusts the work of creation to it’ (McNeile). Cf. the present writer’s Genesis, p. 35. On the different motive assigned for the observance in Dt. v. 15, see p. 192.

rested] This is the word nūah, meaning relaxation, referred to on v. 8: cf. xxiii. 12<sup>b</sup>, Dt. v. 14<sup>b</sup>; and for the thought Ex. xxxi. 17<sup>b</sup> ('desisted, and was refreshed'). (In Gen. ii. 2, 3 the word used is 'desisted'.)

blessed...hallowed] i.e. made it a day which would bring a blessing on those who observed it, and made it sacred to Himself.

It is impossible to consider here with any fulness the history and significance of the sabbath; and for a more detailed discussion the writer must refer to his art. SABBATH in DB. iv. It is not impossible that ultimately the institution was of Babylonian origin: in Babylonia there occurs (though rarely) the word shabattum, meaning day for propitiating a deity's anger<sup>1</sup>, and in Babylonia also, especially in the earlier periods of the history, every seventh day of the month was marked by abstention from secular business<sup>2</sup>: but even if that was the case (for connecting links are still wanting), it is certain that when adopted by the Hebrews, a new character was impressed upon it by the higher and purer religion of Israel. In the earliest legislation of the Hebrews, the sabbath appears as a day of cessation from (in particular) field-work, designed with a humanitarian end (xxiii. 12 E; xxxiv. 21 J), and, to judge from the context, possessing already a religious character: in the Decalogue, in what is probably (see above) the oldest part of the Commandment, it is to be kept 'holy' by the Israelite: in the early historical books, it is associated with the 'new moon,' in a manner which implies that both were occasions of intermission from labour and trade (Am. viii. 5), and holidays (2 K. iv. 22, 23); Hosea (ii. 11), and Isaiah (i. 13), both allude to it as a day of religious observance. In later times, both the religious observances and also the abstention from labour were increasingly emphasized. In H and Ezek. (see on Ex. xxxi. 13) the observance of the sabbath is repeatedly insisted on: cf. a little later Is. lvi. 2, 4, 6, lviii. 13 f., and (in the ideal future) lxvi. 23. Ezekiel, also, in his ideal legislation for the future (chs. xl.—xlvi.), gives directions,—based, presumably, upon already existing usage,—respecting the sacrifices to be offered every sabbath by the 'prince' on behalf of the nation in the restored temple (xlv. 17, xlvi. 4 f.). In the legislation of P, the regulations respecting the sabbath become both more numerous and more strict: its institution is thrown back to the end of the week of Creation (Gen. ii. 2, 3, Ex. xxxi. 17); it is to be observed (Lev. xxiii. 3) by a 'holy convocation,' or religious gathering; additional sacrifices (viz. double those offered on ordinary days) are prescribed for it (Nu. xxviii. 8 f.); and death is the penalty imposed (Ex. xxxi. 15), and exacted (Nu. xv. 32—36), for its non-observance. Thus in the priestly law, the original character and objects of the sabbath have receded into the background, and it has become more distinctly a purely ceremonial observance: Christ, in opposition to later Rabbinical exaggerations and refinements, brought men back to the great truth that 'the sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath'; and, transformed into the Christian Sunday, it has become in Christian countries a wonderful means both of securing rest from bodily toil, and of maintaining the life of a pure and spiritual religion.

12. The fifth commandment. Honour to be paid to parents. Cf. in H Lev. xix. 3. The position accorded to parents is a high one: they are mentioned in the first table of the Decalogue, and duty towards them stands next to duties towards God (so in xxi. 17 and Lev. xx. 9 [H] the penalty for cursing them is the same, viz. death, as the penalty for blaspheming God, Lev. xxiv. 15 f. [H]). Cf. the development of the command in Ecclus. iii. 1—16; and the warnings addressed to those who disregard it, Prov. xx. 20, xxx. 17 (cf. 11). In the NT. see Mt. xv. 4—6 (|| Mk. vii. 10—13). As Kn. ap. Di. shews, the command is in the spirit of the best minds of antiquity: Plato, for instance (Legg. iv. 717 C—D), lays it down that after the gods and demi-gods parents ought to have the most honour, and that through his whole life every man should pay his parents the utmost deference and respect (cf. xi. 930 E—932 A); and Aristotle, Eth. Nic. ix. 2, 8, says that it is proper to pay them 'honour such as is given to the gods' (τιμὴν καθάπερ θεοῖς): other Greek writers also speak similarly. Cf. further on xxi. 15.

that thy days may be long &c.] The 'first commandment with promise' (Eph. vi. 2). A spirit of filial respect implies a well-ordered life in general; and so tends to secure prosperity both to the individual and to the nation (the commandments are addressed throughout not only to the individual as such, but also to the individual as representing the nation). The terms of the promise are strongly Deuteronomic: see Dt. vi. 2, xxv. 15, and (in the form 'prolong days') iv. 26, 40, v. 33, xi. 9, xvii. 20, xxii. 7, xxx. 18, xxxii. 47; and, for the following clause, upon the land, &c., iii. 20, xi. 17, 31, xv. 7, xvi. 20, xvii. 14, xviii. 9, &c., and especially iv. 40, xxv. 15.

giveth] is giving (i.e. is in the course of giving, is about to give); so in all the passages of Dt. just quoted (and in many similar ones in the same book besides). The standpoint of the Exodus is assumed. The land is not, as 'giveth' in itself might suggest, the possession of the individual Israelite, but Canaan.

13. The sixth commandment. The sanctity of human life to be upheld (cf. Gen. ix. 5, 6 P). Here the duty is laid down simply as a Divine command: the human penalty for infringing it is prescribed elsewhere (see on xxi. 12).

shalt do no murder] AV. had shalt not kill: but the Heb. word implies violent, unauthorised killing. Cf. especially the list of crimes in Hos. iv. 2 (where 'killing' has been kept), Jer. vii. 9. The verb in the ptc. occurs repeatedly in P's law of homicide in Nu. xxxv. (RV. always here 'manslayer').

Comp. the spiritualization of this commandment by our Lord in Mt. v. 21—26.

14. The seventh commandment. The purity of the married state to be maintained (cf. Gen. ii. 24 J). Cf. Lev. xviii. 20 (H), Job xxxi. 9—12, and Mt. v. 27—32. For the penalty for adultery, see Lev. xx. 10 (H), Dt. xxii. 22. In LXX. (B, and several cursives,—both here and in Dt.), and the Nash papyrus, the seventh commandment comes before the sixth: the same order is found in Mark x. 19 (Text. Rec.), Lk. xviii. 20, Rom. xiii. 9, Jas. ii. 11, in Philo, and in many of the Fathers (Kn.).

15. The eighth commandment. The rights of private property to be respected. Cf. in H Lev. xix. 11. For penalties for stealing, see xxi. 16, xxii. 1.

It is hardly necessary to quote from the prophets passages illustrative of these duties: but Hos. iv. 2, Jer. vii. 9 are particularly worth referring to.

16. The ninth commandment. Against bearing false witness, primarily in a court of law,—a specially common crime in the East,—but also more generally by taking away the character of a neighbour by false imputations (cf. xxiii. 1).

bear false witness] lit. answer (in a forensic sense, in a court of law, Dt. xix. 16, 18, Nu. xxxv. 30 [E.V. testify], but also more generally, 1 S. xiii. 3 ['witness'], Dt. xxxi. 21 al. ['testify']) as a false witness: Dt. v. 20 has 'as an empty, insincere, witness' (the word explained on v. 7). For the penalty for false witness, see Dt. xix. 16—21. Cf. Prov. xiv. 5, xix. 5, xxv. 18 (same Heb. as here).

17. The tenth commandment. The most inward of all the commandments, forbidding not an external act, but a hidden mental state, a state, however, which is the spring and root of nearly every sin against a neighbour, the unlawful desire (ἐπιθυμία) for something which is another's.

covet] lit. desire, which may be used of a perfectly lawful, and indeed laudable, affection (Ps. xix. 10, lxxviii. 16): it acquires its bad sense solely from the context; comp. Jos. vii. 21, and especially Mic. ii. 2.

house] i.e. (Kn. Di. Bā. al.) domestic establishment generally (Gen. xv. 2, Job viii. 15): examples follow of things belonging to it, and most likely to be coveted, wife, male and female slaves, &c. In Dt. v. 21

And Moses said unto the people, Fear not: for <sup>20</sup>God is come to prove you, and that his fear may be before you, that ye sin not. And the people stood afar off, and <sup>21</sup>Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was.

the wife is given the first place, and the house and other belongings follow, shewing that 'house' is there used in the sense of 'dwelling.' In its original form, the command—no doubt—ended at 'house' (i.e. establishment), the examples following being a later expansion. 'The command is aimed against that greedy desire for another's goods, which so often issued in violent acts—the oppressions and cheating which were rife among the wealthier classes, and were denounced by the prophets' (McNeile, p. lix): cf. Am. iii. 10, v. 11, Mic. ii. 2, 9, Is. iii. 14, 15, v. 8, &c.

18—21. The people, alarmed by the terrible accompaniments of the theophany, express a desire that in future Moses may speak to them instead of God. Their wish is implicitly granted. Cf. Dt. v. 22—31.

18. saw] Heb., more graphically, were seeing.

the thunderings (Heb. voices), &c.] see xix. 16, 19.

and when, &c.] Heb. and the people saw and trembled, where 'saw,' after clause <sup>a</sup>, is tautologous. Read probably, with merely a change of vowel-points, and the people were afraid, and trembled (so Sam. LXX. Vulg.; cf. v. 20).

trembled] swayed to and fro, shook, is the meaning of the Heb. פָּנָה: cf. Is. vii. 2 'and his heart shook...as the trees of a forest shake with the wind'; Nah. iii. 12. On the marg. it is rendered, not very expressively, were moved, as in Is. vi. 4 RV., vii. 2 EVV., xix. 1 EVV.

19. Speak thou (emph.)...and we will hear] i.e. it is implied, listen and obey (see Dt. v. 27 end).

lest we die] cf. Dt. v. 25 f.

20. to prove you] to put you to the proof (xvi. 4; cf. on xvii. 2), to see whether (Dt. viii. 2), as you have just said (v. 19), you will really obey Him, and in order to inspire you with the dread of offending Him.

and that his fear, &c.] That the fear which His presence creates may be ever before your eyes.

21. thick darkness] ārāphēl, the word, mostly poetical (Ps. xviii. 9, 1 K. viii. 12), used in Dt. iv. 11, v. 22 [Heb. 19].

CHAPTERS XX. 22—XXIII. 33.

The 'Book of the Covenant' (see xxiv. 7 in explanation of the name) is the oldest piece of Hebrew legislation that we possess. The laws contained in it are spoken of in xxiv. 3 as consisting of two elements, the words (or commands) and the judgements: the judgements (see on xxi. 1) are the provisions relating to civil and criminal law, prescribing what is to be done when particular cases arise, and comprised in xxi. 2—xxii. 17; the words are positive injunctions of moral, religious, and ceremonial law, introduced mostly by Thou shalt or shalt not, and comprised in xx. 23—6, xxii. 18—xxiii. 19: xxiii. 20—33 is a hortatory epilogue, consisting chiefly of promises intended to suggest motives for the observance of the preceding laws. The laws themselves were doubtless taken by E from some already existing source: the 'judgements' in xxi. 2—xxii. 17 seem to have undergone no alteration of form: but the 'words' which follow can hardly be in their original order; moral, religious, and ceremonial injunctions being intermingled sometimes singly, sometimes in groups (see the following summary), without any apparent system (notice also xxiii. 4 f., evidently interrupting the connexion between vv. 1—3 and 6—8); and in parts (as xxii. 21<sup>b</sup>—22, 24, xxiii. 9<sup>b</sup>, 23—25<sup>a</sup>, 31<sup>b</sup>—33: see the notes) slight parenthetic additions have probably been made by the compiler of JE.

The laws themselves may be grouped as follows:

- i. Enactments relating to civil and criminal law:
  1. Rights of Hebrew slaves (male and female), xxi. 2—11.
  2. Capital offences, viz. murder (in distinction from manslaughter), striking or cursing a parent, and man-stealing, xxi. 12—17.
  3. Penalties for bodily injuries, caused (a) by human beings, xxi. 18—27, (b) by animals (a vicious ox, for instance), or neglect of reasonable precautions (as leaving a pit open), xxi. 28—36.
  4. Theft of ox or sheep, and burglary, xxii. 1—4.
  5. Compensation for damage done by straying cattle [but see note], or fire spreading accidentally to another man's field, xxii. 5—6.
  6. Compensation for loss or injury in various cases of deposit or loan, xxii. 7—15.
  7. Compensation for seduction, xxii. 16—17.
- ii (a). Regulations relating to worship and religious observances:
  1. Prohibition of images, and regulations for the construction of altars, xx. 23—26.
  2. Sacrifice to 'other gods' to be punished with the 'ban,' xxii. 20.
  3. God not to be reviled, nor a ruler cursed, xxii. 28.

4. Firstfruits, and firstborn males (of men, oxen, and sheep), to be given to Jehovah, xxii. 29—30.

5. Flesh torn of beasts not to be eaten, xxii. 31.

6 & 7. The seventh year to be a fallow year, and the seventh day a day of rest (in each case, for a humanitarian motive), xxiii. 10—12.

8. God's commands to be honoured, and 'other gods' not to be invoked, xxiii. 13.

9. The three annual Pilgrimages to be observed (all males to appear before Jehovah at each), xxiii. 14—17.

10. A festal sacrifice not to be offered with leavened bread, nor its fat to remain unburnt till the following morning, xxiii. 18.

11. Firstfruits to be brought to the house of Jehovah, xxiii. 19<sup>a</sup>.

12. A kid not to be boiled in its mother's milk, xxiii. 19<sup>b</sup>.

ii (b). Injunctions of a moral, and, especially, of a humanitarian character:

1. Sorcery and bestiality to be punished with death, xxii. 18—19.

2. The 'sojourner,' the widow, and the orphan, not to be oppressed, xxii. 21—24.

3. Interest not to be taken from the poor, xxii. 25.

4. A garment taken in pledge to be returned before sun-down, xxii. 26—27.

5. Veracity and impartiality, the duties of a witness, xxiii. 1—3.

6. An enemy's beast to be preserved from harm, xxiii. 4—5.

7. Justice to be administered impartially, and no bribe to be taken, xxiii. 6—9.

These three groups of laws may have been taken originally from distinct collections. The terse form in which many of the laws in ii (a) and ii (b) are cast resembles that which prevails in Lev. xix. (H). The regulations respecting worship contained in xxiii. 10—19, together with the allied ones embedded in xiii. 3—7, 11—13, are repeated in xxxiv. 18—26, in the section (xxxiv. 10—26) sometimes called the 'Little Book of the Covenant,' with slight verbal differences, and with the addition in xxxiv. 11—17 of more specific injunctions against idolatry (see the synoptic table, pp. 370—2).

The laws contained in the 'Book of the Covenant' are, as has been already said, no doubt older than the narrative (E) in which they are incorporated: they represent, to use Cornill's expression, the 'consuetudinary law of the early monarchy,' and include (cf. the notes on lbrāh, p. 162, and mishpāt, xxii. 1) the formulated decisions which, after having been begun by Moses (xviii. 16; cf. p. 161), had gradually accumulated up to that age. The stage of society for which the Code was designed, and the characteristics of the Code itself, are well indicated by W. R. Smith (OTJC.<sup>3</sup> p. 340 ff.). 'The society contemplated in it is of very simple structure. The basis of life is agricultural. Cattle and agricultural produce are the main elements of wealth; and the laws of property deal almost exclusively with them (see xxi. 28—xxii. 10). The principles of criminal and civil justice are those still current among the Arabs of the desert, viz. retaliation and pecuniary compensation. Murder is dealt with by the law of blood-revenge; but the innocent man-slayer may seek asylum at God's altar (cf. 1 K. i. 50, ii. 28, 29). Man-stealing, offences against parents, and witchcraft are also punishable by death. Personal injuries fall mostly, like murder, under the law of retaliation (xxi. 24 f.). These are the only cases in which a punishment affecting the person is prescribed: in other cases the punishment takes as a rule the form of compensation. 'Degrading punishments, as imprisonment or the bastinado, are unknown; and loss of liberty is inflicted only on a thief who cannot pay a fine (xxii. 3<sup>b</sup>). The slave retains definite rights. He recovers his freedom after 7 years, unless he prefers to remain a bondman, and to seal his determination by a solemn symbolical act (xxi. 6).' He cannot appeal to the lex talionis against his master: to beat one's own slave to death is not a capital crime; but for minor injuries he can claim his liberty (xxi. 20 f., 26 f.). 'Women do not enjoy full social equality with men. The daughter was her father's property, who received a price for surrendering her to her husband (xxi. 7); and so a daughter's dishonour is compensated by law as a pecuniary loss to her father (xxii. 16 f.).' A woman slave was a slave for life, except when she had been bought to be her master's concubine, and he withheld the recognized rights which she thus acquired (xxi. 11). Concubine-slaves had also other rights (xxi. 8—10). Various cases of injury to property are specified: the penalty is usually simple compensation, though naturally it is greater, if deliberate purpose (as in the case of theft, xxii. 1), or culpable negligence, can be proved. Cases of misappropriation of property are settled by a decision given at a sanctuary (xxii. 9).

From the point of view of ethics and religion, the regard paid in the Code to the claims of humanity and justice is observable. An emphatic voice is raised against those crying vices of Oriental Government, the maladministration of justice, and the oppression of the poor. Even an enemy, in his need, is to receive consideration and help (xxiii. 4, 5). 'The gēr, or foreigner living in Israel under the protection of a family or the community, though he has no legal status (cf. on xxii. 21), is not to be oppressed. The Sabbath is enforced as an ordinance of humanity; and to the same end the produce of every field or vineyard must be left to the poor one year in seven. The precepts of religious worship are simple. He who sacrifices to any god but Jehovah falls under the 'ban' (xxii. 20). The only ordinance of ceremonial sanctity is to abstain from the flesh of animals torn by wild beasts (xxii. 31). Altars are to be of the simplest possible construction. The sacred dues are the firstlings and firstfruits; and the former must be presented at a sanctuary on the eighth day. This regulation presupposes a plurality of sanctuaries, which also agrees with the terms of xx. 24.' The only sacrifices mentioned are burnt- and peace-offerings. The three pilgrimages, at which every male is to appear before Jehovah with a gift, celebrate three periods of the agricultural year, the beginning and close of harvest, and the end of the vintage. The only points of sacrificial ritual insisted on are the two rules that the blood of a festal sacrifice is not to be offered with leavened bread, and that the fat must be burnt before the next morning. The simplicity of the ceremonial regulations in this Code stands in striking contrast to the detailed and systematic development which they receive in the later legislation of P.

Some of the laws strike us as severe (xxi. 15, 16, 21, xxii. 18, 20); but we must remember the stage of civilization for which they were designed: they were adapted, not for people in every stage of society, but for people living as the Israelites were circumstanced at the time when they were drawn up. They also, it is to be observed, are in many cases clearly intended to impose restrictions upon abuse of authority, or arbitrary violence. We may remember also that far severer punishments, such as mutilation and torture, were common not only in many other ancient nations, but even, till comparatively recent times, in Christian Europe; and in England, till 1835, death was the penalty for many trivial forms of theft. Of course some of the laws—notably the one about witches—have been terribly misapplied in times when the progressive character of revelation and the provisional character of Israel's laws were not realized. But they were adapted on the whole to make Israel a just, humane, and God-fearing people, and to prepare the way, when the time was ripe, for something better.

The laws of J and E (except the section dealing with the compensations to be paid for various injuries, xxi. 18—xxii. 15), expanded, and, in some cases, modified to suit the requirements of a later age, form a substantial element in the Deuteronomic legislation (Dt. v.—xxviii.; see the synoptic table in LOT, p. 73 ff.): to some of the moral and religious injunctions there are also parallels (referred to in the notes) in the 'Law of Holiness' (Lev. xvii.—xxvi.). The ceremonial laws appear in a partially developed form in Dt., and in a more fully developed form, with many minutely defined regulations, in the Priests' Code (for an example in Exodus itself, contrast xxiii. 15 with xii. 14—20). A discussion of the differences between the laws of JE and the later codes belongs more to the commentaries on Lev., Numb., and Dt., than to one on Exodus; and they have been noticed here only in special cases. A detailed comparison of the different regulations will be found in McNeile, pp. xxxix—xlvi, li—lvi.

The promulgation of a new code of laws was often among ancient nations ascribed to the command of the national deity. Thus among the Cretans, Minos, the 'companion of great Zeus' (Διὸς μεγάλου δαριστή, Od. xix. 179), was said to have held converse with Zeus, and to have received his laws from him in a cave of the Dictæan mountain (cf. [Plato], Minos, 319 B—320 B); his laws and those of Lycurgus are called 'the laws of Zeus' and 'Apollo' respectively (Plato, Legg. i. 632 D); and Numa's laws were ascribed to the goddess Egeria (Dion. Hal. ii. 60 f.). The closest parallel is however afforded, on Semitic ground, by Hammurabi, who expressly speaks of his code as consisting of 'righteous laws' delivered to him by Shamash, the sun-god (see below, p. 418 ff.).

22—26. The collection opens with directions respecting the manner in which God is to be worshipped (other directions about religious observances follow in xxii. 20, 29—31, xxiii. 10—19).

- 22 And the LORD said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say E unto the children of Israel, Ye yourselves have seen that 23 I have talked with you from heaven. Ye shall not make other gods with me; gods of silver, or gods of gold, ye shall 24 not make unto you. An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and 22. Thus thou shalt say] Cf. xix. 3.

from heaven] As their position in the Heb. shews, these are the emphatic words in the sentence: their intention is to shew that the Israelites' God is exalted far above the earth, and that consequently (v. 23) no material gods are to be venerated by them. Cf. Dt. iv. 36.

23. Cf. xx. 3, 4 f.; and in the other codes xxxiv. 17 (J), Lev. xix. 4 (H), Dt. iv. 15—18, xxvii. 15.

24—26. Altars, their construction, and the places at which they may be erected.

24, 25. Altars were to be of the simplest material, of earth, or, if of stone, of unhewn stone: they might be erected wherever Jehovah gave occasion for His name to be commemorated; and any Israelite might sacrifice upon them. The passage evidently reflects an early stage of Heb. usage: in later times much more elaborate altars were constructed (xxvii. 1—8, 1 K. viii. 64, 2 Ch. iv. 1), and the right of sacrifice was ultimately restricted to the priests.

24. altar] The word in Heb. (mizbēah) means a 'place of slaughter or sacrifice.' Altars of earth were also common among the Romans (Tert. Apol. 25 attributes temeraria de caespite altaria to the earliest times; cf. the arae gramineae of Aen. xii. 118 f., and the 'positusque carbo in Caespite vivo' of Hor. Od. iii. 8. 3 f., &c.), and, according to Sil. Ital. iv. 703, the Carthaginians: for an example of a large natural stone, extemporized rapidly into an altar, see 1 S. xiv. 32—35. On the probable primitive idea of an altar among the Semites, as an artificial substitute for a natural object, especially a rock or boulder, supposed—like other striking natural objects, as a tree, stream, or spring (EB. iii. 2081 f.)—to be the abode of a deity or numen loci, see Rel. Sem. 206 ff., or DB. s.v. ALTAR. Ancient rock-altars have been discovered recently in Palestine; see the writer's Schweich Lectures on Modern Research as illustrating the Bible (1908), p. 66 f.; and cf. Jud. vi. 20 f. shalt sacrifice, &c.] 'The words are addressed not to the priests, but to Israel at large, and imply that any Israelite may approach the altar' (W. R. Smith, OTJC. 2 p. 358: so Di., pp. 385, 457, 460 [ed. 2, pp. 425, 500, 503]; Baudissin, DB. iv. 70<sup>a</sup>; cf. Kautzsch, DB. v. 648 f.). The right of sacrificing was not limited to the priestly class till long afterwards. For examples of laymen offering sacrifice, see 1 S. vi. 14, xiii. 9 f., 2 S. vi. 13, 17, xxiv. 25, 1 K. i. 9, iii. 4; in 2 S. viii. 18=xx. 26 David's sons are priests (so Di.).

sacrifice] lit. kill or slay. The verb (šābah) may be used of killing domestic animals for food without religious rites (see in the Heb.

E thy peace offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen: in every place where I record my name I will come unto thee and I will bless thee. And if thou make me an altar of stone, <sup>25</sup>

Dt. xii. 15, 21, 1 S. xxviii. 24; but since in early times animals were seldom, if ever, killed without an accompanying sacrifice, it commonly denotes sacrificial slaying.

burnt offerings, and...peace offerings] The two commonest kinds of sacrifice, often mentioned together, especially in the earlier times animal was laid on the altar, and consumed there by fire (cf. LXX. ὁλοκαύτωμα 'something wholly burnt,' Vulg. holocaustum; hence some moderns render by holocaust); in the peace-offering, the fat and certain of the entrails having been consumed upon the altar, and certain parts of the flesh having been given (at least in later times) to the priest, the rest of the flesh was eaten by the worshipper and his friends at a sacred meal (cf. xviii. 12). The later ritual of these two species of sacrifice is given in Lev. i., iii.

peace offerings] sh'lamim: LXX. (in Sam. Kgs.) ἐληνηκιά, i.e. sacrifices symbolizing mutual peace and amity between those who participated in the sacred meal (which was the distinctive feature in this sacrifice), both among themselves and also with God. This explanation seems the most probable; but others have been adopted. LXX. render mostly by θυσία σωτηρίου 'safety- (or welfare-) sacrifice': in this case, the 'peace,' or 'welfare,' implied would be that of the worshipper, for which, by his sacrifice, he either petitioned, or returned thanks (so Keil). Ges. Ew. Kn. render thank-offering (so Lev. iii. 1 RVm; Josephus χαριστήρια), from the sense of the root in Piel, to make good or pay (Ps. lxxvi. 13, &c., Prov. vii. 14). See further on Lev. iii. The word occurs in the Carthaginian inscription now at Marseilles (Auth. and Arch. p. 77 f.), as the name of a sacrifice; but it is not known of what nature the sacrifice was.

in every place where I cause my name to be remembered (marg.) viz. by a theophany, a victory (xvii. 15), or other manifestation of My presence: those who offer sacrifice at places thus distinguished may expect Jehovah's presence and blessing. A plurality of altars is thus sanctioned: but they must be erected not at places chosen arbitrarily, but at places which have been marked in some way by Jehovah's favour and approval (cf. Rel. Sem.<sup>2</sup> p. 115 f.). The reference cannot be to the altar of Burnt offering before the Tabernacle (xxvii. 1-8, &c.): not only is a far simpler structure evidently in the writer's mind, but the alternatives offered (earth, or unhewn stone, v. 25) shew that altars in thou shalt not build it of hewn stones: for if thou lift up E 26 thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it. Neither shalt thou general are referred to, and that the intention of the law is to authorize the erection of altars, built in the manner prescribed, in any part of the land. With the liberty of sacrifice thus permitted, as Di. points out (pp. 224, 384 f., ed. 2, pp. 247 f., 425), the practice in Israel for 'a series of centuries after Moses' conforms: in Jos.—1 K. sacrifices are frequently mentioned as offered in different parts of the land, without the smallest indication on the part of either the actor or the narrator that any law is being infringed. An altar, or sacrifice, is authorized by a theophany, or special command, Gen. xxxv. 7, Jos. viii. 30 f. (on mount Ebal; see Dt. xxvii. 5—7<sup>a</sup>), Jud. ii. 5, vi. 24, 26 f., 1 S. xvi. 1—3, 2 S. xxiv. 18, 25, by a victory, Ex. xvii. 15, 1 S. xiv. 35: in other cases the occasion is not stated, though the places mentioned are often ancient sanctuaries, consecrated by traditions of the patriarchs, Jos. xxiv. 1, 26 (the 'sanctuary' at Shechem, cf. Gen. xxxiii. 20), 1 S. vii. 9 f. (at Mizpah, v. 6; cf. Jud. xx. 1 'unto Jehovah at Mizpah,' 1 S. x. 17), 17, ix. 12 f., x. 3 (at Bethel, Gen. xxviii. 11—12, xxxv. 1), x. 8 (at Gilgal—like Bethel, known independently to have been a sanctuary; so xi. 15), xiv. 35 (the first of the altars built by Saul), xx. 6, 2 S. xv. 7 f., 12 (at Hebron, Gen. xiii. 18), 32 ('where men used to worship God'), 1 K. iii. 4, xviii. 30, xix. 10, 14. A tendency towards centralization, due to the natural preeminence of the sanctuary at which the Ark was stationed, and afterwards to the prestige of Solomon's Temple, no doubt made itself felt before the principle of the single sanctuary was finally codified in Dt. xii.; but it cannot be doubted that for long after the time when Israel was first settled in Canaan, numerous local sanctuaries existed, and sacrifice at them was habitually offered—both the sanctuaries and the sacrifices being justified by the present law (see further Di. ll. cc.; DB. v. 661<sup>a</sup>; or the writer's Comment. on Deut. pp. xliii f., 136—8; and cf. on Ex. xxii. 29).

25. tool] The word (hēreb) commonly rendered 'sword,' occasionally used of other sharp instruments, Jos. v. 2, 3 ('knives'): in Dt. xxvii. 5 E (Jos. viii. 31) the word is replaced by 'iron.' Cf. 1 Macc. iv. 47. The prohibition may be a survival either from a time when instruments of iron were not in general use, or from the time when the altar was a natural rock or boulder (cf. on v. 24), supposed to be the abode of a numen or deity, and it was imagined that to alter its shape would have the effect of driving the numen from it (Nowack, Arch. ii. 17; DB. i. 76<sup>a</sup>, EB. i. 124). But naturally this is not the belief which actuates the prohibition here. An altar of stones, seemingly unhewn, was built by Elijah (1 K. xviii. 32).

it (twice)] The pron. (which is fem. in the Heb.) refers not to 'altar' but to 'stone': it is the stone which is profaned by being worked with a tool.

26. Steps are prohibited, because the command is addressed to the Israelite in general, who would sacrifice in his ordinary dress. In later times, when altars of larger size were constructed, a ledge (see on xxvii. 5), or steps (Ez. xliii. 17), came into use: but sacrifice was then confined to the priests, and exposure of the person was guarded against in their case by linen drawers being specially prescribed for their use (xxviii. 42). Cf. OTJC.<sup>2</sup> p. 358.

E go up by steps unto mine altar, that thy nakedness be not discovered thereon.

E Now these are the judgements which thou shalt set before 21 them.

xxi. 1. Now] And—introducing a new element in the collection, viz. the 'judgements' contained in xxi. 2—xxii. 17.

the judgements] i.e. legal precedents, intended to have the force of law. The Heb. nishpāt means a judicial decision, (1) given in an individual case, and then (2) established as a precedent for other similar cases<sup>1</sup>. No doubt, the decisions which Moses gave, when he 'sat to judge the people' (Ex. xviii. 13; cf. on xviii. 15, 16), became thus the foundation of Hebrew legislation (cf. p. 161)<sup>2</sup>.

set before them] xix. 7, Dt. iv. 44.

2—11. The law of slavery. Cf. Dt. xv. 12—18, Lev. xxv. 39—55 (H and P), where there are other regulations on the same subject, in some respects differing remarkably from those of Ex., and springing evidently out of a different and more advanced stage of society. The present law deals only with Hebrew slaves: the case of foreign slaves is dealt with in Lev. xxv. 44—46. The conditions of society in ancient Israel were such that slavery could not be abolished: but it was regulated, and restrictions were imposed on the power of a master over his slave (see also vv. 20 f., 26 f.). An Israelite might fall into slavery from different causes: (1) he might be sold by his parents, a case of particularly common occurrence with daughters; (2) he might be sold for theft (xxii. 3) or insolvency (2 K. iv. 1, Am. ii. 6); (3) he might be obliged by poverty to sell himself (Lev. xxv. 39). Of course, also, he might be born a slave. The later legislation of Lev. xxv. 39—46 sought to limit slavery to foreigners.

2—6. Hebrew male slaves. Their term of service is fixed for six years (v. 2). A slave is to leave his master's service exactly as he entered it: if he entered it without a wife, he is to leave it without a wife, even though he may have taken a wife in the meantime (vv. 3<sup>a</sup>, 4). If on the other hand he was married when his master bought him, his wife may accompany him when he receives his freedom (v. 3<sup>b</sup>). Provision is further made for a voluntary life-service (v. 5 f.).

<sup>1</sup> In its original sense, the word is a term belonging to civil and criminal law: but it is sometimes extended so as to include moral and religious injunctions (as Lev. xviii. 4, 5, xix. 15, 35); it is also sometimes in EVV. rendered more clearly by 'ordinance' (e.g. xv. 25, Jos. xxiv. 25, Is. lviii. 2, Jer. viii. 7 RV.).

2 If thou buy an Hebrew <sup>1</sup>servant, six years he shall serve: E
 3 and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing. If he come in by himself, he shall go out by himself: if he be 4 married, then his wife shall go out with him. If his master give him a wife, and she bear him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he 5 shall go out by himself. But if the servant shall plainly say,

2. If thou buy] In the Heb. the primary cases (vv. 2, 7, 20, 22, &c.) are introduced by ki, 'when,' the subordinate ones (vv. 3<sup>a</sup>, 3<sup>b</sup>, 4, 5; 8, 9, 10, 11, &c.) by 'im, 'if,' or 'δ, 'or if'; but the distinction is not preserved in EVV.

an Hebrew servant] better, an Hebrew bondman (RVm.) or male slave, i.e. one of Hebrew birth, as opposed to foreigners, who did not enjoy the same privileges as Hebrew slaves, and might be slaves for life (Lev. xxv. 44—46). The release in the seventh year, after six years of servitude, seems, like the Sabbatical Year (xxiii. 10 f.), to be suggested by the weekly sabbath closing the six days of toil.

go out free] Cf. Hammurabi's Code, § 117 (below, p. 421). The philanthropic legislator of Deuteronomy (xv. 13 f.) enjoins the master to bestow a handsome present upon his slave when he thus leaves him.

3. First and second of the special cases, viz. the cases (1) of an unmarried slave, and (2) of one married before he became a slave. There is no counterpart to this and the following verse in Dt.

by himself (twice)] lit. with his back or body, and with nothing else, i.e. alone, without wife or child. A peculiar expression, found only here and v. 4.

married] Heb. the possessor of a woman (or wife); so v. 22; ba'al, 'possessor,' also, in the sense of 'husband,' Gen. xx. 3, Dt. xxiv. 4 al. The woman, being the possession of her husband, naturally shared his fortunes, and both entered into servitude, and left it, with him.

4. The third case. If the master marries a slave to one of his female slaves, the wife remains her master's slave as she was before, and does not go free with her husband. If she has borne him children, they remain in servitude with their mother. At this early time, children's relationship to their mother was held to be closer and more binding than that to their father.

5, 6. The fourth case. A slave, if he was happy with his master, might, if he desired to do so, remain in his master's service for life.

5. plainly say] 'Plainly' should be omitted. It is an attempt to represent in English the idiomatic use of the Hebrew inf. abs., which emphasizes the verb to which it is attached, and is often used in the

E I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go out free: then his master shall bring him unto <sup>1</sup>God, and shall bring him to the door, or unto the door post; and expression of a condition (G.-K. § 113<sup>o</sup>). 'Plainly,' however, does not give the correct emphasis.

I love my master] A slave was no doubt often well treated, and would then naturally 'prefer slavery with comfort to freedom with destitution' (EB. iv. 4656).

my wife, and my children] The case is supposed to be the one provided for in v. 4, in which the slave's wife and children would not accompany him into freedom.

6. unto God] i.e. (if the rend. be correct: see below) to the nearest sanctuary (for the expression, comp. especially 1 S. x. 3), in order that he might there affirm solemnly before God his intention to remain with his master. 'God' is resorted to here, not for a judicial decision (see on xviii. 15, 16), but for the slave's declaration to be solemnly ratified; still, as this would be done in the presence of God's human representatives, the priests or judges, RVm. (= AV.), following Targ., Pesh., and Jewish interpreters (cf. LXX. τὸ κριτήριον τοῦ Θεοῦ, 'the tribunal of God'), renders the judges. This, however, is only a paraphrase; for though God, in cases such as the present, may be conceived as acting through a judge, as His representative or mouth-piece, that does not make 'Elohim' mean 'judge,' or 'judges.' 'God' is used in the same sense in xxii. 8, 9, and 1 S. ii. 25.

and he shall bring him] i.e. (Di.) the judge at the sanctuary: better, perhaps, one shall bring him = he shall be brought (G.-K. § 144<sup>d</sup>).

the door] not, as has been supposed, of the sanctuary, but, if the ceremony is to bear any relation to the thing which it is intended to signify, of his master's house. The ear, as the organ of hearing, is naturally that of obedience as well; and its attachment (Dt. xv. 17) to the door of the house would signify the perpetual attachment of the slave to that particular household. Probably it was the right ear which was pierced: for the preference shewn for this, comp. Lev. viii. 23 f., xiv. 14, 17. The connexion 'bring him to God (or the gods),' and 'bring him to the door' seems, however, to suggest that both were in the same place: hence, as the 'door' of the sanctuary seems out of the question, Bâ. and others render hâ-'Elohim (as is perfectly possible: cf. Gen. iii. 5 RVm.) by the gods, supposing the reference to be to the household gods, or Penates, of the master's house, kept and worshipped near the door: the ceremony would then have the effect of bringing the slave into a relation of dependence on the gods of his master's family, and of admitting him to the full religious privileges of the family (cf. Eerdmans, Expositor, Aug. 1909, p. 163 f.). Kautzsch, on the other hand, supposes an image of Jehovah to be referred to (DB. v. 642<sup>b</sup>).

his master shall bore his ear through with an awl; and he shall serve him for ever.

bore his ear] Whether a hole in the ear was really among other nations a mark of slavery, or even of dependence, is very doubtful: the passages cited by Di. from Kn. (cf. Now. Arch. i. 177) do not seem to shew more than that it was a mark of nationality: the ear was often bored (for ear-rings) among Africans and Orientals in general, but not specifically by slaves. See esp. Mayor's note on Juv. i. 104 ('Natus ad Euphraten, molles quod in aure fenestras Arguerint'), Macrob. Saturn. vii. 3, Plin. H.N. xi. § 136: on Plaut. Poen. v. 2. 21 ('aures anulatae'), see Ussing's note.

for ever] i.e. till his life's end: cf. 'for ever' in 1 S. i. 22, and esp. in the expression, 'servant for ever,' xxvii. 12, Job xli. 4 [xl. 28 Heb.]. The explanation 'till the next jubilee' (Jos. Ant. iv. 8. 28, and others), which has been adopted for harmonistic reasons (see Lev. xxv. 39-41), is exegetically impossible: as Di. says, the difference between the two laws must be frankly recognized; they spring, it is evident, out of different periods of the history.

7-11. Hebrew female slaves. The law for female slaves is different. A female slave does not receive her freedom at the end of six years (v. 7); still, she cannot be sold to a non-Israelite; and if her master, before actually taking her as his concubine, finds he does not like her she must be redeemed (v. 8). If her master has bought her for his son she must have the usual rights of a daughter (v. 9). If her master take another concubine, she is in no respect to be defrauded of her food, dress, and conjugal rights (v. 10): if these be withheld, her freedom must be given her unconditionally (v. 11). The reason for the different treatment of female slaves is to be found in the fact that a female slave was as a rule (v. 8) her master's concubine; she stood consequently to her master in a relation which could not suitably be terminated at the end of six years. Concubinage was common among the ancient Hebrews (among the patriarchs, Gen. xvi. 3, xxii. 24, xxx. 3, 9, xxxvi. 12; in the time of the Judges, Jud. viii. 31, ix. 18, xix. 1 ff.; and among the early kings, 2 S. iii. 7, v. 13, xv. 16, xxi. 11; 1 K. xi. 3), as it was also among the Babylonians in the age of Hammurabi (Code, §§ 144-7<sup>1</sup>), and as it is still in Mohammedan countries (see e.g. Lane, Modern Egyptians, i. 122, 227, 232 f.).

7. if a man sell his daughter] as he easily might do, either from actual poverty, or because he was in such circumstances that it would be more advantageous for his daughter to be the concubine of a well-to-do neighbour than to marry a man in her own social position.

E shall not go out as the menservants do. If she please not her master, <sup>1</sup>who hath espoused her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange people he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her. And if he espouse her unto his son, he shall deal with her after the manner of daughters. If he take servant' has associations which are not at all those of ancient Hebrew society. Here the word ('āmāh) denotes in particular a female slave bought not only to do household work, but also to be her master's concubine. Cf. the same word in Gen. xxi. 10 ff. (of Hagar), Jud. ix. 18 (of Gideon's concubine; see viii. 31), xix. 19.

8. First special case under the general law of v. 7: if a woman, bought with the intention of being made her master's concubine, does not please her master, he must let her be redeemed, and he has no power to sell her into foreign slavery.

who hath designated (2 S. xx. 5; Jer. xlvii. 7) her for himself] viz. at the time when he bought her: 'for himself' is shewn by its position in the Heb. to be emphatic; it is opposed to 'for his son' in v. 9. The marg. (ס<sup>ל</sup> for ל<sup>ב</sup>) may be disregarded, if only because yā'ad does not mean to 'espouse': to 'designate' a woman for any one may indeed be equivalent to 'to espouse,' but that does not justify 'designate,' used absolutely, being rendered 'espouse.'

let her be redeemed] by her father, or other relative, if able to do so: she had been bought to become a concubine, and had consequently certain rights. If however the woman's relatives did not redeem her, her master was apparently at liberty to sell her to another Israelite; for the following clause only forbids him to sell her into foreign servitude. Of course, the woman is not to be supposed to have actually become her master's concubine: in this case, if he found he did not like her, he would have to give her her freedom unconditionally (cf. v. 11).

deceitfully] or untruly, viz. in not making her his concubine, as it was understood, when he bought her, that he would do.

9. Second special case: if at the time of purchasing the woman, her master intends her for his son.

If he designate her for his son, he shall deal with her according to the rights of daughters] i.e. treat her as a daughter of his own household, give her the maintenance, clothing, &c. which a daughter would naturally have.

for his son] 'as in Persia (Chardin, Voyage, ii. 259), Arabia, Niebuhr, Arabia, p. 74, Snouck-Hurgronje, Mekka, p. 157' (Dillm.-Ryss.).

10, 11. Third special case: if after having taken the woman as a him another wife; her <sup>1</sup>food, her raiment, and her duty of E marriage, shall he not diminish. And if he do not these three unto her, then shall she go out for nothing, without money.

concubine he takes another concubine as well: in that case, he must still allow his first concubine her full rights; if he does not do this, he must give her her freedom.

10. her flesh] The case contemplated is that of a well-to-do Israelite, who could have several concubines, and enjoy animal food every day; Israelites of the poorer class ate animal food seldom or never. 'Flesh' (Ps. lxxviii. 20, 27) should not be weakened to 'food': a diminution of ordinary food, such as bread and vegetables, is not contemplated.

her rights of marriage] i.e. her conjugal rights. The Heb. word occurs only here; and its etymological meaning is uncertain.

11. these three] The three rights mentioned in v. 10.

The view expressed above is the one ordinarily taken of vv. 7—11, vv. 8—10 stating three special cases, falling under the general case of v. 7, If a man sell his daughter, &c. Budde, however (ZATW. 1891, p. 102 f.), argues forcibly, and Bâ. agrees, that the three special cases fall, not under the general case of v. 7, but under the general case of v. 8, If she please not her master,—the first two, as upon the ordinary view, relating to the time before the woman is taken actually as a concubine: the three cases being (1) he may let her be redeemed, v. 8<sup>b</sup>; (2) how he is to deal with her, if he passes her on to his son, v. 9; (3) how he is to deal with her, if, after having made her his concubine, he takes another concubine as well. If the girl bought in this way was as a matter of course bought to be her master's concubine, the words in v. 8, 'who hath designated her for himself,' are otiose; on the other hand, the condition that the two alternatives mentioned in vv. 8, 9 are to be adopted only if she is still a virgin, ought, Budde thinks, to be clearly expressed: accordingly, taking 'not' from the margin, and transposing two letters in the following word, he reads, for the words quoted, who (or in case he) hath not known her (Gen. iv. 1): he further argues that this view does better justice to the wording of v. 8 (which is not, as it should be on the ordinary view, If he hath designated her for himself, and she please him not), and to the tense of 'designate' in v. 9 (which is the impf., as in vv. 10, 11, not the perf., as in v. 8<sup>a</sup>), and also that it explains better v. 9<sup>b</sup> (why, if he originally intended her as a concubine for his son, should he treat her as a daughter, and so place her in a better position than if he intended her for himself? On the other hand, this is intelligible, if he did not fulfil his original engagement to her, and passed her on to his son). For another solution of the difficulties of the passage, resting upon a further emendation, see W. R. Smith, ZATW. 1892, p. 162 f., or Ryssel in Di.<sup>2</sup> p. 253.

E He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall surely be<sup>12</sup> put to death. And if a man lie not in wait, but God deliver<sup>13</sup> him into his hand; then I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee. And if a man come presumptuously upon his<sup>14</sup>

12—17. Capital offences. In v. 12 is laid down the general principle that death is the punishment for killing a man. If the act is unpremeditated (manslaughter), the penalty is modified (v. 13), but retained in full in the case of the act being evidently intentional (v. 14). Kidnapping a fellow Israelite, and smiting or cursing a parent (vv. 15—17), are also treated as capital offences.

12. Murder. The same general principle is laid down in P, Gen. ix. 6, Nu. xxxv. 30 f., and in H, Lev. xxiv. 17.

shall be put to death] The execution of this penalty was the duty not, as in communities in which a more advanced stage of civilization has been reached, of the State, but of the 'Avenger of blood,' i.e. of the nearest kinsman of the murdered man, upon whom, according to primitive ideas, the duty of vindicating his rights devolved, 2 S. xiv. 11, Dt. xix. 6, 12, Nu. xxxv. 19, 21, 27 (P). See GOEL in DB. or EB.

13. Manslaughter, and the right of asylum. The distinction, not found in Homer, but thus early drawn among the Hebrews, between intentional and unintentional homicide is noteworthy: it is insisted on in all the codes (Dt. xix. 1—13; Nu. xxxv. 9—34 P).

lie...in wait] 1 S. xxiv. 11 (RVm.)†: cf. the derivative, 'with lying in wait' (i.e. with malicious intent), in P's law of homicide, Nu. xxxv. 20, 22 ('without')†. In Dt. and D<sup>2</sup> the idea of 'unintentional' is expressed by unawares (lit. without knowledge), Dt. iv. 42, xix. 4, Jos. xx. 3, 5; P says unwittingly (lit. in error), Nu. xxxv. 11, 15, Jos. xx. 3, 9.

deliver] in the Heb. a rare word, meaning properly, as Arabic shews, bring opportunely (cf. the derivative opportunity, Jud. xiv. 4). The meaning of the clause is (as we should express it), if he kills him accidentally. Cf. Hamm. § 249 'if God have struck it (a hired ox), and it die,' 266 'a stroke of God' (killing a sheep), below, p. 423.

a place whither he shall flee] i.e. an asylum where he may be safe from the avenger of blood. V. 14, which speaks of the fugitive as having taken refuge at an altar, shews that the place meant can only be the sacred place at which the altar stood. In the later legislation of Dt. (xix. 1—13) fixed cities are appointed for the purpose and regulations for their use are laid down. The technical term, 'cities of refuge,' first occurs in P (Nu. xxxv. 6, 11 ff.). In ancient times 'the right of asylum was possessed by different sanctuaries in various degrees, depending on prescription, the holiness of the place, and other circumstances; it sometimes extended to an entire city, or even to a mark beyond its walls....In the Greek period, and later (under Roman rule), many Hellenistic cities in Syria enjoyed the privileges of asylums, the title ἀσυλος appearing on their coins' (Moore, in EB. ASYLUM). Cf. Rel. Sem. 148. Moslems, adhering to the tradition of heathen times, treat tombs, esp. those of ancestors, notabilities, and saints, as asylums.

neighbour, to slay him with guile; thou shalt take him from E mine altar, that he may die.

15 And he that smiteth his father, or his mother, shall be surely put to death.

16 And he that stealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death.

14. But the protection of the altar is not to be extended to the wilful murderer. Cf. Dt. xix. 11—13; also the more detailed treatment of the case of wilful murder in the law of P (Nu. xxxv. 16—21).

from mine altar] See 1 K. i. 50, ii. 28, which show that the fugitive would seize hold of the 'horns' (see on ch. xxvii. 2) of the altar, in order to avail himself of its protection. The altar served as an asylum also among the Greeks (Thuc. iv. 98).

15. Striking a parent. Notice that the mother is placed on an equality with the father.

smiteth] simply, without killing: the murder of a parent would fall under the general rule of v. 12. The severity of the penalty was in accordance with the high respect paid to both parents in ancient Israel: see xx. 12, and cf. Dt. xxi. 18—21. Hammurabi (§ 195) ordained that if a son struck his father—no mention is made of his mother—his hands should be cut off. The older Sumerian laws said<sup>1</sup>: 'If a son has said to his father, Thou art not my father [i.e. repudiated him], he may brand him, lay fetters upon him, and sell him. If a son has said to his mother, Thou art not my mother, one shall brand his forehead, drive him round the city, and expel him from the house.' At Athens γονέων κάκωσις ('maltreatment of parents') was actionable, and might be punished with ἀριπία, or loss of civil rights (Andoc. de Myst. § 74, cf. Demosth. adv. Timocr. §§ 103, 105, p. 732 f.); and Plato (Legg. ix. 881 B—D), if any one struck a parent, would have any one who witnessed the act, and failed to interfere, severely punished, and the offender himself condemned to perpetual exile, or death if he ever returned home. Solon (Cic. Rosc. 25) is said to have made no mention of such a crime, on the ground that he considered its occurrence impossible (Kn.).

16. Man-stealing. Cf. Dt. xxiv. 7, where the present law is merely expanded, and recast in Deuteronomic phraseology.

a man] in Dt. xxiv. 7, expressly limited to an Israelite; so LXX. Targ. add here, 'of the children of Israel.' No doubt this interprets correctly the intention of the law.

and selleth him] into a foreign country is probably what is thought of (cf. v. 8). This would not only sever the victim cruelly from his own people, and his own religion (1 S. xxvi. 19), but also expose him to many risks of death. The Phoenicians (Am. i. 9, and, at a later time, Joel iii. 4—6), to say nothing of other nations (Gen. xxxvii. 36), would be ready purchasers of slaves.

or if he be found in his hand] i.e. if he has not yet actually sold him.

shall be put to death] The same punishment in Hamm. § 14. At Athens, the ἀνδραποδιστῆς, who enslaved a free man, or enticed away another person's slave, was punished with death (Hermann, Griech. Antiq. iii. §§ xii. 12; lxii. 12: cf. Demosth. Phil. i. p. 53 end., § 47; Xen. Memor. i. 2. 62): among the Romans both the seller and the buyer of a free-born citizen were punished with death (Kn.).

17. Cursing a parent. Comp. Dt. xxvii. 16, Lev. xx. 9 (H): also Prov. xx. 20, xxx. 17. In the LXX. this verse stands more suitably immediately after v. 15. It is cited in Mt. xv. 4=Mk. vii. 10.

curseth] a stronger word than the maketh light of, or dishonoureth, of Dt. xxvii. 16.

18—36. Bodily injuries, caused (a) by human beings, vv. 18—27; (b) by animals, or through the neglect of reasonable precautions, vv. 28—36.

18—27. Bodily injuries caused by human beings. Four cases are taken, two arising out of a quarrel, and two out of rough treatment of a slave (vv. 22—25 would more naturally follow vv. 18, 19). In fixing the penalties, consideration is taken of the status and sex of the persons involved, as also of the character of the injury, and the consequences following from it.

18, 19. Bodily injury inflicted in a quarrel.

18. contend] or dispute, wrangle in words: rendered strive, Gen. xxvi. 20, 21, contend, as here, Neh. xiii. 11, 17.

fist] Is. lviii. 4†. So LXX. Vulg. Di.: the Heb. 'egrōph has also this sense in the Talm. The meaning spade or hoe, which Ryssel in Di.<sup>2</sup> argues for, would be possible etymologically (for the root signifies to scoop or sweep away, Jud. v. 21): but it does not suit Is. lviii. 4. The rend. of the Targums, club or  cudgel, would suit both passages, but lacks philological justification.

and he die not] for, if he did, the case would be regulated presumably by the mishpāt of v. 12.

19. walk abroad upon his staff] a proof of convalescence. The 'staff' (lit. something to lean upon) was used for help in walking (2 K. iv. 29,—by Elisha): in Zech. viii. 4 a characteristic of old age.

be quit (lit. innocent)] If he died in his bed, the person who injured him might reasonably be held responsible for his death: if he died after he had taken his first walk, he might himself have met with some further accident, or imprudently ventured out too soon.

- 20 And if a man smite <sup>2</sup>his servant, or his maid, with a rod, and he die under his hand; he shall surely be punished.
 21 Notwithstanding, if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished: for he is his money.

penalty, he must still compensate his victim for his loss of time, and pay his doctor's bill. Cf. Hamm. 206; and Manu, viii. 287 (Cook, p. 254).

the loss of his time] a necessary paraphrase of the Heb. shibtō, which may be derived from either yāshab, to 'sit down,' or shābath, to 'desist,' 'cease' (viz. from toil): hence the two margins.

20, 21. Beating a slave so that he dies. Vv. 26 f., 32, also deal with injuries to slaves. The penalties prescribed shew that less was thought of the life of a slave than of that of a free man,—in v. 21 he is called simply his master's 'money'; at the same time he has rights, and cannot be treated with entire impunity. The position of slaves in Israel must thus have been considerably better than that of slaves in Rome, at least in the time of the Republic, when their masters could kill them with impunity (Dion. Halic. vii. 68, Plutarch, Cato 21,—cited by Kn.).

20. his servant, or his maid] i.e. (cf. marg.) his male or female slave. a rod] The usual implement of punishment (Prov. x. 13, xiii. 24).

punished] lit. avenged; so v. 21. In what the punishment consisted, is not stated. The Jews (Mehilta, Ps.-Jon., &c.) understood death (viz. by the sword) to be intended: but in that case 'he shall surely be put to death' would certainly have been said, as in other cases (vv. 12, 15, 16, &c.); besides, vv. 21 (cf. 19 f.), 26 f. (cf. 23 ff.), 32 (cf. 28 ff.) shew that a marked difference was made between a slave and a free man. No doubt the determination of the penalty was left to the discretion of the judge (Di.), or it was a fine payable to the sanctuary (Bā.), the amount of which varied with the means of the slave's master.

21. If the slave survives a day or two, his master escapes even the comparatively light penalty of v. 20; for then it is clear that he did not intend to kill him, but only to correct him.

he is his money] i.e. his master's property, purchased by his master's money. His master is considered to have sufficiently punished himself by the loss of his property.

22. Injury arising to a pregnant woman out of an affray.

And if men strive together] i.e. quarrel and fight, ch. ii. 13, 2 S. xiv. 6, Ps. lx. title. The same words in Dt. xxv. 11. Not the verb used in v. 18 (which means only to dispute in words).

hurt] properly, smite or strike (ch. viii. 2; Is. xix. 22): so v. 35.

E so that her fruit depart, and yet no mischief follow: he shall be surely fined, according as the woman's husband shall lay upon him; and he shall pay as the judges determine. But <sup>23</sup> if any mischief follow, then thou shalt give life for life, eye <sup>24</sup>

Probably the woman is to be thought of (as in Dt. xxv. 11) as intervening to separate the combatants.

but no (other) mischief happen] i.e. no permanent injury from the miscarriage. 'Mischief' (āsōn, v. 23, Gen. xlii. 4, 38, xlv. 29†) means some serious, or even (cf. v. 23) fatal, bodily injury.

fined] viz. for the loss of the child, which would have been the parents' property. Holzinger cites for parallels, among the Arabs, W. R. Smith, ZATW. 1892, p. 163, and among the Kirghissians, in Turkestan, Radloff, Aus Sibirien (1884), p. 524; here, if a pregnant woman is injured so that her child is born dead, the penalty is a horse or a camel according to its age (the penalty for killing a free man being a fine of 100 horses, and for killing a woman or slave, 50 horses).

he shall pay (lit. give) with (the approval of) arbitrators] If the text is correct, the meaning apparently is that the amount of the fine, fixed in the first instance by the woman's husband, had, before payment, to be submitted to arbitrators, and approved by them. But the word for arbitrators is rare and poetical (Dt. xxxii. 31, Job xxxi. 11†), the use of the prep. ו is strange, the mention of arbitration is unexpected after the unconditional discretion just given to the husband, nor are any arbitrators mentioned in the similar enactment of v. 30. Under these circumstances the clever suggestion of Budde, בפליים for בנפלים deserves consideration, he shall pay it for the untimely birth (Job iii. 16, Ps. lviii. 9),—the plural being required on account of the plural 'children,' just before (concealed in EVV. by the rend. fruit: the ו pretii, as Dt. xix. 21). Cf. Hamm. §§ 209—214; Cook, p. 253 f.

23—25. The Lex Talionis. But if any mischief happen, then compensation is to be made on the principle of the lex talionis.

Vv. 23—25 are, however, worded quite generally, and mention many injuries not at all likely to happen to the woman in the special case contemplated in v. 22, or even to the combatants themselves (injuries to whom Di. thinks might be included in the 'mischief' meant): hence, probably, either (Budde, Bā.) vv. 23—25 are misplaced, and should be transposed to follow vv. 18, 19 (where the quarrel is of a more general kind, and serious consequences are contemplated as happening to one or other of the combatants), or (McNeile) 'mischief' in v. 22 means definitely the woman's death, and v. 23 assigns the penalty for it, and vv. 24, 25 are 'an abridged summary of the laws of retaliation, which has been added here though it is not relevant to the case in point—the death of the woman.' Similar specifications of the application of the

The talio is a principle of punishment which was anciently, and still is, current widely in the world: Kn. quotes examples from the Thurians and Locrians (an eye for an eye), the Indians (Strabo, p. 710) the XII. Tables ('si membrum rupit, ni cum eo pacit, talio esto'): Rhadamanthys was said to have declared that it was a just punishment when a man suffered what he had done (Arist. Eth. N. v. 8. 3); and there are several cases in the code of Hammurabi, §§ 116, 196, 197, 200, 210, 219, 229, 235, 263, &c.: see Cook, p. 249). For numerous instances in modern times, see A. H. Post, Grundriss der ethnol. Jurisprudenz (1894—5), ii. 238 ff.

26, 27. Striking out the eye or tooth of a slave. The person of a slave being not as valuable as that of a free man, the lex talionis (vv. 23—25) is not applicable in his case (cf. Hamm. § 199, as compared with § 196): the slave, however, receives his freedom as compensation for his injury, and his master pays for his maltreatment of him by the loss of his services.

28—36. Bodily injuries due to animals, or neglect of reasonable precautions.

28—32. Injury done by a vicious ox to a free man or woman. Cf. Hamm. §§ 250—2.

28. shall be stoned] The sanctity of human life demanded that an animal, not less than a man, should suffer for violating it: cf. (in P) Gen. ix. 5. Stoning was a common punishment among the Hebrews: see e.g. Lev. xx. 2, 27, xxiv. 14, 16, 23, Dt. xiii. 10, xvii. 5, xxi. 21, xxii. 21, 24 f.: of an animal, as here, vv. 29, 32, xix. 13.

For the punishment of an animal—and even of an inanimate object, such as a piece of wood or stone—which had caused the death of a human being, there are many analogies. At Athens the court of the Phyllobasileis ('Tribe-kings') in the Prytaneion, established, it was said, by Draco (B.C. 624), investigated cases thus arising (Demosth. adv. Aristocr.

E but the owner of the ox shall be quit. § 76, p. 645, Arist. Constit. of Athens, 57 end); and so Plato (Legg. ix. 873 E—874 A) would have an animal or inanimate object that had killed a man tried, and, if found guilty, expelled from the country (the animal having been first slain). Pausanias (v. 27. 10; vi. 11. 6) mentions two cases of statues, one thrown into the sea, and the other ceremonially purified, for having caused a death. An interesting collection of parallels from many different nations is given by Frazer, Pausanias, ii. 370 ff. (cited by Cook, p. 252, who also refers to Baring-Gould, Curiosities of Olden Times, 1895, p. 57 ff.),—many taken from Chambers, Book of Days, i. 126 ff. In mediæval Europe animals charged with causing a death were often tried in a court of law, and, if found guilty, killed: a cow was executed in this way in France as late as 1740.

his flesh shall not be eaten] Blood-guilt would be resting upon it, which would be transferred to any one partaking of it.

quit] i.e. pronounced innocent, acquitted, as v. 19. The owner is acquitted, because it is assumed to be the first time that the animal has so acted. On 'quit,' see Aldis Wright's Bible Word-Book, s.v.

29. If, however, the owner of the animal had been warned that it was vicious, and had taken no precautions to keep it in, he is held responsible, if it kills any one, and must suffer the penalty of death himself.

30. The owner of the ox may, however, escape the extreme penalty of the law, if the relatives of the man who had been killed are willing to accept a money-compensation for his life. The owner's negligence amounted to murder only in theory, so it was reasonable to allow him this merciful alternative.

be laid on him (cf. v. 22)] viz. by the relatives of the man who has been killed.

a ransom] Heb. kôpher, the price of a life: see xxx. 12, Ps. xlix. 7, Prov. vi. 35, xliii. 8, xxi. 18, Is. xliii. 3. This and v. 32 are the only cases in which Heb. law allowed what was so common among many ancient nations, the rowh, or 'wergild,' i.e. the money offered for the life of a murdered man to appease a kinsman's wrath: see Nu. xxxv. 31 f. (P), where the acceptance of a kôpher is forbidden.

redemption] The same word, in a similar connexion, Ps. xlix. 8 (where 'soul' = 'life' here, lit. soul). For the corresponding verb, used of the redemption of a life that is forfeit, see on xliii. 13.

this judgement] The decision embodied in the preceding laws (vv. 28—30). Cf. on v. 1.

32. If the ox killed a slave, however, it was sufficient if its owner paid his master as compensation the ordinary value of a slave, and suffered at the same time the loss of his animal's services. Another instance of the lower value set upon a slave's life: he is in this case valued simply as a chattel.

thirty shekels of silver] doubtless the average price of a slave at the time. It seems that the intrinsic value of a shekel of silver was about 2s. 9d. (DB. iii. 420<sup>a</sup>), so that the silver of 30 shekels would be worth now about £4. 2s. 6d. (though its purchasing power would be many times greater: ibid. note, and 431 f.). The free Hebrew was valued at 50 shekels (Lev. xxvii. 3 f.). The same sum was offered as his wages to the prophet who, in the allegory of Zech. xi., represented the rejected ruler of his people (v. 12: cf. Mt. xxvi. 15). Joseph was sold to the Ishmaelites for twenty shekels of silver (Gen. xxxvii. 28<sup>b</sup> [JJ]).

33, 34. Injury caused by culpable neglect in leaving an open pit.

a pit] for the storage of water or (cf. Jer. xli. 8, Thomson, L. and B. i. 89, 90, ii. 194, iii. 458) grain, or perhaps also for the capture of wild beasts. Thomson (ii. 283) writes, 'I have been astonished at the recklessness with which wells and pits are left uncovered and unprotected all over this country'; and adds that he had seen a blind man walk into such a well, and known a valuable horse lost similarly.

34. Having paid the value of the dead animal to the owner, he is naturally at liberty to keep the carcase himself. The carcase would be of value for its hide: but though 'that which died of itself' was forbidden later as food (Dt. xiv. 21; cf. Lev. xvii. 15 f. P), this may not have been the case at the time when the present code of laws was drawn up.

money] i.e. to the value of the beast; its money (=the price of it, v. 35:  $\text{הַכֶּסֶף}$  for  $\text{הַכֶּסֶף}$ ) would be clearer, and should perhaps be restored.

35, 36. Injury done by an ox to one belonging to another person. If no neglect can be proved against the owner of the vicious ox, the damage is to be divided equally between the owners of the two animals (v. 35): but if the owner of the vicious ox culpably neglects to keep it in, he is to make full compensation to the owner of the ox which has been killed.

E the dead also they shall divide. Or if it be known that the <sup>36</sup> ox was wont to gore in time past, and his owner hath not kept him in; he shall surely pay ox for ox, and the dead beast shall be his own.

35. 'If this admirable statute were faithfully administered now, it would prevent many angry, and sometimes fatal, feuds between herdsmen, and at the same time would be a very fair adjustment of the questions of equity that grow out of such accidents' (Thomson, L. and B. ii. 283). It is now the 'custom of the desert' (Doughty, Arab. Deserta, i. 351).

xxii. 1—4. Theft of ox or sheep; and burglary.

1. If a man steals an ox or a sheep, and kills it or sells it (so as to make profit by it), he is to repay fivefold for the ox, and fourfold for the sheep. Cf. (with differences) Ḥamm. § 8 (see p. 420). The ox is reckoned as of higher value than the sheep on account especially of its being useful in agricultural work. The case of the animal being still alive, and in the thief's possession, is dealt with in v. 4. The fourfold restitution of a sheep is the penalty named by David in his reply to Nathan's parable (2 S. xii. 4): sevenfold restitution is mentioned only in the hyperbolic passage, Prov. vi. 31, but may be read rightly by the LXX. in 2 S. xii. 4, 'fourfold' being here not improbably a correction made on the basis of the present law. Fourfold restitution was also the penalty, when the thief was caught in the act, by the later Roman law; and for the theft of an animal it is still usual among the modern Bedawin (Cook, p. 216). Multiple restitution (in varying ratios) is the penalty prescribed by Ḥammurabi for many cases of fraud (DB. v. 596<sup>b</sup>): and it is still in many parts of the world a common penalty for theft (Post, Grundriss der ethnol. Jurispr. ii. 430f.).

and kill it] The word (tābah) is the one regularly used of slaughtering cattle for food (Gen. xliiii. 16, 1 S. xxv. 11 al.).

2—3. A thief caught breaking in by night may be killed without any guilt being incurred by his death, but not if the act take place by day. In the dark the householder would probably not be able to recognize the burglar, so as to bring him to justice, nor would he know whether he might not intend murder: a mortal blow, given in defence of his life and property, would therefore be excusable under the circumstances: but no such excuse could be made for it in the light of day.

 the sun be risen upon him, there shall be bloodguiltiness for 4 he shall be sold for his theft. If the theft be found in his hand alive, whether it be ox, or ass, or sheep; he shall pay

A thief might also be killed in the night with impunity by Athenian law (Dem. Timocr. § 113, p. 736; cf. Plato, Legg. ix. 874 B), and by the law of the XII. Tables (viii. 12) 'si nox furtum factum sit, si im (eum) occisit, iure caesus esto.' Hamm. § 21 is not really parallel: see Cook, p. 213.

2. breaking in] digging through: cf. Jer. ii. 34, Job xxiv. 16, Mt. vi. 19 RVm. Still the usual method of housebreakers in Syria: see Trumbull, The Threshold Covenant (1896), p. 260 f.

for him] i.e. for the householder, if he kills him in the darkness.

For the expression, cf. Nu. xxxv. 27 RVm. (םלך ןן); and for 'blood' (marg.), implying 'bloodguiltiness,' Ps. li. 14. Elsewhere blood is said to be 'upon' a person, Dt. xix. 10.

3<sup>a</sup>. upon him] i.e. upon the thief.

3<sup>b</sup>. If the text is correct, we must understand tacitly after v. 3<sup>a</sup>, '[He ought not therefore to be killed;] he should make restitution, &c.' This however is a good deal to supply: both v. 2 and v. 3<sup>a</sup> start distinctly from the supposition that the thief is slain; and the ox, ass, or sheep, of v. 4, are hardly likely to have been found in the house that was 'dug' into, v. 2. Hence there is great probability in Budde's view that vv. 2, 3<sup>a</sup> are out of place; and that vv. 3<sup>b</sup>, 4 form really the sequel to v. 1, stating what is to be done in the two other alternative cases, (1) if the thief have nothing, (2) if the stolen animal be found in his possession alive. Render then (directly following v. 1): (v. 3<sup>b</sup>) 'he shall surely make restitution [the word rendered 'pay' in v. 1, 4]: if he have nothing, then he shall be sold,' &c. (to the end of v. 4).

for his theft] i.e. not 'as a punishment for his act of stealing,' but 'as compensation for the thing stolen.' 'According to Jos. Ant. xvi. 1. 1 a thief sold under these circumstances was not sold to a foreigner, and became free in the 7th year (ch. xxi. 2)' (Kn.).

4. If the stolen animal be not killed, or sold (v. 1), but still alive in his possession, he only repays double, i.e. the stolen animal itself, and a second as a fine. The same principle of double restitution recurs vv. 7, 9; it was adopted also 'in the laws of Manu (viii. 329), at least in the case of things of small value; by Solon, for theft; in Athenian law, in cases of damage (βλάβη) done intentionally (Dem. adv. Mid. § 43, p. 528: in unintentional βλάβη simple restitution was prescribed);

E If a man shall cause a field or vineyard to be eaten, and shall let his beast loose, and it feed in another man's field; of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution.

by Plato, Legg. ix., p. 857 A, for theft; in both the XII. Tables (Gell. xi. 18. 15) and the later Roman law, for theft, when the thief was not caught in the act' (Kn.); and by Hammurabi in various cases of fraudulent claim (§§ 101, 120, 124, 160, 161); cf. DB. v. 596<sup>b</sup>.

5, 6. Compensation to be paid for damage done by cattle being allowed negligently to stray (v. 5—if the text be sound); and by fire spreading accidentally (v. 6) to another man's field.

5. a field] i.e. a field of his own, from which he allows the cattle to stray into the field of a neighbour.

the best] The Heb. as Gen. xlvii. 6, 11, also of land. The verse contains difficulties, however; and two corrections have accordingly been proposed. (1) Why, as no malicious intention seems to be imputed to the owner of the cattle, is compensation to be made from the best of his field? LXX. Sam. read words after 'another man's field,' which remove this difficulty, viz. '[he shall surely make it good from his own field according to its produce; but if it eat the whole of the field,] of the best of his own field,' &c.; the whole of the crop is eaten; the carelessness is accordingly greater, no judgement can be formed of the quality of the destroyed crop, and it is consequently to be replaced from the best which can be given. (2) This however by no means removes all the difficulties: (a) a 'vineyard' was not a pasture-ground for cattle, it was protected against animals by a stone fence, Is. v. 5; (b) the renderings 'cause to be eaten' and 'feed' (בִּעַר and בָּעַר) are doubtful: to 'eat' or to 'feed' (i.e. to graze) is an uncertain rendering of בָּעַר, even in Is. iii. 14, v. 5, vi. 13; and both words elsewhere mean only to kindle (fire: so in v. 6), to burn, or (fig.) to destroy. Hence it is very probable that we should read with slight changes (הַבְּעִירָה for הַבְּעִירָה, and וּבְעִירָה for וּבְעִירָה), 'If a man cause a field or a vineyard to be burnt [to destroy stubble or weeds, as is still the custom in Palestine in summer: cf. on ch. xv. 7, and Verg. G. i. 84 f.], and let the burning (same word as in v. 6<sup>b</sup>, 'the fire') spread, and it burn in another man's field, of the best,' &c. (so Bā.; and, long before him, Aldis Wright, Journ. of Phil. iv., 1872, p. 72 f.); as the damage is due to carelessness, if not (Wright) to incendiarism, the reason why compensation is to be made of the 'best' becomes apparent (cf. Cook, p. 202). Fire spreads rapidly in the hot summers of Palestine; and such carelessness is punished severely by the Arabs (J. and B. ii. 293).

6. Damage done by fire spreading accidentally to another man's field. In this case compensation according to the damage done is sufficient, as no blame, or malice, attaches to the person who kindled the fire.

- 6 If fire break out, and catch in thorns, so that the shocks E of corn, or the standing corn, or the field, be consumed; he that kindled the fire shall surely make restitution.
- 7 If a man shall deliver unto his neighbour money or stuff to keep, and it be stolen out of the man's house; if the 8 thief be found, he shall pay double. If the thief be not found, then the master of the house shall come near unto 1 God, to see whether he have not put his hand unto his 9 neighbour's goods. For every matter of trespass, whether it be for ox, for ass, for sheep, for raiment, or for any manner of lost thing, whereof one saith, This is it, the cause break out] lit. go forth (Nu. xxi. 28), i.e. spread from the place in which it originated—being blown, for instance, by the wind. Contrast in v. 5 let the burning spread, viz. through culpable neglect.

thorns] such as were used to form a 'hedge' about fields (cf. Is. v. 5<sup>a</sup>, Ecclus. xxviii. 24).

7—13. Compensation for loss or damage in various cases of deposit. At the present day, among the Bedawin, a man going on a journey for instance will deposit money or goods with another for safety during his absence. Such a deposit is regarded by the Arabs as a sacred trust (Cook, p. 227; Doughty, i. 176, 267, 280, ii. 301).

7, 8. If a man receives money or any household article for safe custody, and it is stolen, the thief, if he can be discovered, is to repay twofold (v. 7); if the thief cannot be discovered, the man to whom the property was entrusted must be acquitted at a sanctuary of the suspicion which will then naturally light upon him (v. 8).

7. stuff] Heb. kēlim, plur. of kēli, a very general term, including both household articles (Gen. xlv. 20; Jos. vii. 11 'stuff,' as here; Lev. xiii. 49 'thing'), vessels (ch. xxvii. 3; 2 K. iv. 3), jewels or ornaments (ch. iii. 22), as also weapons or armour (Gen. xxvii. 3, 1 S. xiv. 1, &c.), instruments (Ex. xxvii. 19 al.; Am. vi. 5), &c.

to keep] for safety (cf. the story of the παρακαταθήκη, or 'deposit,' entrusted to the Spartan, Glaucus, in Hdt. vi. 86).

8. unto God] i.e. to the local sanctuary. On the term 'God,' here and v. 9, and the paraphrase 'the judges' (marg.), see on xxi. 6 and xviii. 15. To judge by the analogy of v. 11, a denial on oath was sufficient for an acquittal. Comp. 1 K. viii. 31, 32.

9. Extension of the principle of v. 8 to all cases of suspected misappropriation of property, whether arising out of a 'deposit,' or not.

any manner of lost thing] which is found, it is implied, suspiciously in the possession of another.

This is it] viz. the thing that I have lost.

E of both parties shall come before 'God; he whom 'God shall condemn shall pay double unto his neighbour.

If a man deliver unto his neighbour an ass, or an ox, or <sup>10</sup> a sheep, or any beast, to keep; and it die, or be hurt, or driven away, no man seeing it; the oath of the LORD shall <sup>11</sup> be between them both, whether he hath not put his hand unto his neighbour's goods; and the owner thereof shall accept it, and he shall not make restitution. But if it be <sup>12</sup> stolen from him, he shall make restitution unto the owner

he whom, &c.] i.e. whoever, in such a case, is convicted of being in the unlawful possession of property. How the conviction was effected, is not stated: perhaps the oath was only one element in a judicial enquiry; perhaps it was accompanied by an ordeal, and if this was not passed successfully, it was regarded as God's condemnation.

double] as in vv. 4, 7; not fourfold (v. 1), the disputed article being still, in the general case assumed in v. 9, in the possession of the party accused.

10—13. Procedure to be followed, when the property deposited, and afterwards injured or lost, is an animal.

10. be hurt] lit. be broken, i.e. be maimed or wounded: so v. 14, Ez. xxxiv. 4, 16, Zech. xi. 16, Lev. xxii. 22.

or driven away] better, carried away, viz. by raiders (Job i. 15, 17); 1 Ch. v. 21 Heb., 2 Ch. xiv. 15. The word commonly rendered taken captive, 1 S. xxx. 3, 5, &c.

11. the oath of Yahweh] 2 S. xxi. 7, 1 K. ii. 43. The person to whom the animal had been entrusted must swear solemnly that he has not appropriated it himself.

shall accept it] viz. the oath. Both Burckhardt (Bedouins, i. 126—9) and Doughty (Arab. Deserta, i. 267), state that among the Arabs now, if a person suspected of theft is willing to take certain specially solemn oaths, he is considered to be acquitted.

not make restitution] no reasonable precaution having been neglected. In primitive and semi-primitive societies an accused or suspected person is often allowed to clear himself by taking a solemn oath of purgation; there are several examples in the Code of Hammurabi (see p. 423; cf. also 1 K. viii. 31 f.). The practice was also common in the Middle Ages (see E. B. Tylor's arts. OATH and ORDEAL in the Encycl. Brit. and 'Ordeals and Oaths' in Macmillan's Magazine, May, 1876). The oath might be followed by an ordeal (see Manu viii. 109—116, cited by Gray, Numbers, p. 45); or it might involve such curses upon the person taking it, if he did not speak the truth, that the act of taking it constituted itself the ordeal.

12. If, however, the animal be stolen, this might have been guarded against by greater care, and compensation must be made.

- 13 thereof. If it be torn in pieces, let him bring it for witness; E he shall not make good that which was torn.
- 14 And if a man <sup>1</sup>borrow aught of his neighbour, and it be hurt, or die, the owner thereof not being with it, he shall
- 15 surely make restitution. If the owner thereof be with it, he shall not make it good: if it be an hired thing, <sup>2</sup>it came for its hire.

13. If the animal be torn by wild beasts, the man entrusted with it has only to produce its torn flesh as evidence of the fact, and he need make no compensation. No reasonable precautions could guard against this most common misfortune to cattle in the East (cf. Gen. xxxi. 39); and the fact that the remains of the flesh could be produced would show that the shepherd had been watchful, and had even driven off the wild beast before it had completely consumed the carcase (1 S. xvii. 35, Am. iii. 12). Cf. Hamm. § 244 (a hired animal); and Manu viii. 235 f.

14, 15. Compensation for injury to a borrowed animal. If the owner is not with it, the borrower is responsible and must make restitution; if the owner is with it, it is presumed that he might have prevented any ill-usage or injury, and the borrower is not responsible. Cf. Hamm. §§ 245—6 (a hired animal).

14. borrow [an animal)] No object is expressed in the Heb.: it must be understood from vv. 10—13. The sequel shews that an animal is intended. 'Borrow' is lit. ask: so 2 K. vi. 5. Cf. on xii. 36. be hurt] lit. broken, as v. 10.

15. it came for its hire] and therefore, it is presumed, the owner was prepared to take the risk, so that compensation for injury is unnecessary. The sense expressed by the marg. is hardly likely: for if the cost of compensation in the possible case of injury or death were included in the hire, it would make this unreasonably high. Others understand sākīr in its usual sense of a 'hired servant,' and make an entirely new case of v. 15<sup>b</sup>, rendering: If it be a hired servant (who, viz., has injured his own master's animal), it (the damage) cometh into his hire, and is gradually worked off by him (so Kautzsch and Socin, Bā., Ryssel). The connexion with vv. 14, 15<sup>a</sup> is however in this case inexact; for the 'it' is not, as in v. 15<sup>a</sup>, one who has borrowed the animal from its owner, but one who has been entrusted with it by his master.

16, 17. Compensation for the seduction of an unbetrothed maiden. The unmarried and unbetrothed daughter counts as part of her father's property; by the loss of her virginity her value is diminished; her father consequently has a claim for compensation; and the seducer must pay the price sufficient to make the girl his wife. Comp. Dt. xxii. 28, 29 (where, however, the case contemplated is one not of seduction, but of rape). The seduction of a betrothed maiden is regarded as virtually the same thing as adultery: this is dealt with in Dt. xxii. 23—27.

E And if a man entice a virgin that is not betrothed, and lie with her, he shall surely pay a dowry for her to be his wife. If her father utterly refuse to give her unto him, he shall pay money according to the dowry of virgins.

Thou shalt not suffer a sorceress to live.

16. a marriage-price] Heb. mōhar, Arab. mahr; i.e.—not a 'dowry,' but—the price paid for the wife to her parents or family, according to ancient Hebrew custom (cf. Gen. xxxiv. 12, 1 S. xviii. 25). The same custom prevailed anciently, and prevails still, in many other parts of the world (see Post, Familienrecht, pp. 157 ff., 173 ff.): cf., for instance, the Homeric ἔδνα or ἑδνα, Il. xvi. 178; Od. xvi. 391 f., xxi. 160—162, &c.; and, for Arabia, W. R. Smith, Marriage and Kinship in Ancient Arabia, p. 78 f. The mōhar was paid at the time of betrothal; and its payment ratified the engagement. The amount varied naturally with the relative circumstances of the two parties; and was a subject of mutual agreement between the suitor and the girl's family (cf. Gen. xxxiv. 12).

17. If, however, the father will not give her in marriage to her seducer, he must still pay him the usual marriage-price that would be expected for a daughter. In Dt. xxii. 28 the penalty for rape is 50 shekels of silver (about £7), not quite twice the ordinary price of a slave (Ex. xxi. 32).

xxii. 18—xxiii. 19. A collection of miscellaneous moral, religious, and ceremonial commands, not very systematically arranged. They correspond to the 'words' of xxiv. 3 (see on xxi. 1): with few exceptions, all are introduced by Thou shalt: even where the opening word is If, thou shalt generally follows (xxii. 25, 26, xxiii. 4, 5). The moral commands are prompted chiefly by motives of philanthropy and equity: the religious and ceremonial ones are comprised in xxii. 20, 28—31, xxiii. 10—13, 14—19 (cf. xx. 23—26). It is probable that in parts the original laws have had parenetic additions made to them by the compiler.

18. Magic and divination were practised extensively in the ancient world, as indeed they are still among uncivilised peoples and among the uneducated even in civilised countries: we have particularly abundant information respecting the practice of them in Assyria (see briefly the writer's Daniel, in the Camb. Bible, p. 13 ff., more fully Jastrow, Relig. of Bab. and Ass. (1898), pp. 352—406). As inconsistent with the spirit of the religion of Jehovah, as fostering superstition, and as associated commonly with heathen beliefs, they are condemned repeatedly in the OT.: see Lev. xix. 31, xx. 6, 27 (all H), and esp. Dt. xviii. 10, 11, the locus classicus on the subject, where eight types are enumerated (see the writer's note ad loc.); and often in the prophets. See further on the subject, with numerous illustrations of the methods of magic practised in different parts of the world, O. C. Whitehouse's articles MAGIC, SOOTHSAYER, SORCERY, in DB.

Dt. xviii. 10, Mal. iii. 5, 2 Ch. xxxiii. 6, Dan. ii. 2†: cf. Jer. xxvii. 9; and sorceries in 2 K. ix. 22, Mic. v. 11, Nah. iii. 4, Is. xlvii. 9, 12†. Mic. v. 11 seems to shew that the 'sorceries' were something material, such as drugs, herbs, &c., used superstitiously for the purpose of producing magical effects. Sorcery was resorted to for all kinds of purposes, to heal diseases, to ward off disasters, to bring misfortune upon a neighbour, to inspire a woman with love, &c.; it was often supposed to operate by the power obtained through incantations or other spells over spirits (the Arab. jinn).

The law is one which, as the reader need hardly be reminded, has often been woefully misapplied, and led to the committal of great cruelties: witches were often burnt in the middle ages; and they were executed in England as late as 1716. The right feeling that sorcery is debasing and superstitious finds expression in a law which is no doubt not out of harmony with the severe punishments common in the East, even to modern times,—and even, we may add, in mediaeval Europe; but the law belongs to the older dispensation, and does not breathe the spirit of Christ (Luke ix. 55). The rise of a historical sense, and the recognition that the revelation contained in the OT. was progressive, and that the laws given to Israel are not, simply as such, binding upon Christian nations, have taught men that an injunction such as this can have no place in a Christian law-book.

19. Cf. Lev. xviii. 23, xx. 15 f. (both H); Dt. xxvii. 21.

20. Sacrifice by an Israelite to any god save Jehovah to be punished with the ban. Jehovah is a 'jealous God' (xx. 5), who does not tolerate the worship of any other god beside Himself.

utterly destroyed] banned or devoted. The 'ban' (ḥérem) was an archaic institution, often alluded to in the OT. A city or nation that was hostile to Jehovah was 'banned,' or 'devoted' (etymologically, as Arabic shews, separated or set apart<sup>1</sup>), i.e. given over to Him as a form of offering, human beings being destroyed, with or without the cattle and spoil as well, according to the gravity of the occasion. For examples, see Dt. ii. 34 f., iii. 6 f., vii. 2, xiii. 12—18 (an idolatrous Isr. city to be 'devoted'), Jos. vi. 17—19, 21, Jud. i. 17, xxi. 11, 1 S. xv. 3, 9. Here the 'ban' is to be put in force against the Israelite who is disloyal to Jehovah. The ban was also a Moabite institution. Mesha in his inscription (see DB. s.v. MOAB, or EB. s.v. MESHA), ll. 16—18 tells us how, after he had carried off the 'vessels of Yahweh' from the town

R/E not wrong, neither shalt thou oppress him: | for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt. Ye shall not afflict any <sup>22</sup> of Nebo (Nu. xxxii. 38), and dragged them before Chemosh, he slew 7000 Israelite prisoners, for he had 'devoted' the city to Ashtor-Chemosh (cf. Nu. xxi. 2 f.). See further DB. v. 619<sup>b</sup>, EB. BAN.

In AV. hehërim was usually rendered 'utterly destroy,' and the corresponding subst. hërem 'cursed thing' (Dt. vii. 26), or (in Jos. vi. vii.) 'accursed thing': but these renderings both express secondary ideas, besides being to all appearance entirely unrelated to each other: in RV. the verb, when applied to things, is rendered 'devote' (as Lev. xxvii. 29 AV.); when applied to human beings it is still rendered 'utterly destroy,' but 'Heb. devote' has been added on the margin; and 'devoted thing' has been substituted for 'cursed' and 'accursed thing' (e.g. Jos. vi. 18, vii. 1 ff.): the connexion between the two cognate terms has thus been preserved throughout.

21—27. A group of humanitarian laws. The gër, or resident foreigner, the widow, and the orphan not to be oppressed, vv. 21—24; interest not to be taken from the poor, v. 25; a garment taken in pledge to be returned before nightfall, vv. 26 f.

21. a sojourner shalt thou not wrong...: for ye were sojourners in the land of Egypt] The 'sojourner' (gër), or resident foreigner (see on xii. 48; and cf. ii. 22, xx. 10), had at this time no legal status in Israel, and was thus liable in many ways to injustice and oppression. With this injunction comp. Lev. xix. 33, 34, Dt. i. 16, x. 18 f., and the other passages from Dt. and Jer. cited on v. 22; for allusions to the oppression of the gër, see Ez. xxii. 7, 29, Mal. iii. 5.

wrong] Heb. hônâh; cf. Lev. xix. 33 ('oppress'), also of the gër. oppress] lit. crush (Nu. xxii. 25): fig. of external oppressors, Jud. ii. 18 al.; as here, only Ex. xxiii. 9 besides.

22. The helpless widow, and orphan, not to be oppressed. The widow, the orphan, and the 'sojourner,' as liable in various ways to suffer from rapacious judges, and hard-hearted moneyed men, are constantly commended to the philanthropic regard of the Israelite in Dt. (x. 18, xiv. 29, xvi. 11, 14, xxiv. 17, 19, 20, 21, xxvi. 12, 13, xxvii. 19); so in the prophets, Jer. vii. 6, xxii. 3; cf. Is. i. 17, and elsewhere. Contrast Job's conduct (xxxii. 16, 17, 21).

23, 24. If the Israelite does this, Jehovah will treat him with a just retribution.

23. If thou afflict him in any wise, and he cry at all unto me, I will surely hear his cry] so the Heb., making it probable that vv. 21<sup>b</sup>, 22 (which are moreover distinguished from the context by the plur. ye), 24

(which will naturally go with v. 22) are an addition to the original text. It is true, there are not unfrequent cases in poetry, when a class of persons has been spoken of, of their being referred to individually by a sing. pronoun (see G.-K. § 145<sup>m</sup>; and the passages collected in the writer's Jeremiah, p. 362); but this is very unusual in prose: such passages as Gen. ii. 19, Lev. xxi. 7, xxv. 31, Dt. vii. 3, Jos. xxiv. 7, Jud. xii. 5, xxi. 6, are hardly parallel to the present one.

cry...unto me] cf. Dt. xv. 9, xxiv. 15; also Jas. v. 4.

24. Those who had shewn heartlessness towards widows and orphans will perish in battle (cf. Is. ix. 17), and their wives and children will become widows and orphans themselves.

25. Interest not to be taken on money lent to the poor.

as a creditor] exacting and impatient: cf. 2 K. iv. 1, Ps. cix. 11 (where the same word is rendered 'extortioner').

usury] interest. This was formerly the sense of 'usury' (Lat. usura, something paid for the use of money); but the word is now restricted to exorbitant interest; the rendering has consequently become misleading. The taking of interest is prohibited also in Lev. xxv. 36f. (H), and Dt. xxiii. 19f.: it is referred to also with disapproval in Ez. xviii. 8, 13, 17, xxii. 12, Prov. xxviii. 8, Ps. xv. 5 (as what the model Israelite would not do). The same feeling against taking interest on money lent was entertained by Greek thinkers (see Plato, Legg. v. 742; Arist. Polit. i. 10. 5): it was also shared largely in the early Christian Church. Many good Christians, however, now put out their money on interest: what, then, is the cause of the change of feeling? The cause is to be found in the different purpose for which money is now lent. In modern times money is commonly lent for commercial purposes, to enable the borrower to increase his capital and develop his business: and it is as natural and proper that a reasonable payment should be made for this accommodation, as that it should be made for the loan (i.e. the hire) of a house, or any other commodity. But this use of loans is a modern development: in ancient times money was commonly lent for the relief of poverty brought about by misfortune or debt; it partook thus of the nature of a charity; and to take interest on money thus lent was felt to be making gain out of a neighbour's need. The interest which ancient feeling condemned was thus not the interest taken on a commercial loan, such as is taken habitually in the modern world, but the interest taken on a charitable loan, which only increases the borrower's distress. But the feeling with which the ancients regarded all interest is of course still rightly maintained against usurious interest, such as 'money-lenders' often exact from those whom need drives into their hands. Cf. the remarks of Grote, Hist. of Greece, Part II., ch. xi., in connexion with the measures adopted by Solon at Athens for the relief of those who had borrowed money on the security of their own persons (cf. 2 K. iv. 1).

26, 27. A garment taken in pledge to be returned before sun-down. Cf. Hamm. § 241. Comp. Dt. xxiv. 6, 10—13, where other limitations are placed on the arbitrary power of the creditor. Loans on interest are forbidden, in Dt. (xxiii. 19 f.) not less than here (v. 25): but loans on the security of a pledge are permitted, under certain provisos checking harsh or arbitrary action on the part of the creditor; he is not, for instance, to enter the house of the debtor to choose his own pledge, or to take in pledge an article necessary to life, such as the domestic hand-mill. For pledges given on a large scale as security for a loan, see Neh. v. 3 (where houses and vineyards were, as we should say in such a case, mortgaged), 5 (children). Allusions to abuses in the exaction or retention of pledges are contained in Am. ii. 8, Ez. xviii. 12, 16 (contrast v. 7), xxxiii. 15, Job xxii. 6, xxiv. 3, 9.

26. garment] mantle (Heb. salmāh), the large rectangular piece of cloth described in the note on xii. 34; perhaps the only article that a poor man would have to offer as a pledge, as well as his only covering by night (v. 27). The mantle might be retained by the debtor, in order that he might sleep in it himself: see Dt. xxiv. 12. A garment was a common pledge: see not only Am. ii. 8, Job xxii. 6, already quoted, but also Prov. xx. 16 = xxvii. 13. The poor still sleep in Palestine in their ordinary clothes (L. and B. i. 54, 99, iii. 89); cf. Shaw, Travels in Barbary and the Levant (1738), p. 290 (cited by Kn.).

27. wherein, &c.] i.e. wherein else can he sleep?

gracious] see on xxxiv. 6; and cf. xxxiii. 19.

28. Reverence to be shewn to God, and to those in authority.

revile] the word (kālal) usually rendered curse (e.g. xxi. 17): here represented by revile, because of the syn. (‘ārar) in v. 28<sup>b</sup>.

God] The paraphrase judges (RVm.) is not here admissible; for though ‘to go to God’ might mean to go to the judges, as the representatives or spokesmen of God, this would not justify ‘God’ in any connexion being taken to signify judges. LXX. θεοῖς, Vulg. diis, AV. the gods; and so Jos. Ant. iv. 8, 10, c. Ap. ii. 33, and Philo, Vit. Mos. iii. p. 166, de Mon. i. p. 219 (cited by Kn.), understanding the passage, in a sense agreeable to the circumstances of their own time, of heathen gods: but this, though quite legitimate grammatically, would make the precept one very alien to the spirit of the OT.

authority. A word very common (see on xvi. 22) in P and Ezek., but rare elsewhere. The command is quoted by St Paul in Acts xxiii. 5, almost exactly as it stands in the LXX. Cf. Prov. xxiv. 21, Rom. xiii. 1, 1 Pet. i. 17, ii. 13.

29—31. A group of fundamental ceremonial injunctions. Jehovah's customary due from the first annual produce of the threshing-floor and the wine-press to be promptly paid: firstborn males, both of men and animals, to be given to Him; flesh torn of beasts not to be eaten. The laws are stated here tersely and generally: more detailed, and sometimes discrepant, regulations are given in the later codes.

29<sup>a</sup>. thy fulness and thy trickling thou shalt not delay] A paraphrase is a necessity for English idiom: but it obliterates the characteristic curtness of the original. The two substantives are paraphrased by LXX., no doubt correctly, by 'the firstfruits of thy threshing-floor and of thy wine-press.' Both expressions are, however, peculiar, and no doubt archaic. 'Fulness' is used similarly in Nu. xviii. 27 (P) 'like the fulness [in the parallel, v. 30, 'increase,' 'produce'] from the wine-vat, and the corn from the threshing-floor' (offered viz. by the Israelites as tithe): it seems to mean properly full yield (RVm. abundance)—here of the newly threshed corn, as in Nu. l.c. of the freshly expressed grape-juice. Naturally it does not signify here the whole yield of the year, but only that part of it which was offered to Jehovah as 'firstfruits' (cf. xxiii. 16, 19). 'Trickling' (the masc. of the ordinary Heb. word for 'tear'), whatever the true explanation of the expression may be<sup>1</sup>, pretty clearly denotes the freshly extracted juice of the grape (tirōsh, 'must'),—perhaps also (but see footnote) of the olive (yizhār, 'fresh oil') as well.

The dedication to the deity of a portion of the new produce of the year is a widely prevalent custom. 'Primitive peoples often partake of the new corn sacramentally, because they suppose it to be instinct with a divine spirit of life. At a later age, when the fruits of the earth are conceived as created rather than as animated by divinity, the new fruits are no longer partaken of sacramentally; but a portion of them is presented as a thank-offering to the divine beings who are supposed to have produced them.... Till the firstfruits have been presented to the deity, people are not at liberty to eat of the new crops' (Frazer, The Golden

E shalt thou give unto me. Likewise shalt thou do with thine <sup>30</sup> oxen, and with thy sheep: seven days it shall be with its dam; on the eighth day thou shalt give it me. And ye <sup>31</sup> shall be holy men unto me: therefore ye shall not eat any shalt thou give unto me] how it is to be given is not stated: exactly the same expression is used in v. 30 of animals (which were sacrificed). The principle is formulated in general terms, which must have been interpreted in the light of the usage of the time: how it was understood in practice is stated by J (xiii. 13<sup>b</sup>=xxxiv. 20<sup>b</sup>).

29<sup>b</sup>, 30. Like the firstfruits of the soil, the firstborn of men and animals are also to be given to Jehovah. This principle has been laid down before, xiii. 1, 2 (P), 11—16 (J): see on xiii. 1, 2, and p. 409.

30. The firstling of a cow or sheep to be given to Jehovah on the eighth day after birth. The 'eighth day' agrees with the general principle (Lev. xxii. 27 H), that no animal might be offered in sacrifice till it was of that age. The present law evidently presupposes a plurality of local sanctuaries (cf. on xx. 24): a journey to Jerusalem, every time that a firstling of cow or sheep was born, would naturally be out of the question. In Dt. (xv. 19 f.) no age-limit is prescribed, but the firstlings are to be taken 'year by year,—i.e. no doubt mostly, as cattle in Arabia chiefly year in spring (p. 411; Rel. Sem.<sup>2</sup> 465), at Mazgoth,—to the central sanctuary, and eaten there at a sacred meal by the owner and his household: the older usage has thus been accommodated to the later principle of a single sanctuary. Nothing is said here about the firstlings of unclean animals: see in J xiii. 13<sup>a</sup>=xxxiv. 20<sup>a</sup>.

holy men] 'Holy' is a word with a history; and the ideas expressed by it in the OT. do not appear to have been always the same. 'Its connotation would seem to have been at first physical and ceremonial, and to have become gradually more and more ethical and spiritual' (Sanday-Headlam on Rom. i. 7). Originally, like all such words, it had naturally a physical sense, now completely lost both in Heb. and in the other Semitic languages, but conjectured to have been that of separation. In actual usage it expresses the idea of belonging to deity, whether of the character of deity itself (cf. on xv. 11), or of the character of men or things as belonging to Him: as the conception of deity became elevated and purified, the idea expressed by 'holy' became elevated and purified likewise, till at last it expressed the idea of most absolute purity and sanctity. Here the context shews that it must be used in one of its lower senses: it is followed by a command, not to shun and abhor every kind of evil, for instance, or to be morally pure or saintly, but by the purely ceremonial command not to eat flesh torn by beasts: the 'holiness' is thus not moral, but ritual. In Dt. vii. 6, flesh that is torn of beasts in the field; ye shall cast it to E the dogs.

xiv. 2, xxvi. 19, it is used in a higher sense: for it is in each case connected with some prohibition of idolatry or superstition, or an exhortation to obey Jehovah's moral commands. See further, on the idea of Holiness, Sanday-Headlam, L.c.; A. B. Davidson, Theol. of OT., pp. 144—160; Skinner, art. HOLINESS in DB.; Simcox, art. CLEAN AND UNCLEAN in EB.

and flesh in the field, a torn animal, ye shall not eat] The Heb. is not very natural; and perhaps, with LXX. (who express 'flesh torn of beasts' alone), Budde, Bā., we should read simply, 'and the flesh of a torn animal ye shall not eat,' regarding  $\text{וּבְשָׂרָא}$  'in the field' as a dittograph of  $\text{בָּשָׂר}$  'flesh.' For ṣrēphāh, 'that which is torn (by wild beasts),' or 'a torn animal,' see v. 13, Gen. xxxi. 39. With the present law, comp. Lev. xvii. 15 (P), where lustrations are prescribed for those who have eaten either nōbhēlāh ('a carcase,' 'that which dieth of itself') or ṣrēphāh, but neither is in so many words prohibited as food<sup>1</sup>, and Dt. xiv. 21, where the eating of nōbhēlāh is prohibited, but nothing is said about ṣrēphāh. The reason of both prohibitions is doubtless to be found in the fact that such flesh had not been properly drained of blood (Dt. xii. 16, 23, &c.).

<sup>1</sup> Or, and wouldest forbear to release it for him, thou shalt surely release it with him to turn aside after] Jud. ix. 3 Heb., 1 S. viii. 3, 1 K. ii. 28 Heb.

to wrest] or, as the same word is rendered in v. 6 and elsewhere, to pervert (lit. to turn aside): see Dt. xvi. 19, xxiv. 17, xxvii. 19, 1 S. viii. 3, Lam. iii. 35. (To 'turn aside' a man from his right is also said (sometimes with 'from his right' omitted): Is. x. 2, xxix. 21, Am. v. 12, Prov. xviii. 5, Mal. iii. 5). The text of this verse is in parts suspicious: but no doubt the same general sense was always expressed by it.

3. Judgement to be given with strict impartiality.

favour] lit. adorn, i.e. honour (Lev. xix. 15, 32, Lam. v. 12)—in a bad sense, honour unduly=favour, viz. out of false sympathy, or antipathy to the rich and powerful. 'The sense is good, and supported by Lev. xix. 15: one would expect, however, a warning against the far more common fault of favouring a great man, if not in place of the present warning, at least (as in Lev. xix. 15) by the side of it' (Di.).

Kn., Bā. and others, by a very slight change (לָרַחֵם לְגַדְלֵהוּ), would read, 'Thou shalt not honour a great man in his cause.'

4, 5. An enemy's beast to be preserved from harm. These two injunctions breathe a spirit unusual in the OT. (cf., however, Lev. xix. 17, 18), and reminding one of Mt. v. 44. They are repeated in Dt. xxii. 1—4, in an expanded form, accommodating them to the spirit and point of view of Deuteronomy. They can hardly be here in their original place; for they evidently interrupt the connexion between vv. 1—3 and vv. 6—9: they would follow better after xxii. 24 or 27.

4. thine enemy's ox] that such a service would be rendered to a friend, is taken for granted. In Dt. the comprehensive term 'brother,' i.e. fellow-countryman, is employed, in accordance with the prevalent usage of that book (cf. Dt. xv. 2, 3, 7, 9, 11, 12, xvii. 15 al.).

5. and wouldest forbear, &c.] This rend. (=AV.) of the existing text is quite impossible: 'āzab means to leave, forsake, &c., but never to 'help.' That of the marg. is much preferable: for the uncommon sense let loose or release, cf. Dt. xxxii. 36, Job x. 1. Ges., Di., Keil render, thou shalt forbear to leave (it) to him (alone); thou shalt surely release (it) with him; the objection to this is that 'āzab is taken in a different sense in the two parts of the verse; Ges., however, supposed the play to be intentional. The difficulty could be removed by reading

- 6 Thou shalt not wrest the judgement of thy poor in his E 7 cause. Keep thee far from a false matter; and the innocent and righteous slay thou not: for I will not justify the wicked.
 8 And thou shalt take no gift: for a gift blindeth them that 9 have sight, and perverteth the <sup>1</sup>words of the righteous. And in the last clause, with Bochart, Bâ., thou shalt surely help with him (עֹזֵב תֵּעוֹר for עֹזֵב תֵּעוֹר). The rend. thou shalt forbear is perfectly grammatical: but it is in favour of RVm. that nearly everywhere else in these laws (e.g. v. 4) the apodosis after ki is introduced by a bare impf. Dt. xxii. 4 has, 'thou shalt surely lift (them) up with him.'

6—9. Justice to be administered impartially: bribes not to be taken; the poor and the gêr not to be oppressed. The verses form the continuation of vv. 1—3, vv. 1—3 dealing with fairness in bearing witness, and these verses with fairness in administering justice.

6. Cf. Dt. i. 17; and, more generally, Lev. xix. 15 (H), Dt. xvi. 19. As is well known, the maladministration of justice is, and always has been, a crying evil among Oriental nations; and the poor, especially, are rarely able to get their rights. Comp. allusions in the OT., Am. v. 12, Is. x. 2, Jer. v. 28, Ps. x. 17, lxxxii. 4, Prov. xxxi. 9; also Jer. xxii. 16 (where Josiah is praised for having 'judged the cause of the poor and the needy'), Ps. lxxii. 12—14.

7. a false matter] i.e., as the context shews, a case that can only be carried through with the help of false statements, and false witnesses.

slay thou not] by false accusations, false witness, or an unjust sentence. The words are addressed indifferently to accuser, witness, and judge. Cf. Dt. xxvii. 25, Ps. xciv. 6, 21.

for I do not justify the wicked] I do not justify the man who is in the wrong (v. 1<sup>b</sup>), and who accuses the innocent unjustly; and therefore the judges should act similarly. LXX. however read, and thou shalt not justify the wicked, which may be the original reading (Bâ.); cf. Dt. xxv. 1.

8. gift (twice)] bribe, as the same word is rendered in EVV. of 1 S. viii. 3, Is. xxxiii. 15, and in RV. of Ez. xxii. 12. It is true, 'gift' had this sense in Old English; but the Heb. word means distinctively a 'bribe,' and there are places in which the sense of 'gift' is not clear. The same word (shôhad) is also sometimes rendered 'reward.' See, for allusions to the practice of taking bribes, Is. i. 23, v. 23, Mic. iii. 11, Ez. xxii. 12, Ps. xxvi. 10, Prov. xvii. 8, 23; it is what the righteous man never does, Ps. xv. 5, Is. xxxiii. 15, nor Jehovah, Dt. x. 17; it is forbidden, as here, in Dt. xvi. 19, and cursed, if its object be to 'slay an innocent person,' in Dt. xxvii. 25. The prevalence of bribery in the East is notorious; see a singular case, in which the chief Kaḍi of Cairo was implicated, in Lane, Mod. Egyptians, i. 145 ff.

for a bribe blindeth the open-eyed, and subverteth the cause (RVm.) of the righteous] The whole verse is repeated verbatim in Dt. xvi. 19,

R/E a stranger shalt thou not oppress: | for ye know the heart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.
E And six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather <sup>10</sup> in the increase thereof: but the seventh year thou shalt <sup>11</sup> except that 'eyes of the wise' is substituted for 'open-eyed.' For 'words,' i.e. statements, arguments, pleas, which in a forensic connexion are tantamount in the aggregate to a 'case' or 'cause,' see xxiv. 14, with the note, Jos. xx. 4 (lit. 'his words'), 2 S. xv. 3 (lit. 'thy words'). For 'subverteth,' cf. Prov. xix. 3, xxii. 12 ('overthroweth').

9. The gēr, or foreigner 'sojourning' in Israel, not to be 'crushed.' Identical, in great measure verbally, with xxii. 21: here, no doubt, directed specially against unfair judgement (cf. Dt. xxiv. 17. 'Thou shalt not wrest the judgement of the sojourner,' xxvii. 19, Mal. iii. 5).

for ye (emph.) know..., seeing ye were sojourners, &c.] see on xxii. 21. the heart] lit. the soul, i.e. the feelings.

10—12. The seventh year to be a fallow year, and the seventh day to be a day of rest. The motive, it may be noticed, is in each case a philanthropic one.

10, 11. The fallow year. In every seventh year the fields, vineyards, and olive-gardens are to remain uncultivated, such produce as they bear naturally being not gathered by the owners, but left to the poor. The terms in which the law is expressed leave it uncertain whether (as is generally supposed) a year common to the whole land is intended, or (Riehm, HWB. s.v. SABBATHJAHR; Wellh. Hist. p. 117 f.; Nowack, Archäol. ii. 162; W. R. Smith in EB. iv. 4180; Bā.) one varying with the different properties, and reckoned in each from the year in which it first began to be cultivated: the analogy of v. 12 would favour the former interpretation; practical considerations, and the analogy of Lev. xix. 23—25, would support the latter. In Lev. xxv. 1—7 (H) it is represented as a fixed year to be observed throughout the country simultaneously; but this does not determine the question whether it had that character from the beginning. A common septennial fallow year, must, in practice, have had its inconveniences: 2 Ch. xxxvi. 21 (cf. Lev. xxvi. 34, 35) seems to imply that it was not observed, at least regularly, before the exile: but there are several notices of its observance in the Greek period (e.g. 1 Macc. vi. 49, 53: DB. iv. 325<sup>b</sup>).

11. thou shalt let it drop and abandon it] viz. the land, less probably the increase: RV. (substantially = AV.) is a paraphrase. The word rendered let drop means properly to fling or throw down (2 K. ix. 33, of Jezebel). In Dt. xv. 2, 3 it is differently applied; and is used of letting a debt drop every seventh year, in the 'year of dropping' or 'of release' (Dt. xv. 1, 2, 9); and the rend. release in RVm. here brings out this connexion—though, it is true, it is not more than a verbal one—with the law of Dt. xv. 1—6.

that the poor, &c.] contrast Lev. xxv. 6, 7.

In Lev. xxv. 1—7, 20—22 (H), the fallow year, whatever may be the case in Ex., becomes, as has just been remarked, a fixed year for the whole country; and the motive is no longer exclusively a philanthropic one, but a religious one, viz. that the land may 'keep a sabbath to Jehovah' (whence the term 'sabbatical year'): in Dt. xv. 1—6 it receives an entirely different application, and becomes a fixed septennial 'year of release,' applied for the relief of the poor debtor, by the exaction of debts being prohibited in it. Whether however even the present passage gives the original motive of the institution may be doubted. Analogous usages in other countries (see Maine, Village Communities in the East and West, pp. 77—79, 107—113, &c.; Fenton, Early Hebrew Life, 1880, pp. 24—26, 29—32, 64—70) suggest that it may be a relic of communistic agriculture, i.e. of a stage of society in which the fields belonging to a village are the property of the villagers collectively, individuals only acquiring the use of particular portions for a limited period, and the produce, at stated intervals, reverting to the use of the community generally. The fallow year of Ex. and Lev. is similarly an institution limiting the rights of individual ownership in the interests of the community generally: in Ex. the institution is applied so as to minister to the needs of the poorer classes; in Lev. xxv. 1—7 the prominent idea is the benefit which the land would derive from remaining periodically uncultivated.

thy work] The word (ma'āseh),—which is not the same as the one (me'la'khāh) rendered 'work' in xx. 10,—though in itself a general one, seems rather from the context to suggest work in the field: cf. v. 16, where it is twice rendered 'labours'; also Dt. xiv. 29, xvi. 15, xxiv. 19, xxviii. 12 (note in each case the context).

rest] desist (from work), or keep sabbath (RVm.): see on xx 8.

and thine ass may rest] as xx. 11. This is the word that expresses the positive idea of rest (Job iii. 13, 17). ('Have rest' in RV. is intended for distinction from 'rest' just before; but it is better to express the distinction by giving a more exact rendering of shābath.)

the son of thy bondwoman] i.e. a slave 'born in the house' (cf. on xii. 44), of parents who were themselves slaves—intended, it must be supposed, to represent slaves in general (cf. Dt. v. 14 end): as Di. remarks, most slaves were probably of this kind. Bertholet (Die Stellung der Isr. u. der Juden zu den Fremden, p. 55) and Bâ. think 'the son of thy concubine' to be meant (cf. the sense of 'āmāh in xxi. 7 [see note]); but there seems no sufficient reason for this limitation.

R/E the stranger, may be refreshed. | And in all things that I have <sup>13</sup> said unto you take ye heed: and make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.

be refreshed] properly, get breath: so xxxi. 17, 2 S. xvi. 14†.

13. God's commands to be honoured; and 'other gods' not even to be mentioned, still less invoked in worship. The verse can hardly be in place in the midst of laws relating to sacred seasons. It reads like the conclusion, perhaps added by a compiler, either to the Book of the Covenant itself, or to one of the smaller collections of laws, out of which (cf. p. 203) the Book of the Covenant seems to have been formed. Probably it has found its present place as a result of successive expansions or transpositions of the text. It is impossible to determine its original position: but it would follow suitably v. 19.

14—19. Further ceremonial regulations (cf. xx. 24—26, xxii. 29—31).

14—17. The three annual pilgrimages, at which every male was to appear before God at a sanctuary. These pilgrimages were festivals which marked originally stages in the agricultural operations of the year: they were the occasions of thanksgiving to Jehovah, the Owner of the land, for the gifts of the soil—the festivals of Mazzoth and Harvest celebrating the beginning and close of harvest, and the feast of Ingathering the completion of the vintage and olive-gathering. In later times a historical significance was attached to them, and they were regarded as commemorative of events connected with the Exodus; in the case of Mazzoth and Ingathering this character is attached to them in the OT. itself, in the case of the 'feast of Harvest (or of Weeks), it is first met with in the post-Bibl. literature (see on v. 16<sup>a</sup>). The present passage, with the nearly verbal parallel in xxxiv. 18, 22 f., contains the earliest legislation on the subject: the festivals are already recognized institutions; and the Israelite is merely commanded to observe them. The later codes prescribe the ritual with which, as time went on, they gradually came to be celebrated: see Dt. xvi. 1—17; Lev. xxiii. (H, expanded in parts from P); Nu. xxviii.—xxix. (P); and (for Mazzoth) Ex. xii. 14—20 (also P).

- 14 Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year. E
 15 The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep: | seven R/E days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, at the time appointed in the month Abib (for in it thou camest out from Egypt); and none shall appear before

keep a pilgrimage] The word (hag) means a feast accompanied by a pilgrimage (see on x. 9): there were only three of these in the Jewish year. Hag is to be carefully distinguished from the wider term mō'ēd (rendered variously in RV. set feast, appointed feast, solemn [i.e., like the Lat. solemnis, stated, recurring] feast, solemn assembly, solemnity: see e.g. Lev. xxiii. 2, 4, 37, 44, Hos. ii. 11, ix. 5, xii. 9, Is. i. 14, xxxiii. 20, Lam. i. 4, 15, ii. 6, 7, Ez. xxxvi. 38, xliv. 24, xlv. 17, xlvi. 9, 11), which means properly a fixed time or season, and is applied to any fixed sacred season (including e.g. the Day of Atonement and New Year's Day), whether observed by a pilgrimage or not (see esp. Lev. xxiii., which, as vv. 2, 4 shew, is a Calendar of such mō'ēdim).

15<sup>a</sup>. The first pilgrimage, the seven days' festival of Mazzoth or Unleavened Cakes. Cf. the parallel xxiv. 18; and the later regulations in Dt. xvi. 3, 4, 8; Lev. xxiii. 6—8 (P), 9—14 (H and P); Ex. xii. 14—20 and Nu. xxviii. 17—25 (both P). This feast celebrated the beginning of the barley-harvest (which begins in Palestine towards the end of April or the beginning of May, some weeks before the wheat-harvest): cf. Lev. xxiii. 10—14 H (the 'wave-sheaf' of the first-fruits of the harvest to be presented then to Jehovah). The reason why this spring festival was observed in particular by eating unleavened cakes must remain matter of conjecture: perhaps it was simply because, at a time when men were busy with the harvest, such cakes (cf. on xii. 8) were most quickly and easily prepared (Wellh. Hist. p. 87; Nowack, Arch. ii. 146; EB. iii. 3591). Eerdmans (Expositor, Nov. 1909, p. 459 ff.) conjectures that it was to preserve, in accordance with a primitive conception, the 'soul' of the corn for the seed of the year to come. The feast is regarded as commemorating the day of the Exodus in Ex. xiii. 3—10 (JE), Dt. xvi. 3, Ex. xii. 14—20 (P): in Ex. xii. 34, 39 (J) a historical motive for the use of unleavened cakes is suggested; the haste viz. with which the Israelites left Egypt gave them no time to leaven their dough.

seven days...empty] These words, breaking the grammatical connexion between v. 15<sup>a</sup> and v. 16, have been most probably introduced here by a later hand from xxxiv. 18<sup>b</sup>, 20<sup>c</sup>. The words, 'as I commanded thee,' refer apparently to xiii. 6 J (cf. v. 4 'Abib'), and are in their proper place in J's covenant (xxxiv. 10—26; see p. 372), but cannot well be original in E.

E me empty: | and the feast of harvest, the firstfruits of thy labours, which thou sowest in the field: and the feast of appear before me] The standing phrase for visiting a sanctuary as a worshipper, esp. at the three great pilgrimages (Ex. xxxiv. 20, 23, 24, Dt. xxxi. 11, 1 S. i. 22), but also used more generally (Is. i. 12, Ps. xlii. 2). It is however held by many,—on the basis, primarily, of grammatical considerations affecting Ex. xxiii. 15, xxxiv. 20, Is. i. 12, and Ps. xlii. 2,—that in these and similar passages (Ex. xxxiv. 23, 24, Dt. xvi. 16 (twice), xxxi. 11) the existing punctuation does not represent the original vocalization, and that the true sense of the phrase is (with other vowel points) see my face, see the face of Yahweh, i.e. visit Him as Sovereign (so Ges., Dillm., Kirkpatrick on Ps. xlii. 2, and others). The usual phrase for admission to the presence of a royal person (2 S. iii. 13, xiv. 28, 32, 2 K. xxv. 19; cf. Gen. xliii. 3) was applied to visiting the sanctuary; but as objection came to be felt to the expression 'seeing the face of God' (cf. Ex. xxxiii. 20), the vocalization,—and perhaps, in Ex. xxiii. 17, 1 S. i. 22, even the consonantal text,—was altered so as to express the idea of 'appearing before God.'

16<sup>a</sup>. The second pilgrimage, the Feast of Harvest, celebrating the completion of the wheat harvest (xxxiv. 22), in June, and marked by the offering of firstfruits from the ripened grain (in xxxiv. 22 'the firstfruits of wheat harvest' takes the place of 'the firstfruits of thy labours' here). The term 'Feast of Harvest' is found only here: in xxxiv. 22 and in Dt. (xvi. 10, 16) it is called the Feast of Weeks, on account of its being kept seven weeks after the sickle was first put to the corn, Dt. xvi. 9, or (in H) after the first sheaf of the year's harvest had been presented to Jehovah as a wave-offering, Lev. xxiii. 15 (see v. 10); and in Nu. xxviii. 26 (P) the Day of firstfruits. For the regulations in the other codes, see Dt. xvi. 9—12; Lev. xxiii. 15—21 (H and P: in H a loaf of fine flour, baked with leaven, is to be 'waved' as firstfruits to Jehovah; in a gloss (based on Nu. xxviii. 27—30) the required sacrifices are prescribed); Nu. xxviii. 26—31 (P).

labours] work, as v. 12 (G.-K. § 93<sup>ss</sup>); cf. 1 S. xxv. 2 Heb. The following words explain what is meant: (even) of that which thou sowest would be clearer.

(even) of the firstfruits &c.] Heb. bikkurim (cognate with b<sup>o</sup>kör, 'firstborn,' 'firstling'), denoting properly firstripe fruit (including cereals) in general (as Nah. iii. 12 lit. 'figtrees with bikkurim'), but used specially of those portions of the 'firstripe fruit' which were ingathering, at the end of the year, when thou gatherest in E

 17 thy labours out of the field. | Three times in the year all R/E
 thy males shall appear before the Lord God.

presented to Jehovah. Bikkurim occurs besides v. 19 (and the ||| xxxiv. 22, 26), Lev. ii. 14, xxiii. 17, 20, Nu. xiii. 20, xviii. 13, xxviii. 26. 2 K. iv. 42 ('bread of firstfruits' brought to Elisha), Neh. x. 35, xiii. 31, Ez. xliv. 30†. Cf. p. 246.

No historical significance is in the OT. attached to this festival; but by the later Jews it was regarded as commemorating the giving of the law 'in the third month' of the Exodus (Ex. xix. 1), which was supposed to have taken place 50 days after the 15th of the first month (Lev. xxiii. 6; the morning after the Passover on the 14th, Ex. xii. 18).

16<sup>b</sup>. The third pilgrimage, the Feast of Ingathering, held at the end of the year, in September, when the threshing was finished, the vintage over, and the juice pressed out from the grapes and olives (Dt. xvi. 13 'when thou gatherest in from thy threshing-floor and from thy wine-vat'). It is called the 'Feast of Ingathering' also in Ex. xxxiv. 22†: in Dt. (xvi. 13, 16, xxxi. 10) and P (Lev. xxiii. 34), as also in later writers generally (Ezr. iii. 4, 2 Ch. viii. 13, Zech. xiv. 16, 18, 19†), it is called, from the custom of dwelling at the time in booths made of the branches of trees (Lev. xxiii. 40, 42 [H]; Neh. viii. 14—17), the Feast of Booths. This feast, according to Dt. (xvi. 13, 15), H and P (Lev. xxiii. 34, 39, Nu. xxix. 12), lasted for 7 days (cf. Neh. viii. 18). It was an occasion of hilarity (cf. Dt. xvi. 15 end, Lev. xxiii. 40<sup>b</sup>): in Jud. ix. 27 a festival is mentioned, which seems to have been its Canaanite counterpart. Cf. also Jud. xxi. 19, 21. Comp., in the other codes, Dt. xvi. 13—15; Lev. xxiii. 39—43 (mostly H); Lev. xxiii. 33—36, Nu. xxix. 12—38 (both P). In Lev. xxiii. 43 (H) the custom of dwelling in booths is explained as commemorating the fact that the Israelites dwelt in 'booths' after their departure from Egypt. 'Booths,' or huts, are not however the same as tents: and the actual origin of the custom is more probably to be found in the fact that those employed in gathering the fruit-harvest would sleep at the time in huts in the vineyards and olive-gardens (cf. Is. i. 8). Afterwards, however, the ancient practice had a commemorative meaning attached to it (cf. on v. 14—17); and it was treated as a reminder of important events.

17. Every male to appear before (see on v. 15) Jehovah three times in the year. The substantial identity with v. 14, coupled with the different word for 'times,' makes it probable that the verse has been introduced here from xxxiv. 23.

the Lord GOD] i.e. the Lord, Jehovah. The title 'Lord' is an indication that these pilgrimages are to be observed as marks of homage and respect to Jehovah, as Sovereign of the land (Di., Bā.).

E Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my feast remain

18. Two regulations respecting sacrifice, designed to guard a sacrifice against contamination by anything corrupt or tainted.

18<sup>a</sup>. Jehovah's sacrifices not to be offered with leavened bread. Cf. the || xxxiv. 25; Lev. ii. 11, vi. 17; and the note on ch. xii. 8. 'In the earliest times bread was entirely unleavened. Flour or barley was mixed with water and kneaded in a "kneading-bowl" (viii. 3), and then baked into "unleavened cakes" (see on xii. 8), such as are still the usual food of the Bedawin. In a more advanced stage of society the bread was made in this way only in cases of emergency (Gen. xix. 3), or for purposes of ritual. The ordinary bread of the Hebrews was made lighter by fermentation' (Kennedy, in EB. i. 604). The reason why leavened bread was prohibited for ritual purposes was, probably, partly because unleavened bread had the sanction of antiquity (Kennedy, ib. iii. 2753), partly because leaven, being produced by fermentation, was regarded as tainted with a species of corruption (ib. p. 2754; OTJC.<sup>2</sup> p. 345; Rel. Sem. p. 203 f., ed. 2, p. 220 f.). Leavened bread was permitted only when the offering was not to be placed upon the altar, but eaten by the priests, Lev. vii. 13, xxiii. 17, 20 end.

offer] lit. kill or slay (Dt. xii. 15), but the word (zābah) is nearly always used of slaying for sacrifice (cf. on xx. 24). It occurs only here with 'blood' as its object. In the ||, xxxiv. 25<sup>a</sup>, slaughter (shāhaʿ) is used: this is often said of the slaughter of an animal for sacrifice (xxix. 11, Lev. i. 5, &c.), but, like zābah, is not found elsewhere with 'blood' as its object. The use of both words in this law is peculiar.

18<sup>b</sup>. The fat of a festal sacrifice,—which, like the fat of other sacrifices, as the most esteemed part of the animal, was regularly consumed in sweet smoke (see on xxix. 13) upon the altar (Lev. i. 8, iii. 3 f. &c.), as an offering to the Deity,—is not to remain unburnt till the next morning (when it would in any case be stale, and in a hot climate might even be tainted). The fat meant is not all fat found in an animal, but specifically that about the kidneys and other intestines (Lev. iii. 3 f.: Rel. Sem.<sup>2</sup> 379 f.; EB. ii. 1545; Driver and White, Leviticus in Haupt's Sacred Books of the OT., illustr. opp. to p. 4).

the fat of my feast] Lit. of my pilgrimage (Heb. hag), i.e. of the animals sacrificed at my pilgrimages (cf. Mal. ii. 3, Ps. cxviii. 27 Heb.).

The ||, xxxiv. 25<sup>b</sup>, has 'the sacrifice of the pilgrimage of the passover'; hence it is commonly thought that the reference (in both clauses) is to the passover (so already Onk., expressly in cl.<sup>a</sup>, and by implication in cl.<sup>b</sup>). No doubt these two regulations might have been formulated at a time when the Passover was the principal Heb. sacrifice: on the other hand, this is nowhere else (except in xxxiv. 25) called a hag; and (Di.) the terms being perfectly general, the limitation seems hardly legitimate: the fat pieces of a sacrifice offered at any pilgrimage are to be burnt upon the altar the same day. Why the regulation is limited to these sacrifices does not appear: was it because greater strictness and formality were expected on these occasions than when the sacrifice was an ordinary private one? There are similar regulations in P for the flesh, not only of the Passover (ch. xii. 10), but also of the ram of installation (xxix. 34), and of the thanksgiving-offering (Lev. vii. 15, xxii. 30). The fat of the Passover is not elsewhere specified.

19 all night until the morning. The first of the firstfruits of thy ground thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seethe a kid in its mother's milk.

the first of the firstripe fruits] 'Firstripe fruits' (bikkurim) seems to be used here in the wider sense noticed on v. 16; and it is said either (Ges.) that the earliest, or (Kn., Ke.) that the first (i.e. the choicest, best: rēshith as Am. vi. 1, 6), of these are to be presented to Jehovah: comp. esp. Ez. xlv. 30. The ron. the best, (even) the firstripe fruits, of thy ground (Di., Benzinger, EB. iv. 4910, Nowack, Arch. ii. 256, Bā.) is less natural. As regards the relation of this law to that in v. 16, v. 16 alludes only to the bikkurim to be presented at the Feast of Weeks; the present law is wider, and would include for instance the firstfruits of the grape and olive harvest, which fell later in the year (according to the Mishna, bikkurim were offered on 'seven kinds,' viz. wheat, barley, vines, figtrees, pomegranates, oil, and honey: see Gray, Numbers, p. 228). It seems to be a parallel to the law in xxii. 29; the two laws probably belonged originally to two distinct collections, and both were preserved on account of the difference in their form.

The amount of firstfruits to be offered is not prescribed; and is evidently left to the free will of the individual offerer (cf. v. 15<sup>b</sup>; Dt. xvi. 17).

the house of Jehovah] The expression might denote the hēkāl, or temple, at Shiloh (Jud. xviii. 31, 1 S. i. 7, 24, iii. 15), or the Temple of Solomon (1 K. viii. 10, and often); it might also, presumably, denote the local sanctuary nearest to the offerer's own home; for these, or at least the principal ones, had almost certainly 'houses' or shrines (cf. 1 K. xii. 31, 2 K. xvii. 32, Am. vii. 13, ix. 1). The Tent of meeting might also perhaps be spoken of generally as the 'house,' or abode, of Jehovah; but the term is not a very natural one to apply to it; and where it does apparently denote the Tent of meeting (Jos. vi. 24 [but 'the house of' omitted in LXX., as in v. 19 in the Heb.], ix. 23 end), or the tent erected for the ark by David (2 S. xii. 20, cf. vi. 17), it is open to the suspicion of having been used by the writers on account of their familiarity with the Temple of Solomon (in 2 S. vii. 6 a 'tent' is denied to be a 'house'). The present law must have been formulated, it seems natural to think, without any reference to the Tent of meeting.

19<sup>b</sup>. A kid not to be boiled in its mother's milk. Repeated verbatim in the ||xxxiv. 26<sup>b</sup>, and Dt. xiv. 21<sup>b</sup>. The law, to judge from its position beside ritual injunctions, will have had not, as might have been supposed, a humanitarian, but a religious motive. Di. and most suppose that it is aimed against some superstitious custom—perhaps (Maimonides;

E Behold, I send an angel before thee, to keep thee by the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. Spencer, Legg. Hebr. (1686), II. viii.; al.) that of using milk thus prepared as a charm for rendering fields and orchards more productive. Frazer ('Folk-lore in the OT.,' in Anthropological Essays presented to E. B. Tylor, Oxford, 1907, p. 151 ff.) quotes examples shewing that among many pastoral tribes in Africa there is a strong aversion to boiling milk, lest (on the principle of 'sympathetic magic') it should injure or even kill the cow which yielded it: but this case is not quite the same as the one here. Ibn Ezra (11 cent.) ad loc., and Burckhardt (Bedouins, i. 63), both mention boiling a lamb or kid in milk as an Arab custom.

20—33. Hortatory epilogue. The laws which Israel is to observe have been defined: and now Jehovah declares what He will do for His people if it is obedient to His voice (v. 22): He will give it prosperity, freedom from sickness and long life, success in its contests with the nations of Canaan, and extension of territory afterwards. Comp. the similar, but longer and more elaborated, hortatory discourses (including curses on disobedience), concluding the codes of H (Lev. xxvi. 3—45) and Dt. (Dt. xxviii.). It is remarkable that the commands which Israel is to obey are not those embodied in ch. xx. 22—xxiii. 19, but (v. 22) those to be given it in the future by the angel on the way to Canaan. Perhaps (Bä.) the passage was written originally for a different context: but even if that were the case, it must be intended, where it now stands, to suggest motives for the observance of the preceding laws.

20, 21. An angel is to guide Israel on its journey to Canaan: his instructions must be received with the same respect and fear as those of Jehovah Himself; for Jehovah will Himself be speaking in him.

20. an angel] such as guided and protected the patriarchs (Gen. xxiv. 7, xxxi. 11, xlviii. 16); cf. Ex. xiv. 19 (on xxxii. 34, xxxiii. 2, see the notes), Nu xx. 16. It is true, the expression here used is 'an angel' (so Nu xx. 16: contrast ch. iii. 2); but he appears in v. 21 as Jehovah's full representative (see on iii. 2). Elsewhere in JE the pillar of cloud (see on xiii. 21), Hobab (Nu x. 31), and the ark (Nu x. 33), are severally described as guiding Israel in the wilderness.

23—25<sup>a</sup>. Generally regarded as an expansion of the original text: as Di. points out, the warning against idolatry in Canaan is not only out of place in a series of promises (vv. 22<sup>b</sup>, 25<sup>b</sup>, 26, &c.), but it anticipates the conquest promised in v. 27 f. overthrow] properly, tear down (viz. their images).

pillars] so RV. always, AV. sometimes wrongly images; RVm. obelisks; best, perhaps, standing-stones: Heb. mazzēbōth. The mazzēbāh (lit. something set up) was a large oblong block of stone—originally, no doubt (cf. on xx. 24, and the writer's note on Gen. xxviii. 18, p. 267), conceived as the abode of a numen or deity—set up in or near a temple or high place, or beside an altar. Several such mazzēbāhs, or 'standing-stones,' have been excavated recently at Gezer, Taanach, and Megiddo: at Gezer, for instance, there is a striking row of ten, and at Taanach a double row, each consisting of five (see the writer's Modern Research as illustrating the Bible, 1908, pp. 62—5, 84). Mazzēbāhs were the regular accompaniment of a Canaanite temple or other sacred place (cf. 2 K. x. 26 f., in the temple of Baal in Samaria); and during the earlier period of Israel's history they seem to have been used freely in the worship of Jehovah as well: Moses erects twelve (ch. xxiv. 4); Hos. iii. 4, x. 1 f. alludes to them as religious symbols of which Israel will be deprived on account of its sins; in Is. xix. 19 a mazzēbāh is a symbol of Egypt's conversion to Jehovah. Later, however, they were proscribed on account of their heathen associations: Moses is represented as having commanded

E shall serve the LORD your God, ] and he shall bless thy bread, and thy water; and I will take sickness away from the midst of thee. There shall none cast her young, nor be barren, in thy land: the number of thy days I will fulfil. I will send my terror before thee, and will discomfit all the people to whom thou shalt come, and I will make all thine enemies turn their backs unto thee. And I will send the hornet before thee, which shall drive out the Hivite, the Canaanite, and the Hittite, from before thee. I will not drive them out from before thee in one year; lest the land Mic. v. 13); and their erection beside Jehovah's altar is prohibited (Dt. xvi. 22; Lev. xxvi. 1 H); the same view of them is also reflected in the notices by the Deuteronomic compiler in 1 K. xiv. 23, 2 K. xvii. 10. 26<sup>b</sup>. I will fulfil] Life will not come to an end prematurely, either for the individual, or for the nation (cf. xx. 12).

27—30. Jehovah will further help Israel effectually to drive out the nations of Canaan.

27. my terror] a terror greater than ordinary causes would seem capable of producing, and so attributed directly to God: what we should call a panic. Cf. the 'terror' (not the Heb. word used here), and 'trembling,' 'of God,' in the same sense, in Gen. xxxv. 5, 1 S. xiv. 15 (RVm.); and Zech. xiv. 13.

effectually the territory vacated by them. Hence, with verbal variations, Dt. vii. 22. The representation is in striking contrast to the idealized pictures of rapid conquests drawn in the Deuteronomic sections of the book of Joshua, from which the popular conception of the 'extermination of the Canaanites' is derived (e.g. Jos. x. 28—39, 40—43, xi. 16—23, xxi. 43—45); but it agrees with the accounts given in the older strata of Joshua and Judges, according to which there were many districts from which the Israelites were unable to expel the Canaanites, and the country as a whole was only occupied by them gradually (Jos. xiii. 13, xv. 63, xvi. 10, xvii. 11—13, 14—18, Jud. i. 19, 21, 27—35, ix.). The historical reason why 'the Canaanites thus remained so long in many parts of the land was because the Israelites had not the military resources enabling them to cope with them (cf. Jud. i. 19); but the fact nevertheless remained one which many religiously-minded Israelites found it difficult to reconcile with their sense of Jehovah's sovereignty; and different moral, or religious, theories were framed to account for it. Here it is explained as due to Jehovah's care that unoccupied spots should not be left in the land, on which wild beasts might multiply and become a danger to the Israelites (2 K. xvii. 25 f.; cf. Lev. xxvi. 22, Ez. xiv. 15, 21): for other theories, see Jud. ii. 20—iii. 4 (comp. LOT,<sup>3</sup> p. 165 f.).

31<sup>a</sup>. Israel's territory will reach, beyond Canaan itself, from the Red Sea to the 'sea of the Philistines' (i.e. the SE. coast of the Medit. Sea, including the Philistine territory itself), and from 'the wilderness' (i.e. the wilderness on the S. of Palestine) to the Euphrates. An ideal description of the extent of Isr. territory, once, at least according to tradition, realised in history, under Solomon (1 K. iv. 21). For similar promises, see Gen. xv. 18, Dt. xi. 24 (whence Jos. i. 4); and cf. (in the picture of the restored Israel of the future) Is. xxvii. 12.

[the River] i.e. the River, κατ' ἐξοχὴν, to the Hebrews, the Euphrates. The word, when the Euphrates is intended, is always in RV. printed with a capital R: see e.g. Is. vii. 20, xxvii. 12, Ps. lxxii. 8, lxxx. 11.

31<sup>b</sup>—33. Regarded by We., Di., Bā. and most critics as another expansion of the original text, similar to vv. 23—25<sup>a</sup>, partly because it reverts to the subject of Israel's attitude towards the gods of Canaan, already dealt with in v. 24, but chiefly because, whereas in vv. 27—30 Jehovah promises that He will Himself drive out the Canaanites before Israel, here their expulsion is laid as a duty upon Israel.

R<sup>E</sup> hand; and thou shalt drive them out before thee. Thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor with their gods. They shall not dwell in thy land, lest they make thee sin against me: for if thou serve their gods, it will surely be a snare unto thee.

32, 33. No treaty of friendship or alliance to be entered into with the Canaanites, lest Israel be seduced by them into idolatry. The same warning (with the consequences of such alliance more fully developed), Ex. xxxiv. 12—16, Dt. vii. 2—5; cf. Jos. xxiii. 12, 13 (D<sup>2</sup>), Jud. ii. 2, 3 (compiler).

33. for thou wilt serve their gods, for it will become a snare unto thee. So the Heb. literally. There must be some fault in the text; but the general sense of the passage is no doubt correctly given. 'And thou shalt not serve,' &c. (LXX., Pesh.; cf. Dt. vii. 16<sup>b</sup>) would be the simplest change; but it is not easy palaeographically (סני for כן).

a snare] i.e.—not, an enticement to sin, but—a lure to destruction. Cf. on x. 7; and see esp. 1 S. xviii. 21. Of the gods of Canaan, as here, xxxiv. 12, and in the reminiscences, Dt. vii. 16, Jud. ii. 3; and of the Canaanites themselves, Jos. xxiii. 13 (D<sup>2</sup>). Warnings against holding intercourse with the Canaanites, and commands to overthrow their altars, &c. (vv. 23—25<sup>a</sup>, and 31<sup>b</sup>—33), are also characteristic of Deuteronomy: see e.g. Dt. vii. 2—5, xii. 2—3, 29—31.

CHAP. XXIV.

The vision of Jehovah (vv. 1—2, 9—11). The ratification of the covenant (vv. 3—8). Moses ascends the mount to receive (E) the tables of stone (vv. 12—15<sup>a</sup>, 18<sup>b</sup>), and (P) directions for the construction of a sanctuary (vv. 15<sup>b</sup>—18<sup>a</sup>).

The chapter is evidently not a unity. In xxiv. 1 Moses is directed to 'come up' where he already is, and where he has been since xx. 21: on the other hand, vv. 3—8 form a natural and excellent sequel to xx. 22—xxiii. 33; Moses communicates to the people the words which he has received, and they agree solemnly to abide by them. Similarly if v. 12 is the true sequel of vv. 9—11, Moses is again commanded to come up where he already is: v. 12, however, would follow v. 8 (where Moses is below, with the people) quite naturally, and vv. 9—11 are obviously the proper sequel to vv. 1—2 (comp. v. 9 with v. 1). In the latter part of the ch., vv. 15<sup>b</sup>—18<sup>a</sup> are shewn by their phraseology to belong to P. It is thus evident that the narrative of E (xx. 1—xxiii. 33, xxiv. 3—8, 12—15<sup>a</sup>, 18<sup>b</sup>) has been interrupted in this chapter by the introduction of vv. 1—2, 9—11 from J, and of vv. 15<sup>b</sup>—18<sup>a</sup> from P. For the sequel in E to v. 18<sup>b</sup>, see xxxi. 18<sup>b</sup>.

xxiv. 1—2 (J). Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, are summoned up into the mountain, to Jehovah. The sequel follows in vv. 9—11.

24 And he said unto Moses, Come up unto the LORD, thou, J and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of 2 Israel; and worship ye afar off: and Moses alone shall

1. And unto Moses he said] so the Heb. The emphasis on 'Moses' implies that Jehovah had before, in a part of the narrative now lost, been speaking to someone else. The last preceding passage from J was xix. 20—25, ending abruptly, in the middle of a sentence. It may be inferred that the intermediate lost parts of J contained the words 'said' (xix. 25) by Moses to the people, and after those some commands given by Jehovah to the people,—perhaps (cf. Di., C.-H. ii. 134, McNeile, xxxii, Bâ. xii, and the lucid statement in the Interpreter, Oct. 1908, p. 9 f.), xxxiv. 1—5, 10—28, in its original form (see p. 364 f.),—with which the instructions now given by Him to Moses are contrasted.

unto Jehovah] Jehovah speaking of Himself in the third person, as ix. 2, xix. 11, 21, 22, 24.

worship ye afar off] in preparation, as it were, for the vision which they were to have afterwards, vv. 9—11.

2. they (emph.)] Aaron, his two sons, and the elders.

neither, &c.] Observe the gradation: the people generally are to remain at the foot of the mountain; Aaron, his two sons, and the elders come partly up the mountain; only Moses goes to the top (cf. xix. 21, xx. 21).

3—8 (E). The sequel to xxiii. 33. Moses communicates to the people the words which Jehovah has spoken; and upon their expressing their assent to them, solemnly concludes a covenant, on the basis of them, between Jehovah and the nation.

3. the words...and the judgements] i.e. (see on xxi. 1) both the positive commands, and the 'judgements,' or decisions prescribing what is to be done in particular cases, contained in xx. 22—xxiii. 33. The Decalogue, which the people had heard themselves, cannot be included in the terms used. The fact, however, that only the 'words' are referred to in clause<sup>b</sup> suggests that 'and the judgements' in cl.<sup>a</sup> may be an addition of the redactor who placed the 'judgements' of xxi. 2—xxii. 17 in their present position (cf. on v. 12).

4. wrote] that they might be preserved in a tangible form, and form the basis of a permanent covenant (v. 7).

E rose up early in the morning, and builded an altar under the mount, and twelve pillars, according to the twelve tribes of Israel. And he sent young men of the children of Israel, 5 which offered burnt offerings, and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen unto the LORD. And Moses took half of the blood, 6 and put it in basons; and half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar. And he took the book of the covenant, and read 7 in the audience of the people: and they said, All that the LORD hath spoken will we do, and be obedient. And 8 pillars] or standing-stones (see on xxiii. 24); partly, as the usual adjunct of an altar, partly, perhaps, that they might be witnesses of the ratification of the covenant (cf. Gen. xxxi. 45; also Jos. xxiv. 27).

5. the young men, &c.] upon whom (cf. Jud. xvii. 5), as the strongest and most active members of the community (Ew., Di.), devolved in these times the duty of killing and cleaning the animal, and arranging its parts upon the altar, &c. Onk. the firstborn.

6. Half of the blood was thrown against the altar; the other half (v. 8) was thrown over the people. Covenants were ratified in different ways: sometimes, for instance, the contracting parties were held to be bound by eating salt together (cf. Lev. ii. 13, Nu. xviii. 19, 2 Ch. xiii. 5), sometimes by partaking together in a sacrificial meal (Gen. xxxi. 54; cf. v. 11 here), in Gen. xv., Jer. xxxiv. 18 f., by passing between the divided pieces of slaughtered animals; and especially by the use, still prevalent in many parts of the world, of blood, as by each of the parties tasting the other's blood, or smearing himself with it, or letting it be mingled with his own, &c., or by both jointly dipping their hands in the blood of a slaughtered animal, &c. (cf. Hdt. iii. 8, iv. 70, Aesch. Theb. 43—48, Xen. Anab. ii. 2. 9: see very fully Trumbull, The Blood Covenant, 1885, pp. 4—65). So analogously here: Jehovah and the people are symbolically joined together by the sacrificial blood being thrown over the altar (representing Jehovah) and the people; and thus the 'covenant,' or agreement, between them is ratified (cf. Ps. l. 5).

If, however, the view expressed on vv. 3, 12 is correct, the 'book' will not have included the 'judgements,' xxi. 2—xxii. 17.

Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and E said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you <sup>1</sup>concerning all these words. | Then J went up Moses, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy <sup>10</sup>of the elders of Israel: and they saw the God of Israel; and there was under his feet as it were <sup>2</sup>a paved work of sapphire stone, and as it were the very heaven for clearness. <sup>11</sup>And upon the nobles of the children of Israel he laid not his hand: and they beheld God, and did eat and drink.

Luke xxii. 20, 1 Cor. xi. 25). concerning] upon (the basis of). The marg. paraphrases correctly.

9—11 (J). The sequel to vv. 1—2. Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy elders, as directed in v. 1, go up into the mount, and have a vision of Jehovah's glory.

10. and they saw, &c.] LXX., to avoid its being supposed that God could be 'seen' (cf. on xxiii. 15<sup>b</sup>; xxxiii. 20), paraphrase by 'and they saw the place where the God of Israel stood.'

and there was under his feet, &c.] The idea appears to be that they saw the Divine glory, not directly, but as they looked up at it from below, through what seemed to be a transparent blue sapphire pavement, comparable only to the sky in its clearness. Cf. the sapphire throne upon which, in his vision, Ezekiel sees the Divine form (Ez. i. 26). On what is meant by 'sapphire,' see on xxviii. 18.

paved work] lit. brick- or tile-work. Bright (RVm.) is a meaning unsupported by usage.

11. It was the general belief (see on xxxiii. 20) that God could not be 'seen,'—except in a purely spiritual sense,—with impunity; but upon this occasion Jehovah put not forth his hand (ix. 15, xxii. 8) upon Moses or his companions, to harm them.

nobles] Heb. ʿāzīlīm, only here in this sense. The etym. is uncertain. In Is. xli. 9 ʿāzīl means angle, corner: so perhaps, like pinnāh (see Jud. xx. 2 RVm.), the word denotes men of position and responsibility, as the corners, or supports, of the community.

beheld] Heb. hāzāh, in prose only xviii. 21 besides, but often used of a prophet seeing a vision (e.g. Nu. xxiv. 4), and the verb of which one of the words rendered 'seer' (Am. vii. 12 al.) is the partic. LXX. (cf. on v. 10) paraphrase by 'appeared in the place of God.'

12—15<sup>a</sup> (E). The sequel to vv. 3—8. Moses ascends the mount to receive the two tables of stone.

E And the LORD said unto Moses, Come up to me into the <sup>12</sup> mount, and be there: and I will give thee the tables of R<sup>D</sup> E stone, | and the law and the commandment, | which I have written, that thou mayest teach them. And Moses rose up, <sup>13</sup> and Joshua his minister: and Moses went up into the mount of God. And he said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us, <sup>14</sup>

12. the tables of stone] on which the Decalogue was inscribed. They are mentioned frequently in the sequel; and, remarkably enough, by different expressions, corresponding to the three principal Pent. sources: 'in xxxi. 18<sup>b</sup> E, as here, says "tables of stone"; P says "the two tables of the testimony" (xxxii. 18<sup>a</sup>, xxxii. 15<sup>a</sup>, xxxiv. 29); J and Dt. say "the two tables of stones" (xxxiv. 1, 4, Dt. iv. 13, v. 22 [Heb. 19], ix. 9—11, x. 1, 3) (Di.): Dt. says also (cf. p. 175) 'the tables of the covenant' (ix. 9, 11, 15).

and the direction (tôrāh) and the commandment, which I have written, to direct them (i.e. the people)] What these words refer to is a difficult and uncertain question. It cannot be the Decalogue; for not only must it be something different from the 'tables of stone,' but the Decalogue would not be spoken of as tôrāh. It cannot be the 'Book of the Covenant'; for this has been already both 'given' to Moses and 'written' (vv. 4, 7). As nothing is spoken of as 'written' by Jehovah, except the Decalogue, it is an extremely probable conjecture that the words 'which I have written' are out of place, and ought to follow 'the tables of stone': 'the direction and the commandment' may then refer to something future ('will give'): but it still remains a question what that is. It cannot be the directions about the Tabernacle contained in chs. xxv.—xxxi. (even granting that these were by the same hand as xxiv. 12—15<sup>a</sup>); for these would not be called tôrāh. Most probably (Bä. XLIX) the reference is to the 'commandment, and the statutes, and the judgements,' which Moses is said in Dt. v. 31 to have received at Horeb, but in vi. 1 to have first formally promulgated to the people on the eve of their entering Canaan. And the 'commandment,' &c., thus referred to, seem to have been in fact the 'judgements' of xxi. 2—xxii. 17. These 'judgements' (cf. on v. 3), it is probable, were originally recorded by E at the point of the narrative where Dt. now stands. The Deuteronomist puts his version of the 'judgements,' as of other older laws, into Moses' mouth not at Horeb but in the steppes of Moab: when, then, Dt. was combined with JE, the compiler could not well put the two versions side by side, so he put back the earlier version (xxi. 2—xxii. 17) into conjunction with the rest of E's laws at Horeb (cf. Kuenen, Hex. § xiii. 32; Bä. L.c.; McNeile, p. xxvii f.).

13. Joshua] first mentioned in xvii. 9.

his minister] Joshua's standing title: xxxiii. 11, Nu. xi. 28, Jos. i. 1. and Moses went up, &c.] leaving Joshua on the lower part of the mountain; cf. xxxii. 17, with the note.

the mount of God] See on iii. 1.

until we come again unto you: and, behold, Aaron and Hur are with you: whosoever hath a cause, let him come near unto them. And Moses went up into the mount, | and the cloud covered the mount. And the glory of the LORD abode upon mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days: and the seventh day he called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud. And the appearance of the glory of the LORD was like devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Israel. And Moses entered into the midst of the cloud, and went up into the mount: | and Moses was in the mount forty days and forty nights. E

14. And unto the elders he said] viz. before going up into the mount (v. 13). The elders are not the seventy mentioned by J in vv. 1, 9 (among whom Hur is not named, and who are not likely to have had forensic differences while waiting for Moses' return), but the elders in the camp, who would naturally take the lead during Moses' absence, and who are bidden here not to move (with the camp) from where they are, till he and Joshua return. Perhaps (Nöld., We., Bâ.) elders is even a harmonistic correction for people, suggested by vv. 1, 9.

whosoever hath a cause, &c.] if during Moses' absence any differences arise among the people, requiring for their settlement the intervention of a judge, they must be referred to Aaron and Hur (xvii. 10, 12), as his representatives. The judicial organization established in ch. xviii. does not seem to be presupposed; the verse thus supports the conclusion (p. 162) that ch. xviii. once stood after ch. xxiv.

a cause] lit. words: see on xxiii. 8; cf. (for the Heb.) Is. 1. 8.

the cloud] the one which in P regularly enshrouds the 'glory' of Jehovah (cf. on the tabernacle, xl. 34 f.; and the note on xiii. 21, 22, at the end). Here it covers the mount, immediately upon Israel's arrival at Sinai: contrast xix. 16.

16. the glory of Jehovah] see on xvi. 10.

abode] or dwelt: a word often used in P of Jehovah, the cloud, or the glory. Cf. xxv. 8, xxix. 45, 46, xl. 35; Nu. v. 3, ix. 17, 18, 22, x. 12, xxxv. 34; and on xxv. 8, 9.

17. The brilliance of the 'glory' broke through the cloud in which it was enveloped, and became visible to the people.

devouring fire] i.e. blazing fire. Cf. Is. xxix. 6, xxx. 27, 30.

18<sup>b</sup> (E). The sequel (with the original connecting words omitted) follows in xxxi. 18<sup>b</sup>. That Moses, according to E, was some time in the mount, is evident from the terms of xxxii. 1: the 'forty days' are alluded to in Dt. ix. 9, 11.

CHAPTERS XXV.—XXXI.

We come now to the long section of P, which contains the instructions stated to have been given by God to Moses on the mount for the construction and equipment of a sanctuary, and for the vestments and consecration of a priesthood. These instructions fall into two parts: (1) chs. xxv.—xxix.; (2) chs. xxx.—xxxI. The instructions contained in chs. xxv.—xxix. relate to (a) the vessels of the sanctuary, viz. the ark, the table of Presence-bread, and the candlestick,—named naturally first, as being of primary interest and importance (ch. xxv.); (b) the curtains, and wooden framework supporting them, to contain and guard the sacred vessels (ch. xxvi.); (c) the court round the Sanctuary, and the Altar of Burnt offering, standing in it (ch. xxvii.); (d) the vestments (ch. xxviii.) and the consecration (ch. xxix.) of the priests who are to serve in the sanctuary (xxix. 1—37); (e) the daily burnt-offering, the maintenance of which is a primary duty of the priesthood (xxix. 38—42), followed by what is apparently the final close of the whole body of instructions, xxix. 43—46, in which Jehovah promises that He will bless the sanctuary thus established with His presence. Chs. xxx.—xxxI. relate to (a) the Altar of Incense (xxx. 1—10); (b) the monetary contributions for the maintenance of public service (xxx. 11—16); (c) the Bronze Laver (xxx. 17—21); (d) the holy Anointing Oil (xxx. 22—33); (e) the Incense (xxx. 34—38); (f) the nomination of two skilled artificers, Bezalel and Oholiab, to make the sanctuary and its appurtenances (xxxI. 1—11); (g) the observance of the Sabbath (xxxI. 12—17).

The principal names of what we—adopting a rendering based upon Jerome's tabernaculum (i.e. 'tent')—commonly call the 'Tabernacle' are the Tent of Meeting (xxvii. 21), the Tent where God 'met' and talked with Moses; the Tent; the Tent of the Witness or Testimony, i.e. (see on xxv. 16) the Tent containing the Ark, in which were deposited the two tables of the Decalogue; the Dwelling (xxv. 9 al.), the Dwelling of Jehovah (Nu. xvi. 9 al.), or the Dwelling of the Testimony (Ex. xxxviii. 21 al.); and the Sanctuary (see on xxv. 8). The first two of these designations are found in both JE and P; the others are used exclusively by P. If the passages in which E and J speak of the 'Tent of Meeting' or the 'Tent'—viz. Ex. xxxiii. 7—11, Nu. xi. 16 f., 24, 26, xii. 5, 10, Dt. xxxi. 14 f.—are read carefully, it will be found that the representation which they give of it differs in several respects very materially from that given by P. In E the 'Tent of Meeting' is outside the camp (xxxiii. 7, Nu. xi. 26 f., cf. v. 30, xii. 4: on Nu. xiv. 44, see p. 428); it is guarded by one attendant, Joshua, who never leaves it (xxxiii. 11; cf. Nu. xi. 28); though it had probably some decoration (cf. on xxxiii. 6), it was obviously a much simpler, less ornate structure than that described by P; Moses used to go out to it, and enter into it to speak with God, and the pillar of cloud then descended, and stood at the entrance of the Tent, and Jehovah spoke to him from it (xxxiii. 8—11; cf. Nu. xi. 17, 25, xii. 5, 10, Dt. xxxi. 14 f.); on the march also, the ark precedes the host, to seek out a camping-place for it (Nu. x. 33). In P, on the contrary, the Tent of Meeting is in the centre of the camp, with the Levites around it on the west, south, and north, and Aaron and his sons on the east, and the other tribes, three on each side, outside them (Nu. ii., iii. 23, 29, 35, 38); it is served by Aaron and his sons, and a large body of Levites (in Nu. iv. 48, 8580); it is a highly decorated, costly structure (chs. xxv.—xxvii.); the cloud (which is not in P spoken of as a 'pillar'), instead of descending from time to time, as occasion requires, to the entrance of the Tent, that Jehovah may speak with Moses, rests upon the Tent always, when the camp is stationary (xl. 35—38, Nu. ix. 15—23), and Jehovah, instead of speaking to Moses at its 'entrance,' speaks to him from between the cherubim above the ark (xxv. 22, Nu. vii. 89); on the march, also, the ark, borne, covered up, by the Kohathites, with the other sacred vessels, is in the centre of the long procession of Israelites, six tribes preceding it, and six following it (Nu. ii. 17, iii. 31, iv. 5 ff., x. 21). Lastly in P the Tent of Meeting is the centre of an elaborate sacrificial and ceremonial system (Lev. i.—xxvii., &c.), such as is nowhere mentioned in connexion with the Tent of Meeting of J and E, and, in view of the subsequent history (Judg., Sam.), not historically probable,—at least on anything like the same scale. Unquestionably (cf. p. 359) both representations have common features: in both, in particular, the Tent is the place where God speaks with Moses, and communicates to him His will; nor need it be doubted, though it is not stated in so many words, that the Tent of JE, like that of P, sheltered the ark (though a much simpler ark than P's): but there are also wide differences between them. Here it will be sufficient to have noted these differences: in explanation of them see p. 430 ff.

The Tabernacle, with its various appurtenances, is described as having been made by Bezal'el and Oholiab, and other skilled workmen acting under them, in accordance with detailed specifications given by God to Moses (chs. xxv.—xxxi.), and a 'pattern,' or model, shewn to Moses in the mount (xxv. 9, 40, xxvi. 30, xxvii. 8). It is designed as a 'dwelling' (xxv. 8, 9) in which God may permanently dwell among His people (xxix. 45); and after it has been erected and consecrated, He gives manifest tokens of His presence in it, He fills it with His glory (xl. 34—39), He habitually speaks in it with Moses (xxv. 22), and He gives him many of His instructions from it (Lev. i. 1, Nu. i. 1). It is also the centre at which all sacrifices are to be offered (Lev. i. 3, 5, iii. 2, &c.).

In its general principle the 'Tabernacle' of P is a portable Temple (so Jos. Ant. iii. 6. 1 μεταφερόμενος καὶ συμπεριστῶν ναός). On the one hand, it is a tent, and is repeatedly so called, formed of tent-hangings, or curtains, held in their places by cords and tent-pins, of oblong shape, and with a flat upper surface (without a ridge pole), like the tents of Bedawin at the present day (see ill. in Smith, DB. iii. 1467; Judges in SBOT. (Engl. vol.), p. 63; Doughty, i. 226; or (best) Benzinger, Bilderatlas zur Bibelkunde, 1905, No. 287, or Arch.<sup>2</sup> 89), and divided into two compartments, in this respect also (Kn. on xxvi. 37) resembling the tents of Bedawin, in which a separate compartment is formed by a curtain for the women (Burckh. Bed. i. 39 f.; EB. iv. 4972); on the other hand, the Tabernacle has also the form of a temple of a type very common in antiquity, and in fact represented by Solomon's temple, consisting of an oblong rectangular structure, with pillars on its front, standing in a large court, and divided into two parts, the hall (in Greek πρόβαος, 'fore-shrine'; in Solomon's temple, the hékâl, 1 K. vi. 3, 5, 17, &c. [in EVV. rendered badly 'temple,' suggesting the whole building]), corresponding to the Holy Place, and the shrine (vaás Hdt. i. 183, or ἄδυρον, the 'part not to be entered,' Lat. cella; Heb. ḏ'bir, the 'hindmost part,' 1 K. vi. 5, 16, &c. [in EVV., through a false etymology, the 'oracle']), corresponding to the Most Holy Place,—both without windows, and the latter containing, if there was one, the image of the deity to whom the temple was sacred, and usually entered only by the priests. The 'Tabernacle' was however primarily and essentially a tent; it was the tapestry curtains alone which formed the real 'Dwelling' of Jehovah (see on xxvi. 1); the 'boards,' or framework, were merely intended to give the tent greater stability and security than ordinary tent-poles would do. An altar, a priesthood, with regulations determining who might hold it, and prescribing the sacrifices and other religious offices to be maintained, often also an ark containing some sacred object, a table on which food was laid out for the deity, lavers for ceremonial ablutions, &c., were likewise, in one form or other, the necessary elements in an ancient Temple establishment. The Tabernacle of P was an elaborate and ornate structure. Metals more or less precious, and woven materials more or less ornamented, and more or less richly coloured, were employed; the general distinction observed being that the nearer an object was to the Presence of Jehovah in the Holy of holies, the costlier and more beautiful it was, the commoner materials, such as bronze and ordinary woven stuff, being reserved for the objects further off (cf. on xxv. 3). In the same way, the high priest had a specially gorgeous and splendid attire, while that of the ordinary priests was much plainer.

In their dimensions, both the 'Tabernacle' and the court display great symmetry. The ruling numbers are 3, 4, 7, 10, their parts ( $1\frac{1}{2}$ , 2,  $2\frac{1}{2}$ , 5), and their multiples (6, 9, 12, 20, 28, 30, 42, 48, 50, 60, 100). If, without indulging in fantastic extravagances, we may discern a symbolism in numbers, we may perhaps see in three a symbol of the divine, in four—suggesting the four quarters of the earth—the totality of what is human, in seven and twelve numbers which, deriving their original significance from astronomy, came to be regarded as symbols of completeness, and in ten and its multiples numbers specially suggestive of symmetry and perfection. In the prominence given to the numbers mentioned, we may perhaps recognize an effort 'to give concrete expression—in a manner, it is true, which our Western thought finds it difficult to appreciate—to the sacred harmonies and perfection of the character of the Deity for whose "dwelling" the sanctuary is destined' (Kennedy, DB. iv. 667<sup>b</sup>). The Holy place is 20 cubits (30 ft.) long, by 10 cubits (15 ft.) high and broad, and the Holy of holies a perfect cube of 10 cubits (exactly half the dimensions of the Holy of holies in Solomon's temple); and these ratios, a perfect cube, or two cubes placed side by side, are, we are told (Enc. Brit.<sup>9</sup> ARCHITECTURE, cited ibid.), still considered the most pleasing in architectural art; while the perfect cube, forming the Holy of holies, may be intended to represent symbolically the 'perfection of Jehovah's character and dwelling place, the harmony and equipoise of all His attributes.' Comp. how, in Rev. xxi. 16, the ideal perfection of the New Jerusalem is expressed in the fact that 'the length and the breadth and the height of it are equal.'

The 'Tabernacle,' moreover, symbolizes directly, and gives visible expression to, various theological and religious truths. It must, however, be clearly understood that in the text itself no symbolism or significance whatever is attributed either to the Tabernacle or to any of its appurtenances; so that, if we go beyond what is suggested directly by the names or uses of the Tabernacle, or its parts, we are in danger of falling into what is arbitrary or baseless. Bearing this in our minds, we may however observe that by one of its principal names, the mishkân, or 'Dwelling' (see on xxv. 9), the Tabernacle expresses in a sensible form the truth of God's presence in the midst of His people; by another of its principal names, the 'Tent of Meeting' (xxvii. 21), it gives expression to the truth that God is not only present with His people, but that He reveals Himself to them; by its third name, the 'Tent (or Dwelling) of the Witness or Testimony,' it reminded the Israelite that in the Decalogue, inscribed on the Tables in the Ark, it contained an ever-present witness to the claims of God and the duty of man. These three, especially the first, are the fundamental ideas symbolized by the Tabernacle. But there are also other ideas. Thus the gold, and costly, beautifully worked fabrics, which decorated, especially, the Holy of holies, and were also conspicuous in the gorgeous vestments of the high priest, give expression to the thought that the Dwelling, and the most responsible ministers of God, should be decked, or apparelled, with becoming splendour and dignity. The Bronze Altar, standing midway between the entrance to the court and the Tent, emphasized the importance of sacrifice in general under the old Dispensation (see further on Lev. i.—v.), and taught the truth that 'apart from shedding of blood there is no remission' (Heb. ix. 22); while the burnt-offering, offered daily upon it on behalf of the community, gave expression to the spirit of worship by which Israel as a whole should ever be actuated, and symbolized its constant sense of the devotion due from it to its divine Lord. The Laver, standing probably directly in front of the entrance to the Tent, in which the priests washed their hands and feet before their ministrations, secured the ceremonial purity, which was an emblem of the moral purity, that should belong to those who are the ministers of God. The Presence-bread—whatever it may have denoted originally (see on xxv. 30)—is an expression of thankfulness, and an acknowledgement that man's daily bread,—like all other 'blessings of this life,—is a divine gift. The symbolism of the Candlestick is less obvious: none is suggested by the text; and any that may be proposed is in danger of being far-fetched, or of being read into the description as an after-thought: but—whether this was its original intention, or not—the candlestick may perhaps be most easily regarded as symbolizing the people of Israel, shining with the light of divine truth (cf. the figure of 'light' in Is. li. 4, Mt. v. 16 f., Phil. ii. 15; and Rev. i. 12, 20, where the seven golden candlesticks seen in vision are said to denote the seven churches). The interpretation of Zech. iv. 1—4, 11—13 is too uncertain to be used in explaining the symbolism of the candlestick in the Tabernacle (see the Century Bible, p. 203 f.): moreover, the candlestick there is differently constructed, and the lamps are differently supplied with oil. The Altar of Incense symbolized a higher form of devotion than the altar of burnt-offering: the smoke of incense was finer and choicer than that of animal victims; and it symbolized the devotion not of action, but of aspiration and prayer (cf. Ps. cxli. 2, Rev. v. 8, viii. 3 f.): the blood of the sin-offering was also applied to the altar of incense, when it was offered for the high priest or the community (Lev. iv. 7, 18: see also Ex. xxx. 10). The ark itself, sacred though it is, does not in P enshrine or symbolize the divine Presence: it contains the Decalogue, which is the 'witness' to God's claims and man's duty: but the Presence is symbolized by the golden cherubim upon it—which are regularly the emblems of the nearness of deity (see on xxv. 18—20)—'from between' which, and above the ark, Jehovah speaks with Moses. And the cherubim rest upon the golden mercy-seat, or 'propitiatory,' symbolizing, with special emphasis and clearness, the mercifulness of God (Ex. xxxiv. 6 f.), and His readiness to forgive sin which has been repented of, and duly purged away (p. 332) by a propitiatory rite. The purification of the altar of burnt-offering (see on xxix. 36 f.), and the anointing of the Tabernacle and its vessels after their completion (xxx. 26—29), signified that objects designed for sacred purposes must be properly consecrated before being actually used in the service of Jehovah. And the ascending degrees of sanctity, attaching to the court, the Holy place, and the Holy of holies, marked both by the materials of which they were constructed, and by the fact that while the people generally might enter the court, only the priests could enter the Holy place, and only the high priest, and he only once a year, and that 'not without blood,' the Holy of holies, safeguarded, in an impressive and significant manner, the holiness of God; and shewed that, though the way to Him was open, it was open only under restrictions (Heb. ix. 8), and especially that the Presence of God Himself could be approached only by those who were, in a special sense, 'holy' (cf. Lev. xix. 2), and who carried with them the blood of atonement. According to the historical view of the Old Testament, these truths and principles do not date from Moses' time, but were acquired gradually as the result of divinely guided meditation and reflection upon sacred things: but the question of the actual date at which they were acquired does not affect their reality and value.

The symbolical meanings attached to the Tabernacle and its vessels, the vestments of the high priest, &c., by Josephus and Philo (see Westcott, Hebrews, p. 238 f.), are cleverly drawn out, and testify to the reverence and regard with which the Tabernacle was viewed, but are too remote to possess probability.

In the NT. the Tabernacle is explained symbolically from a different point of view. In the Epistle to the Hebrews it is represented as constructed so as to reproduce a heavenly archetype—not a mere architect's model, such as Ex. xxv. 9 would naturally suggest, but—a real and eternal heavenly original, the genuine 'tent,' pitched by God, not man (viii. 2),—'a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, and not of this creation,' i.e. not of this visible order of things (ix. 11),—whether by this is meant heaven itself, or an ideal celestial temple in heaven,—of which the earthly tabernacle is merely a secondary representation, a copy (ὑπόδειγμα, viii. 5, ix. 23: cf. Wisd. ix. 8) and shadow (viii. 5), or counterpart (ἀντίτυπα τῶν ἀληθινῶν). And into this heavenly Temple, the archetype of the earthly tabernacle, Christ, the ideal and perfect High Priest, entered, like the Jewish high priest, only not with the blood of animal victims, but with His own blood, to appear before God, having obtained eternal redemption for us (ix. 12, 23—26; cf. on Lev. xvi.). Thus while Josephus and Philo regarded the Tabernacle as a microcosm, or 'epitome of that which is presented on a larger scale in the world of finite being' (Westcott, p. 240), the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews regards it as the temporal and material counterpart of an eternal and invisible temple in heaven. The Tabernacle further corresponds to Christ's humanity. God 'dwelt' in the midst of His people in the 'Dwelling' (xxv. 9) of a tent; and the Word, when He took flesh, 'dwelt as in a tent or tabernacle' (ἐσκήνωσεν) among us, and manifested His 'glory' to the world (John i. 14). And entrance into the presence of God, which was all but closed under the older Dispensation, is now opened, by the blood of Jesus, 'through a new and living way, which he hath dedicated for us, through the veil, that is to say, through his flesh' (Heb. x. 20); on which A. B. Davidson (ad loc.) remarks, 'This beautiful allegorizing of the veil cannot of course be made part of a consistent and complete typology. It is not meant for this. But as the veil stood locally before the holiest in the Mosaic Tabernacle, the way into which lay through it, so Christ's life in the flesh stood between Him and His entrance before God, and His flesh had to be rent ere He could enter.'

There is no question that the Tent of Meeting, as described by J and E, is historical; but there are strong reasons for holding that the Tent of Meeting, as described by P, represents an ideal, and had no historical reality. See on this question p. 426 ff.

The execution of the directions given in chs. xxv.—xxxi. is narrated in chs. xxxv.—xl., and (xxix. 1—37) Lev. viii.,—mostly in the same words, with merely the future tenses changed into pasts, but with a few cases of abridgment, omission, and transposition. In the notes on xxv.—xxxi. the passages in xxxv.—xl. which correspond are noted at the beginning of each paragraph by 'cf.'

The general structure and character of the Tabernacle are perfectly clear: but great difficulty and uncertainty attach to some of the details. It is impossible within the limits of the present commentary to

xxv. 1—9. Contribution of materials for a sanctuary (cf. xxxv. 20—29). All liberally-minded Israelites are invited to contribute the materials necessary for the construction and equipment of a sanctuary—its fabric, its sacred vessels, and (ch. xxviii.) the vestments of its priests. The materials are to include metals, textile fabrics, skins, wood, oil, spices, and precious stones. The sanctuary, when completed, is to form an abode in which Jehovah may dwell in the midst of His people (v. 8).

2. offering] better, contribution. The Heb. tērūmah (from hērim, to lift or take off) denotes properly what is 'taken off' from a larger mass, and so separated from it for sacred purposes (LXX. often ἀφαίρεμα, 'something taken off'; Targ. נלושׁרען, 'something separated'). RVm. heave-offering (also sometimes in the text, as Nu. xviii. 8, 11) is due to the mistaken idea that the term implies a rite of elevation: see against this, Oehler, Theol. of OT. § 133, or Di. on Lev. vii. 32. Tērūmah is used in particular (1) of gifts taken from the produce of the soil (as tithe, firstfruits, and firstlings), Dt. xii. 6, 11, 17, Nu. xv. 19—21, xviii. 11 (see vv. 12, 13), Neh. x. 37, 39; (2) of contributions of money, spoil, &c., offered for sacred purposes, as here, v. 3, xxx. 13—15, xxxv. 5, 21, 24, xxxvi. 3, 6, Nu. xxxi. 29, Ezr. viii. 25; and in Ezek. of the land reserved for the priests and Levites (Ez. xlv. 1, 6, 7, &c.—here rendered 'oblation'); (3) in connexion with sacrifices, only of portions 'taken off' the rest, and forming the priest's due, especially of the so-called 'heave'-thigh (comp. on xxix. 27). See more fully the writer's note on Dt. xii. 6, or DB. OFFER, OFFERING, 5. The term is a distinctive one, and differs entirely in both meaning and application from minhāh and korban, both of which are also in RV. often rendered 'offering,' 'oblation': see DB. l.c. The reader who wishes to distinguish accurately the uses of these three terms is advised to ascertain, with the help of the Englishman's Heb. Concordance to the OT., their occurrences, and to place a mark against each on the margin—'Π (t.), 'D (m.), or 'P (k.), as the case may be.

whose heart maketh him willing] or liberal, ready: cf. xxxv. 5, 21, 22, 29; also the cognate verb, in the reflexive conj., [Jud. v. 2, 9 (of volunteering in a campaign), and 16 times in Chr., Ezr., Neh., esp. in the Chronicler's representations of the offerings made willingly for both the first and the second Temples (1 Ch. xxix. 5, 6, 9, 14, 17; Ezr. i. 6, ii. 68, iii. 5).

3. The metals. Gold, silver, and copper are specified, the gold being prescribed, in accordance with a significant gradation, for those vessels and parts of the sanctuary which were nearest to Jehovah, the silver and the copper for those which were further off and less important. Of gold there was a superior kind, called pure (lit. clean) gold, i.e. gold more carefully freed from silver or alloy than ordinary gold. 'Pure gold' is thus prescribed for the gilding of the ark, and for the mercy-seat (vv. 11, 17); for the gilding of the table of Presence-bread, and for its vessels (vv. 24, 29); for the candlestick and its utensils (vv. 31, 36ff.); for the gilding of the altar of incense (xxx. 3); and for the chains for the sacred pouch, and the plate on the mitre, in the high priest's dress (xxviii. 14, 22, 36). Ordinary gold is prescribed for the rim and rings, and for the gilding of the staves, of the Ark, table of Presence-bread, and incense altar (xxv. 11, 12, 13; 24, 25, 26, 28; xxx. 3, 4, 5); for the cherubim on the mercy-seat (xxv. 18); for the clasps of the curtains (xxvi. 6); for the gilding of the frames and of the bars outside, and of the pillars for the veil and for the screen (xxvi. 29, 32, 37); for the rings outside the frames for the bars (xxvi. 29); for the hooks attaching the veil and the screen to their pillars (xxvi. 32, 37); and for the gold thread, rosettes, rings for the sacred pouch, and bells, in the high priest's dress (xxviii. 6, 8, 15; 11, 13, 20; 23, 26, 27; 33). Silver is prescribed for the sockets of the frames, and of the pillars for the veil (xxvi. 19, 25, 32); and for the hooks and fillets of the pillars of the court (xxvii. 10, 11, 27); and copper for the altar of burnt-offering (xxvii. 2—4, 6); the sockets and pins of the court (xxvii. 10f., 17—19); and the laver (xxx. 18).

brass] bronze, or copper (Gen. iv. 22 RVm.), which, indeed, was the meaning of 'brass' in old English: in Holland's Pliny, for instance, mention is made of 'mines of brass' (cf. Dt. viii. 9). The alloy of copper and zinc which we call 'brass' was not known to the ancients. 'Bronze,' i.e. copper hardened by tin, was much used anciently for weapons and other implements, before iron came into general use.

4. Materials spun or woven.

blue] more exactly, purple-blue (LXX. δάκνωθος, δακνωθίως, 'dark-blue'), or violet (Est. i. 6 AV.), i.e. yarn or stun so coloured by means of a dye obtained from a shell-fish, found adhering to rocks in the Medit. Sea (cf. Ez. xxvii. 7), and said to be the Helix lanthina (Ges. Thes. 1503; DB. i. 457<sup>a</sup>). Both this and the next named stuff were highly prized in antiquity, on account of their costliness and brilliancy. Violet is mostly mentioned in connexion with the Tent of meeting: but see also Jer. x. 9, Ez. xxiii. 7, xxvii. 7, 24, Est. i. 6, viii. 15, Ecclus. vi. 30.

from a small gland in the throat of two other species of shell-fish, the Murex brandaris and Murex trunculus, found on the coasts of Phoenicia (cf. Verg. 'Tyriouque ardebat murice laena'). Robes of this colour were particularly distinctive of wealth and royalty: comp. Jud. viii. 26, Ez. xxiii. 6, Cant. iii. 10, 1 Macc. iv. 23, x. 20, Mk. xv. 17, Lk. xvi. 19; and the frequent mention of purpura, purpureus by Latin authors in connexion with royalty.

scarlet] lit. 'worm of shānī,' i.e. probably (comp. the Arab. sanā, to shine) 'of brilliancy' (cf. Pliny, H.N. xxxiii. 40 'cocci nitor'). The 'worm' is the cochineal insect, which resembles a berry, and is found attached to the leaves and twigs of the Syrian Holm-oak (whence its technical name of coccus ilicis): the colouring matter is obtained from the dried body of the female. (Our word 'crimson' comes from ķirmiz, the Arabic name of the same insect.) See further NHB. 319, EB. i. 956, DB. iv. 416<sup>b</sup>. For allusions to this colour (outside the following chapters), see Is. i. 18, Jer. iv. 30, 2 S. i. 24, Pr. xxxi. 21.

fine linen] Heb. shēsh, prob. of Egypt. origin (cf. Ez. xxvii. 7; and Copt. shens=byssus): linen was much worn in Egypt by men of rank; see Erman, Index, or DB. s.v.; and cf. Gen. xli. 42. LXX. βύσσος, βύσσωος, from būz, the later Heb. syn. of shēsh (found exclusively in Chr., Est., as 1 Ch. xv. 27). The marg. cotton is less probable: see EB. iii. 2800. There was a superior quality of fine linen, called 'fine twined linen' (xxvi. 1, 31, 36, xxvii. 9, 16, 18, xxviii. 6, 8, 15, xxxix. 28, 29): this was made from yarn of which each thread was composed of many delicate strands. The Egyptians excelled in work of this kind: Amāsis (B.C. 564—526) was said to have sent to Rhodes a corslet of which each thread consisted of 360 separate strands (Hdt. iii. 47, cited by Kn.; cf. Wilkinson-Birch, ii. 166 f.).

goats' hair] This was spun by women into yarn (xxxv. 26): the fabric woven from it formed the 'tent,' or first covering, over the curtains constituting the 'Dwelling' (xxvi. 7). See also 1 S. xix. 13.

5. Skins and wood.

rams' skins dyed red] These formed the second covering over the curtains (xxvi. 14).

sealskins] Heb. 'skins of tēhāshim,' a word of uncertain meaning. In Arab. tūhas or duhas means a dolphin, which makes it probable that the dugong (Malay duyong, a sea-cow) is meant, an animal in general appearance not unlike a dolphin, though with a larger and blunter nose (see ill. in Toy's Ezekiel, in SBOT., p. 124), species of which are common in the Red Sea; their thick and hard skins supply the Bedawin of the Sin. Peninsula with material for sandals (NHB. 44 f.; EB. i. 450 f.). An alternative view has been propounded lately, which may also be right, that tahash is a loan-word from the Egypt. tās, 'leather' (Bondi, Aegyptiaca, 1 ff., with a full discussion of different views). The third or outermost covering over the curtains forming the 'Dwelling' (xxvi. 14, &c.), wrappings for the sacred vessels on transport (Nu. iv. 6 ff.), and women's sandals (Ez. xvi. 10), are mentioned as made of tahash skins. AV. badgers, though some such animal is advocated in the Talm., lacks philological foundation, and has no probability. It is doubtful also whether either seals or porpoises (RV. and RVm.) are sufficiently common in either the Red Sea or the Medit. to be the animals intended.

acacia] Heb. shittim [for shintim], shewn to be acacia, from sant, the Arab. name of that tree. Several species of acacia are found in Palestine, the Sin. Peninsula, and the Arabian desert (EB. s.v. SHITTAH TREE): the Acacia seyāl flourishes in dry wādys, and grows freely in the Peninsula, and along the W. shore of the Dead Sea: it is a gnarled and thorny tree, some 15—25 feet in height: and its wood is hard, close-grained, and durable (cf. the rend. of LXX. ξύλα ἄσπερα). According to Doughty (Arab. Des. ii. 678, cited in EB. l.c.), another species is used for shipbuilding on the Arabian coast of the Red Sea. The wood of the tree is mentioned only in the Pent., in connexion with the Tent of Meeting: the tree itself is mentioned also in Is. xli. 19. See further NHB. 390 ff., DB. SHITTAH TREE, the illustration above, p. 181; and the note on Joel iii. 18 in the Camb. Bible.

7. Precious stones.

onyx] Heb. shōham, a precious stone highly valued in OT. times (cf. Gen. ii. 12, Ez. xxviii. 13, Job xxviii. 16, 1 Ch. xxix. 2). There is, however, some uncertainty what the shōham was, though it is generally supposed to be either the onyx (LXX. in Job; Vulg.) or (RVm.) the beryl (LXX. in Ex.; Targ., Pesh.): see further on xxviii. 20. For the use made of these stones, see xxviii. 17, 20.

stones to be set] Cf. 1 Ch. xxix. 2; and see on Ex. xxviii. 17, 20.

for the ephod, and for the pouch] xxviii. 6 ff., 13 ff.

8. sanctuary] about 12 times in H and P (as Lev. xix. 30; xii. 4); often in Ezek., of the Temple (as v. 11, viii. 6, xlv. 1, 5, &c.), and occasionally besides (as ch. xv. 17, Jer. xvii. 12, Ps. lxxiii. 17).

that I may dwell in their midst] Cf. xxix. 45 f., Nu. v. 3: also Ez. xliii. 7, 9, Zech. ii. 10, 11, viii. 3; and, in the ideal consummation, Rev. xxi. 3. This is the essential aim and object of the Tent of Meeting as conceived by P. Cf. the next note but one. The verb is the one from which Shekinah, 'that which dwelleth,' the post-Bibl. term for the Presence or Manifestation of Jehovah, is derived: see the Jewish Encycl. or DB. s.v. It is very common in the Targums: thus Dt. i. 42 is in Onk. 'for my Shekinah is not among you.' For the idea of Jehovah's being, or 'dwelling,' 'in the midst' (בְּתוֹכָם) of His people see also Lev. xv. 31, xvi. 16, xxii. 32, xxvi. 11, 12, Nu. xvi. 3, xviii. 20, xxxv. 34 (all P or H).

9. The sanctuary is to be constructed in accordance with a model shewn to Moses in the mount (v. 40, xxvi. 30, xxvii. 8; Nu. viii. 4). Gudea, king of Lagash (c. 3000 B.C.), was shewn in a dream, by the goddess Nina, the complete model of a temple which he was to erect in her honour: gold, precious stones, cedar, and other materials for the purpose were collected by him from the most distant countries (Rogers, Hist. of Bab. and Ass. i. 369 f.; Maspero, i. 610 f.).

the tabernacle] the Dwelling, Heb. mishkān, cognate with the verb rendered 'dwell' in v. 8. In AV. the word 'tabernacle' (derived from the tabernaculum of the Vulg., and therefore meaning properly simply a 'tent'), through a confusion originating with the LXX. (who in the Pent. rendered both words by σκηνή), was used indiscriminately for 'ohel' ('tent') and mishkān ('dwelling'): in RV. the distinction has been preserved by rendering 'ohel' 'tent,' and mishkān 'tabernacle.' This is undoubtedly a great improvement: the retention of 'tabernacle' for mishkān has, however, the disadvantage of obliterating the connexion between mishkān, 'dwelling,' and the cognate verb shākan, to 'dwell.' Dwelling would have been the better rend. for mishkān throughout.

As regards mishkān, it is to be observed that it is used in P in both a narrower and a wider sense. In its narrower, and stricter sense, it is used of the tapestry curtains with their supporting frames, which constituted the 'Dwelling' par excellence (see xxvi. 1, 6, 15; and cf. xl. 2, 6, Nu. iii. 25); but in its wider sense it is extended so as to be a general term for the entire fabric of the sanctuary, including the 'tent' and other coverings (xxvi. 7, 14) over the 'Dwelling' (so here, Nu. xvi. 9, xvii. 13, and elsewhere). Mishkān, in one or other of these technical senses, occurs about 100 times in P; and is used similarly a few times in Chr. (as 1 Ch. vi. 32, xvi. 39): otherwise the word is rare, and mostly poetical. The commonest expression (about 130 times) for the sanctuary as a whole is, however, the 'Tent of Meeting' (see on xxvii. 21).

furniture] The wide term explained on xxii. 7, and including here all articles, vessels, utensils, &c., belonging to the sanctuary.

10—22 (cf. xxxvii. 1—9). The Ark, the most sacred and important of the articles contained in the sanctuary. The ark, as described by P, is an oblong chest of acacia wood, overlaid within and without with gold, about 3 ft. 9 in. long, 2 ft. 3 in. wide, and 2 ft. 3 in. deep; each of its sides is finished with a rim, or moulding, of solid gold; and for its transport it is provided with two poles of acacia wood, overlaid with gold, which pass through four rings, attached to its four feet. Distinct from the ark, but resting upon it, is the 'mercy-seat,' or 'propitiatory,' a slab of solid gold, of the same length and breadth as the ark (its thickness is not stated): and near the ends of this, soldered securely into it, and facing each other, with their wings spread out over the mercy-seat, stand two small emblematic figures, the cherubim, made of beaten gold. Inside the ark are the two tables upon which the Decalogue is inscribed. From between the cherubim above the mercy-seat Jehovah 'meets' Moses, and speaks with him (xxv. 22, xxx. 6, Nu. vii. 89).

10. an ark] The Heb. word ('ārōn: not the word used of Moses 'ark,' ii. 3) signifies a box or chest: it is used in Gen. 1. 26 of a mummy-case, and in 2 K. xii. 9, 10, of a coffer for the collection of money. The cubit may be reckoned approximately at 18 inches<sup>1</sup>.

11. pure gold] See on v. 3.

a crown] Heb. zēr, the Syr. zīr means a collar or necklace. What is meant is prob. an ornamental moulding, running in relief round the ark—whether at the top of its four sides, or in the middle, is not stated—and worked perhaps in the shape of a bead or rope (LXX. κυμάτια στρεπτά: cf. the description in Pseudo-Aristeas (ed. Wendland, § 58 (cited DB. iv. 663<sup>a</sup>); or in Swete, Introd. to OT. in Greek, p. 530) of the zēr on the Table of Presence-bread, made for the Temple of Leontopolis, τὴν ἀναγλυφὴν ἔχοντα σχοινίδων ἑκτυπων). The table of Presence-bread, and the altar of incense, had similar decorations (vv. 24 f., xxx. 3 f.). 'Crown' comes through the Vulg. corona (xxv. 11, xxx. 3) from LXX. στεφάνη (xxv. 24, xxx. 3); but it does not suggest a very clear idea of what is intended. If the zēr ran round the top of the ark, it may have projected upwards and outwards a little, so that the mercy-seat might rest within it.

<sup>1</sup> The dimensions of the restored Temple, pictured by Ezek., are given (Ez. xl. 5, xliii. 13) in cubits measuring 'a cubit and an handbreadth' (= a cubit +  $\frac{1}{3}$ ); and this fact, taken in conjunction with 2 Ch. iii. 3 [read former for first], has led to the conclusion that the cubit in use when the Temple was built was longer than the common cubit of Ez.'s day by  $\frac{1}{3}$ th. The shorter cubit is estimated at 17'6—7 inches, and the longer at 20'5—6 inches (see DB. iv. 906<sup>b</sup> ff.; or EB. iv. 5292 f.). Which cubit is referred to by P is uncertain: but for the purpose of forming a general idea of the Tabernacle, as conceived by him, the difference is immaterial. It is remarkable that in Egypt also two cubits were in use, of almost exactly the same lengths, the 'short' cubit (= 17'68 in.) of 6 handbreadths, and the 'royal' cubit of 7 handbreadths (DB. iv. 907<sup>b</sup>).

Rings of gold for it, and put them in the four feet thereof; and two rings shall be on the one <sup>1</sup>side of it, and two rings on the other <sup>1</sup>side of it. And thou shalt make staves of <sup>13</sup> acacia wood, and overlay them with gold. And thou shalt <sup>14</sup> put the staves into the rings on the sides of the ark, to bear the ark withal. The staves shall be in the rings of the ark: <sup>15</sup> they shall not be taken from it. And thou shalt put into <sup>16</sup> the ark the testimony which I shall give thee. And <sup>17</sup> thou shalt make a <sup>2</sup>mercy-seat of pure gold: two cubits and feet] short supports for the ark. Not the word used in v. 26. on the one side, &c.] It is not stated whether the longer or the shorter sides are meant. The former are commonly thought of: but if the writer thought that the Divine throne should always face in the direction in which it was borne (v. 14), the latter will have been intended (DB. iv. 665<sup>b</sup>; cf. 1 K. viii. 8). 'Rib' (marg.) fig. for side occurs also v. 14, xxvi. 20, 26, 27, 35, xxvii. 7, 2 S. xvi. 13 al.

13—16. Poles of acacia wood, overlaid with gold, to be made for the transport of the ark. Cf. 1 K. viii. 7 f. Similar poles are provided for carrying the table of Presence-bread, vv. 27 f., the altar of burnt-offering, xxvi. 6 f., and the altar of incense, xxx. 4 f. The word (bad), except in these connexions, is rare. Egyptian shrines, and sacred 'arks,' were carried in procession similarly: see Wilk.-B. iii., Plate opp. p. 355, E; EB. i. 307; Erman, p. 276.

16. the testimony] i.e. the attestation, or (cf. the cognate verb in Ps. 1. 7 'testify,' Jer. xi. 7 'protest') affirmation, averment, viz. of God's will, and man's duty, expressed in the Decalogue. In Dt. (iv. 45, vi. 17, 20), and Deuteronomic writers (as 1 K. ii. 3), and writers influenced by them (as Ps. cxix. 2, 14), the same—or almost the same—word is used, in the plural, of Divine commandments in general, as averments of God's will; in P, in the singular, it occurs 36 times, for the Decalogue in particular, both absolutely, as here, v. 21, xvi. 34, Lev. xvi. 13 al., and in the expressions, the ark, tables, Dwelling (RV. tabernacle: see on v. 9), tent, and veil, of the testimony (v. 22, xxvi. 33, xxxi. 18, xxxviii. 21, Lev. xxiv. 3, Nu. i. 50, xvii. 7, &c.). Cf. p. 193. 'Testimony' may also denote the law in general (Ps. xix. 7, cxix. 88).

17—22. The mercy-seat and the two cherubim upon it.

17. a mercy-seat] or, if the word could be revived, a propitiatory. This was a slab of gold, of the same length and breadth as the ark, and laid upon its top. The term mercy-seat was used first by Tindale (1530), being adopted by him from Luther's Gnadenstuhl (1523). The Heb. is kappôreth, formed from kipper, to make propitiation (see on xxx. 10), and meaning properly a propitiating thing, or means of propitiation (LXX. mostly λασθήριον [so in Philo, EB. iii. 303, 2, and Heb. ix. 5];

a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof. And thou shalt make two cherubim of Vulg. propitiatorium, whence Wyclif's rend. the 'propitiatory'). It is true, the blood was the actual means of propitiation in the Lev. system (Lev. xvii. 11); but the term may have been applied to the 'mercy-seat' on account of its being the means of bringing the blood as near as possible to Jehovah on the Day of Atonement (Lev. xvi. 14 f.). Covering (RVm.), or cover, though adopted by many modern scholars (cf. LXX. here [not elsewhere] πλαστήριον ἐπίθεμα, a 'propitiatory cover or lid'), is a questionable rend.: for though kafara means to cover or conceal in Arabic, kāphar in Heb., if 'cover' is its primary meaning (which is very doubtful: see on xxx. 10), means to 'cover' not in a literal sense, but always in a metaph. sense (by a gift, offering, or rite). See further on the word (and also on its Greek rend. πλαστήριον, both in LXX. and in Rom. iii. 25) Deissmann's full and interesting art. MERCY-SEAT in EB.

The special sanctity of the kappōreth was due naturally to the fact that Jehovah was regarded as speaking, or appearing, immediately above it (v. 22, Lev. xvi. 2, Nu. vii. 89); and so it is spoken of poetically as His footstool (Ps. xcix. 5, cxxxii. 7, 1 Ch. xxviii. 2). Outside P it is mentioned by name only in 1 Ch. xxviii. 11.

18—20. The cherubim. The cherubim were composite emblematic figures, always implying the nearness of the deity, and appearing distinctively in the OT. (1) as bearers of the deity, (2) as guardians of a sacred spot. Thus (1) in Ps. xviii. 10 Jehovah rides on a cherub in the thunderstorm; in Ps. lxxx. 1 and elsewhere, He is described, with allusion to the cherubim in the Temple, as 'sitting upon' them; and in the vision of Ezekiel (i. 5 ff., cf. x. 1 ff.) four cherubim bear the 'firmament,' which supports Jehovah's throne: in Ez. i. 6—10 it is said that each had four faces (of a man, a lion, an ox, and an eagle), four wings, the hands of a man, and the feet of calves. Figures of cherubim were also carved as ornaments upon the walls and doors of the Temple (1 K. vi. 29, 32, 35), and on the bases of the ten lavers (vii. 29): in Ex. xxvi. 31 they are to be worked into the veil in front of the Most holy place, and in Ez. xli. 18—20, 25 cherubim with two faces, one that of a man, the other that of a lion, are to be carved on the walls and doors of the restored Temple. (2) As guardians of a sacred spot, cherubim appear in Gen. iii. 24, and in the remarkable picture of the glory of the king of Tyre in Ez. xxviii. 13—17 [read, after LXX., in v. 14 'With the cherub I set thee, thou wast in the holy mountain of God,' and v. 16 end 'and the cherub destroyed thee from the midst,' &c.; see Davidson's notes in the Camb. Bible]. In origin, the cherub is doubtless a mythological conception; Ps. xviii. 10 would suggest that it arose in a personification of the thunder-cloud, within which the Hebrews believed Jehovah to be borne along (see on Ex. ix. 23<sup>a</sup>). Composite figures of different kinds were, however, common in the art of many of Israel's neighbours,—Egyptians, Phoenicians, Hittites, Baby-

And the cherubim shall spread out their wings on <sup>20</sup> high, covering the mercy-seat with their wings, with their faces one to another; toward the mercy-seat shall the faces of the cherubim be. 19. of one piece with] Heb. out of: the same idiom, vv. 31, 35, xxvii. 2, xxviii. 8, xxx. 2. The meaning is, the cherubim were not to be removable, they were to be so securely soldered to the mercy-seat as to form a whole with it.

20. shall spread out] Heb. shall be spreading out, describing their permanent condition: the idiom, as Gen. i. 6, and frequently.

with their faces, &c.] These cherubim, unlike those of Ezek. (see above), are pictured therefore as having only one face each. The cherubim in Solomon's Temple (1 K. vi. 23—28), it is to be noted, differed materially from those here described. Solomon's cherubim were colossal figures, each ten cubits (15 ft.) high; they were not upon the ark, nor did they face each other; they stood, one on each side of the ark, facing the entrance to the Holy of holies, and their four outstretched wings, each 5 cubits (7½ ft.) long, extended across from one wall of the Holy of holies to the other.

The etymology of cherub is not known; nor has the word been found hitherto [1901] in any Bab. or Ass. inscription (see KAT.<sup>3</sup> p. 632, n. 5).

23—30 (cf. xxxvii. 10—16). The table of Presence-bread. This was a table of acacia wood, overlaid with gold, 2 cubits (3 ft.) long, one cubit (1½ ft.) broad, and 1½ cubits (2 ft. 3 in.) high. The top,—to judge from that of the Table represented on the Arch of Titus,—was some 6 in. thick; and the sides and ends of this were each decorated with a solid gold moulding running round it, giving them the appearance of panels sunk into the table (see the left end of the top as represented in the fig.). The legs, according to Josephus, were square in the upper, and rounded in the lower half, terminating in claws; they were connected by cross-stays, or frames, about 3 in. broad, probably about half-way down (see fragments of these frames in the fig.), which also had golden mouldings upon them. On the four legs, close by the cross-stays, were four rings, through which poles of acacia wood, overlaid with gold, were passed, when the table had to be moved. For the service of the table, various dishes and other vessels were provided, all made of gold.

24. a crown] rather, a beaded or spiral moulding, as explained on v. 11. The moulding appears (see the fig.) to have run all round the edge of each end and side, producing the appearance of four sunk panels: cf. Jos. Ant. iii. 6. 6 'and it is hollowed out on each side, hollowing out as it were the surface (of the side) for four finger-breadths, a spiral (moulding) running round both the upper and the lower part of the body (of the table).'

25. a border] a frame (Heb. enclosure), about 3 in. broad, running round the Table, either (as in modern tables) immediately below the top, or (to judge from what seem to be the remains of a 'frame' in the fig.) about half-way down the legs,—in either case helping to hold the legs firm in their places. This frame was also decorated with a moulding of gold, running round it.

26. on (or at) the four corners of the four feet] The word for 'feet' is the one which ordinarily denotes the foot of a man or animal. The legs, it is probable, terminated in claws.

27. The rings were close by the points at which the 'frame' (v. 25) met the legs, and where probably the legs began to be rounded, and to assume the character of 'feet.'

28. The staves, or poles, were to be like those for the ark, v. 13.

29. dishes] also xxxvii. 16, Nu. iv. 7; and 14 times in Nu. vii. ('charger,' each weighing 130 shekels = c. 67 oz., and filled with fine flour mingled with oil). The root in Arab. signifies to be deep. A deep and large gold dish, or other similar vessel, must be thought of, in which the large oblong cakes were either brought to the Table, or laid out upon it.

spoons] cups for the frankincense, which was placed upon the loaves, and burnt (Lev. xxiv. 7) at the end of the week on the altar of burnt-offering: LXX. θυσκαί ('incense-cups'), as 1 Macc. i. 22. Also xxxvii. 16, Nu. iv. 7, and 16 times in Nu. vii. (each 10 shekels = 5 oz. in weight, and filled with incense); and of the incense-cups in the Temple, 1 K. vii. 50 al. Cf. flagons...and chalices (Speaker's Comm.; LXX. κύθοι) viz. for the wine, which, though this is not stated explicitly in the OT., apparently entered into the ritual of the Presence-bread. The flagons (also xxxvii. 16, Nu. iv. 7, 1 Ch. xxviii. 17†) would be for keeping the wine in; the 'chalices' (xxxvii. 16, Nu. iv. 7, Jer. lii. 19†) for making the libations with,—we may suppose that, like other libations, they were poured out at the base of the Bronze altar (cf. xxix. 40; Eccles. i. 15).

30. shewbread] This rend. is first found in Tindale's version of Heb. ix. 2 (1526), being derived by him apparently from Luther's Schaubrot (1522). Though, however, a possible paraphrase of the expression used by Jerome (see below), it does not correctly represent the expression used here, which is undoubtedly Presence-bread (RVm.), i.e. bread set out in Jehovah's presence, and designed originally as His food. The custom of presenting food on a table as an oblation to a god was widely diffused among ancient peoples: it will be sufficient to instance the lectisternia of the Romans, the similar custom abundantly attested for Assyria, even with the use of 12 loaves (EB. iv. 4116; KAT.<sup>3</sup> 600), the tables which the idolatrous Israelites laid out for Gad, the god of fortune (Is. lxx. 11), Baruch vi. 30, and the story of Bel and the Dragon. The gods were supposed to require food and drink; and reverence towards them naturally took the form of supplying their needs. These were the ideas out of which no doubt the Heb. institution originated; but in the light of the higher religion of Israel the 'continual bread' (Nu. iv. 7) acquired, we may be sure, a higher significance, and was regarded as a standing acknowledgement on the part of (Lev. xxiv. 8 RVm.) the children of Israel that Jehovah was the giver of their daily bread. See further on the Presence-bread (which is here mentioned only incidentally) the notes on Lev. xxiv. 5-9; Kennedy in DB. iv. 495 ff., 663; Jewish Encycl. art. SHOWBREAD; Edersheim, The Temple and its ministry, p. 155 f. (with quotations from the Mishna). The antiquity of the institution is attested by the familiar incident, 1 S. xxi. 4-6.

The post-exilic name of the Presence-bread—derived from the fact that the twelve large flat oblong cakes of which it consisted were arranged on the table in two piles (Lev. xxiv. 6)—was Bread set out (lit. Bread of arrangement), 1 Ch. ix. 32, xxiii. 29 al. (cf. on xl. 4). This was rendered by LXX. ol äproi τῆς προθέσεως, 'the loaves of setting before' (viz. before God: cf. προτίθημι, to 'set before,' of a meal), whence the NT. expression ὁ ἄπρος τῆς προθέσεως, Mt. xii. 4 al. (for ἡ πρ. τῶν ἄπρων Heb. ix. 2, see 2 Ch. xiii. 11 LXX.). Jerome's panes propositionis is simply a lit. translation of the LXX. rend.; and this, understood as 'loaves of exhibition,' no doubt suggested to Luther his Schaubrot, whence our sheubread.

31-40 (cf. xxxvii. 17-24). The golden candlestick or lampstand. This consisted of a central stem, resting on feet, with three branches turned upwards and outwards on each side, the stem and branches being ornamented by the gold, at suitable distances, being beaten into the shape of the calyx and corolla of the almond-flower. The whole was of pure beaten gold, a talent (96 lb.) of the metal being employed in its construction. There were seven lamps, corresponding to the central stem and the six branches, which it was the duty of the priests to take off and trim daily, and to replace in the evening (xxvii. 21, xxx. 8).

its cups, (namely,) its knops, and its flowers] As v. 33 shows, the 'cup' is the whole opened flower, its component parts being the 'knop' and the 'flower,' or, in technical language, the calyx and the corolla, i.e. (roughly) the outer and inner leaves of the entire flower. 'Knop' is an old word meaning knob, or bud.

34, 35. There were also four similar cups in the candlestick itself, i.e. in its central shaft. Vv. 34, 35 are commonly understood to mean that there were four cups altogether in the central shaft, one towards the top, and the other three so placed that the 'knop' was just below the points where the three pairs of branches diverged from the central shaft; but (observe 'and' at the beginning of v. 35) Kennedy (p. 664<sup>a</sup>) may be right in supposing the meaning to be that there were to be four 'knops and flowers' combined on the upper and lower parts of the shaft, and three 'knops' alone under the points where the three pairs of branches diverged from it.

37. the lamps] probably of the type called Phoenician, of which numerous specimens, made in terra cotta, have been found at Gezer, and other places excavated recently in Palestine: they are in shape like a shell or saucer, round or oval, open or covered in, as the case may be, and with the rim on one side pinched together, so as to form an orifice for the wick (see illustr. in DB. iii. 24).

light] fix on (cf. marg.), viz. every evening (xxx. 8). The Heb. is lit. bring up, i.e., as we should say, fix on (so xxvii. 20, xxx. 8, xl. 4, 25, Lev. xxiv. 2, Nu. viii. 2, 3†): the Rabb. interpretation 'light' is destitute of the smallest probability (for to 'make the lamp go up' is not the same thing as to 'make the flame go up').

over against it] in front of it, or straight forward, as the same expression is rendered in Ez. i. 9, 12, x. 22; cf. Nu. viii. 2, 3. The candlestick was to stand at the S. side of the Holy place; and the lamps were to be so adjusted that their wick-mouths turned northwards, and they lighted the space in front of the candlestick. 'Over against' is an old English expression meaning opposite to: but it is so little used now that it fails to convey a clear idea to the average reader.

38. tongs] so xxxvii. 23, Nu. iv. 9, 1 K. vii. 49<sup>b</sup> (=2 Ch. iv. 21<sup>a</sup>), Is. vi. 6<sup>t</sup>. In Is. vi. 6 we should still say 'tongs' (the Heb. is lit. the two takers), but not in the other cases. Probably in all cases something of the nature of tweezers for drawing up the wick is meant (like the forcipes figured in Smith's Dict. of Class. Antiq.<sup>3</sup> i. 872): 'snuffers,' which in the case of a lamp we should naturally think of, represents a different Heb. word (1 K. vii. 50 al.).

snuffdishes] so xxxvii. 23, Nu. iv. 9. The same word (lit. (fire-) catcher) is also used for what we should denote by the separate terms fire-pan (xxvii. 3 al.), and censer (Nu. xvi. 6 al.).

39. a talent] probably (DB. iv. 903<sup>b</sup>, 906<sup>a</sup>) 673,500 grs. = c. 96 lb. avoirdupois,—worth, at the present value of gold, c. £5460.

40. Cf. v. 9: also Nu. viii. 4; and Acts vii. 44.

In Solomon's Temple there were ten golden candlesticks, five standing on each side of the Holy place, in front of the adyton (1 K. vi. 49; cf. Jer. lii. 19): in the post-exilic Temple there was only a single candlestick (1 Macc. i. 21, iv. 49). It is this which was taken from the Herodian Temple by the Romans, and is represented on the famous Arch of Titus. In the Temple at Shiloh there was only a single lamp (1 S. iii. 3).

The Ark.

It is impossible to give here a history of the Ark; but a few words may be permitted, respecting the religious ideas associated with it, and opinions as to its possible origin.

The oldest name of the ark was the 'ark of Jehovah,' Josh. iii. 13 &c. (or 'of God,' 1 S. iii. 3 &c.), or, less frequently, 'the ark' alone (Nu. x. 35 al.): the Deut. expression (see p. 193) is 'the ark of the covenant' (with or without 'of Jehovah' added): P's characteristic expression is the 'ark of the testimony' (13 times: see on xxv. 16, 22). Both these latter terms are used with allusion to the tables inscribed with the Decalogue, which,—as in our extant sources (see however on Ex. xxxiv. 3) we first learn from Dt. x. 2, 5,—were contained in it. In itself the 'ark' is similar in principle to the sacred chests in which many other ancient nations, as the Egyptians, Etruscans, Greeks, kept images, or other sacred objects, and sometimes also carried them in processions. Now it is noticeable that in nearly all the pre-Deuteronomic references, the ark—which in these passages 'must be thought of as a simple chest, very different from the gold-covered shrine of P, with its' massive golden 'mercy-seat, and over-arching cherubim' (Kennedy)—appears as much more than a mere receptacle of two inscribed stones; it is, in fact, in a very special sense, a symbol and pledge of Jehovah's presence; and it is even spoken of as if He were actually present in it, so that wherever the ark was, Jehovah was there with it. Especially in war is it thus regarded as the material vehicle or accompaniment of Jehovah's presence. In the ancient verses preserved in Nu. x. 35 f.—originally, to judge from the terms used, the prayer with which the Ark was sent forth to battle, and the welcome with which its return was greeted,—‘Arise, O Jehovah, and let thine enemies be scattered, Let them that hate thee flee before thee,’ and ‘Return, O Jehovah, to the myriads of Israel's clans,’ Jehovah is addressed as though He were present in the ark, and moved with it. The case is similar in 1 S. iv. 3, where the Hebrew sheikhs say, ‘Let us fetch the ark of Jehovah ...from Shiloh, that it may come...and save us,’ and when it arrives, the Philistines exclaim (v. 7), ‘God is come into the camp’; and in vi. 19, where, after the ark has been brought back, and some of the men of Bethshemesh are smitten, the others exclaim, ‘Who is able to stand before Jehovah this holy God?’ So in 2 S. vi. 5 ff. David and the Israelites, accompanying the ark with dancing and music, are described as playing ‘before Jehovah’ (vv. 5, 21); and in Jos. vii. 6—9 the Israelites fall down before the ark and pray to Him. It is also evidently as the pledge of Jehovah's presence and effectual help, that in 2 S. xi. 11 the ark is taken with the host on a campaign, and that in 2 S. xv. 24 f. Zadok takes it with David, when he leaves Jerusalem (though the king magnanimously sends it back): in Nu. xiv. 44, on the contrary, its absence from the host (which is tantamount to Jehovah's absence, v. 42) is the cause of defeat. Other ancient nations took images of their gods into battle (2 S. v. 21: Rel. Sem. 37, citing Polyb. vii. 9, Diod. xx. 65 [the Carthaginians' ‘sacred tent’]): the Israelites had a custom which was the same in principle; but their palladium was the image-less ark.

These passages, which shew that in early Israel the ark was, in a very real sense, identified with the presence of Jehovah, are not adequately explained if the only purpose of the ark was to form a receptacle for the two tables of stone. How the former conception of the ark arose, the extant narratives do not state: they describe the ark as made purely to receive the tables of stone; and in P Jehovah speaks not from the ark itself, but from between the cherubim upon it. We are therefore reduced to conjecture. When we remember that Jacob speaks of the stone at Bethel as being itself the ‘house,’ or abode, of God (Gen. xxviii. 22), one supposition that suggests itself is that in very remote times the ark may have sheltered a sacred stone, regarded by the primitive Israelites as the abode of a deity (so Benz. Arch.<sup>1</sup> 369 [<sup>2</sup>312 a very different view]; Bâ.; in greater detail, Cheyne, EB. i. 307 f.), but ‘transformed’ ultimately, ‘in reverent Hebrew thought “into a perfect written embodiment of the fundamental demands of Israel's righteous God”’ (McNeile, p. 163, without, however, definitely accepting this view). Such conjectures are not illegitimate: for our accounts of the beginnings of Israel's religion, it must be borne in mind, are both imperfect in themselves, and spring from a time when higher and more spiritual ideas were current than had once been the case. Another view, which admits of being more easily accommodated to Ex. xxxiii. 1—7, is that the ark contained a stone, or stones, taken from the sacred 'mount of God,' Horeb, which was regarded as an assurance of the protecting presence of Jehovah (whose abode was on Sinai, xix. 4) after they left it (Moore, EB. i. 2155): and there are independent reasons for thinking (see on xxxiii. 6) that the ark was originally conceived as supplying some kind of visible substitute for Jehovah's personal presence. Or, thirdly, Kennedy may be right (Samuel, in the Century Bible, p. 324) in seeing in the ark an embodiment of that 'Presence of Jehovah,' which it is promised shall accompany Israel to Canaan (xxxiii. 14), as, not indeed Jehovah Himself, but His sufficient representative (cf. DB. i. 150 f.).

It is common to all these theories to regard the ark as not originally intended to receive the tables of the Decalogue: it is not probable, it is argued, that laws of fundamental importance, intended to be observed by all, should be placed where they could not be seen. The question cannot be here pursued further; and it must suffice to refer the reader, for fuller discussion, to Kennedy, DB. i. s.v., and Samuel, p. 321 ff.; Kautsch, DB. v. 628 f., and McNeile, p. 161 ff. Jehovah's presence, it is clear, was regarded as in some way 'objectively attached to the ark': but the historical origin of this idea our extant data do not enable us certainly to determine. And this is why we are driven to conjecture. It may only be worth while to add that in Jer. iii. 16 the time is looked forward to, by the spiritually-minded prophet, when no such material symbol of Jehovah's presence will be needed; and the ark, having served its purpose through many centuries, will be neither 'remembered, nor missed (RVm.), nor made again.'

Ch. xxvi. The Dwelling, or (RV.) 'tabernacle,' i.e. (see on xxv. 9) the interior fabric of curtains, supported upon a wooden framework, forming the Holy place, and the Holy of holies.

1—6 (cf. xxxvi. 8—13). The ornamented curtains, forming the Dwelling itself. These were ten in number, each 28 cubits (42 ft.) long, and 4 cubits (6 ft.) wide, all made of richly coloured tapestry, with figures of cherubim interwoven (the 'work of the designer'). When joined together, they formed a single large curtain, 40 cubits (60 ft.) long, and 28 cubits (42 ft.) broad.

1. the tabernacle] the Dwelling,—used here, as the passage itself clearly shews, in its stricter sense (see on xxv. 9) of the structure formed by the tapestry hangings. Cf. xl. 2 (with the note), 3, Nu. iii. 25.

cherubim] the composite animal figures described on xxv. 18.

the work of the designer] or, of the pattern-weaver. 'Cunning workman' is not a good rendering; for it lacks the necessary distinctness. 'Cunning' (i.e. kenning, knowing) is an archaism for skilful—or (xxxi. 4)

P shalt thou make them. The length of each curtain shall be 2 eight and twenty cubits, and the breadth of each curtain four cubits: all the curtains shall have one measure. Five 3 curtains shall be coupled together one to another; and the other five curtains shall be coupled one to another. And 4 skilfully made—used often in AV., and retained mostly in RV., to denote various kinds of technical skill (xxxviii. 23, Gen. xxv. 27, 1 S. xvi. 16, 2 Ch. ii. 7, Jer. ix. 17 al.). Even 'skilful workman' would not however be sufficiently distinctive: the Heb. word means deviser or designer, viz. of artistic designs in weaving, and is one of three terms, used repeatedly in these chapters, to distinguish three different grades of textile work. We have viz.:—

(1) the work of the weaver (xxviii. 32, xxxix. 22, 27), i.e. simple weaving, work woven of one material only: as of blue, xxvi. 4 (the loops for the curtains), xxviii. 28 (the lace attaching the sacred pouch to the ephod), 31 (the robe of the ephod), 37 (the lace attaching the gold plate to the high priest's turban); of white linen xxviii. 39 (the turban), xxxix. 27 f. (the priests' tunics and caps); or of fine twined linen, xxvii. 9 (the hangings of the court), xxxix. 28 (the priests' drawers).

(2) the work of the variegator (or embroiderer): xxvi. 36, xxvii. 16 (the screens for the entrances to the Dwelling and the court); xxviii. 39, xxxix. 29 (the sash of the high priest). There is no doubt that this term denotes work variegated in colours: but it is disputed whether it means work woven in colours, or embroidered in colours. According to Kn. Di. it is work woven of blue, purple, scarlet, and white yarns, arranged in stripes or checks, but without figures or gold thread (as No. 3): Kennedy (EB. iv. 5289) thinks that it is embroidery proper, i.e. woven work, decorated afterwards by the needle with figures embroidered on it in colours. The cognate subst. variegated (or embroidered) work occurs Jud. v. 30, Ez. xvi. 10, 13, 18, xvii. 3 (of variegated plumage), xxvi. 16, xxvii. 7, 16, 24, Ps. xlv. 14, 1 Ch. xxix. 27; and the verb in Ps. cxxxix. 15 ('curiously wrought'). When the white woollen carpet which separates the men's from the women's compartment in a Bedawi tent is 'interwoven with patterns of flowers,' it is denoted in Arabic by the corresponding partic. markūm, 'variegated' (Burckh. Bedouins, i. 40).

(3) the work of the designer, i.e. work woven of blue, purple, scarlet, and white yarns, with figures (as here and v. 31), or gold thread (xxviii. 6, 15), artistically interwoven: xxvi. 1 (the curtains of the Dwelling), 31 (the veil), xxviii. 6 (the ephod), 15 (the pouch for the Urim and Thummim).

3. The curtains were to be joined together, so as to form two sets of five, each 28 cubits (42 ft.) long, and 20 cubits (30 ft.) broad. The Dwelling was 30 cubits long, and 10 cubits high and broad: and the curtain was spread over it in such a way that it hung down for the entire height of 10 cubits behind (the front, having a 'screen' of its own

The coupling was to be effected by 50 loops of violet tape being attached to one of the outer edges of each set, and fastened to the loop opposite to it by golden clasps.

The Tent over the Dwelling, consisting of eleven curtains of cloth made of goats' hair, each 30 cubits long, and 4 cubits wide, fastened together so as to form a single large curtain, 30 cubits broad, and 44 cubits long. The Bedawin still make their tents of goats' hair in the same way: breadths of goats' hair cloth, it may be  $\frac{2}{3}$  yd. broad, and as long as the breadth of the tent, are stitched together, and form a covering capable of keeping out the heaviest rain (Burckh. Bedouins, i. 37; cf. DB. iv. 717): comp.  11 And thou shalt make fifty clasps of brass, and put the clasps into the loops, and couple the tent together, that it may 12 be one. And the overhanging part that remaineth of the curtains of the tent, the half curtain that remaineth, shall 13 hang over the back of the tabernacle. And the cubit on of the Dwelling in front, so as to form a kind of portal above the entrance. But this is not the natural meaning of the Heb., which is that the curtain is to be doubled in front of the Dwelling, so as to hang down there for 2 cubits, forming a kind of valance over the top of the screen (v. 36), and securing that the Dwelling is in perfect darkness (so Kennedy, p. 662<sup>a</sup>). Render then double (without 'over'); and see further on v. 12.

10, 11. How the two sets, of five and six breadths respectively, were to be held together, viz. by 50 loops, with clasps of copper, attached to the outer edge of one of the end breadths in each set.

10. coupling] better as marg.: cf. vv. 4, 5.

11. brass] copper or bronze. Gold (v. 6) was confined to the clasps for the inner curtains, forming the Dwelling proper.

12. overhanging] The Heb. means loose or free, not necessarily 'overhanging.'

the half curtain that remaineth] The breadth in front is laid double (v. 9): it is consequently halved in width; and the entire length of the curtain is thus 42 cubits. As the Dwelling is 30 cubits long and 10 cubits high, it follows that, according to the usual view of v. 9<sup>b</sup>, 12 cubits will hang down behind, according to Kennedy's view, 10 cubits will hang down behind. The 'half-curtain' (= 2 cubits) overhanging at the back can thus, upon the usual view, be only the 2 cubits in excess of the 10 (so Di.), the whole 12, we may suppose, being stretched out, and pegged to the ground in the manner of a tent: it is not, however, very natural to speak of only the 2 cubits as hanging down loosely behind: we should rather expect the whole 12 to be so spoken of. The difficulty would be removed, if we might suppose the words, 'the half-curtain that remaineth,' in v. 12 to be a mistaken gloss, arising out of a hasty reading of v. 9<sup>b</sup>: if these words are omitted, the length of the part hanging down behind is not specified, and it might, of course, be either the 12 cubits required by the ordinary view of v. 9<sup>b</sup>, or the 10 cubits required by Kennedy's view. The latter view does better justice to v. 9<sup>b</sup>, and also has the advantage of making the goats' hair curtain hang down symmetrically on the two sides and the back, viz. so as exactly to touch the ground in each case.

P the one side, and the cubit on the other side, of that which remaineth in the length of the curtains of the tent, shall hang over the sides of the tabernacle on this side and on that side, to cover it. And thou shalt make a covering<sup>14</sup> for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering of sealskins above.

And thou shalt make the boards for the tabernacle of<sup>15</sup> acacia wood, standing up. Ten cubits shall be the length<sup>16</sup> of a board, and a cubit and a half the breadth of each

13. On the two sides of the Dwelling, the curtain of goats' hair being 30 cubits broad, while the inner tapestry curtain was 28 cubits broad, the former would of course reach a cubit lower than the latter, and touch the ground.

14 (cf. xxxvi. 19). Two outer coverings of stronger and stouter materials, to be laid over the Tent, for protection against rain. Kn. reminds us that on military expeditions the Romans used in winter to cover their tents with skins (sub pellibus hiemare).

rams' skins dyed red] i.e. leather, dyed, not with the costly Phoenician 'scarlet' (xxv. 4), but probably (Kennedy), as LXX. ἡρυθροδανωμένα suggests, with madder (ἐρυθροδανον).

sealskins] dugong skins (xxv. 5). The Dwelling, with the coverings above it, was kept in its place by cords connecting it with pins driven into the ground, in the manner of a tent: see xxvii. 19, xxxv. 18, xxxviii. 20, 31.

15—30 (cf. xxxvi. 20—34). The 'boards,' or, perhaps, frames, for the Dwelling. There is great difficulty in some of the details: but the general sense is clear. The 'boards' were to be of acacia wood, overlaid with gold, each 10 cubits (15 ft.) long, and 1½ cubits (2 ft. 3 in.) broad: they were to be placed upright, so as to form the sides and back of the Dwelling, each resting in two sockets of silver: there were to be twenty forming each side, six to form the back, and two, of special construction, at the corners, where the back and sides met: five bars, attached to the boards by rings, were to run horizontally along the two sides and the back, respectively, to hold them firmly in their place.

15—17. The wooden framework of the Dwelling.

15. boards] either beams or frames: 'boards' suggests something much thinner than seems to be intended. The Heb. kéresh, except in the present connexion (50 times), occurs only Ez. xxvii. 6, of some part of a ship, described there as made up of ivory, inlaid in boxwood (RV. benches, RVm. deck); and its exact sense is uncertain. Here it has commonly been rendered boards: but to this rend. Kennedy (p. 659<sup>b</sup>) makes the pertinent objections that, if these 'boards' are to support the curtains, the latter must hang down outside them: the boards, however, standing, as they are described, close to each other, would form, on the two sides and back of the Tabernacle, three solid wooden walls; if, then, the Dwelling on three of its sides was formed of these wooden walls, it is difficult to understand how it can be consistently spoken of as formed by the curtains (v. 1, &c.): and, moreover, if the sides of the Dwelling were thus solid, these richly worked curtains would be hidden from view, not only on the outside, as they would be in any case, by the curtain of goats' hair and the two skin coverings, but also on the inside (except on the roof). Hence Kennedy argues, with much force, that the kērāshim were pictured, not as solid boards, but as wooden frames (as shewn in the illustr.), which, while affording sufficient support for the curtains and skin coverings, would allow the richly coloured tapestry curtains with their cherubim figures to appear inside the sanctuary. Kennedy's view undoubtedly brings a very great improvement into the idea of the Tabernacle: but the sense attached to kēresh being hypothetical, it is difficult to accept it quite unreservedly.

The thickness of the kērāshim is not specified. Jos. (Ant. iii. 6. 3) gives it as 4 finger-breadths (3 in.): Rashi (11 cent.), Ew. al. suppose it to have been a cubit (18 in.). V. 22 suggests that the writer pictured them as  $\frac{1}{2}$  a cubit (9 in.) thick: but even in this case, if they were solid, their dimensions being 15 ft. x 2 ft., 3 in. x 9 in., they would be so substantial as to be beams rather than 'boards.'

17. tenons] lit. hands, used fig. of supports: cf. 1 K. vii. 32, 33 (EVV. axletrees; rather, diagonal stays under the body of the laver, holding the axles in their places), 35 (supports of the basin at the top), 36 (corrupt dittography from v. 35: see Skinner's note in the Century Bible), x. 16 (of the 'arms' of a throne). These 'hands,' or tenons, as ordinarily understood, were pegs projecting underneath the bottom of the boards, to hold them firm in their sockets (v. 19).

A 'Frame,' with its bases.

Reduced from Hastings' Dictionary of the Bible, iv. 660.

P the tabernacle. And thou shalt make the boards for <sup>18</sup> the tabernacle, twenty boards for the south side southward. And thou shalt make forty sockets of silver under the twenty <sup>19</sup> boards; two sockets under one board for its two tenons, and two sockets under another board for its two tenons:

a cross-piece (cf. the cognate shēlibbim, 1 K. vii. 28, 29†, 'cross-pieces,' or 'cross-rails' [see Skinner's note: in EVV. misrendered ledges], and the post-Bibl. shēlibāh, the 'rung' of a ladder), clamped together. The tenons of each board (or frame) were secured in their places by a clamp of metal underneath the bottom of the board.

Kennedy, however (p. 660<sup>a</sup>), understands the 'hands' not of tenons, but of the upright sides of the 'frame' themselves, and would render vv. 15—17 thus: 'And thou shalt make the frames for the Dwelling of acacia wood, standing up,—10 cubits the length of a frame, and 1½ cubits the breadth of a frame,—namely, two uprights for [so rightly, for EVV. in] each frame, joined one to another by cross-rails [see the illustr.]: thus shalt thou make for all the frames of the Dwelling.' The translation is quite legitimate (for there is in the Heb. no 'shall be' in either v. 16 or v. 17), and the explanation clever: but it is difficult to feel certain that such 'uprights' would be called hands in Heb. The sense 'frames' for kērāshim is not dependent upon it; and it is perhaps safer to adhere to the usual rend. 'tenons.'

18—25. The number of frames for each side of the Dwelling, and the arrangements for holding them firmly in their place.

18. for the south side southward] lit., with not quite the same tautology as the English, towards (the) Negeb, southward. The 'Negeb' (properly, as Aram. shews, meaning dry land) is a geographical term denoting the arid district in the S. of Judah (Gen. xii. 9 RVm., Jos. xv. 21, and often); as this district was on the S. of Canaan, it became the most usual word in Heb. for 'south.' Its use in the Pent. is an indication that this was written after Israel had lived long enough in Canaan for 'négeb' to have acquired this sense. The same pleonasm recurs in xxvii. 9, and in the ||, xxxviii. 9, xxxvi. 23, Ez. xlvii. 19, xlviii. 28; and there are similar ones in xxvii. 13 (|| xxxviii. 13), Nu. xxxiv. 15.

19. sockets] bases (Ez. xli. 22 RVm.), or pedestals (cf. Job xxxviii. 6 'foundations'; Cant. v. 15 supporting pillars), i.e. solid blocks of silver—acc. to xxxviii. 27 weighing a talent (96 lbs.) each—resting on the ground, and, naturally, with 'sockets' in them to receive the 'tenons.' A talent of silver, of the sacred standard, weighed probably (DB. iii. 422<sup>b</sup>, 419<sup>b</sup>) about 96 lbs. av.: so that, as a cubit ft. of silver weighs 655 lbs., the talent would amount to about 250 cubic inches, i.e. it might form a block about 7 in. square and 5 in. deep: two such blocks were to stand under each of the frames. Kennedy, however, discarding xxxviii. 27 as part of a late addition to P (see on xxxviii. 24—31), pictures each base as a square plinth, ¾ cubit on the side and a cubit high, the whole forming thus a continuous wall under the frames; the weight of each base in this case would be about 1240 lbs.

22. westward] lit. sea-ward. Sea (i.e. the Medit. sea) is in Heb. the regular word for 'west'; and the usage, like that of négeb in v. 18 in the sense of 'south,' could only have arisen after Israel had been long settled in Canaan. So x. 19, 27, xxvii. 12, xxxvi. 27, 32, xxxviii. 12.

The twenty frames for the sides of the Dwelling made up its entire length of 30 cubits (=  $1\frac{1}{2} \times 20$ ). The six frames at the end would make 9 cubits: so that, as the entire width of the Dwelling was 10 cubits, if the frames at the sides were  $\frac{1}{2}$  a cubit thick, the six at the end would just fill up the 9 cubits between them.

23, 24. The two corner frames.

24. A most obscure verse, the crux of all interpreters. It must suffice here to state Kennedy's view (p. 661); for a discussion of others, the reader is referred to McNeile, p. lxxv f. (see also W. R. Smith, Journ. of Phil. xvi. 76). After v. 22 these two extra frames do not really appear to be required: apparently, however, they are intended to strengthen the two corners, at the back of the Dwelling, the idea being that the last frame at each end of the hinder wall is to be doubled, the second frame forming a buttress, sloping upwards from the outside and terminating just under the uppermost of the bars described in v. 26 f. The verse may be rendered, And they shall be twinned (so AVm.: i.e. twin-pieces to the two extreme frames of the end wall, and braced to them to give additional strength) from beneath, and together (i.e. both alike, as Dt. xii. 22) they shall be twinned (reading מִמַּתְּלֵי, as just before, for מִמַּתְּלֵי) unto the top thereof (viz. of the Dwelling) unto the first ring (i.e. the topmost ring (see v. 29) at the back of the Dwelling): thus shall it be, &c. The sense, it must be admitted, is contortedly expressed: but no explanation is free from objection, and nothing more satisfactory has been proposed.

25. eight] i.e. the 6 + 2 of vv. 22, 23. Bases for sockets, as before.

P sockets under another board. And thou shalt make 26 bars of acacia wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the other 27 side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the side of the tabernacle, for the hinder part westward. And 28 the middle bar in the midst of the boards shall pass through from end to end. And thou shalt overlay the boards with 29 gold, and make their rings of gold for places for the bars: and thou shalt overlay the bars with gold. And thou 30 shalt rear up the tabernacle according to the fashion thereof which hath been shewed thee in the mount.

26—29. The bars. Five gilt bars of acacia wood, attached to the frames by gold rings, are to run horizontally along the two sides and the back of the Dwelling, to keep the frames in their places. The middle bar in each case ran from end to end: the other bars, it may be inferred, were shorter, perhaps arranged as is here shewn:

It is not stated whether the bars were to be outside or inside the Dwelling: but the former seems the more natural, and is commonly assumed.

31—35. The veil, to separate the Holy place from the Holy of holies, made of the same richly coloured tapestry, with figures of cherubim woven into it (the 'work of the designer'), as the curtain (v. 1), and suspended on four gilt pillars of acacia wood, vv. 31—33 (cf. xxxvi. 35—36). 31. a veil] Heb. pārōketh, only in P, in the same connexion, and 2 Ch. iii. 14: the primary meaning was probably 'that which shuts off' (cf. Ass. parāku, to bar or shut off, parakku, apartment, esp. shrine in a Temple; Syr. perakkā (loan-word), a shrine). In Heb. vi. 19 f., ix. 7, 8, x. 19—22, the veil (with allusion to the fact that the high priest alone, and that only once in the year, entered into the Holy of holies) is regarded as forming an impediment to the approach to God, which was broken down by Christ, when He entered by His own blood into the 'holy place' in heaven (Heb. ix. 12, 24—26).

32. four bases of silver] such as the frames rested upon, v. 19 ff.

33. under the clasps] the clasps mentioned in v. 6, which must have been (vv. 2, 3) at a distance of  $5 \times 4 (= 20)$  cubits from the front of the Dwelling, and (as the Dwelling is 30 cubits long) 10 cubits from its back. The Holy place is thus 20 cubits long, and the Most Holy place 10 cubits; as the latter is also 10 cubits high and 10 cubits wide, it forms a cube. The length and breadth of the Dwelling are exactly half those of Solomon's Temple ( $60 \times 20$  cubits): the Holy of holies is also half the height of that in the Temple ( $20 \times 20 \times 20$  cubits), but the Holy place is only a third as high as that in the Temple ( $40 \times 20 \times 30$  cubits): see 1 K. vi. 2, 16, 17, 20 [for 'oracle,' read hindmost part, or shrine, and for 'temple,' Heb. hēkāl, read hall; see p. 259].

35. over against] opposite to, on the south side of the table.

36—7 (xxxvi. 37—8). The screen, to cover the entrance to the Dwelling. This was of the same materials as the veil (v. 31), but, as it was further from the shrine, of less elaborate workmanship, the 'work of the variegator,' or 'embroiderer' (not of the 'designer' or pattern-weaver: see on v. 1), and without cherubim.

xxvii. 1—8 (cf. xxxviii. 1—7). The altar of burnt-offering. This was a hollow frame of acacia planks, overlaid with copper (or bronze), 5 cubits ( $= 7\frac{1}{2}$  ft.) in length and breadth, and 3 cubits ( $= 4\frac{1}{2}$  ft.) in height: at each corner, a 'horn,' of the same material, projected outwards. Round the altar, mid-way between top and bottom, ran a projecting ledge,—probably for the priests to stand upon when sacrificing,—supported at its outer edge by a vertical grating of bronze, that rested on the ground. At the corners of this grating, presumably where it met the ledge, there were rings to receive the poles for carrying the altar.

P And thou shalt make the altar of acacia wood, five cubits <sup>27</sup> long, and five cubits broad; the altar shall be foursquare: and the height thereof shall be three cubits. And thou shalt make the horns of it upon the four corners thereof: the horns thereof shall be of one piece with it: and thou foursquare] 'An archaism dating from a time when "square" meant equal-sided, and it was necessary to express the number of sides' (McNeile). See Wright's Bible Word-Book, s.v.: 'In Wesley's Journal (28 July, 1738) a church in Dresden is described as "eight-square"; and in 1 K. vi. 31 AVm. has "five-square.'

2. the horns of it] these were an indispensable part of an altar (cf. xxx. 2, 3), and were regarded as its most sacred part: the blood of the sin-offering was applied to them (xxix. 12 [|| Lev. viii. 15]; Lev. iv. 25, 30, 34, ix. 9, xvi. 18; Ez. xliii. 20; and on the horns of the altar of incense, Ex. xxx. 10, Lev. iv. 7, 18); a criminal seeking asylum seized hold of them (1 K. i. 50, ii. 28); see also Am. iii. 14, Jer. xvii. 1, Ps. cxviii. 27. The length of the horns is not specified: in the great altar of Ezekiel's vision (xliii. 13—17), which however was 12 cubits (= 18 ft.) square, and, with its bases, rose to a height of 11 cubits (16½ ft.) from the ground, they were, according to v. 15 LXX., a cubit (1½ ft.) long: in the altar of burnt-offering they would, if of the same proportion, be about 7 in. long. Horns are occasionally found similarly on Greek altars: A. J. Evans, also, in Mycenaean Tree and Pillar Cult (1901), pp. 37—40, mentions several bas-reliefs representing them found at Mycenae and in Crete; and there is a good Semitic example on the stèle from Teima, about 250 miles S.E. of Edom (see Perrot and Chipiez, Art in Sardinia, Judaea, &c. i. 304; and for the inscription Cooke,

The origin of the symbolism is uncertain; and different theories have been propounded (see DB. i. 77<sup>a</sup>, iv. 658<sup>a</sup>; EB. i. 124; Benz.<sup>3</sup> 321): perhaps the most probable is that of Evans (cf. *Rel. in the mount] see xxv. 9.

It is difficult to reconcile satisfactorily this plated 'altar' (v. 1) of acacia wood, borne upon the shoulders of Levites from one encampment to another (Nu. iv. 13, vii. 9), with the altar of earth or stone, reared where occasion might require, on which burnt- and peace-offerings were to be sacrificed (Ex. xx. 24 f.). As nothing is said about a top to the altar, on which the victims might be placed, it is commonly assumed that, when the Tabernacle became stationary, the hollow case of the altar was filled up with earth. But it is strange that, if intended, this is not expressed. On the other hand, if the fire was kindled on the ground, within the altar, it is obvious that the wooden sides would quickly be destroyed. The directions here given are in fact entirely unrelated to those of xx. 24 f. When the character of P's Tabernacle-legislation, as a whole, is considered, and account taken of the wide differences which separate it from the ceremonial legislation of JE, it can hardly be doubted that the true explanation of the present remarkable structure is that 'it originated in the desire to construct a portable altar on the lines of the massive bronze altar of Solomon, which was itself a departure from the true Heb. tradition (Ex. xx. 24-6)' (Kennedy, p. 658). The bronze altar in Solomon's temple was a gigantic structure, 20 cubits (30 ft.) long and broad, and 10 cubits (15 ft.) high (2 Ch. iv. 1),—no doubt the work of Phoenician artists (cf. 1 K. vii. 13-16, 40-46). Zerubbabel's altar, it may be added, was built of stone (1 Macc. iv. 46): the one erected by Judas in its place, in 165 B.C., was of unhewn stone, 'according to the law' of Ex. xx. 25 (ib. v. 47).

9-19 (cf. xxxviii. 9-20). The court of the tabernacle. This was a rectangular area, lying E. and W., 100 cubits (150 ft.) long, and 50 (75 ft.) broad, enclosed by hangings of white linen, 5 cubits (7½ ft.) high, suspended on pillars of wood,—20 for each of the larger sides, and 10 for each of the shorter sides. Each of the pillars was let into a socket of silver, and had a capital overlaid with silver (xxxviii. 17); and all were kept in position by cords, and tent-pins of bronze. In the centre of the E. front there was a space of 20 cubits (30 ft.), not provided with hangings, but left open as an entrance to the court, and covered by a screen of white linen, embroidered in colours.

fillets] i.e. bands, or binding-rings (the root in Aram. signifies to bind), surrounding the pillars, probably at the base of the capitals (xxxviii. 17): so Di., Kenn. The Heb. word has also been understood to mean connecting-rods, joining the tops of the pillars, to which the hangings were attached: Ex. xxxviii. 19, however, seems to shew that the hāshukim were integral parts of the pillars, and the Heb. of xxvii. 17 (= xxxviii. 17) can hardly mean 'connected by silver rods.' 'Fillet' (lit. a little thread, from Lat. filum, Fr. fil, dimin. filet) is a word better known formerly than it is now (except in connexion with food), meaning a headband, esp. a ribbon, but also used for any narrow strip of binding material (DB. s.v.), or for strips of metal (Murray, Eng. Dict. s.v.).

longer sides are of 100 cubits, each with 20 pillars, the two shorter sides are of 50 cubits each, with 10 pillars; and there are 60 pillars in all. If now there are 10 pillars on the E. side, the distance between each will be  $\frac{10}{9}$  cubits, and the two sides of the entrance, 15 cubits from each corner, will not coincide with two of the pillars: as, moreover, the four corner pillars must now be counted twice, there will in all be not 60, but only 56 pillars. The writer must thus, for the sake of symmetry, have reckoned the sides as having respectively 20 and 10 pillars each, when in reality they would have 21 and 11. 'The S. side, reckoning from E. to W., has pillars nos. 1—21, of which no. 21, however, is reckoned as

Oil is to be provided at the cost of the people; and the priests are to arrange the lamps on the candlestick every evening. These regulations seem out of place here; and in the mention of Aaron and his sons anticipate chaps. xxviii.—xxix. They recur, with slight verbal differences, in Lev. xxiv. 2—3, where they are followed by directions respecting a kindred subject, viz. the Presence-bread (vv. 5—9). Probably (so Di.) they were introduced here by a later editor from Lev. xxiv. 1—4. Comp. Nu. viii. 1—2.

'Beaten' oil was oil of the finest quality: it was obtained 'by gently pounding the olives in a mortar; the pulp was then poured into a wicker or rush basket, which, acting as a strainer, allowed the liquid to run into a vessel underneath. The oil which would presently float upon the top was skimmed off,' and this formed the oil in question. The commoner kinds of oil were obtained from the pulp remaining in the baskets (Kennedy, EB. iii. 3407, from descriptions in the Mishna).

continually] i.e. not continuously (xxv. 30 Heb.), but regularly, as a standing practice, whether daily (as here, xxix. 38, 42, xxx. 8 al.), or whenever occasion required (xxviii. 29, 30).

21. the tent of meeting] Heb. 'ohel mō'ēd, i.e. the tent of appointed meeting (cf. Job xxx. 23 'the house of appointed meeting for all living,' of Sheol), the tent appointed by Jehovah as the place where He will 'meet' Moses (see in P xxv. 22, xxx. 6, 36) and Israel (xxix. 42, 43, Nu. xvii. 4), and communicate His will to them, or (OTJC.<sup>2</sup> 246) the 'tent of tryst' (i.e. of appointment to meet). It is the oldest name of what we now commonly know as the 'Tabernacle' (see on xxv. 9), being first found in E (xxxiii. 7: see the note), where it denotes the tent which Moses used to pitch outside the camp, to which everyone resorted who sought Jehovah, and whither Moses also used to repair in order that Jehovah might speak with him. It is mentioned besides in JE in a due for ever from] hukḳāh may mean either a prescribed rule (i.e. a statute), or a prescribed portion (i.e. a due): so hōk, xxix. 28, Lev. vii. 34<sup>b</sup>, 36, xxiv. 8 (AVM.); cf. Prov. xxx. 8, xxxi. 15 (RVm.).

Nu. xi. 16, xii. 4, Dt. xxxi. 14. The Tent of meeting, as described by P, is a much more elaborate structure than that can have been (see p. 257 f.). He mentions it some 130 times.

The rendering of AV. 'tabernacle (i.e. tent: see on xxv. 9) of the congregation' is based on a mistaken interpretation of mō'ēd, as though this word were a synonym of 'ēdāh, 'congregation' (xii. 3 &c.). The LXX. render the expression by ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ μαρτυρίου, 'the tent of the testimony' (whence Vulg. tabernaculum testimonii), treating 'ōhel mō'ēd incorrectly as a synonym of 'ōhel hā'ēdūth (Nu. ix. 15, xvii. 7, 8, 2 Ch. xxiv. 6†), which does mean 'the tent of the testimony' (see on xxv. 16): cf. from evening to morning] the lamps were to be removed every morning to be trimmed (xxx. 7), and to be lighted and replaced every evening to burn during the night (xxx. 8, 2 Ch. xiii. 11). (The later usage was, however, different; see DB. iv. 664<sup>a</sup>, and Schürer, as cited.)

Ch. xxviii. The vestments of the priests.

The directions for the sanctuary are complete; and provision has next to be made for the vestments and (ch. xxix.) consecration of the priests who are to serve it. The directions contained in these two chapters are founded upon the elaborately developed dress and ceremonial of the Zadokite priesthood of the writer's own day, the original institution of both being referred back to the appointment of Moses himself. Aaron represents the Zadokite high priest of later times; his 'sons' represent the ordinary priests. The gorgeous, golden robes of the high priest are described at length: the simpler vestments of the ordinary priests are dismissed in 4 verses (vv. 40-43). Limits of space forbid here more than the briefest notice of the history and functions of the Isr. priesthood (see more fully McNeile, p. lxiv ff.; Baudissin's article in DB. iv. 67 ff.; EB. iii. 3837 ff.). The present ch. reflects a late stage in the history of the priesthood. The main prerogatives of the older Isr. priest (JE, Jud., Sam.) were to give tōrah (p. 161), to obtain Divine oracles by the Urim and Thummim (p. 313), and to pronounce decisions 'before God' at a sanctuary (Ex. xxii. 8, 9):

28 And bring thou near unto thee Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, from among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office, even Aaron, P no doubt he also offered sacrifice (1 S. ii. 28), but the right of doing this was by no means at this time restricted to the priests (cf. on xx. 24). A member of the guild (cf. on iv. 14), or tribe, of Levi was preferred as a priest (Jud. xvii. 13). The priests mentioned in Sam.<sup>1</sup> belong all to the line of Eli, who is first connected with Aaron, through Aaron's younger son Ithamar, in 1 Ch. xxiv. 3 (c. 300 B.C.). Abiathar, the last of Eli's line, who had been David's principal priest, was deposed by Solomon; and Zadok was made principal priest in his stead (1 K. ii. 27, 35). Zadok's pedigree is not stated in 1 K.: in 1 Ch. vi. 8 &c., he is represented as descended from Aaron's elder son Eleazar. Zadok's descendants continued to hold the first place among the Jerusalem priests, with all the prestige and importance which their connexion with the Temple naturally gave them, throughout the period of the monarchy. Even in the 7th cent., however, Dt. (xviii. 6—8) insists upon the right of every 'Levite,' i.e. of every member of the tribe, to officiate as priest, and draw the emoluments of the priesthood, if he but goes to reside at the central sanctuary<sup>2</sup>: no doubt, however, the exclusiveness of the families established at Jerusalem placed difficulties in the way of this right being practically exercised: and in the end a sharp line of demarcation was drawn between those who were regarded as the full priestly members of the tribe, and those who did not succeed in securing this position: these latter are the 'Levites' in P's sense of the term (cf. on xxxii. 29), i.e. non-priestly members of the tribe. It is noticeable that, while Dt. represents the whole tribe as set apart by Jehovah for priestly functions (x. 8; cf. ibid.), in P Aaron and his sons are consecrated as priests solely in virtue of their own right: the 'Levites' (i.e. the other members of the tribe) are appointed to be their assistants for menial duties only afterwards, Nu. iii. 5—39, viii. 5—26. For two striking poetical descriptions of the high priest and his ministrations, see Ecclus. xlv. 9—22 (Aaron), l. 1—21 (Simon).

1—5. Sacred vestments to be made for the priests.

1. And thou, bring thou near, &c.] as xxvii. 20. hikrib ('bring near') has here the special, sacred sense of present, or, of a sacrifice, offer, as very often in P; cf. xxix. 3, 4, 8, 10; xl. 12, 14; and DB. iii. 587<sup>b</sup>.

and his sons with him] the addition of 'with him,' as often in P: v. 41, xxix. 21 (twice), Gen. vi. 18, vii. 7, 13 &c. (see LOT. p. 132, No. 10). Aaron's 'sons,' as already explained, represent in this and the next ch., the ordinary priests.

minister...in the priest's office] in the Heb., one word, be (or act as) priest. The Heb. for 'priest' is kôhen, a word of which the etym.

And thou shalt speak unto all <sup>3</sup> that are wise hearted, whom I have filled with the spirit of wisdom, that they make Aaron's garments to sanctify him, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office. And <sup>4</sup> these are the garments which they shall make; a breastplate, and an ephod, and a robe, and a coat of chequer work, a <sup>1</sup>mitre, and a girdle: and they shall make holy garments for Aaron thy brother, and his sons, that he may minister sense is unknown: the supposition that it denotes 'one who stands' (to serve God) is most precarious: there is no Semitic root kāhan, or even kān, meaning to 'stand': kān, in Arab., Eth., and Phoen. is the common word for 'to be'; in Ass. it means to be firm; derivatives in Heb. also mean to be or to make firm, but this is not the same thing as 'stand.' In Arabic the corresponding word, kāhin, means a seer—an important man in a tribe, who was consulted before an undertaking, esp. a war, or to settle a dispute, or other difficulty, the organ of a deity, or, mostly, of a jinn (Wellh. Arab. Heid. 130—4, 167; <sup>2</sup>131—8, 143): the older Isr. kōhēn also habitually gave answers, by the Urim and Thummim, on questions submitted to him, and divine decisions upon legal cases (see on xviii. 15). The common name, and the kindred functions, justify the inference that the kōhēn and the kāhin were originally identical: both will have been originally guardians of an oracle at a sanctuary: but their functions diverged: the kāhin sank to be a mere diviner; the kōhēn acquired gradually more and more of the sacrificial functions which we commonly attach to the idea of a 'priest.'

Nadab and Abihu] see in J xxiv. 1, 9; in P vi. 23, Lev. x. 1, 2.

Eleazar and Ithamar] Eleazar is mentioned in Dt. x. 6 as Aaron's successor in the priesthood, and in Jos. xxiv. 33 (E) his death is recorded. See further on vi. 23.

the spirit of wisdom] i.e. an impulse and activity, instinct with wisdom (i.e., here, artistic skill): cf. Dt. xxxiv. 9 (P), Is. xi. 2, xxviii. 6; and (in a bad sense) Is. xix. 14, xxix. 10, Hos. iv. 12. Comp. on xxxi. 3.

6—12 (cf. xxxix. 2—7). The ephod. The 'ephod' (which, to judge from Is. xxx. 22. Heb., will have signified a closely-fitting covering), according to the ordinary view (for another, see p. 312), was a kind of waistcoat, consisting of an oblong piece of richly variegated material, the 'work of the designer,' bound round the body under the arms, and reaching down as far, apparently, as the waist. It was supported by two 'shoulder-pieces' (Heb. shoulders), i.e. probably two broad flaps or straps passing, like braces, over the shoulders, and attached to the ephod in front and behind: on the top of each of these shoulder-straps was an onyx-stone, enclosed in a filigree setting of gold, and engraved with the names of six of the tribes of Israel. Round the body the ephod was further held in its place by a band woven in one piece with it, but perhaps of a different pattern, probably forming a border at its lower edge, and passing closely round the waist. The ephod was worn over a long blue 'robe,' described in vs. 31—5.

6. gold] i.e. gold thread (see xxxix. 3). The other materials for the ephod were the same as those for the curtains (xxvi. 1): but the ephod would be the handsomer on account of the gold thread interwoven with them.

7. Read with Sam. LXX. and xxxix. 4: It shall have two shoulder-straps joined (to it): at its two (top) edges shall it be joined (חָבַר for חָבַר). The ephod went closely round the body; and it was supported by two straps passing over the shoulders, and attached in front and behind to its top edges.

8. And the artistically woven band (or simply, And the band: see below) of its attachment, which is upon it, shall be, &c.] 'Artistically woven band' is in the Heb. one word, hēsheb, cognate apparently with hōshēb, 'designer,' v. 6. As however the entire ephod was to be of the same material, and the hēsheb was indeed to be of the same piece with it, it is not apparent why the term should be applied to this particular part of the entire fabric: hence many suppose hēsheb to be derived by of its attachment] cognate with 'ephod'; the word which in Is. xxx. 22 is rendered 'plating' (viz. of gold round an idol), probably lit. encasement. The rend. 'to gird' is not sufficiently distinctive.

9—12. Two onyx stones, enclosed in filigree settings of gold, and each engraved with the names of six of the tribes of Israel, to be fixed on the top of the two shoulder-straps.

10. according to their birth] i.e. according to their ages; cf. vi. 16. Jos. (Ant. iii. 7. 5) says that the names of Jacob's six elder sons were on the stone upon the right shoulder, and those of his six younger ones on the stone upon the left shoulder.

11. the engravings of a signet] Seal engraving of precious stones was an art practised from very remote times in both Babylonia and Egypt.

ouches] filigree settings, or, in one word, rosettes. (LXX. in v. 13 ἀσπίδοκαί, 'little shields'). 'Ouch' ('an ouch' for 'a nouch,' by a mistaken division of words [cf. an apron for a napron, an adder for a nadder, umpire for numpire; and conversely newt for ewt, notch for otch], Fr. nouche, a buckle or clasp) is an old word for the frame in which precious stones were set, used also for the jewels themselves; cf. 2 Henry IV. ii. 4. 53 'Your brooches, pearls, and ouches' (Aldis Wright, Bible Word-Book, s.v.). The Heb. root means to chequer or plait (see on v. 39): hence what is probably meant is 'settings of filigree work': the gold was first beaten out into thin sheets, which were afterwards cut up into narrow strips (see xxxix. 3); these were then formed into filigree work by a delicate process of soldering, and used as a setting for jewels (Kennedy, DB. iii. 636). Rosettes would probably express the general meaning with sufficient accuracy.

13—30 (with vv. 15—28, cf. xxxix. 8—21). The pouch of judgement, designed to contain the Urim and Thummim (v. 30). This was a pouch, or bag,  $\frac{1}{2}$  a cubit (9 in.) square, made of the same richly coloured texture as the ephod; and on its front were inserted, by means of gold settings, four rows of jewels, three in a row, engraved with the names of the twelve tribes of Israel. It was worn in front of the ephod, its four corners having golden rings, by which it was fastened to the two shoulder-straps (which are conceived to extend along the sides of the ephod to its bottom).

13, 14. Two rosettes of gold to be made, with chains of gold attached to them. The object of these chains is explained in vv. 22—5: they are to attach the 'breastplate' to the shoulder-straps.

13. ouches] filigree settings or rosettes (v. 11).

14. put] i.e. fasten.

15, 16. The 'breastplate.' The Heb. hōshēn (often in the sequel, but only in the present connexion) is of uncertain etym., but there is nothing in it to suggest the idea of a 'breastplate'; and as v. 30 shews, pouch would convey a much clearer idea of what is intended. It is called the 'pouch of judgement,' on account of the Urim and Thummim being kept in it, which were the means by which judgements, or decisions, were obtained by the high priest. It was to be of the same richly coloured texture as the ephod (v. 6).

16. double] More clearly, doubled, viz. so as to form a bag or pouch. a span]  $\frac{1}{2}$  a cubit, or 9 inches. A piece of material, a cubit long and  $\frac{1}{2}$  a cubit broad, was to be doubled over, and sewn together, so as to form a pouch  $\frac{1}{2}$  a cubit square.

17—21. Twelve precious stones, each engraved with the name of one of the tribes of Israel, to be arranged in gold settings in four rows of three each, and fastened in front of the pouch. The identity of several of the stones mentioned is very uncertain; for philology throws little or no light upon the meanings of the names, and the ancient Versions in several cases give inconsistent renderings, or renderings which are themselves of uncertain interpretation. The oldest interpretations of the names are those given by the LXX.; and in identifying these, much help is afforded by Theophrastus, On Stones (c. 300 B.C.), and notices in Pliny, H. N. See more fully Petrie, DB. iv. 619 ff., and esp. J. L. Myres, EB. iv. 4799 ff. The list is repeated in xxxix. 10—13: comp. also the lists in Ez. xxviii. 13 (=the 1st, 2nd, and 4th rows here, the stones being however differently arranged) of stones in the 'covering,' or decorated garment, of the king of Tyre, and in Rev. xxi. 19 f. of the stones forming the foundations of the walls of the New Jerusalem (cf. Is. liv. 11 f.; Tob. xiii. 16 f.).

17. a sardius. Heb. 'ōdem, 'redness,' LXX. σάρδιον, Vulg. sardius; Ez. xxviii. 13, Rev. xxi. 20. The sardius is described by the ancients as 'blood-red': it is either what we call the cornelian (Kn. Di., Myres altern.), or the opaque red jasper (Petrie, Myres altern.). The ruby (RVm.) is improbable, because (1) it is found only in countries as distant from the Hebrews as Ceylon and Burmah, and (2) because it is so hard that it was scarcely ever engraved in antiquity.

a topaz. Heb. pitdāh, τωπάξιον, topazius (Ez. xxviii. 13, Rev. xxi. 20); spoken of in Job xxviii. 19 as coming from Ethiopia. The modern 'topaz' was hardly known before Greek times. 'The τωπάξιον of the Greeks was a translucent, golden-coloured (διαφανῆς χρυσοειδὲς ἀποστλιβὼν φέγγος, Strabo xvi. 770), or yellow-green (e virenti genere, Plin. H. N. xxxvii. 8) stone, probably the modern chrysolite (or peridot); and this was in common use for scarabs and cylinders of all dates' (Myres). The ancient topaz was obtained chiefly from an island (τωπάξιον νῆσος) in the Red Sea (Strabo, p. 770). The identification with the Ass. hipindu (EB. iv. 4803) depends upon an alteration in the Heb. text (ibid. 5140).

a carbuncle. Heb. bārēketh, σμάραγδος, smaragdus: Ez. xxviii. 13, Rev. iv. 3, xxi. 20. Probably, if these renderings are right, a rock-crystal, a colourless stone, used for engraving in Egypt at all periods: for (Petrie) only a colourless stone would shew a rainbow of prismatic colours (Rev. iv. 3), or could have been used by Nero for an eye-glass (Pliny, H. N. xxxvii. 64). So also Myres, who compares carefully the rival claims of beryl.

18. an emerald] Heb. nōphek, ἀνθραξ, carbunculus [a red stone, called ἀνθραξ and carbunculus because in the sun-light it flashes like a burning 'coal,' Theophr. de Lap. 18]: Ez. xxvii. 16, xxviii. 13. As is generally agreed, the red garnet, a species of carbuncle.

a sapphire] Heb. sappir, σάπφειρος, sapphirus: xxiv. 10, Ez. i. 26,

x. 1, xxviii. 13, Job xxviii. 6, 16, Cant. v. 14, Is. liv. 11, Lam. iv. 7, Rev. xxi. 19. Not, however, our 'sapphire,' which was 'almost unknown before Roman imperial times,' but the opaque blue lapis lazuli (so Rev. xxi. 19 R.Vm.), as is shewn by the description of the Greek and Roman 'sapphire' by Theophrastus and Pliny as sprinkled with gold dust (ὄσπερ χρυσόπαστος, 'inest ei et aureus pulvis'), with allusion to the particles of iron pyrites, easily mistaken by their colour and lustre for gold, frequently found in the lapis lazuli (cf. SAPPHIRE in DB. and EB.; and Job xxviii. 6 'And it hath dust of gold').

a diamond] Heb. yahālōm, ιασπίς, jaspis: Ez. xxviii. 13. Ἰασπίς, jaspis, seem so naturally to correspond to Heb. yāshēpheh in v. 20, that many suppose an accidental transposition to have taken place in either the Heb. or the Greek text: if this be granted, yahālōm will be represented by δύχιον here and Ez. xxviii. 13, and by βηρύλλιον in Ex. xxxix. 13. What the yahālōm was, is, however, uncertain. 'Diamond' has nothing to recommend it: there is no evidence that this stone was known to the ancients. R.Vm. sardonyx (cf. Rev. xxi. 20), a stratified stone, consisting of layers of red and white (hence the name, the 'sard' being red, and the 'onyx' whitish), and in ancient times often with a layer of dark brown as well; well adapted for engraving, on account of the variety produced by the different strata (EB. SARDONYX). For the symbolism attached to the three colours, see the quaint verses quoted in DB. s.v. ONYX.

19. a jacinth] Heb. léshem, λιγύριον, ligurius. Perhaps (Myres) the cairn gorm, a clear yellow stone. On the jacinth (cf. Rev. xxi. 20), which was apparently first suggested by Braun, de vestitu sacerdot. (ed. 2, 1698), II. xiv, Mr Myres writes, 'there is no evidence that the jacinth was either found in Liguria, or was known at all till Roman times.' The λιγύριον (or λυγκούριον) is variously explained by Pliny as a fiery-coloured gem, like the carbuncle (H. N. viii. 38, xxxvii. 13), and (xxxvii. 11) as amber (hence R.Vm.).

an agate] Heb. shēbhō, ἀχάτης, achates. The correctness of this rendering is not doubted. A red, opaque stone.

an amethyst] Heb. ahlāmāh, ἀμέθυστος, amethystus. This rend. is also unquestioned. A purple, clear stone.

20. a beryl] Heb. tarshish, χρυσόλιθος (Rev. xxi. 10), chrysolithus: Ez. i. 16, x. 9, xxviii. 13, Cant. v. 14, Dan. x. 6. The name tarshish apparently points to its being obtained from Tarshish (Tartessus) in Spain. The chrysolite ('gold-stone') of the later Greeks (which was also obtained from Spain, Pliny, H. N. xxxvii. 127) is probably our topaz<sup>1</sup>, but as this was unknown in earlier times, some other gold-

And thou shalt make upon the breastplate chains like cords, of wreathen work of pure gold. And thou shalt make upon the breastplate two rings of gold, and shalt put the two rings on the two ends of the breastplate. And thou shalt put the two wreathen chains of gold on the two rings at the ends of the breastplate. And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains thou shalt put on the two ouches, coloured stone must be intended,—perhaps (Petrie) the yellow jasper. It is not however stated whether this stone is (or was) found in Spain. The rend. beryl is as old as Abarbanel (1437—1508): the chalcony (RVm.; Rev. xxi. 19) of the ancients,—so called from its being found at Chalcedon (opposite to Byzantium),—was the green transparent carbonate of copper, our copper emerald (Smith, DB. s.v.).

an onyx] Heb. shōham, βηρύλλιον (so LXX. here, but not consistently), onychinus: v. 9, xxv. 7, Gen. ii. 12, Ez. xxviii. 13, Job xxviii. 16, 1 Ch. xxix. 2. This is usually supposed to be either the onyx (LXX. in Job; Vulg. mostly) or the beryl (LXX. here; Pesh. Targ. always): the onyx being a stratified stone, consisting of layers of white (resembling in colour the nail, whence the name), grey, and other colours (see DB. s.v.), and the beryl a clear blue, green, or pale yellow stone (see EB. s.v.). Myres, however (EB. iv. 4808), argues in favour of malachite (green carbonate of copper), 'common in Egypt in all periods, obtained from the Sinaitic mine district,' and also other sources of copper, as Cyprus, and known likewise in Babylonia and Assyria.

a jasper] Heb. yāshēpheh, βήρυλλον, beryllus (but see on 'diamond' in v. 18): Ez. xxviii. 13, Rev. xxi. 19. In all probability the green jasper is intended.

22—28. How the pouch is to be kept in position on the front of the ephod.

22—25. Two golden chains of wreathen work to be made, and attached at one end, by rings of gold, to the two upper corners of the pouch, and at the other, to the two rosettes (v. 13 f.), in the two shoulder-straps, so that the pouch might hang down from them.

22. The 'chains like cords' are those mentioned in v. 14, so that the verse is really superfluous.

23. put] i.e. fasten, as v. 14: so vv. 24, 25, 26, 27.

 and shalt put them on the two shoulderpieces of the ephod underneath, in the forepart thereof, close by the coupling thereof, above the cunningly woven band of the ephod.
 28 And they shall bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it may be upon the cunningly woven band of the ephod, and that 29 the breastplate be not loosed from the ephod. And Aaron shall bear the names of the children of Israel in the breastplate of judgement upon his heart, when he goeth in unto the holy place, for a memorial before the LORD

26—28. Two rings of gold to be attached to the inner lower corners of the pouch, and tied by pieces of blue lace to two other rings of gold on the lower part of the shoulder-straps, to hold the pouch close to the ephod.

26. upon the two ends, &c.] i.e. at the two lower corners of the pouch, on the inner side, towards the ephod, so that the rings were hidden from view.

27. underneath, &c.] low down, in front of it.

close to its juncture (with the shoulder-straps), above the band of the ephod] The directions are not very clear: but the shoulder-straps seem to be continued down the front of the ephod, on its right and left sides, as far as the band (v. 8): the lower edge of the pouch was just above this band, and it was tied by the two pieces of blue lace to the rings in the shoulder-straps close to where these were sewn to the ephod.

28. the rings of the ephod] Properly, the rings of the shoulder-straps of the ephod (v. 27).

29. Aaron (i.e. the high priest), bearing the names of the tribes of Israel both (v. 12) on his shoulders (which support the weight and symbol of office, Is. ix. 6, xxii. 22), and on his heart (implying that they have a constant place in his thoughts, Dt. vi. 6), will thus enter the Holy place as Israel's official representative, ever mindful of the nation's interests, and ever bringing the remembrance of it before God.

the pouch of judgement] see on v. 15. So v. 30.

for a memorial] to call them to remembrance before God: so v. 12; cf. xxx. 16, Nu. x. 10; xxxi. 54.

P continually. And thou shalt put in the breastplate of judgement <sup>1</sup>the Urim and the Thummim; and they shall be upon Aaron's heart, when he goeth in before the LORD: and Aaron shall bear the judgement of the children of Israel upon his heart before the LORD continually.

And thou shalt make the robe of the ephod all of blue. <sup>31</sup> And <sup>2</sup>it shall have a hole for the head in the midst thereof: <sup>32</sup> it shall have a binding of woven work round about the hole of it, as it were the hole of a coat of mail, that it be not rent.

30. The Urim and Thummim. These are to be put into the pouch of judgement: they are consequently something quite distinct from the jewels in front of it (v. 17), with which they have often been identified; and from the manner in which they are mentioned elsewhere (esp. 1 S. xiv. 41) there can be little doubt that they were two sacred lots, used for the purpose of ascertaining the Divine will on questions of national importance. We do not know their size or the material of which they were made: they are not described, but introduced as something well known. See further p. 313 f.

the judgement of &c.] The Urim and Thummim are so called as the means by which a Divine judgement, or decision, might be obtained on matters of national importance. Cf. Nu. xxvii. 21 (P).

31—35 (cf. xxxix. 22—26). The robe of the ephod. This was a long violet robe woven in one piece, put on by being drawn over the head, with arm-holes (but without sleeves), and with pomegranates worked in colours, and small golden bells, arranged alternately as a border, round the bottom of the skirt.

31. robe] Heb. m<sup>e</sup>il, a long garment, worn over the tunic, and usually, it seems, open down the front, and with sleeves (see ill. in DB. i. 625<sup>a</sup>; and Benz. Arch.<sup>2</sup> 76 f.), made of better material than the more ordinary simläh (see on xii. 34), and often worn in place of that by men of position (1 S. xviii. 4, xxiv. 4, 11; by Samuel xv. 27, xxviii. 14, cf. ii. 19; Ezr. ix. 3, 5).

blue] or violet (see on xxv. 4). The robe was to be entirely woven of this material, and without figures: hence it is called simply the 'work of the weaver' (xxxix. 22: see on xxvi. 1).

32. a hole for the head, &c.] It was not open behind or in front: it had simply a hole at the top, and was thrown over the head in the manner of a jersey.

woven work] the work of the weaver (xxxvi. 1). In ch. xxxix. these words are attached not to the 'binding' (v. 23), but to the robe itself (v. 22); and that is probably their original place here (after 'of the ephod' in v. 31). The binding was to keep the edge of the hole from fraying.

- 33 And upon the skirts of it thou shalt make pomegranates of P blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, round about the skirts thereof; and bells of gold between them round about: 34 a golden bell and a pomegranate, a golden bell and a pomegranate, upon the skirts of the robe round about.
 35 And it shall be upon Aaron to minister: and the sound thereof shall be heard when he goeth in unto the holy place before the LORD, and when he cometh out, that he die not.
 36 And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, HOLY TO THE LORD.

a coat of mail] Heb. tahārāh, only here and in the ||, xxxix. 23: Onk. תהרין a coat of mail. No doubt, a linen corselet, the λινοθήρη of the Greeks (H. ii. 520), is what is meant; Herodotus (ii. 182, iii. 47) mentions two made in Egypt for Amāsis.

33, 34. The skirt was to be adorned with a border of pomegranates (i.e. balls shaped like pomegranates), made of the richly coloured materials mentioned in xxv. 4; and a small golden bell was to be attached to the hem between each two of the pomegranates. The pomegranate tree was common in Palestine (cf. Nu. xiii. 23, Dt. viii. 8, al.); its fruit, when ripe, is of a bright red colour, about the size of an orange. In v. 33 Sam. LXX. add, and fine twined linen: cf. xxxviii. 24.

35. to minister] i.e. in order that he may minister.

that he die not] for not putting it on, and so infringing one of the laws of the sanctuary: cf. v. 43, xxx. 21, Lev. viii. 35, x. 7.

Originally, it has been conjectured, the object of the bells was to protect the officiating priest from the spirits which were supposed to haunt the thresholds of sanctuaries. But here their object is that they might be heard when the high-priest entered, and left, the sanctuary,—in order (Di.) that the worshippers outside might know how long to follow him with their devotions (cf. Luke i. 10, 21), or (Riehm, HWB. 878,<sup>2</sup> 646) to remind God (cf. Eccus. xlv. 9; 'memorial,' as above, vv. 12, 29) that he appeared before Him as the official representative of the people.

36—38 (cf. xxxix. 30—31). The gold plate on the front of the high priest's turban. The high priest's turban was of fine white linen (v. 39); and there was to be a blue band tied round it, with a plate of gold attached to it in front, bearing the inscription, HOLY TO YAHWEH.

36. a plate] Heb. ziz,—properly, it seems, a shining thing (usu. a flower, Is. xl. 7 al.), i.e., here, a burnished plate (in this sense only xxxix. 30, Lev. viii. 9 besides); LXX. πέταλον, a leaf, fig. a thin plate of metal. Cf. Polycrates ap. Eus. v. 24 (a πέταλον worn by St John, as priest). According to tradition, the 'plate' was 2 fingers broad.

HOLY TO YAHWEH] The high priest, in virtue of his office, was brought specially near to Jehovah, and was thus specially 'holy' to Him. Cf., in other connexions, xxx. 37, xxxi. 15, Lev. xxvii. 23, 30,

P And thou shalt put it on a lace of blue, and it shall be upon <sup>37</sup> the 'mitre; upon the forefront of the 'mitre it shall be. Zech. xiv. 10. Jos. (BJ. v. 5, 7), and Pseudo-Aristeas (ap. Swete, Introd. to O.T. in Greek, p. 536), say that the inscription was written in 'sacred,' or 'holy,' characters, by which they mean doubtless the older Hebrew characters, such as are found on old Heb. seals, as also on the Moabite stone, and in Phoen. inscriptions, before they had changed into the later 'square' characters.

37. a lace of blue] a lace, or band, of the violet material mentioned in xxv. 4. This was apparently tied round the turban, somewhat 'above' its lower edge (cf. xxxix. 31), in the manner of a 'diadem' (xxix. 6 n.),—in the proper sense of the word, something bound round<sup>1</sup>,—so that the plate attached to it might appear conspicuously in front.

38. bear the iniquity, &c.] i.e. take upon himself the guilt of any ritual error or mistake made accidentally in offering the holy things; cf. Lev. xxii. 16. Elsewhere the expression becomes equivalent to be responsible for (Nu. xviii. 1, 23). Cf. LOT. p. 50, No. 20<sup>o</sup>.

that they may be accepted] more lit. for their acceptance: so Lev. xxii. 20; and similarly (in the Heb.) Lev. i. 3, xix. 5, xxii. 19, 21, 29, xxiii. 11. The gold plate, with its inscription, on the high priest's forehead, marks him out as the people's specially holy representative before God: and enables him, as such, to secure His acceptance of their offerings, in spite of any venial oversight or omission made in offering them.

39. The high priest's tunic, turban, and sash. With vv. 39—42 compare (condensed) xxxix. 27—9.

the coat] the tunic. This was made of fine linen, the 'work of the weaver' (xxxix. 27), woven in one piece. Josephus says (Ant. iii. 7. 2) that it reached down to the feet, fitted close to the body, and had tight sleeves: it had a narrow aperture about the neck, and was girt about the breast by a sash (see below). It would thus resemble a cassock or dressing-gown (see ill. of an ordinary tunic in DB. i. 624<sup>b</sup>). Linen, as a clean and cool material, was much prized in antiquity (cf. on xxv. 4); and was worn in particular by priests both in Egypt (Hdt. ii. 37; Wilk.-B. ii. 159), and also often elsewhere (see Di.).

chequer work] what exactly is denoted by shibbōz is uncertain; but not improbably something of the nature of a 'check,' obtained by the weaver alternating threads of different colours in warp and woof; or, if the threads were all of the same colour, quilted or honey-combed work (cf. Ges. Thes. 1356; Kennedy, EB. iv. 5288). The tunic was only the 'work of the (ordinary) weaver' (xxxix. 27), which was not as elaborate as the two other kinds described on xxvi. 1; but it was something more than perfectly plain weaving. Work of the same kind is mentioned also in v. 4, Ps. xlv. 13 ('chequer-work of gold(-thread),' but the text is doubtful); and, of plaited settings of gems ('rosettes'), vv. 11, 13, 14, 20, xxxix. 6, 13, 16, 18†.

a turban] Heb. miqnēpheth, something wound round (the cogn. verb occurs in Is. xxii. 5; see R.Vm.), i.e. what we call not a 'mitre,' but a turban. It was of fine white linen (v. 39); and probably was folded many times round the head: the Talm. says that it contained 16 cubits (= 24 ft.) length of material. Except in Ez. xxi. 26 [Heb. 31], where it denotes the royal turban of the Jewish king (Zedekiah), the word occurs only here and elsewhere in P of the high priest's turban. See further (esp. with reference to Jos.'s statements) the very full art. MITRE in EB. R.Vm. silk for shēsh, as in AV. of Prov. xxxi. 22. The rend. is not probable: though 'white silk' was used for shēsh by Luther.

a girdle] a sash; Heb. 'abnēt, only of the sash worn by the priests, and (Is. xxii. 21) by a high officer of state. It was made (see the next note) of richly coloured material: Jos. (Ant. iii. 7. 2) adds that it was four fingers broad, wound twice round the body, beginning at the breast, and tied in front in a bow: the ends reached the ankles, but while the priest was officiating, they were thrown over the left shoulder so as not to be in his way (EB. ii. 1735; see ill. in Braun, de vest. sacerdd. opp. to p. 404). According to the Talmud, it was 32 cubits (48 ft.) long. It is thus very inadequately described as a 'girdle.'

the work of the embroiderer] or variegator (see on xxvi. 1): the ll, xxxix. 29, prefixes 'fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet.' The materials and work were thus the same as those of the screens at the entrances to the Tent and the court (xxvi. 36, xxvii. 16).

40. The tunics, sashes, and caps, for Aaron's 'sons' (i.e. for the ordinary priests). Whether the tunics and sashes differed in any way from those of the high priest, is not stated.

headtires] of fine linen (xxxix. 28),—doubtless a band of fine linen bound round the head (Lev. viii. 13); and, to judge from the etym. of miqbā'āth (from gāba', prob. to be convex, cf. gib'āh, 'hill,' gābia', 'goblet'), in shape like a brimless convex cap (Jos. Ant. iii. 7. 3

P thou make for them, for glory and for beauty. And thou shalt put them upon Aaron thy brother, and upon his sons with him; and shalt anoint them, and <sup>1</sup>consecrate them, and sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office. And thou shalt make them linen breeches to cover the flesh of their nakedness; from the loins even unto the thighs they shall reach: and they shall be upon Aaron, and upon his sons, when they go in unto πίλος, a felt cap, in shape resembling a half-egg; see Dict. of Class. Antiq. s.v. PILLEUS). The word occurs only of the caps of the ordinary priests (xxix. 9, xxxix. 28, Lev. l.c.†). Cf. EB. MITRE.

At the great sanctuary of the Phrygian Leto at Hierapolis in Phrygia (cf. Rel. Sem. Index, s.v. Hierapolis; Ramsay, Cities and Bishoprics of Phrygia, i. 89 ff.) the priests were dressed wholly in white, and wore a πίλος on their head, the chief priest alone wearing a purple vestment (cf. above, v. 31, and on xxvi. 1), and having a golden 'tiara' bound round his head (Luc. de dea Syr. § 42).

41. An anticipation of xxix. 12, 5—9, not very exactly expressed; for the garments for Aaron and his 'sons' were not in all cases the same (v. 40). The words, and shall anoint them, are probably a later addition; for xxix. 7, like Lev. viii. 12, speaks only of Aaron himself, and not his 'sons' also, as being anointed: see on xxx. 30.

consecrate them] install them would be a more distinctive rendering. The Heb. is lit. fill their hand, a technical term for install or institute to a priestly office—originally, perhaps, meaning to fill the priest's hand with the first sacrifices (cf. xxix. 24; and see Moore, Judges, p. 380)—occurring also Jud. xvii. 5, 12, Ex. xxxii. 29 (fig.), Ez. xliii. 26 (fig. of altar); Ex. xxix. 9, 29, 33, 35, Lev. viii. 33, xvi. 32, xxi. 10, Nu. iii. 3 (all P); 2 Ch. xiii. 9; also (fig.) 1 Ch. xxix. 5, 2 Ch. xxix. 31. Cf. also Ex. xxix. 22 'the ram of installation' (lit. of filling).

42, 43. The linen drawers, to be worn by the priests during their ministrations in the Tent of meeting or at the altar. A dictate of reverence and modesty. The layman was forbidden to go up by steps to the altar, lest he should expose his person upon it (xx. 26): for the priests, who did go up upon the altar (see on xxvii. 5), and were otherwise frequently engaged in or near the Tent of meeting, special garments were provided, in order to prevent the same unseemliness. Among the Romans the Flamen Dialis similarly (Gell. x. 15), 'tunicam intimam nisi in locis tectis non exiit, ne sub caelo tanquam sub oculis Jovis nudus sit' (cited by Kn.).

breeches] Only in this connexion (xxxix. 28, Lev. vi. 10, xvi. 4; and in Ezek.'s regulations for the priesthood, xliv. 18†): from the description, evidently what we should call either loincloths or drawers. LXX. περικελή; Jos. (Ant. iii. 7. 1) διάζωμα περὶ τὰ αἰδοῖα.

the tent of meeting, or when they come near unto the altar P to minister in the holy place; that they bear not iniquity, and die: it shall be a statute for ever unto him and unto his seed after him.

43. the altar] i.e. the altar of burnt-offering: cf. on xxvii. 1.

the holy place] i.e. the sanctuary in general (including the court), as xxxvi. 1, 3, 4, 6; not in the special sense of xxvi. 33; for the altar of burnt-offering did not stand in the Dwelling, but in the court (xl. 6). With to minister, as xxix. 30, xxxv. 19 al. (P); Ez. xlv. 27.

bear iniquity and die, cf. Lev. xxii. 16 (H); and on v. 35 above.

a statute for ever] as xxx. 21, Lev. vi. 18, 22, vii. 34, x. 15, xxiv. 9, Nu. xviii. 8, 11, 19 (all P): cf. on xii. 14 (where the Heb. is hukhāh, the fem. of hōh, the word used here).

and...his seed after him] one of P's standing expressions: Gen. ix. 9, xvii. 7, 8, 9, 10, 19, xxxv. 12, xlviii. 4, Nu. xxv. 13.

On the Ephod.

The high priest's Ephod, it is clear, was a decorated garment: but the position in which it was worn is not clearly stated; and though it has commonly been regarded as worn above the waist (like a waistcoat), Moore (E.B. ii. 1308), Holz., and esp. E. Sellin in a paper on the ephod in Orient. Studien Theodor Nöldeke zum siebenzigsten Geburtstag gewidmet (1906), ii. 701 f. (cf. Rashi on Ex. xxviii. 4, 6), argue that it was worn below the waist, and was in fact a kind of apron (Moore), or short tightly-fitting skirt: the 'band' of the ephod, upon this view, was not at the bottom of the ephod, but at its top, the ephod being suspended from it; and the pouch (which was upon Aaron's 'heart') was not upon the ephod, but likewise above it ('al' in v. 28 being rendered not 'upon,' but 'above'). Sellin urges the terms of v. 27 f.; and it is certainly more natural to suppose that the straps ended at the top of the ephod, and that this was the place of the 'juncture' spoken of in v. 27, than that they were continued on the front, down each side, as the usual explanation requires. Still, neither this nor the other arguments adduced seem to be conclusive. It is true, the priests in Egypt wore round their loins short plain skirts (Erman, p. 296: for illustrations of such skirts, see pp. 59 (=209), 62, 204, 205, 207, Perrot and Chipiez, Art in Phoen. ii. 11, 28, 31, 125, 129; cf. Maspero, i. 405, 468 f.): but this does not prove much; for we do not know that the idea of the high priest's ephod was derived from Egypt. (In Perrot and Chipiez's Egyptian Art, i. 247, 302, there are two figures wearing vest-like garments, reaching from the breasts nearly to the knees, with both a band round the waist, and shoulder-straps.)

As regards the notices of the 'ephod,' the earlier historical books mention (a) a linen ephod, with which Samuel and David are 'girt,' when performing sacred, if not priestly, offices—either a plain linen 'waistcoat' (cf. p. 300), or a short skirt girt about the waist (cf. the illustrations cited above); (b) an ephod 'borne' (not 'worn') by priests, valued by them as a distinctive possession (1 S. ii. 28), and used in some way when Jehovah was consulted by means of the Urim and Thummim (1 S. xiv. 3, 18 LXX. (see RVM.), xxi. 9, xxii. 18 [omit linen with LXX.: the ephod is here 'borne'; see Kennedy's note], xxiii. 6, 9, xxx. 7); (c) the 'ephod' made by Gideon, Jud. viii. 27; and (d) in conjunction with the oracular (Ez. xxi. 21) 'teraphim,' Jud. xvii. 5, xviii. 14, 17, 18, 20, Hos. iii. 4. In 1 S. xxi. 9, (c) and (d) 'ephod' has often been taken to be a plated image (cf. the cognate 'Āphuddāh, which clearly means the gold casing of an image in Is. xxx. 22): in 1 S. xiv. 3, &c. (b) it is clearly used in some way in obtaining an oracle, and the same is doubtless the case with (d), if not with (c). But though we thus learn the use to which the ephod is put, we do not learn what the ephod was. On the whole, however, it seems probable that at least in (b) and (d) the ephod was a more decorated garment than the 'linen ephod' (a), worn at this time by the priest in his ordinary ministrations, and was one specially put on by him, as a mark of respect, when consulting the oracle (Sellin, pp. 712, 716; cf. Livy, xxiii. 11). As years went on, the dress of the priests, and especially of the high priest, became more elaborate and ornate; and the high-priestly ephod, as described by P, will be the form which this vestment ultimately assumed. The sacred lots were kept in a pouch attached to the high priest's ephod; it seems probable that this was already the case with the ephod mentioned in (b) and (d). This may explain why in (b) the ephod is spoken of, not as worn, but as 'borne': it was not regularly 'worn' by the priest; it was carried about by the priest from place to place, especially on a campaign, and only 'brought near,' and put on, when occasion required: it was not only a garment, but had also attached to it a receptacle for the sacred lots: it thus provided the means of consulting them; and to 'bear,' or carry, it was a highly prized prerogative of the priests (1 S. ii. 28, xxii. 18). See further DB. and EB. s.v., DB. iv. 840<sup>a</sup>, v. 641 f.; Kennedy, Sam. p. 49; Holz., with ill., pp. 135—9; Benzinger, Arch.<sup>2</sup> 347 f., 359 (a skirt); and esp. Sellin, as cited).

On the Urim and Thummim.

In addition to Ex. xxviii. 30, the Urim and Thummim are mentioned in the ||, Lev. viii. 8, and (the Urim alone) in Nu. xxvii. 21 (both P: here Eleazar is to determine for Joshua by their help when Israel is to 'go out' and 'come in'); in the Blessing attributed to Moses, Dt. xxxiii. 8 (as a privileged possession of the priestly tribe), in 1 S. xxviii. 6 (the Urim alone,—Jehovah answered Saul 'neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets'), in Ezr. ii. 63=Neh. vii. 65 ('till a priest should rise up with Urim and Thummim,' implying they were lost in the post-exilic age); and esp. in the original Heb. text of 1 S. xiv. 41, presupposed by the LXX. which throws the greatest light upon the manner in which they were used, 'And Saul said, O Jehovah, the God of Israel, why hast thou not answered thy servant

this day? 'If the iniquity be in me or in Jonathan my son, give Urim; and if it be in thy people Israel, give Thummim. And Jonathan and Saul were taken by lot, but the people escaped.' (The Heb. words rendered in RVm. = A.V. 'Give a perfect (lot)' are a mutilated fragment of the longer text preserved in LXX., thāmin, 'perfect,' differing from 'Thummim' only in vocalization.) The priest who cast the lots on this occasion was evidently Ahijah, who just before (vv. 3, 18 RVm.) is mentioned as 'bearing' (above, p. 313) an ephod; and a comparison of the other passages in 1 Sam. in which the priest asks for a Divine decision with the help of the ephod, makes it probable that on these occasions also the Urim and Thummim, though not actually mentioned, were in fact employed: see 1 S. xiv. 18 (read as RVm.), 19, 37, xxiii. 10—12 (see v. 6), xxx. 7, 8. After David's time the Urim and Thummim are not mentioned in the history; and though we are naturally not in a position to say that they were never resorted to, yet the increasing importance of the prophets as announcers of the Divine will, and the more spiritual conceptions of God which their teaching brought with it, make it probable that their use fell more and more into abeyance. But the possession of the sacred lots was an ancient and prized prerogative of the priestly caste (Dt. xxxiii. 8); the right of using them was doubtless jealously maintained by the chief priest till—through whatever cause—they were lost (Ezr. ii. 63); and so they naturally found a place in P's description of the high priest's official dress, and their original institution was referred back to Moses.

The etymological meaning of 'Urim and Thummim' is uncertain. Regarded as two Heb. words, they would naturally signify Lights and Perfections; but as giving the original sense of the expression, this explanation is anything but satisfactory. It is possible that the words are the Hebraized forms of two originally Babylonian technical terms. The LXX. usually express Urim by either δῆλοι (sc. λίθοι), i.e. 'visible, manifest (stones),'—and so in the Greek text of Ecclus. xxxiii. 3 (codd. NA and RV.), xlv. 10,—or δήλωσις, 'manifestation, declaration'; and Thummim by ἀλήθεια, 'truth' (cf. Ecclus. xlv. 10): the former rend. is a paraphrase of 'Lights': the latter—as the translators lived in Egypt—may have been suggested to them by the fact that in Egypt the judge presiding at a trial wore, suspended from his neck, an image of Tme, the Egyptian goddess of truth (Wilk.-B. i. 296, iii. 183 f.; Diod. i. 48, 75). For further particulars on the whole subject, see Kennedy in DB., and Moore in EB., s.v.

xxix. 1—37 (cf. Lev. viii.). The ritual for the consecration of the priests. Vv. 1—3 (preparation of materials for the sacrifices) are preliminary: the ritual itself consists of the following parts: (1) washing the body, v. 4; (2) investiture and anointing of the high priest, vv. 5—7, and the investiture of the ordinary priests, vv. 8—9; (3) a triple sacrifice, viz. (a) a sin-offering on behalf of the priests who are to be installed, vv. 10—14, (b) a burnt-offering, such as would naturally form part of a solemn ceremony, vv. 15—18; (c) the installation-offering itself (essentially a peace-offering), with the accompanying ceremonies, vv. 19—26, 31—34: the entire ceremonial is to be repeated every day,

P And this is the thing that thou shalt do unto them to 29 and wafers unleavened anointed with oil: of fine wheaten flour shalt thou make them. And thou shalt put them into 3 one basket, and bring them in the basket, with the bullock and the two rams. And Aaron and his sons thou 4 shalt bring unto the door of the tent of meeting, and shalt wash them with water. And thou shalt take the 5 for seven days, v. 35. Vv. 27—30 are parenthetical; and vv. 36—37 give directions for the purification of the altar. The execution of the instructions here given is narrated in Lev. viii. The entire section, though it stands here, must have been written after the regulations of Lev. i.—vii. had been long in force; for in the directions for the cakes, &c., for the burnt-, the sin-, and (largely) for the installation-offering, it presupposes both the phraseology of Lev. i.—vii. and also the sacrificial usages there codified. For the same reason the fuller explanation of the technical terms employed belongs rather to a Commentary on Leviticus than to one on Exodus; to which accordingly the reader is referred for further information on such points.

1—3. Preparation of the offerings (cf. Lev. viii. 2).

2. Three kinds of biscuit, for the minhāh, or meal-offering (see on Lev. ii.), accompanying the installation-offering: viz. (1) bread of unleavened cakes, see on xii. 15; (2) perforated cakes (EB. i. 460) unleavened, mingled with oil, see on Lev. ii. 4; and (3) wafers (large, circular, very thin cakes: see EB. i. 605; L. and B. iii. 219 f.), unleavened, anointed with oil, see also on Lev. ii. 4.

4. Washing of Aaron and his 'sons' (i.e. the common priests, as distinguished from the high priest); cf. Lev. viii. 6. This washing extended to the entire person; and was different from the subsequent ordinary washings of the hands and feet before the daily ministrations (xxx. 19 f.).

5—7. The investiture and anointing of the high priest. The high priest is to be arrayed in the garments described in ch. xxviii., and then to have his head anointed. Cf. Lev. viii. 7—9, 10<sup>a</sup>, 12 (vv. 10<sup>b</sup>—11, relating to the anointing of the Dwelling, altar, &c., have no parallel in Ex. xxix., and seem out of place).

5. the coat] the tunic (xxviii. 39). After the tunic, the sash seems to have been accidentally omitted: see Lev. viii. 7 (EVV. 'girdle').

and fasten (it) to him with the band of the ephod] see on xxviii. 8.

thou shalt set the 'mitre upon his head, and put the holy P
 7 crown upon the 'mitre. Then shalt thou take the anointing 8 oil, and pour it upon his head, and anoint him. And thou shalt bring his sons, and put coats upon them.
 9 And thou shalt gird them with girdles, | Aaron and his G
 sons, | and bind headties on them: and they shall have the P priesthood by a perpetual statute: and thou shalt consecrate 10 Aaron and his sons. And thou shalt bring the bullock before the tent of meeting: and Aaron and his sons shall 11 lay their hands upon the head of the bullock. And thou shalt kill the bullock before the LORD, at the door of the

The verb rendered 'fasten' is formed from 'ephod,' and means only to fit or fasten as an ephod. In Lev. viii. 7 rendered bound, which, however, connects it incorrectly with the preceding 'band.'

6. the mitre] the turban: xxviii. 37.

the holy crown] so xxxix. 30, Lev. viii. 9. Better, the holy diadem. The term does not occur in ch. xxviii.; but it doubtless denotes the blue lace, with the gold plate in front, which was tied, in the manner of a 'diadem,' round the white turban of the high priest (see on xxviii. 37). The word is also used of a royal diadem (2 S. i. 10 al.); and perhaps means properly a (mark of) separation (to Jehovah).

7. the anointing oil] see, for its ingredients and use, xxx. 22—33. Here only the high priest is anointed, in accordance with the expression 'anointed priest,' by which he is distinguished from the ordinary priests (Lev. iv. 3, 5, 16, vi. 22). On some other passages in P in which the ordinary priests are represented as anointed, see on xxx. 30.

8—9. The investiture of the ordinary priests (Lev. viii. 13). These are to be dressed in their tunics, sashes, and caps (xxviii. 40). The words Aaron and his sons (which are inexact, for 'Aaron' had no 'cap,' xxviii. 40) are not in LXX., or in the corresponding passage, Lev. viii. 13; they are doubtless a gloss, due to the fact that the 'girdle' (sash) for Aaron was not mentioned in v. 5 (so Di.). The linen drawers (xxviii. 42 f.) are not noticed either here or in Lev. viii. 7, 13.

9. consecrate] install (lit. fill the hands of): see on xxviii. 41.

10—14. The sin-offering (see on Lev. iv.) for Aaron and his sons (Lev. viii. 14—17).

10. lay their hands upon] to mark it formally as their sacrifice: see on Lev. i. 4; and cf. (in the ritual of the sin-offering) Lev. iv. 4.

11. Cf. Lev. iv. 4.

12. The Hebrew regarded the blood as the seat of the 'soul,' or principle of life; and it was in virtue of the 'soul' that was in it, that it made atonement (see Lev. xvii. 11). By its application to the horns

P bullock, and put it upon the horns of the altar with thy finger; and thou shalt pour out all the blood at the base of the altar. And thou shalt take all the fat that covereth the <sup>13</sup> inwards, and the caul upon the liver, and the two kidneys, of the altar (cf. Lev. iv. 25, 30, 34),—as in other cases to those of the altar-of incense, or to the mercy-seat (Lev. iv. 7, 18, xvi. 14, 15),—it was brought near to Jehovah.

upon the horns (xxvii. 2) of the altar] i.e. of the altar of burnt-offering (xxvii. 1 ff.), exactly as in the cases of the sin-offering for laymen specified in Lev. iv. 25, 30, 34 (contrast vv. 6 f., 17 f.): the priests, before their consecration is completed, are treated as laity.

at the base of the altar] as in the ordinary sin-offering, Lev. iv. 7, 18, 25, 30, 34; cf. v. 9, viii. 15 (the parallel to the present passage), ix. 9. The 'base' (lit. foundation) of the altar is mentioned only in these passages. On the additions in Lev. viii. 15, respecting the atonement made for the altar, see below, on v. 36.

13. The parts of the sin-offering which were regularly consumed upon the altar: see Lev. iv. 8 f. On the parts in question, see more fully on Lev. iii. 4.

the fat that covereth the entrails] i.e., probably, what is called technically the 'great omentum,' a highly fatty membrane, which in ruminants covers the whole of the paunch, and extends partially over the intestines. See Leviticus in SBOT., Plate opp. to p. 4, and p. 65; E.B. iv. 4206.

the caul (i.e. net) upon the liver] the appendix (Heb. the redundancy upon the liver, i.e., as Moore in the Orient. Studien Th. Nöldeke gewidmet (1906), ii. 761 ff., has convincingly shewn, what is called technically the lobus caudatus, or tail-shaped lobe, a small finger-shaped appendix—in the Mishna, Tamid iv. 3, it is actually called 'the finger of the liver'—projecting from the liver close to the right kidney (cf. Lev. iii. 4, to be rendered as RVm.). This, as Moore shews, is how the term was understood by the oldest interpreters, LXX., Onk., Pesh., and in the Mishna: LXX. ὁ λοβός does not mean, as Bochart and many others supposed, 'the greater lobe' of the liver itself, but 'the lobe' κατ' ἐξοχήν, i.e. this appendix, which was specially important in ancient divination (cf. Aesch. P.V. 495; Eurip. Electra, 828: see also Jastrow in O.T. and Semitic Studies in memory of W. R. Harper, 1908, ii. 289, 294, 326, in a paper on Bab. liver-divination)<sup>1</sup>. It was no doubt this ancient significance of the lobus caudatus which led to its being specially selected for consumption upon the altar. The rend. caul (i.e. net, the 'lesser omentum') is first found in Jerome (reticulum).

and the fat that is upon them, and burn them upon the P 14 altar. But the flesh of the bullock, and its skin, and its dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: it is a 15 <sup>1</sup>sin offering. Thou shalt also take the one ram; and Aaron and his sons shall lay their hands upon the head of 16 the ram. And thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take 17 its blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar. And burn them] consume them in sweet smoke: Heb. hiktir, lit. make odorous (the cogn. Arab. means to exhale odour in roasting), or turn into sweet smoke (cf. the Greek κνλαη, of the steam of a burning sacrifice, as Il. i. 317). The word is always used of burning either a sacrificial offering or incense; and must be distinguished from sāraph, the ordinary Heb. word for burn (i.e. to destroy by fire) vv. 14, 32, &c. In Ex. hiktir recurs vv. 18, 25, xxx. 7, 8, 20, xl. 27: it is frequent in Lev. (i. 9, 13, &c.), and also occurs elsewhere (as 2 K. xvi. 15).

14. When a sin-offering was offered for priests, or for the whole community, including the priests, its flesh was burnt (cf. Lev. iv. 11 f., 21, ix. 11); when it was offered for laymen, the flesh was eaten by the priests (Lev. v. 13, vi. 26). Though the priests are here treated as lay (see on v. 12), the flesh is to be burnt, because no proper priest is present to eat it (Di.).

dung] better, for distinction, offal,—viz. that removed from the animals offered in sacrifice: Lev. iv. 11, viii. 17, xvi. 27, Nu. xix. 5, Mal. ii. 3†.

a sin offering] see on Lev. iv.

15—18. The burnt-offering (Lev. viii. 18—21),—such as would naturally form part of a solemn ceremony. On the ritual, see more fully Lev. i.

16. sprinkle] toss: viz. in a volume, out of a tossing-vessel or basin (see on xxvii. 3). 'Sprinkle' not only conveys an incorrect idea of the action meant, but also confuses it with an entirely different action, correctly represented by 'sprinkle' (Lev. iv. 6, 17, v. 9 &c.): it is to be regretted that the distinction, obliterated in AV., but correctly pointed out in the Speaker's Commentary (i. ii. 499<sup>b</sup>) in 1871, should not have been preserved in RV. The reader who desires to understand correctly the sacrificial ritual of the Hebrew should correct on the margin of his copy of the RV. toss or throw for 'sprinkle' (with against for 'upon,' where altar follows: see the next note) here, v. 20, Ex. xxiv. 6, Lev. i. 5, 11, iii. 2, 8, 13, vii. 2, 14, viii. 19, 24, ix. 12, 18, xvii. 6, Nu. xviii. 17, xix. 13, 20 (but vv. 4, 18, 19, 21 'sprinkle' is correct), 2 K. xvi. 13, 15, Ez. xliii. 18, 2 Ch. xxix. 22, xxx. 16, xxxv. 11; also Ez. xxxvi. 25 and Ex. ix. 8, 10.

upon] against. As the Jews expressly state, the blood was thrown not upon the altar, but against the sides of it, and in such a manner that with two movements of the 'tossing-vessel' the blood was thrown against its four sides (Zebāhim v. 4 ff.; Rashi on Lev. i. 5). So Lev. i. 5, 11, &c.

P thou shalt cut the ram into its pieces, and wash its inwards, and its legs, and put them <sup>1</sup>with its pieces, and <sup>1</sup>with its head. And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: <sup>13</sup> it is a burnt offering unto the LORD: it is a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD. And thou <sup>19</sup> shalt take the other ram; and Aaron and his sons shall lay their hands upon the head of the ram. Then shalt thou <sup>20</sup>

17. cut...into its pieces] i.e. divide it by its joints. So Lev. i. 6 al.

and wash, &c.] Lev. i. 9, 13.

and put them, &c.] viz. on the altar: cf. v. 18, and Lev. i. 8 f., 12 f.

18. a burnt offering] see Lev. i.

a sweet savour] a soothing odour (McNeile), lit. an odour of rest-giving, i.e. one composing and acceptable to the Deity. It is a technical expression for the fragrant odour emitted by a burning sacrifice, and is doubtless a survival from the time when the deity was supposed to be actually placated by the smell of the sacrificial smoke (see on v. 13). It is used, repeatedly by P (Lev. i. 9, 13 &c.), and once by J (Gen. viii. 21). Comp. the erēshē tābu, or 'goodly odour,' offered to the Bab. gods (EB. iv. 4119; cf. Del. HWB. 121, 140<sup>a</sup>). 'Sweet savour' is a paraphrase based upon the rend. of LXX. δσμὴ εὐωδίας 'an odour of a sweet smell' (Phil. iv. 18). Note that 'savour' in Old English meant not only taste (Mt. v. 13), but smell, as Joel ii. 20, and 2 Cor. ii. 14, 16 for δσμὴ: see DB., s.v.

an offering made by fire] in the Heb. one word,—as we might say, a firing. Another expression of the priestly terminology, used often by P (Lev. i. 9, 13, 17, &c.), and occurring also twice besides (Dt. xviii. 1, 1 S. ii. 28).

19—26. The installation-offering (cf. Lev. viii. 22—29). This was essentially a peace-offering,—the special characteristic of which was that the flesh of the sacrifice was partaken of by the offerer and his friends (cf. on xx. 24; and see here vv. 32—34),—with modifications due to the particular occasion (such as the application of the blood to the priests and their garments, vv. 20, 21, the solemn 'waving' of the offerings in the priests' hands, vv. 22—25, the special term 'ram of installation,' &c.). On the peace-offering in general, see Lev. iii.

19—20. The second of the two rams (v. 1) to be killed, and its blood applied to the persons of Aaron and his sons (cf. Lev. viii. 22—4).

20. The organs of hearing, handling, and walking are touched by the blood, implying that the priest is to have hallowed ears to listen to God's commands, hallowed hands to perform his sacred offices, and kill the ram, and take of its blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and sprinkle the blood 21 upon the altar round about. And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and 22 his sons' garments with him. Also thou shalt take of the ram the fat, and the fat tail, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul of the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and the right <sup>1</sup>thigh; for it is a hallowed feet to tread rightly the sacred places, as also to walk generally in holy ways (Kn. Di. Bā). Cf. Lev. viii. 23, 24.

 23 ram of consecration: and one loaf of bread, and one cake

and sprinkle] and toss: see on v. 16.

21 (cf. Lev. viii. 30). A mixture of the sacrificial blood, and of the anointing oil (v. 7), to be sprinkled upon Aaron and his sons, and also upon their garments.

22—25. Symbolical investiture of the priests with authority to offer sacrifice. Select portions of the offerings to be placed on their open hands, waved, as they lie there, forwards and backwards before the altar, and finally burnt upon it (Lev. viii. 25—28).

22. the fat, and] read with Sam. 'the fat, (even)''; the fat tail, as Lev. iii. 9, vii. 3 shew, was part of the fat of the animal. So Di. (on Lev. viii. 25), Bā. &c.

the fat tail] Lev. iii. 9, vii. 3, viii. 25, ix. 19†; and probably to be restored in 1 S. ix. 24 (for the ungrammatical 'that which was upon it'). What is meant is the large tail of certain species of sheep, still bred in Palestine, and elsewhere, which was esteemed a delicacy. The tail is often so heavy as to need the support of a little cart (Hdt. iii. 113; EB. iv. 4441: see ill. in Jewish Encycl. xi. 50).

the right thigh] so rightly; not shoulder (RVm.=AV.). In the ordinary peace-offering this was the perquisite of the officiating priest (Lev. vii. 32 f.); here it is burnt ultimately (v. 25) upon the altar. The other parts mentioned were burnt regularly on the altar (Lev. iii. 9—11).

a ram of installation] lit. 'of filling' (sc. of hands): cf. the cognate verb in v. 9. 'Consecration' is not sufficiently distinctive. So vv. 26, 27, 31, 34; in the §§, Lev. viii. 22, 28, 29, 31, 33; and Lev. vii. 37†.

23. a loaf] a round (kikkār)—corresponding to the 'bread of

P of oiled bread, and one wafer, out of the basket of unleavened bread that is before the LORD: and thou shalt put <sup>24</sup> the whole upon the hands of Aaron, and upon the hands of his sons; and shalt wave them for a wave offering before the LORD. And thou shalt take them from their hands, <sup>25</sup> and burn them on the altar upon the burnt offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD. And thou shalt take the breast of <sup>26</sup> Aaron's ram of consecration, and wave it for a wave offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy portion. And <sup>27</sup> unleavened cakes' of v. 2. A circular flat 'cake' is meant, not what we should call a 'loaf.' For cake read perforated cake, as v. 2.

the basket (v. 3) of unleavened cakes that is before Jehovah] i.e. at the entrance of the Tent of meeting (v. 32; cf. Lev. viii. 3).

24. hands] lit. palms; hence 'upon,' i.e. upon the open palms.

wave them] Moses is to 'wave' the offerings enumerated in vv. 22, 23, as they lie upon the priests' hands, before Jehovah—i.e. to wave them not from right to left, but towards the altar and back. The ceremony of 'waving'—first in H, Lev. xxiii. 11, 20—is prescribed mostly for offerings which become ultimately the perquisite of the priests: and it seems to be intended as a symbolical expression of the fact that such offerings are first given to God, and then given back by Him to the priest for his own use (Di. on Lev. vii. 30, Now. ii. 239, Bā.): cf. Nu. v. 25; and see further on Lev. vii. 30. Here, as the offerings were afterwards, not given to the priests, but burned upon the altar (v. 25), the symbolism of the ceremony must be different; perhaps it is meant as a symbolical induction of the priests by Moses into their office of presenting sacrifices upon the altar (Bā.).

25. Finally, Moses is himself—the priests being not as yet fully installed, and authorized to do so themselves—to take the offerings from their hands and burn them upon the altar. In Lev. viii. 28 the parts thus burnt are expressly called the installation (-offering).

for a soothing odour before Jehovah] See on v. 18.

26. The breast of the ram to be 'waved' before Jehovah, and then given to Moses (cf. Lev. viii. 29). The breast of the ordinary peace-offering, after being 'waved' before Jehovah, was the perquisite of the priests (Lev. vii. 30 f.); here it is given analogously to Moses (who throughout the present ceremony acts the part of priest).

wave] used here in the strict sense explained on v. 24.

27—30. Two parenthetical regulations: neither in Lev. viii.

27—28. Both the breast and the thigh of the ram of installation to be in perpetuity the perquisite of Aaron and his sons. The verses (which do not agree with vv. 22, 24; for the thigh which was there thou shalt sanctify the breast of the wave offering, and the <sup>P</sup> <sup>1</sup>thigh of the heave offering, which is waved, and which is heaved up, of the ram of consecration, even of that which 28 is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons: and it shall be for Aaron and his sons as a due for ever from the children of Israel: for it is an heave offering: and it shall be an heave offering from the children of Israel of the sacrifices of their peace offerings, even their heave offering 29 unto the LORD. And the holy garments of Aaron shall be for his sons after him, to be anointed in them, and to be burnt on the altar is here to be the perquisite of the priests) are probably a later insertion, correcting v. 26, and harmonizing (though imperfectly) vv. 22, 25 with the practice that was usual in the case of a peace-offering, viz. for the priests to receive both the breast and the right thigh (Lev. vii. 32—34).

27. the breast of the wave offering] or, the wave breast, as this part of the peace-offering was technically called (Lev. vii. 34, x. 14 al.).

the thigh of the heave offering] elsewhere (Lev. vii. 34 al.) the heave thigh: better (see on xxv. 2), the thigh of the contribution, i.e. the thigh which was contributed by the worshipper to the priest. As was explained on xxv. 2, no rite of elevation is implied in the expression.

heaved up] contributed; lit. lifted up, or separated, from a larger mass for a sacred purpose. Cf. xxxv. 24; and see DB. iii. 588<sup>a</sup> (5 a).

from the ram of installation, (even) from that which is for Aaron, and from that which, &c.] 'that which' (twice) is in apposition with 'the ram of installation.'

28. for Aaron and his sons] in Lev. vii. 33 it is laid down that the 'heave thigh' is to be in particular the perquisite of the officiating priest.

a due (hōk; lit. statute) for ever] See on xxvii. 21.

an heave offering (twice)] a contribution (v. 27); something 'lifted off' and separated from the rest of the sacrifice as a priestly due: cf. Nu. xviii. 8, 11, 19.

of the sacrifices] out of would be clearer, as in the || Lev. vii. 34.

peace offerings] See more fully on Lev. iii., and vii. 28—34.

unto Jehovah] who, however, gives them back to the priests (Nu. xviii. 8).

29—30. The costly and decorated vestments of the high priest to be passed on to his successors in the office. Another parenthetical regulation, if not a later insertion: the continuation of v. 26 is clearly v. 31.

29. his sons] as v. 30 shews, the series of eldest sons, in the line of direct descent, are meant.

to be anointed in them] v. 7.

P consecrated in them. Seven days shall the son that is <sup>30</sup> priest in his stead put them on, when he cometh into the tent of meeting to minister in the holy place. And <sup>31</sup> thou shalt take the ram of consecration, and seethe its flesh in a holy place. And Aaron and his sons shall eat the <sup>32</sup> flesh of the ram, and the bread that is in the basket, at the door of the tent of meeting. And they shall eat those <sup>33</sup> things wherewith atonement was made, to consecrate and to sanctify them: but a stranger shall not eat thereof, because they are holy. And if aught of the flesh of the <sup>34</sup> consecrated] installed, as v. 9.

when he cometh] i.e. first cometh. More clearly, who is to come.

<sup>31—34.</sup> Continuation of v. 26 (cf. Lev. viii. 31—2). The sacrificial meal accompanying the peace-offering; the flesh of the ram of installation to be eaten by Aaron and his sons in the court of the Tent of Meeting. For the general principle, see Lev. vii. 15—21; and cf. on Ex. xviii. 12.

in a holy place, i.e. in the court: see on Lev. vi. 16. In the ||, Lev. viii. 31, 'at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting,' where also (as directed here in v. 32) it is to be eaten.

atonement] i.e. at-one-ment, setting at one, reconciliation, as in Shakespeare (e.g. Rich. III. i. 3. 36). This is always the meaning of 'atonement' in the Bible (as in Old-English generally): the idea of amends or reparation for a fault, which the word now mostly suggests, is not implied in either its Hebrew or its Greek equivalent. See further DB. iv. 128; and on xxx. 10. The burnt-, the guilt-, and the sin-offering are in P often said to 'make atonement' (see the references in DB. iv. 130<sup>a</sup>), but this is the only passage of P in which that is predicated of a peace-offering.

a stranger] Heb. zār; i.e., here, one not a priest (see esp. Nu. xvi. 40), a frequent use of the word in P (xxx. 33, Nu. iii. 10, 38. xviii. 7 al.; see further DB. iv. 622<sup>a</sup>, near the bottom). Quite a different word from the ones rendered stranger in xii. 48 (gér), and strange in ii. 22 (nokri): see the notes on these passages, and STRANGE, STRANGER, in DB.

 then thou shalt burn the remainder with fire: it shall not unto Aaron, and to his sons, according to all that I have commanded thee: seven days shalt thou consecrate of sin offering for atonement: and thou shalt 'cleanse the altar, when thou makest atonement for it; and thou consecration] installation(-sacrifice). See v. 31.

35. To make it the more solemn and efficacious, the entire installation-ceremony is to be repeated every day for seven days (cf. Lev. viii. 33—35). In Lev. it is added that the priests are to remain during the whole of the seven days at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting.

36, 37. The altar to be fitted for sacred uses by atonement being made for it: the ceremony to be repeated, like the installation-ceremony, every day for seven days. The altar, as the work of human hands, was regarded as infected by a natural uncleanness, which had to be ceremonially removed before it could be used for sacred purposes. Cf. the atoning rites, to continue for seven days, prescribed by Ezek. for the installation of the altar of the restored Temple, Ez. xliii. 18—27.

36. offer] Heb. do: see on x. 25.

the bullock] a bullock (so the Heb.): upon independent grounds, also, the bullock of vv. 1, 10—14 can hardly be meant; for vv. 1, 10 speak only of atonement for the priests; and the ceremonies enjoined in v. 12 are in particular those prescribed in Lev. iv. 7, 18, 25, 30, 34 for persons. It is true, two clauses referring to the altar ('and un-sinned the altar,' 'and sanctified it by making atonement for it') are found in Lev. viii. 15 (the || to v. 12 here); but the absence of any corresponding instructions in Ex. xxix. 12 raises the suspicion that they are later additions to the text, based upon vv. 36 f. here.

cleanse the altar] free the altar from sin, or, if it is permissible to coin a word, corresponding approximately to the single word hittî (see G.-K. § 52<sup>b</sup>) of the Heb., un-sin the altar. Either cleanse or purge (RVm.) leaves out a distinctive part of the Heb. idea: the Hebrews understood 'sin' in a wider sense than we do, and regarded it as capable of infecting even a material object. The word occurs in the same sense Lev. viii. 15 (of the altar, as here), xiv. 49 (of a leprous house), 52; Nu. xix. 19 (RV. purify); Ez. xliii. 20, 22 (twice), 23 (all of the altar), xlv. 18 (of the sanctuary); Ps. li. 7 (purge)†; and in the reflexive conj., Nu. viii. 21, xix. 12 (twice), 13, 20, xxxi. 19, 20, 23†.

P shalt anoint it, to sanctify it. Seven days thou shalt make <sup>37</sup> atonement for the altar, and sanctify it: and the altar shall be most holy; <sup>1</sup> whatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy.

regarded as infected with sin. For other cases of 'atonement' being made for a material object—regarded either as affected by the natural impurity of human workmanship, or as tainted by contact with a sinful people—see (of the altar of burnt-offering) Lev. viii. 15 (the execution of the present injunction), Ez. xliii. 20, 26, Lev. xvi. 18, 20, 33; (of the altar of incense) ch. xxx. 10<sup>b</sup>; (of the sanctuary) Ez. xlv. 20, Lev. xvi. 16, 20, 33; (of a leprous house) Lev. xiv. 53 (DB. iv. 131<sup>b</sup>).

thou shalt anoint it] Cf. Lev. viii. 11 (in the insertion referred to on v. 7 above, between the words corresponding to v. 7<sup>a</sup> and v. 7<sup>b</sup> here). See on xxx. 26—28 and 29 (at the end).

shall become holy] i.e. become sacred to Jehovah, implying that, if it be a thing ('whatsoever'), it will be forfeited to the sanctuary (cf. Nu. xvi. 37, 38, where the censers which had rashly been made 'holy,' are retained in the service of the sanctuary, and made into beaten plates for the altar; Dt. xxii. 9, Lev. xxvii. 10, Jos. vi. 19<sup>a</sup>, compared with 19<sup>b</sup>), and, if it be a person ('whosoever,' the more prob. rendering), not already properly consecrated, and so able to touch sacred things with impunity, that he is given over to the Deity to be dealt with by Him as He pleases. So xxx. 29, Lev. vi. 18<sup>b</sup>, 27; cf. Ez. xlvi. 20<sup>b</sup>, where 'sanctify' is to be similarly explained. We have here, as in the passages quoted, a survival of primitive ideas of 'holiness.' Holiness, i.e. consecration to a deity, is a contagious quality: thus the altar or the incense is holy, and whatever touches it becomes holy. What is holy must further be kept from profane use, and not touched, without due precaution, or by unfit persons; a person touching it in heedlessness or curiosity becomes thereby 'holy' himself, and may be dealt with by the Deity as He pleases, even to the extent of having to pay for his imprudence with his life: cf. 2 S. vi. 6 f.; Nu. iv. 15, 20, xvi. 37 end, 38<sup>a</sup> [read as RVm.]. See Dr Gray's luminous note, Numbers, pp. 209—211, with the passages cited by him from Frazer's Golden Bough, e.g. ¶. 321 (ed. 2), 'In New Zealand the dread of the sanctity of chiefs was at least as great as in Tonga. Their ghostly power, derived from an ancestral spirit or atua, diffused itself by contagion over everything they touched, and could strike dead all who rashly or unwittingly 38—42. The burnt-offering, to be offered daily, morning and evening, on behalf of the community. A law in great measure verbally identical, but somewhat fuller, recurs in Nu. xxviii. 3—8, in a table, Nu. xxviii.—xxix., of public sacrifices prescribed for different days in the year. Here it interrupts the connexion between vv. 37 and 43; so it is probable (Di. al.) that it has been introduced here from Nu. xxviii. with some abridgements, and adjustments in vv. 38<sup>a</sup>, 42<sup>b</sup>, fitting it to its new place, by a later hand, just as xxvii. 20 f. seems to have been similarly introduced from Lev. xxiv. 2 f. Its position (after v. 36 f.) is suitable: for the daily burnt-offering was a central and fundamental element in the worship (cf. Wellh. Hist. p. 80)—notice the terms in which its suspension by Antiochus Epiphanes is alluded to in Dan. viii. 12 f., xi. 31, xii. 11—and its proper maintenance was one of the chief duties to be performed on the altar of v. 36 f.

The law, like Nu. xxviii. 3—8 (cf. also Lev. vi. 9), regulates the post-exilic usage. Before the exile, as 2 K. xvi. 15 shews, it was the custom to offer a burnt-offering in the morning, but only a minhāh, i.e. a cereal, or 'meal,' offering in the evening; Ezek. also (xlvi. 13—15) prescribes for the restored temple only a morning burnt-offering (with accompanying meal-offering: he prescribes no evening offering at all). Before the exile the minhāh thus held an independent position, as the evening offering: the present law duplicates the burnt-offering, and at the same time subordinates the evening minhāh to the evening burnt-offering (cf. on v. 40).

38. the altar] the altar of burnt-offering, just referred to (v. 36 f.).

40. The minhāh, or 'meal-offering' (see Lev. ii.), as it is expressly termed in the || Nu. xxviii. 5, which in P is the regular concomitant of a burnt-offering (see Nu. xv. 1—12; and cf. Nu. xxviii. 9, 12, 13, &c.).
a tenth part (of an ephah)] Heb. 'issārōn, only in P (28 times). The ephah was probably about 8 gallons, so the 'issārōn would be about 6½ pints (see further Kennedy, in DB. iv. 912<sup>b</sup>, near the bottom).

CHAPTERS XXX.—XXXI.

Contents:—The altar of Incense, xxx. 1—10; the maintenance of public service, xxx. 11—16; the Bronze Laver, xxx. 17—21; the composition of the holy Anointing Oil, xxx. 22—23; the composition of the Incense, xxx. 24—38; the nomination of Bēzāl'el and Oholiab to construct, or take the chief part in constructing, the Tabernacle, and its appurtenances, xxxi. 1—11; the observance of the Sabbath, xxxi. 12—17; Moses receives from God the two tables of stone, preparatory to descending from the mount, xxxi. 18. The whole, except xxxi. 18<sup>b</sup>, belongs to P. There are, however, strong reasons for holding that it does not belong to P proper, but to a posterior and secondary stratum of P (P<sub>2</sub>), of which there are indications also in other parts of the Pentateuch. It is surprising to find the Altar of Incense, which from its importance might have seemed to demand a place in ch. xxv., among the other sacred vessels of the Tabernacle, mentioned for the first time in xxx. 1—10, when the directions respecting the Tabernacle seem to be complete, and brought to a solemn close by the promise in xxix. 43—46 that Jehovah will take up His abode in the sanctuary so constructed: even in xxvi. 34 f., where the position of the vessels in the Tabernacle is defined, the Altar of Incense is not named. In xxx. 10 an annual rite of atonement is prescribed to be performed upon it; but in Lev. xvi., where the ceremonial of the day of atonement is described in detail, no notice of such a rite is to be found; and only one altar, the altar of Burnt-offering, is mentioned throughout the chapter (on v. 18 see Dillm. and Keil, who agree that the order of the ceremonial in vv. 16<sup>b</sup>—18 shews the altar of Burnt-offering to be here meant). Further, a number of passages occur, in which the altar of Burnt-offering is referred to as 'the altar,' implying apparently that there was no other (e.g. chs. xxvii.—xxix.; Lev. i.—iii., v.—vi., viii., ix., xvi.). Hence it seems that the Tabernacle, as pictured in the original legislation of P, contained no incense altar (incense being offered on pans or censers, Lev. x. 1, xvi. 12, Nu. xvi. 6, 7, &c.), and that both this and other passages in which it is spoken of (xxx. 27, xxxi. 8, xxxv. 15, xxxvii. 25, xxxix. 38, xl. 5, 26, Lev. iv. 7, 18, Nu. iv. 11), or which term 'the Altar' of xxvii. 1, &c., as though for distinction, 'the altar of Burnt-offering' (as xxx. 28, xxxi. 9, xxxv. 16, xxxviii. 1, xl. 6, 10, 29, Lev. iv.), or 'the Bronze altar' (xxxviii. 30, xxxix. 39), belong to a secondary stratum of P. The other subjects treated in chs. xxx.—xxxi. are such as would naturally find place in an Appendix, or (remarkably enough) occasion similar difficulties. Thus in xxix. 7 (cf. 29), Lev. viii. 12, the ceremony of anointing is confined to the high priest (Aaron): in xxx. 30 it is extended to the priests (his 'sons'). The same extension recurs in xxviii. 41, xl. 15, Lev. vii. 36, x. 7, Nu. iii. 3. That the ceremony was regarded originally as limited to the high priest seems, however, to be confirmed by the title 'the anointed priest' applied to him (Lev. iv. 3, 5, 16, vi. 22; cf. xvi. 32, xxi. 10, 12, Nu. xxxv. 25), which, if the priests generally were anointed, would be destitute of any distinctive significance.

xxx. 1—10. The Altar of incense: its construction and place (vv. 1—6), and its use (vv. 7—10).

1—6 (cf. xxxvii. 25—28, xl. 26). The altar of incense was to be of acacia wood, overlaid with gold, a cubit ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  ft.) broad and long, and 2 cubits (3 ft.) high; at its upper corners were to be four horns (cf. xxvii. 2); a rim or moulding of gold was to run round it, probably near its top; and close under this moulding, on two of the opposite sides, there were to be two gold rings to receive the poles for carrying it. It was to stand in the Holy place, directly in front of the mercy-seat. A remarkable incense-altar, decorated with lions and composite animal figures, has been found at Taanach (see the writer's Schweich Lectures, p. 84 f., with an illustration); but it bears no resemblance to the altar here described.

1. incense] Heb. ketōreth, 'sweet smoke' (see on xxix. 13), which may denote, according to the context, either the 'sweet smoke' rising from animal sacrifices (Ps. lxvi. 15; and perhaps usually in the earlier literature, Dt. xxxiii. 10, 1 S. ii. 28, Is. i. 13), or the sweet smoke rising from 'incense' (so always in P and Chron.).

2. the horns, &c.] see on xxvii. 2; also, for of one piece with it, xxv. 31. The blood of the sin-offering was sprinkled upon the horns of this altar in the cases specified in xxx. 10, Lev. iv. 7, 18.

3. pure gold] see on xxv. 3. From being thus overlaid wholly (except at the bottom) with gold, it was also called the golden altar (xxxix. 38, xl. 5, 26, Nu. iv. 11).

4. upon the two ribs thereof] i.e. upon its flanks or sides, a common metaph. sense of 'rib' in Heb. (see on xxv. 12). The words seem tautologous beside the following 'upon the two sides of it'; either they have come in here by error, through a recollection of xxvii. 12, or (Di.) the expression denotes the extreme ends of the two sides, near the corners.

7—10. Incense is to be burnt upon the altar twice a day by the high priest, in the morning when the lamps are removed from the candlestick for trimming, and in the evening when they are replaced and lighted. Atonement is to be made for it once a year by the blood of the sin-offering (Lev. xvi. 15—19) being applied to its horns.

perpetual] better, continual: the expression is a standing one; see on xxix. 42.

before Jehovah] as xxix. 25, and constantly in the priestly laws.

9. The altar is to be reserved exclusively for incense, and for incense moreover made from the authorized prescription (v. 34 ff.).

strange] i.e. strange to the law, unauthorized; cf. 'strange fire,' Lev. x. 1, Nu. iii. 4, xxvi. 61. Comp. on xxix. 33; and see DB. iv. 623.

10. An annual rite of atonement to be performed for it. The law presupposes Lev. xvi. (which prescribes the ceremonial of the annual Day of Atonement), and is thus later than it. Lev. xvi. 16, 18, 20 prescribes a rite of atonement for the Holy place, the Tent of Meeting, and the altar of burnt-offering, but none for the altar of incense: the present verse supplies the deficiency.

upon the horns of it] by putting some of the blood of the sin-offering of atonement (the goat for the people of Lev. xvi. 5, 15—19) upon them: cf. Lev. iv. 7, 18. The marg. for may be disregarded.

for it] to preserve it, like the other sacred objects, in its ideal holiness: cf. xxix. 36, with the note.

most holy] see on xxix. 37.

make atonement] both here and elsewhere make propitiation would be a better rend. of kipper, and propitiation, &c., of its derivatives (cf. propitiatory, suggested on xxv. 17 for kappōreth): not only is this the idea of the word, but kipper and its derivatives are usually represented in LXX. by (ἐξ)ιλάσκουμαι, ἱλασμός, &c., which in the NT. are expressed in English by '(make) propitiation' (Rom. iii. 25; 1 John ii. 2, iv. 10; Heb. ii. 17 RV.): an important link of connexion between OT. and NT. is thus lost, when, of the two corresponding terms, the rend. is atonement in the OT. and propitiation in the NT. (note that in NT. 'atonement' occurs in AV. Rom. v. 11 only, RV. reconciliation; in RV. never). For a fuller discussion of the meaning and use of the Heb. term, reference must be made to the notes on Lev. iv., and to the writer's art. PROPITIATION in DB.; see also H. M. P. Smith's arts. in the Biblical World (Chicago), Jan., Feb., Mar., 1908. Here it can only be briefly explained that kipper is used in two applications: (1) with a human subject, to make appeasement or propitiation, xxxii. 30 (see the note), Gen. xxxii. 20, 2 S. xxi. 3 (cf. in the passive, the implicit subject being some act or rite, 1 S. iii. 14, Dt. xxi. 8<sup>b</sup>, Is. vi. 7, xxii. 14, xxvii. 9, Prov. xvi. 6); so in P, where the subject is always either the priest, or (rarely) an offering, and the means of effecting the propitiation usually a sacrifice (as ch. xxix. 36, 37, Lev. i. 4), but occasionally some other act or offering (as below, vv. 15, 16, Nu. xxv. 13: see further details in DB. iv. 130); (2) with God as subject, to treat propitiously (EVV. to be merciful, forgive, &c.) either an offender (Dt. xxi. 8<sup>a</sup>, xxxii. 43, Ez. xvi. 63, 2 Ch. xxx. 18) or an offence (Jer. xviii. 23, Ps. lxxv. 3, lxxviii. 38, lxxix. 9, Dan. ix. 24). The actual meanings, and usages, of kippur can be determined from the O.T. itself (see DB. l.c.). Whether, however, as used to be supposed, its primary meaning was either (Arab.) to cover, or (Syr.) to wipe away, is very doubtful. In Ass. kapûru, it seems, means properly to remove; kippuru is to remove ritual impurity from a person or thing; and the word appears to have come into Heb. with the sense of ritual purgation attaching to it, and to have been developed there so as to express the ideas of purge away (sin) ritually, declare purged, remove guilt or cause of offence, appease, &c. (See Langdon, Exp. Times, April 1911, p. 320 ff.; cf. Zimmern, KAT,<sup>9</sup> 601 f.

11—16 (cf. xxxviii. 24—31). The ransom of souls at a census. When a census of the people is taken, every man is to pay half a (silver) shekel to Jehovah as a ransom for his life, that no 'plague' break out among the people: the proceeds of the tax to be applied to the maintenance of the daily services in the sanctuary. It must have been a popular belief, current at the time when this law was drawn up, that a census was dangerous to the lives of the persons numbered (cf. 2 S. xxiv.), whether because it was likely to give rise to feelings of self-satisfaction and pride, or because it tended to bring the sins and imperfections of individuals prominently before God's notice: every adult male of the community was therefore to pay a 'ransom' (xxi. 30) for his life, by which he, as it were, purchased it for himself and secured it against peril of death. The Gallas of E. Africa believe that to count their cattle impedes the increase of the flock; and the Lapps, at least formerly, would not count themselves, for fear of the great mortality which they supposed would ensue (Frazer, p. 174 of the volume cited on xxiii. 19<sup>b</sup>). And an Arab is averse to counting the tents, or horsemen, or cattle of his tribe, lest some misfortune befall them (Burckhardt, Travels, p. 74 i.). In 2 Ch. xxiv. 6, 9 (in two passages added by the Chronicler to the original narrative of 2 K. xii. 7—9) it is stated that the tax here imposed was enforced—though not apparently upon occasion of a census—by Joash.

12. takest the sum] so Nu. i. 2, 49.

numbered...numberest] The verb means lit. to visit (viz. to see how many they are), i.e. to review, muster, inspect. So vv. 13, 14, Nu. i. 3, 19, and often in Nu. i.—iv., xxvi.; 2 S. xviii. 1, xxiv. 2.

P<sub>2</sub> a ransom for his soul unto the LORD, when thou numberest them; that there be no plague among them, when thou numberest them. This they shall give, every one that passeth over unto them that are numbered, half a shekel after the shekel of the sanctuary: (the shekel is twenty gerahs:) half a shekel for an offering to the LORD. Every

a ransom for his soul] i.e. for his life ('soul' as the seat of life, as xxi. 23, 30, and constantly): 'ransom' (kōpher), in the sense of price for a life, as xxi. 30, where see the note.

that there be no plague (xii. 13) &c.] cf. Nu. viii. 19.

13. passeth over, &c.] viz. before the officer who took the census, to those that are numbered, and who stand on the other side. Cf. to 'pass over' (of sheep being numbered) Lev. xxvii. 32, Jer. xxxiii. 13; and in 2 S. ii. 15 Heb.

half] not the usual Heb. word for 'half'; in the Hex. found only in P (11 times), and only 4 times elsewhere. So vv. 15, 23, xxxviii. 26.

the shekel of the sanctuary] xxxviii. 24—26, Lev. v. 15, xxvii. 3, 25, Nu. iii. 47, 50, vii. (14 times), xviii. 16† (all P). Some standard (silver) 'shekel' is plainly alluded to: it is not known certainly what. A standard (silver) shekel, of full weight (as opposed to worn shekels in common use), preserved in the sanctuary, has been thought of. Or, as the expression may be rendered with equal, not to say, greater propriety, the sacred shekel (LXX. σικλος ὁ ἅγιος), and as moreover the Mishnah (Bekhōrōth viii. 7) expressly enjoins that 'all payments according to the sacred shekel are to be made in Tyrian (i.e. Phoenician) money,' in which the silver shekel weighed 224 grs., it may (Kennedy, DB. iv. 422; G. F. Hill, EB. SHEKEL, § 5) denote the ancient Hebrew silver shekel (which had the same weight as the Phoenician silver shekel), called 'sacred' because it was the traditional standard by which sacred dues were paid (see further ll. cc.). A silver shekel of 224 grains would weigh just 6 grains more than an English half-crown: at the present value of silver (2s. 3d. an oz.) it would be worth about 1s. 1d.

the shekel is twenty gerahs] The same definition recurs Lev. xxvii. 25, Nu. iii. 47, xviii. 16; and in Ez. xlv. 12 (of his shekel, though not called 'sacred'). The gerāh (only in these passages) is rendered ὀβολός by LXX., and by Onk. mā'āh, also = an obol, the weight of which in 4—3 cent. B.C. was c. 11·21 grs.: this would make the 'sacred' shekel (= 20 gerāhs) c. 224·2 grs.

The later institution of an annual Temple-tax of a half-shekel (Mt. xvii. 24 RV.: Gk. τὰ διδραχμα, 'the double drachm') is based ultimately on this passage. The drachm was worth 6 obols: and the double drachm (= 12 obols) was taken as the equivalent of a half-shekel (= 10 obols): cf. DB. iii. 422<sup>b</sup>, 428<sup>b</sup>; EB. iv. 4446, 4786.

an offering] a contribution, Heb. terūmah (see on xxv. 2); here of a contribution levied on,—or, to preserve the figure of the original, taken off,—the whole of a man's property for sacred purposes. So vv. 14, 15.

- one that passeth over unto them that are numbered, from P<sub>2</sub> twenty years old and upward, shall give the offering of the

14. from twenty years old and upward] i.e. from adult age.

15. Rich and poor are to contribute alike, for both stand in the same relation towards Jehovah.

16. for the service, &c.] i.e. for the maintenance of the daily worship in the Tent of Meeting, the morning and evening sacrifices, &c. The reference cannot be to the work of erecting the sanctuary; for (1) the injunction is general (When thou takest the sum, &c.), not specific (And thou shalt take, &c.); and (2) even supposing it were specific, the first census according to P is the one in Nu. i., which (v. 1 compared with Ex. xl. 2, 17) took place a month after the sanctuary was completed and put up.

be a memorial, &c.] to keep Jehovah in continual remembrance of the ransom which had been paid for their lives: cf. xxviii. 12, 29, Nu. x. 10, xxxi. 54.

17—21. The bronze Laver (cf. xxxviii. 8, xl. 30). This was for the priests to wash their hands and feet in, before entering into the Tent of Meeting, or offering sacrifice: it was to stand in the court, in front of the Tent of Meeting, between it and the (bronze) altar. The shape and dimensions of this laver are not prescribed. In Solomon's Temple there were ten lavers, each of large size, for the same purpose (1 K. vii. 38 f.).

18. Thou shalt also make] Heb. And thou shalt make. brass] bronze or copper, as always: see on xxv. 3. The metal, according to xxxviii. 8, was obtained from the mirrors of the women who 'served in the host' (see the note).

22—33 (cf. xxxvii. 29<sup>a</sup>). The holy Anointing Oil. An aromatic oil to be prepared, by mixing, in stated proportions, olive oil with (probably) the essences of myrrh, cinnamon, sweet-smelling cane, and cassia; and the Tent of Meeting, with its appurtenances, as also Aaron and his sons, to be anointed with it, as a mark of consecration to Jehovah. The oil thus prepared to be reserved exclusively for sacred purposes.

22. Moreover] Heb. And.

23. Take thou also] And thou (emph.), take: cf. on xxvii. 20.

spices] such as were brought to Solomon by the Queen of Sheba, and others (1 K. x. 2, 10, 15), and prized by the Hebrews (Cant. iv. 10, 14, 16, v. 13; Is. xxxix. 2). For chief (i.e. finest, best), cf. Cant. iv. 14, Ez. xxvii. 22; and for the Heb. idiom here, G.-K. § 131<sup>d</sup>.

flowing myrrh] cf. Cant. v. 5, 13, which likewise imply a liquid. Modern 'myrrh' (the produce of Balsamodendron Myrrha, indigenous in Yemen and E. Africa) is, however, a solid, and also devoid, or nearly so, of aroma: the liquid mīr of the Hebrews appears to have been what is now called the 'Balsam of Mecca,' a 'greenish turbid fluid of syrupy consistence, having a very grateful odour, something like oil of rosemary,' the product of Balsamodendron opobalsanum, a tree which grows abundantly on the coast territory of Arabia, and for which in ancient times Jericho was especially celebrated (see Sir W. Thiselton-Dyer's art. BALSAM in EB.: the art. MYRRH is briefer).

sweet-smelling cinnamon] Cinnamon is mentioned also in Prov. vii. 17, Cant. iv. 14, Rev. xviii. 13†. Modern cinnamon is the fragrant inner bark of Cinnamomum zeylanicum, a plant of the laurel family, and is obtained from Ceylon. The cinnamon of the ancients, however, came from S. China (the Indians, Persians, and Arabians called it Chinese wood), and was probably the Cinnamomum cassia (see EB. s.v.). 'The Greeks and Romans used cinnamon as an unguent: the cinnama rara was highly prized by them (Theophr. plant. ix. 7; Diosc. i. 13; Martial iv. 13. 3); and the unguentum cinnamomimum was very costly (Plin. xiii. 2; Athen. p. 439, 690)' (Kn.). 'Sweet-smelling' cinnamon would be cinnamon of the best kind: there were other kinds which yielded an inferior fragrance (Diosc. l.c., Theophr. ix. 5, cited by Kn.).

The word in Ps. xlv. 8† is different (ἄριόθι, things scraped off, i.e. scraped or powdered bark); but doubtless denotes either the same or a kindred substance. The κασία, cassia of the ancients (Theophr. ix. 5; Plin. xii. 19) is probably the same as the modern 'cassia,' viz. the inner bark, peeled off and dried in the sun, of a species of cinnamon tree, found in S. India and Malacca, which yields an inferior kind of cinnamon (see further EB. s.v.). Costus (RVm.; also written above the text in one MS. of LXX., Graec. Ven., and Saad.) is another oriental aromatic plant (Costus Arabicus, L.), used in the preparation of unguents: Hor. Carm. iii. 1, 44; Plin. xii. 12, 25, xiii. 1, 2). All these foreign aromatic substances would come by trade-routes from the distant East, whether over-land by way of Babylon, or by sea, round Arabia (see G. A. Smith, TRADE AND COMMERCE in EB. §§ 30, 40, 56, 58, 63, 71).

I Ch. ix. 30 (render 'compounding the perfume of the spices') shews that in the age of the Chronicler (c. 300 B.C.) the anointing oil was made by the 'sons of the priests.' For other allusions to perfumers or perfumery, see I S. viii. 13 (RVm.), Is. lvii. 9, Neh. iii. 8 (RVm.), Cant. v. 13 (RVm.).

Anointing<sup>1</sup>, in a religious sense, is in the OT. a symbolical act, denoting (1) the divine appointment, or consecration, of a person for a particular purpose, esp. a king (1 S. x. 1 and often), the high priest (Ex. xxix. 7), later also the ordinary priests (see on v. 30), and, at least once, a prophet, 1 K. xix. 16<sup>b</sup> (cf., in a fig. sense, Is. lxi. 1); it is followed by, and is sometimes a figure of, the outpouring of the Spirit upon the person anointed (1 S. x. 6, cf. v. 1, xvi. 13; Is. lxi. 1 (Luke iv. 18), Acts iv. 27, x. 38, 2 Cor. i. 21, 1 Jn. ii. 20, 27): (2) the consecration of a thing, viz. a sacred stone, Gen. xxxi. 13 (see xxviii. 18), xxxv. 14 (so among the Greeks; see the writer's Genesis, p. 267), the Tabernacle and its appurtenances (see on vv. 26—28), a future Altar of burnt-offering, Dan. ix. 24 (see the note in the Camb. Bible). The practice of anointing is widely diffused in the world: the unguent—originally fat, regarded in primitive thought as an important seat of life—was regarded, it seems, at least primitively, as a vehicle transferring to the person or object anointed a Divine life or potency. See art. ANOINTING (Crawley and Jastrow) in Hastings' Encycl. of Rel. and Ethics, i. (1908), 549—557, esp. 550, 554, 556 (cf. EB. s.v. i. 175); and for the anointing of priests, p. 552<sup>b</sup>, and of temples and other sacred objects, p. 553 f.

30. Aaron and his sons] In xxix. 7 (cf. Lev. viii. 12), 29 anointing is prescribed only for Aaron (the high priest), and his successors in the same office: and that originally it was only the high priest who was anointed seems to follow from the fact that he is called distinctively 'the anointed priest,' Lev. iv. 3, 5, 16, vi. 22 (cf. xvi. 32, xxi. 10, 12, Nu. xxxv. 25). The extension of the ceremony to his 'sons' (the ordinary priests) must represent a later usage: it is found here, xxviii. 41, xl. 15, Lev. vii. 36, x. 7, Nu. iii. 3. It is difficult to resist the inference that these passages belong to a later stratum of P. The reference can hardly be to the sprinkling with oil and blood noticed in Ex. xxix. 21, Lev. viii. 30; for this is not termed 'anointing,' and is subsequent to the anointing proper (Ex. xxix. 7; Lev. viii. 12).

31—33. The oil thus prepared to be reserved exclusively for the sacred purposes thus specified.

31. throughout your generations] See on xii. 14.

32. of man] i.e. of ordinary men (cf. Ps. lxxxii. 7, Is. viii. 1, Hos. vi. 7 [2nd marg.]).

poured] poured for anointing, viz. for the toilet; the Heb. word (sūk) being the one used distinctively in this connexion (footnote, p. 337).

33. a stranger] i.e. one not authorized to be anointed with it = one not of the seed of Aaron: cf. on xxix. 33.

shall be cut off, &c.] a formula signifying emphatically the Divine disapproval: see on xii. 15.

from his father's kin] The word, though it is externally the same as the ordinary Heb. word for 'a people,' is plural: as it is impossible to speak of a man's 'peoples,' the word, when it is so used, must have some different meaning; and this is shewn by Arabic (where 'am' means both patruus and patruelis) to be father's kin (cf. EB. iii. 3289). The word, in this sense, is almost entirely confined to P: with to be cut off from it occurs in it 12 times, and with to be gathered to (Gen. xxv. 8 al.) 9 times.

34—38. The holy Incense (cf. xxxvii. 29<sup>b</sup>). Incense to be made, of four specified ingredients, mixed together in equal proportions, and tempered with salt, for use upon the altar of incense (vv. 7 f.). Incense of the same composition to be used for no other purpose.

34. sweet spices] In the Heb. one word, sammim (plur.),—from the same root as the Arab. shamma, to 'smell,'—not the one rendered 'spices' (b'sānim) in v. 3, and, to judge from xxv. 6 ('b'sānim for...', and for the incense of sammim'), a narrower term than that: used exclusively (but only in P and Chr.) of the materials of which the incense was made, and mostly in the expression 'incense of sweet spices' (sometimes rendered 'sweet incense') v. 7, xxv. 6, Lev. iv. 7, xvi. 12 al.;

2 Ch. ii. 4, xiii. 11 (both passages written by the Chronicler himself). It might be rendered for distinctness (cf. EB. iv. 4746), fragrant powders.

stacte] Heb. nā'āph†, from nā'āph, to drip. Some fragrant oil or resin is evidently meant; it is uncertain what. 'Stacté' is a transliteration of LXX. σρακρή, Vulg. stacte, meaning also something that drips or trickles. Stacte was the Gk. and Lat. name of a very fragrant and costly kind of myrrh (σμύρα), variously described by the ancients as an oil 'dripping' from crushed myrrh, either alone (Theophr. Odor. 29; on the text, see Schneider's note: cf. Diosc. i. 77) or mixed with a little water (Diosc. i. 73), or as prepared from crushed myrrh dissolved in oil (Theophr. l.c.), or as exuding spontaneously from the tree (Plin. H.N. xii. 15, § 68). Myrrh-oil would be a clearer rend. Lucr. (ii. 847) mentions the 'blandum stactaeque liquorem'; and Plantus (Truc. ii. 5, 23) speaks of it as burnt on the altar to Lucina. This rend. of LXX. seems probable: still we do not know that it is right: it may be founded merely on the agreement of meaning between nā'āph and 'stacte.' Ges. (Thes.) identified nā'āph with the gum of the storax tree (NHB. 395 f.), a beautiful perfumed shrub, abundant on the lower hills of Palestine, the gum of which (Diosc. i. 79) is still used in Syria as a perfume. The Rabbis identified it with zōri (EVV. 'balm'), and said that it was so called because it 'dripped' from the tree called kē'āph, i.e. (Kimchi, Book of Roots, s.v.) the balsam-tree: hence, no doubt, RVm. opobalsanum ('juice-balsam,' as opposed to xylobalsanum, 'wood-balsam,' the scented twigs of the balsam-tree), an aromatic gum obtained (Diosc. i. 18; Plin. H.N. xii. 25, § 116, cf. § 118) from the Judaeian balsam-tree by incisions in the bark. If however the mōr of v. 23 (see the note there) was really the juice or gum of the balsam-tree, it is hardly likely to have been called here by a different name.

onycha] Heb. sh'ḥēleth†; LXX. ὄνυξ, Vulg. onyx, whence EVV. onycha (cf. Ecclus. xxiv. 15); i.e. unguis odoratus, the 'operculum,' or closing flap, called ὄνυξ from its resemblance to the naïl, of certain molluscs, which, when burnt, emits a strong aromatic odour<sup>1</sup>. Onycha is still gathered along the coasts of the Red Sea; and is largely used as an ingredient in the perfumery of Arab women (EB. s.v.); it is also said to be the principal component of incense in India and elsewhere (Kn.).

galbanum] Heb. ḥēlḥāh†; LXX. χαλβάνη, Vulg. galbanum. This was the resin of an umbelliferous plant, used by the ancients medicinally, and also, from its pungent odour, when burnt, to keep off insects (Plin. xix. 58 al.), to expel serpents from stables (Verg. G. iii. 415 'Galbanoque agitare graves nidore chelydros'), and revive sick bees

(ib. iv. 264 'Hic iam *galbano*s suadebo incendere odores'). Dios. (iii. 87) and Theophr. (ix. 7) speak of galbanum as obtained from a Syrian νάρθηξ: but in modern times it seems to be almost entirely a product of Persia (EB.).

sweet spices, with] (even) fragrant powders, and. But probably the tautologous 'fragrant powders' is merely repeated by error from the previous line.

frankincense] Heb. lēbōnāh ('whiteness,' with reference doubtless to the milky form in which it exudes from the tree), a fragrant gum-resin, obtained, by means of incisions, from trees belonging to certain species of the genus Boswelliana. These are now found mostly in Somali-land; but the most famous growth in ancient times was in the mountains of Shēbā, or the Sabaeans, in S. Arabia (EB. s.v.: cf. Bent, S. Arabia, 1900, pp. 89, 91, 234 f., &c.: comp. Jer. vi. 20 ('frankincense from Shēbā'), Is. lx. 6; Verg. G. i. 117 'solis est turea virga Subaeis,' Aen. i. 416 f. 'centumque Sabaeo Ture calent arae'). Frankincense is mentioned first in Jer. (vi. 20, xvii. 26, xli. 5); elsewhere only in P (here; Lev. ii. 1 f., 15 f., vi. 15 as a concomitant of the meal-offering, cf. v. 11, Nu. v. 15; Lev. xxiv. 7 as placed on the Presence-bread), II Isaiah (xliii. 23, lx. 6, lxvi. 3), 1 Ch. ix. 29; and, for its fragrance, Cant. iii. 6, iv. 6, 14. The epithet pure, or better, clear (sakkāh; LXX. διαφανή), is meant probably to denote the superior kind called by Theophr. (ix. 4) καθαρόν καὶ διαφανή, 'pure and transparent,' and said by Pliny (xii. 32) to be that gathered in autumn. Knobel states that he had some incense prepared according to this receipt in the laboratory of a colleague at Giessen, and that its odour was 'strong, refreshing, and very agreeable.'

35. a perfume, the work of the perfumer] as v. 25.

seasoned with salt] salted (cf. Ecclus. xlix. 1 Heb.). In spite of the Versions ('mixed'; and so RVm. = AV. tempered together [without 'with salt']), this is the only rend. which philology permits (so Ges. Di. Bā. &c.). 'Seasoned with salt' is, however, a doubtful paraphrase; for the incense was not a food. Salt, from its purifying and antiseptic properties, may have been added to the other ingredients, as symbolical of what was wholesome and sound; it has also been supposed (J. D. Michaelis, as cited by Di. and Bā.) that it may have been used, as causing the incense to kindle more rapidly, for the purpose of diffusing a wider cloud of smoke. The incense used in the Herodian temple is stated by Jos. (BJ. v. 5. 5) and the Talm. to have consisted of thirteen ingredients: see EB. ii. 2167.

pure] a different word from the 'pure' of v. 34, and meaning free from adulteration, or other impurities.

36. beat some of it very small] cf. Lev. xvi. 12 'incense beaten small.'

P<sub>2</sub> before the testimony in the tent of meeting, where I will meet with thee: it shall be unto you most holy. And the incense which thou shalt make, according to the composition thereof ye shall not make for yourselves: it shall be unto thee holy for the LORD. Whosoever shall make like unto that, to smell thereto, he shall be cut off from his people.

The ingredients named in v. 34 were mixed together, and then apparently melted down into a solid mass: small portions of this were broken off, from time to time, and beaten into a powder, which was then placed ready for use, every morning and evening (v. 7), outside the veil, near the altar of incense. Or (Di.) 'put' may mean, put upon the altar and burn.

meet with thee] See on xxv. 22.

most holy] See on xxix. 37. The anointing oil, not being brought into such close proximity to Jehovah, was only 'holy' (v. 32).

37, 38. Incense of this composition to be used exclusively in the service of Jehovah. Cf. v. 32 f.

37. thereof] i.e. of the incense described in v. 34.

38. cut off from his father's kin] See on v. 33.

The use of incense in religious ceremonies is very widespread, and many different substances have been used for the purpose—woods, barks, dried flowers, grasses, seeds, resins, gums (Enc. Brit. ed. 9, xii. 718). On Egyptian monuments the references to incense are numerous (Wilk.-B. iii. 398 f., with illustr. of censers,—bronze cups supported by long handles); large quantities of it were consumed in the temples (Erman, 300 f.,—with fabulous figures); and expeditions were constantly sent to the land of 'Punt' (Somali) to procure fragrant gums (ibid. 505—514). Plutarch (de Isid. et Osir. p. 383) describes the Eg. perfume called kyphi, which was used both for the toilet and as incense, consisting of sixteen ingredients (Erm. 232; Wilk.-B. iii. 398). There are also many references to incense (kutrinnu; cf. Heb. kēlōreth) in Ass. and Bab. inscriptions. The use is also often alluded to by the classical writers. See further INCENSE in EB.; or, most fully, Atchley, Hist. of the use of Incense in Divine worship (1909), pp. 1—77 (on the pre- and non-Christian use of it).

The origin of this use of incense is uncertain. The Oriental has a partiality for aromatic odours: he enjoys them himself; he perfumes his person, his garments, and his house with them; and he offers them to guests and rulers whom he desires to honour (DB. ii. 468<sup>a</sup>; Lane, Mod. Eg. i. 175, 256: cf. Prov. vii. 17, Cant. iii. 6, Ps. xlv. 9). Men naturally believe that what is grateful to themselves is also pleasing to the deity. If, however, the use of incense originated in a primitive, or semi-primitive people, another motive may have contributed to its adoption: it may have been regarded as a means of driving away evil spirits (cf. Tob. vi. 7, viii. 2 f.) from the precincts of Chap. xxxi. The nomination of two skilled artificers, Bēzāl'ēl and Oholiab, to construct, or take the chief part in constructing, the Tent of Meeting and its appurtenances, according to the instructions contained in chs. xxv.—xxx. (vv. 1—6), with an enumeration of the articles to be made (vv. 7—11); the observance of the sabbath inculcated, vv. 12—17; Moses receives from Jehovah the tables of stone, v. 18. The whole is from P (or P<sub>2</sub>), including an excerpt from H (in vv. 13—14<sup>a</sup>), except v. 18<sup>b</sup>, which is from E.

vv. 1—6. The nomination of Bēzāl'ēl and Oholiab.

2. called by name] i.e. specially chosen: cf. Is. xlv. 3, 4 (of Cyrus).

Bēzāl'ēl] i.e. 'In the shadow (i.e. protection, Nu. xiv. 9 RVm.) of God'; cf. the Ass. name Ina-šilli-Bel, 'In the shadow of Bel' (cited by Bā.). There are no sufficient grounds for identifying the Hur here with the Hur of xvii. 10, xxiv. 14. The whole series Hur, Uri, Bēzāl'ēl occurs again in 1 Ch. ii. 19 f., in the 'family' of Caleb, one of the three leading clans of Judah; but the relation of the two series of names to each other is uncertain: 1 S. xxx. 14 appears to shew that even in David's time the Caleb-clan was not yet actually part of Judah (comp. the writer's Genesis, p. 327; and DB., EB., s.v. CALEB).

In v. 6 Oholiab is associated with Bēzāl'ēl; but Bēzāl'ēl is evidently regarded as the constructor in chief: he always takes the first place (xxxvi. 1, 2; cf. xxxviii. 22 f.), and is often mentioned alone (xxxvii. 1, and implicitly in vv. 10, 17, 25, &c.).

3. the spirit of God] Regarded in the OT. as the source of any exceptional power or activity of man, as well as of supernatural spiritual gifts: see e.g. (in different connexions) Gen. xli. 38, Nu. xi. 17, Dt. xxxiv. 9 (of administrative capacity), Jud. iii. 10, 1 S. xi. 6, xvi. 13, Mic. iii. 8, Is. xi. 2, xlii. 1, lxi. 1; and cf. the writer's Genesis, p. 4; DB. ii. 403<sup>a</sup>: here, of exceptional artistic capacity.

4. devise cunning works] devise works of skill (Speaker's Comm.); so xxxv. 32, 35. Lit. devise (or design, xxvi. 1) devices (Jer. xviii. 18); here of skill in contriving and executing works of art, as in 2 Ch. xxvi. 15 mechanical contrivances (Heb. devices [EVV. engines, i.e. ingenia, inventions], the device of the deviser).

5. for setting] See xxv. 7, xxviii. 17, 20.

6. Oholiab to be Bēzal'ēl's associate. The name 'Oholiab' is peculiar, and perhaps not genuinely Hebrew (Gray, Heb. Pr. Names, p. 246): it means apparently The father (God) is my tent; cf. Phoen. אהלבעל, אהלמלך, Baal, or the King, is a tent; Sabaeen אהלענתר, אהלאל, 'Athlar is a tent, God is a tent; and the Edomitish Oholibamah ('My tent is the high place?'), Gen. xxxvi. 2, 41.

and in the hearts, &c.] i.e. those who are already wise-hearted, i.e. (cf. on xxviii. 3) possess artistic aptitudes, are to be further endowed by God with wisdom, i.e. with the requisite skill to assist Bēzal'ēl and Oholiab in their work.

7—11. Enumeration of the articles to be made (see chs. xxv.—xxviii., xxx.).

8. the table] i.e. the table of the Presence-bread, xxv. 23—30.

the pure candlestick] i.e. made of pure gold (xxv. 31): so xxxix. 37, Lev. xxiv. 4.

10. the garments of plaited (?) work] in the Heb. a peculiar expression, of most uncertain meaning, not found before, but recurring (with the addition, 'for ministering in the holy place') in xxxv. 19, xxxix. 1, 41†. No root שרש occurs in Heb.: in post-Bibl. Hebrew and Aramaic (see NHWB. iii. 587<sup>b</sup>) derivatives mean a plaited basket, a sieve, a grating before an oven; Onk. also uses sārādā for a grating in Ex. xxvii. 4, and for a hanging in xxvii. 9, &c.: hence, if the word is correctly handed down,—and it occurs four times,—it can, with our present knowledge, be only explained to mean something of the nature of plaited work. The reference is evidently to the artistically woven garments of the priests (ch. xxviii.). The 'and' before 'the holy garments' is better omitted, as in xxxv. 19, and (in the Heb.) xxxix. 41: the garments in question were the 'holy' ones. LXX. (στολαὶ λειτουργικαί), Pesh. Targ. render garments of ministry (cf. RVm.); either treating שָׂרָב, very improbably, as though it were the same as שָׂרָב, or finding שָׂרָב four times in their MSS. for שָׂרָב,—a not less improbable alternative. 'Finely wrought' (RV.) yields an excellent sense; but unfortunately has no philological justification.

12—17 (cf. xxxv. 2, 3). The observance of the sabbath inculcated. The section has in vv. 13, 14<sup>a</sup> (see the notes) strong affinities with the 'Law of Holiness,' or H (the older laws embedded in P, in Lev. xvii.—xxvi.); and there is little doubt that some of H's injunctions on the observance of the sabbath have here been excerpted by P or  $P_2$  and emphasized by him with the addition of vv. 14<sup>b</sup>—17: the whole thus forming a law inculcating the observance of the sabbath at a time when the execution of urgent sacred work might be taken as an excuse for disregarding it. The parts excerpted from H have also (like those in Lev. xvii.—xxvi.: see LOT. pp. 45 f., 138—141; ed. 6—8, pp. 49 f., 145—148) remarkable affinities with Ezekiel.

13. Speak thou also] And thou (emph.), Speak thou (xxvii. 20).

Verily] cf. on xii. 15 ('surely').

ye shall keep my sabbaths] the sabbaths sacred to me. Note exactly the same words in H, Lev. xix. 3, 30, xxvi. 2: 'my sabbaths,' also, often in Ezek. (xx. 12, 13, 16, 20, 21, 24, xxii. 8, 26, xxiii. 38, xlv. 24); only besides in Is. lvi. 4†.

a sign, &c.] The sabbath, as a day observed weekly in honour of Jehovah, and kept sacred to Him, is a constantly recurring memorial of Israel's dedication to Him, and of the covenant-relation subsisting between them. Comp. Ez. xx. 12 (cited below).

throughout your generations] See on xii. 14. So v. 16.

that men may know (Heb. simply to know: so Ps. lxxvii. 2 Heb.) &c.] that all the world may recognize, by means of the sabbath, that it is Jehovah who 'sanctifies' Israel, or provides it with the means of becoming a holy people. 'I am Jehovah which sanctify [better, 'which sanctifieth'] you (him, them)' is one of the dominant thoughts of H (Lev. xx. 8, xxi. 15 (cf. v. 8), 23, xxii. 9, 16, 32). Comp. Ez. xx. 12 'I gave them my sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that men

Ye shall keep the sabbath therefore; <sup>14</sup> for it is holy unto you: every one that profaneth it shall P surely be put to death: | for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people. Six days shall work be done; but on the seventh day is <sup>15</sup> a sabbath of solemn rest, holy to the LORD: whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death. Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the <sup>16</sup> sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between me <sup>17</sup> and the children of Israel for ever: for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed.

(about 30 times, —6 times, as here, of the sabbath, viz. xx. 13, 16, 21, 24, xxii. 8, xxiii. 38). so Is. lvi. 2, Neh. xiii. 18). In P only once (Nu. xviii. 32).

shall surely be put to death] cf., in the Book of the Covenant, xxi. 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, xxii. 19; and in H, for various moral and religious offences, Lev. xx. 2, 9, 10—13, 15, 16, 27, xxiv. 16, 17 (for murder). In Nu. xv. 32—36 (P) this penalty for sabbath-breaking is said to have been inflicted.

Here, as the context shews (cf. p. 175), the stress lies not on the divine promise, but on Israel's obligation to observe the terms on which the covenant is based.

18<sup>b</sup>. tables of stone] as xxiv. 12 (E), where see the note. E's narrative in Ex. xxiv. 12—15<sup>a</sup> must have been followed by a statement that Moses, after remaining some time on the mountain (xxxii. 1), received from God the tables of stone, of which these and the following words are the close. The intermediate part has been replaced by the narrative of P (xxiv. 15<sup>b</sup>—xxx. 18<sup>a</sup>).

written with the finger of God] hence Dt. ix. 10. The practice of inscribing laws on tables of metal or stone was very general in antiquity: Rome, Athens, Crete, Carthage, Palmyra, Babylonia, all supply examples; it would be no cause for surprise, if the original of some of the laws contained in the 'Book of the Covenant' were to be brought to light by excavation in Palestine. That the tables on which the Decalogue was written are said to have been inscribed by 'the finger of God' (cf. xxxiv. 1) is an expression (Di.) of the sanctity and venerable antiquity attributed to them.

CHAPTERS XXXII.—XXXIV.

The Episode of the Golden Calf, and incidents arising out of it, or mentioned in connexion with it.

The narrative of these chapters, read from a purely religious point of view, is remarkably beautiful and impressive; a striking picture is given not only of Moses' affection and noble self-devotion for his people, but also of the long intercession by which (cf. Gen. xviii.) he at last succeeds in winning from Jehovah Israel's forgiveness, His promise again to be with His people, and the vision of His moral glory for himself. But 'the connexion between its different parts, and the progress of the narrative, is often so imperfect and so far from clear' (Di.) that to the historical student it presents problems and difficulties which are not readily solved. As Di. points out, 'the want of connexion both backwards and forwards is most remarkable in xxxiii. 7—11: why the Tent of Meeting is here suddenly introduced, is not explained, and can only be conjectured, and v. 12 goes on as if vv. 7—11 or vv. 4—11 were not there at all. The connexion between xxxiv. 9 and 10 is also imperfect: it is surprising in v. 9 to find Jehovah entreated to go with the people, when He has already in xxxiii. 14—16 promised to do so; and it is also surprising that xxxiv. 10 is no direct answer to the entreaty of v. 9. Even in ch. xxxii., where the narrative wears the appearance of being more consistent, it is remarkable that the questions put to Aaron in vv. 21—24 lead to nothing further, that in spite of the punishment inflicted in v. 27 f. further punishment is threatened in v. 34<sup>b</sup>, and that while in v. 35 a punishment is described vaguely, it does not read like the punishment threatened just before in v. 34<sup>b</sup>. Further, while in P the erection of the Tent of Meeting is not described till ch. xl., in xxxiii. 7—11 there appears, as already in regular use, a tent, called by precisely the same name. The angel of Jehovah, again, is in xxxiii. 3, 5 represented as distinct from, and exclusive of, Jehovah Himself, whereas in xxxiii. 20 he appears as His full and sufficient representative. The covenant of xxxiv. 10—27 is described as if it were one made for the first time; neither v. 10 nor v. 27 suggests that it is a second, or new, covenant. The laws in xxxiv. 10—26 are mostly identical verbally with a particular section of those contained in chs. xxi.—xxiii.: what is the relation subsisting between the two recensions, and how is the repetition to be explained? It must be evident that all these difficulties and inconsistencies are due simply to the amalgamation—and sometimes the imperfect amalgamation—of different sources: they are lessened, though they can hardly be said to disappear, when these sources are recognized and disengaged from one another. Details will be better considered in the notes on the separate chapters. xxxiv. 29—35 belongs clearly to P: the rest of the three chapters is due principally to J, or the compiler of JE, but parts belong to E. The excerpts from J and E are also in several cases plainly incomplete at the beginning or the end, so that details or explanations are missing which can only be supplied by conjecture.

xxxii. The sin of the Golden Calf, vv. 1—6; Jehovah, having told Moses that it is His intention to destroy the people in consequence, is diverted from His purpose by Moses' intercession, vv. 7—14; Moses, coming down from the mount, and seeing the calf and the dancing, breaks the tables of stone, and then makes the people drink the powder of the calf, vv. 15—20; Aaron's excuses, vv. 21—24; the insubordination of the people punished by the sons of Levi, who are rewarded for their zeal by the priesthood, vv. 25—29; Moses intercedes with Jehovah, and obtains from Him the promise that he may lead the people on to Canaan, though without His own personal presence, vv. 30—34; the people plagued for their sin, v. 35.

The account of some of the events narrated in this ch., given in the retrospect of Dt. ix. 8—29, deserves to be compared: the reader who will be at the pains to underline in his text of Dt. the passages in vv. 12—17, 21, 26—29 taken verbatim from Ex. xxxii. 7—10, 15, 19, 20, 11, 13, 12, 11, will find remarkable resemblances, and also some remarkable differences: in particular (vv. 26—29), words taken from Ex. xxxii. 11—13 (and also from Nu. xiv. 16), but referred to a different occasion (comp. the writer's Deut. pp. 10, 112 ff.).

Why, it may be asked, was the figure of a bull chosen to represent Jehovah? The same figure, it will be remembered, was chosen also by Jeroboam I, when he set up the two 'calves' in Bethel and Dan (1 K. xii. 28 f., cf. 32), in order to divert the people from going up on pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and told the Israelites that they were the gods who had brought them up out of the land of Egypt: and the worship of these calves continued till the fall of the N. kingdom in B.C. 722 (2 K. x. 29, Hos. viii. 5, 6, x. 5, xiii. 2, 2 K. xvii. 16). From the time of Philo onwards it has commonly been supposed that the symbolism was derived from Egypt, where the bull Apis was revered in the temple at Heliopolis as the incarnation of Osiris, and the bull Mnevis in the temple of Ptah at Memphis, as the incarnation of the sun-god (Erman, Eg. Relig. 1907, p. 22; cf. Wilk.-Birch, iii. 86—95, 306 f.). There are however objections to this view. (1) The Egyptians worshipped only the living animals, not images of them; (2) it is unlikely that an image reflecting an Egyptian deity would have been chosen as the symbol of the national God, Jehovah, or have been represented as the deity who had delivered Israel from Egypt; (3) it is equally unlikely that Jeroboam should have sought to secure his throne by inviting his people to adopt the symbolism of a foreign cult. For these reasons most recent writers (including Di.) prefer to seek the origin of the bull-symbolism in the native beliefs either of the Israelites themselves, or of the Semitic nations allied to them. In Israel itself traces of bull-symbolism, other than that in question, are few and uncertain: not much can be built upon either the use of the term 'abbîr, 'mighty one,' both of bulls (Ps. l. 13 aL), and (in the form 'âbîr, const. 'âbîr) of the 'Mighty one of Jacob' (Gen. xlix. 24), or upon the oxen which supported Solomon's molten sea, or which ornamented the panels of the bases of the lavers in the Temple (1 K. vii. 25, 29). But many representations have been found of Hadad, the Syrian storm-god, with lightnings in his hand, standing upon a bull; and a bull seems often also to have been regarded as a symbol of the Phœnician Baal (see particulars in Baudissin's art. Kalb, goldenes, in PRE.<sup>3</sup> ix. (1901), 708—710): in Assyria, also, though nothing is known of the bull as the material image of a deity, the bull in the Zodiac symbolized Marduk; and the huge winged bull-colossi, with human heads, which guarded the gates of Assyrian temples, are an indication that some mythological significance was attached to the animal. Among an agricultural people, also, a young bull would be a very natural symbol of strength and vital energy (cf. Dt. xxxiii. 17). These facts make it not improbable that in the popular religion of Israel the bull may have been regarded as an emblem of divine might, and even perhaps used to represent Jehovah; and that this popular belief may have supplied the antecedents for the bull-worship which is actually mentioned in the OT., and which prevailed in the N. kingdom from the time of Jeroboam to its close in B.C. 722. The popular belief itself may have been derived from Israel's nearest neighbours, the Canaanites, or (p. 416 f.) brought by the N. tribes directly from the East.

The narrative represents Aaron as the first to suggest the worship of Jehovah under the form of a bull. This was the popular worship of the N. kingdom: it is not explicitly condemned by Amos; but Hosea inveighs against it strongly, on account of its unspirituality, and the ease with which Jehovah's distinctive character might in consequence become obliterated, and His rites assimilated to those of Baal. The

E And when the people saw that Moses delayed to come 32 down from the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, Up, make us 'gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we know not what is become of him. And Aaron said unto them, 1 Break off the golden rings, which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them unto me. And all the people brake off the golden rings 3 which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aaron.
 And he received it at their hand, and fashioned it with 4 writers whose narratives stand combined in Ex. xxxii. stand on the side of the image-less worship of the Temple at Jerusalem: their standpoint was in principle the same as that of the Second Commandment and Hosea. In recording the condemnation of Aaron, they condemned at the same time the recognized worship of the N. kingdom. It is possible that—although Jeroboam himself appointed non-Levitical priests (1 K. xii. 31)—there may have been among the priests of the calves some who traced their ancestry to Aaron, and claimed him as the founder of the calf-worship in Israel. If this were the case, it would make Aaron's condemnation the more pointed. But, however that may be, the chapter remains an emphatic protest against any attempt to represent Jehovah under a material form. See further Ew. Hist. ii. 182—185; Kennedy, art. CALF, GOLDEN CALF in DB. i.; and Baudissin as cited above.

xxxii. 1—6. The people, disheartened by the length of Moses' absence on the mount, induce Aaron to make them a god, who may act as their visible leader. The invisible, spiritual leadership of Jehovah is an idea to which evidently they have not risen. Cf. Acts vii. 40, 41.

1. delayed] Heb. caused shame (i.e. disappointment): the same idiom, Jud. v. 28 (lit. 'Why doth his chariot put to shame in coming?').

to Aaron] who had been left below by Moses (xxiv. 14).

Up, &c.] Hitherto Moses has been Jehovah's representative: now that he seems to have deserted them, the people want a substitute; so they ask Aaron to make them an image, which, in the manner of antiquity, they may regard as their leader.

gods] The Heb. 'ēlōhīm may have either a sing. or a plur. force; but the verb shall go is plur.: it seems, therefore, either that the plur. is a 'plural of majesty' (Gen. xxxv. 7; G.-K. § 145<sup>1</sup>), or, though the image represents Jehovah (v. 5), that the people are represented as speaking polytheistically. So v. 23.

2. of your sons] earrings are not elsewhere in the OT. described as worn by males (unless indeed, by implication, in Gen. xxxv. 4).

4. fashioned it, &c.] the earrings having naturally been previously a graving tool, and made it a molten calf: and they said, <sup>E</sup> <sup>1</sup>These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out <sup>5</sup>of the land of Egypt. And when Aaron saw this, he built an altar before it; and Aaron made proclamation, and said, <sup>6</sup>To-morrow shall be a feast to the LORD. And they rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings; and the people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

melted down, and cast approximately into the shape of a young bull. The image may either have been of solid gold, or, in spite of the term 'molten' (see Is. xxx. 22; and cf. Dt. vii. 25, Is. xl. 19), have consisted of a wooden core, overlaid with gold: v. 24<sup>b</sup>—though the terms used can hardly be pressed—would suggest the former view, v. 20 would favour the latter.

a graving tool] a pointed metal instrument: the word rendered 'pen' (i.e. a sharp metal stylus) in Is. viii. 1.

calf] The Heb. 'egel' means a young bull, just as the fem. 'eglah' (EVV. usually 'heifer') means a young cow; but it does not mean necessarily an animal as young as a 'calf': the 'eglah' for instance might be three years old (Gen. xv. 9), and give milk (Is. vii. 21), or plough (Jud. xiv. 18).

These be thy gods] Cf. almost the same words in 1 K. xii. 28: in the allusion, Neh. ix. 18, the sing. 'This' is used. 'These' must refer to an actual plural, and is of course quite suitable in speaking of Jeroboam's two calves; here it seems as if the narrator had used the plural for the purpose of introducing a covert polemic against the calf-worship of the N. kingdom. So v. 8.

which brought thee, &c.] They recognize in the calf, not only the god who should in the future (v. 1) go before them, but also the god who had already led them forth out of Egypt.

<sup>5</sup>. Seeing the impression which the image made upon Israel, Aaron at once builds an altar before it, and proclaims a feast to Jehovah. The calf is thus clearly regarded, not as exclusive of Jehovah, but as representing Him.

to eat and to drink] i.e. to take part in the sacred meal accompanying the peace-offering; cf. on xviii. 12.

to play] to amuse themselves, e.g. by singing and dancing, vv. 18, 19. Comp. the quotation in 1 Cor. x. 7.

<sup>7, 8</sup>. Jehovah makes known to Moses the people's sin. The verses are not necessarily by a different hand (RJE) from v. 18 f. Moses' anger may naturally have been kindled by the spectacle of the doings in the camp, the full character of which he did not before realize.

E for thy people, which thou broughtest up out of the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves: they have turned <sup>8</sup> aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed unto it, and said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

R<sup>E</sup> | And the LORD said unto Moses, I have seen this people, <sup>9</sup> and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people: now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation. And Moses besought the LORD his God, and said, <sup>11</sup> LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power and with a mighty hand? Wherefore <sup>12</sup> should the Egyptians speak, saying, For evil did he bring them forth, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and repent of this evil against thy people. Re- <sup>13</sup> member Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom

10. and I will make, &c.] The promise given to Abraham (Gen. xii. 2) is now restricted to Moses (cf. Nu. xiv. 12).

11. besought] properly, as Arabic seems to shew, 'made sweet the face of,' fig. for, entreated, sought to conciliate: a frequent idiom, e.g. 1 S. xiii. 12, 1 K. xiii. 6, Jer. xxvi. 19; with a human object, Ps. xlv. 12, Prov. xix. 6, Job xi. 19. In the prayer which follows, Moses urges four motives for mercy: (1) Israel is Jehovah's people; (2) its deliverance has demanded the exertion of great power; (3) the mockery of the Egyptians, if it now perish; (4) the oath to the forefathers. Cf. the intercession in Nu. xiv. 13—19.

14. And Jehovah repented, &c.] so Gen. vi. 7, Jud. ii. 18, 1 S. xv.
 11, 35, 2 S. xxiv. 16 al. Hebrew writers often express themselves 'anthropopathically,' i.e. attribute to God the feelings or emotions of a man. God is thus said to 'repent,' not because He really changes His purpose, but because He does so apparently, when, in consequence of a change in the character and conduct of men, He is obliged to make a corresponding change in the purpose towards them which He had previously announced, and adopt towards them a new attitude. See esp. Jer. xviii., where it is taught that if man repents, a threat may be withdrawn (cf. Jer. xxvi. 3, 13, 19, Jon. iii. 9, 10), while on the other hand if man turns to evil a promise may be revoked. Here Jehovah 'repents,' as a consequence of Moses' intercession (cf. Am. vii. 3, 6). God is also said to 'repent,' when he stops a judgement in the midst, as it seems, of its course, through compassion (2 S. xxiv. 16, Dt. xxxii. 36). Where, however, nothing is likely to occur to cause a change in Jehovah's declared purpose, He is said to be 'not a man, that he should repent' (1 S. xv. 29; cf. Nu. xxiii. 19).

15—20. Moses' return to the camp. His punishment of the people for their sin.

 will have been introduced here by R<sup>P</sup> on the basis of xxxi. 18<sup>a</sup>, xxxiv.

written on both their sides, &c.] This statement is made only here.
 The tables, since Moses could carry them himself, will have been pictured by the writer as comparatively small.

16. the work of God, &c.] See xxiv. 12, xxxi. 18<sup>b</sup>.

17. Joshua] whom Moses had left on the lower part of the mountain (xxiv. 13), and whom he must be supposed to have now rejoined.

E of war in the camp. And he said, It is not the voice of <sup>18</sup> them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome: but the noise of them that sing do I hear. And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh <sup>19</sup> unto the camp, that he saw the calf and the dancing: and Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount. And he took <sup>20</sup> the calf which they had made, and burnt it with fire, and ground it to powder, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it. And Moses <sup>21</sup> said unto Aaron, What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought a great sin upon them? And Aaron said, Let <sup>22</sup> not the anger of my lord wax hot: thou knowest the people, that they are set on evil. For they said unto me, Make us <sup>23</sup> gods, which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we know not what is become of him. And I said unto them, Who- <sup>24</sup> soever hath any gold, let them break it off; so they gave it

18. Lit. It is not the sound of the answering of might, neither is it the sound of the answering of weakness; the sound of answering-in-song do I hear; i.e. not the answering cries of victors and vanquished, but the answering voices of singers, are what Moses hears. The passage (Dt.) 'has a highly peculiar, almost poetical character' (cf. v. 25); and there is a play on the double sense of the word 'answer.' For the sense of answering responsively in song, see on xv. 21.

19. the dancing] For dancing at a religious ceremony, see on xv. 20.

20. The people are made to drink their own sin.

burnt it with fire] i.e. either (cf. on v. 4) burnt the wooden core, and ground the gold plating to powder by rolling large stones to and fro over it; or, if it were wholly of gold, reduced it by fire to shapeless lumps of metal, which were then ground to powder similarly.

strewed it upon the water] Dt. ix. 21 says 'and I cast the dust thereof into the wādy that descended out of the mount'—apparently to carry it away, without any mention of the Israelites being made to drink it.

to drink of it] Cf. the curses to be drunk by the suspected wife, Nu. v. 24.

21—24. Aaron, taken to task by Moses for what has occurred, makes excuses.

22. Aaron first excuses himself by casting the blame upon the people: they are set on evil, and he merely (v. 33) responded to their request.

my lord] as Nu. xi. 28, xii. 11.

24. He next excuses himself by declaring that he merely threw the me: and I cast it into the fire, and there came out this E

 25 calf. | And when Moses saw that the people were J broken loose; for Aaron had let them loose for a <sup>1</sup>derision 26 among their enemies: then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, Whoso is on the LORD's side, let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves 27 together unto him. And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Put ye every man his sword upon his thigh, and go to and fro from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man his brother, and every 28 man his companion, and every man his neighbour. And the sons of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men.

gold which they gave him into the fire, and the calf came out—as it were spontaneously, without any cooperation on his part.

Jehovah's anger with Aaron individually, His threat to destroy him, and Moses' intercession for him, narrated in Dt. ix. 20, are not mentioned in the extant parts of J or E in Exodus.

25—29. The people being in rebellion, the Levites, responding in a body to Moses' appeal for help, seize their swords, and slay 3000 of them. For the zeal thus displayed on Jehovah's behalf, they are rewarded with the priesthood. It is noticeable that, though Aaron is a 'Levite' (iv. 17: see note), the other 'Levites' here take part against him. For another view of these verses,—viz. that they are not in their original context, and that they describe the punishment, not for the worship of the Golden Calf, but for some independent act of rebellion against Jehovah,—see Di., C.-H., and McNeile (pp. xxxiv f., 207 f.).

25. broken loose...let them loose] viz. from their allegiance to Jehovah, under Aaron's leadership: cf. for the word v. 4.

for a whispering (i.e. a derision: LXX. ἐντοξαυα) among them that rose up against them] The expression is poetical, and may have been taken from an ancient song (so Ew. Hist. ii. 182). Their foes would deride, when they heard that they had deserted their national God, who they boasted had led them out of Egypt.

26—28. The zeal of the sons of Levi for Jehovah. At Moses' summons, they seize their swords, and slay 3000 of the rebels.

26, 27. Moses decides quickly that prompt measures must be taken.

26. Who, &c.] In the Heb., more tersely and forcibly, Who is for Yahweh? To me!

27. Thus saith, &c.] as v. 1, Jos. vii. 13, 1 S. x. 18 al. Moses speaks as a prophet. Cf. on iv. 22.

29. The Levites are invited to qualify themselves to receive the priesthood as a reward for their zeal.

J And Moses said, <sup>1</sup>Consecrate yourselves to-day to the LORD, <sup>29</sup> <sup>2</sup>yea, every man <sup>3</sup>against his son, and <sup>3</sup>against his brother ; that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day. And <sup>30</sup> it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, Ye have sinned a great sin : and now I will go up

Fill your hand to-day to Jehovah] i.e. (see on xxviii. 41), Provide yourselves with sacrifices, that you may be installed into the priesthood.

for every man (is) against, &c.] That is the spirit which you have shewn to-day, and which is demanded for the priesthood (Di.). Cf. Dt. xxxiii. 9 (written under the monarchy), where the priestly tribe is eulogized for its abnegation of natural relationships, though it is uncertain whether the present incident is specifically alluded to.

that he may, &c.] The 'blessing' is the privilege of officiating as priests. Cf. Kennedy, DB. i. 341<sup>b</sup>.

In view of Dt. x. 8 ('At that time Jehovah separated the tribe of Levi to bear the ark' &c.), where the fragment of an itinerary in vv. 6 f. must be either parenthetical, or misplaced (so that At that time will refer to the period of the stay at Horeb, the subject of Dt. ix. 8—x. 5), Di. and others can hardly be wrong in holding that JE's narrative here was followed originally by an account of the consecration of the tribe of Levi—as a reward, presumably, for the display of zeal on Jehovah's behalf described in vv. 26—29, which the compiler of Ex. did not deem it necessary to retain by the side of the more detailed particulars of P. In P, it will be remembered, the consecration of the priesthood is narrated in Lev. viii., and that of the 'Levites' (in P the inferior members of the tribe, as distinguished from the priests) in Nu. viii. 5 ff.; but down to the time when Dt. was written, any member of the tribe had the right to exercise priestly functions (Dt. xviii. 1, 6—8); and it would be during this stage in the history of the tribe that J or E—like the writer of Dt. x. 8 f.—would speak of the whole tribe being set apart or consecrated for priestly functions.

30—34. Moses, with noble disinterestedness, offers his own life, if he can thereby secure his people's pardon: Jehovah replies that He cannot on these terms take the life of the innocent; but He yields so far as to permit Moses to lead the people on to Canaan, though without His own personal presence. The passage (esp. vv. 30, 31) hardly reads as if it had been preceded by vv. 9—14: still, the two passages are so far consistent that whereas in vv. 11—13 Moses had only petitioned that the people might not be destroyed, he now petitions for its entire forgiveness.

30. Ye] the pron. is emphatic.

unto the LORD; peradventure I shall make atonement for 31 your sin. And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made 32 them gods of gold. Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book 33 which thou hast written. And the LORD said unto Moses, Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of 34 my book. And now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: | behold, mine angel Gl
 shall go before thee: | nevertheless in the day when I visit, J make propitiation] viz. by intercession. The word (kipper) is used, not in the technical sense which it has in P (see on xxx. 10), but in that of propitiating or appeasing—here by intercession, Gen. xxxii. 20 by a present, Prov. xvi. 14 by conciliatory behaviour, Is. xlvii. 11 (fig., of propitiating calamity) by either a bribe or some religious ceremony (EVV. 'put it away'). Cf. DB. iv. 120<sup>a</sup>, § 5.

31. returned] viz. to the mountain.

Oh] Heb. 'ammā, a particle of entreaty: Gen. i. 17 'Oh, forgive, we pray'; Is. xxxviii. 3 'Oh, LORD'; Neh. i. 5 (EVV. 'I beseech thee').

32. Moses' love for his people finds here noble and pathetic expression. if thou wilt forgive their sin—] For the aposiopesis, comp. Gen. xxx. 27, xxxviii. 17, Dan. iii. 15, Luke xiii. 9. LXX., Sam., Ps.-Jon. supply 'forgive.'

and if not, blot me, &c.] i.e. let me die (cf. Nu. xi. 15): Moses would rather not live than that his people should remain unforgiven. The 'book' which God has written is the 'book of life,' or 'of the living' (Ps. lxix. 28; cf. Is. iv. 3), i.e. the book in which the names of the living are said metaphorically to be inscribed. The figure is borrowed from the custom of keeping registers of citizens (Jer. xxii. 30, Ez. xiii. 9). The 'book' is not to be understood in the NT. sense of the expression 'book of life' (Phil. iv. 3, Rev. iii. 5, xiii. 8, xvii. 8, xx. 12, 15, xxi. 27), i.e. the register of the saints ordained to eternal life. Cf. Kirkpatrick's note on Ps. lxix. 28 (in the Camb. Bible).

33. Jehovah replies that He will blot out of His book not the righteous, but those only who have sinned against Him.

34. He yields, however, so far to Moses' entreaty as to put off the punishment of the people to an indefinite future, and to bid Moses lead Israel on to Canaan, under the guidance—not indeed of Himself personally, but—of His angel. It is true, the angel usually (see on iii. 1, xxiii. 20) represents Jehovah so fully as not to be exclusive of Him: but xxxiii. 2 (see the note), 3, shew that (unless the clause is a later insertion) it must be exclusive of Him here.

35. The verse seems here out of place (so Di.): perhaps it originally formed the sequel to v. 20 (We., Bā.). It does not read like a description of the punishment threatened at the end of v. 34.

E I will visit their sin upon them. | And the LORD smote <sup>35</sup> the people, because they made the calf, which Aaron made.
J And the LORD spake unto Moses, Depart, go up hence, <sup>33</sup> thou and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt, unto the land of which I swear unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, Unto thy seed will I give
G it: | and I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive <sup>2</sup> out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the J Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite: | unto a land flowing <sup>3</sup> with milk and honey: for I will not go up in the midst of which Aaron made] The words read like a scribe's correction of the less exact 'they made' just before.

xxxiii. Jehovah bids Moses lead the people on to the promised land, but refuses to go with them personally Himself, vv. 1-3. The people strip themselves of their ornaments, vv. 4-6. How Moses used to pitch the Tent of Meeting at some distance outside the camp, and how Jehovah used to speak with him there, vv. 7-11. Moses again entreats Jehovah, partly (vv. 12, 14-16) to let him know whom He will send with him on the way to Canaan, partly (vv. 13, 17-23) to vouchsafe him a vision of His glory.

1-3. Jehovah commands Moses to lead the people on to Canaan, but refuses to go with them personally Himself.

1. go up] into the high ground of Canaan. Cf. on i. 10.

which I swear, &c.] See the passages quoted on xxxii. 13.

2. an angel] in the place of Jehovah, and exclusive of Him (see v. 3): not, therefore, as xxxiii. 20, where Jehovah is in some sense present in the angel (v. 21 'my name is in him'). As was remarked on xxxii. 34, this is not the usual idea of the 'angel': it can, however, be avoided here only by some such supposition as that the words 'behold, mine angel shall go before thee' in xxxii. 34, and v. 2 here, are later insertions in the text, made on the basis of xxxii. 20, without regard to the contradiction which, if 'angel' is used here as in xxxiii. 20, they involve with v. 3<sup>b</sup> ('I will not go up with thee'). There are independent reasons for thinking that v. 2 here may be a gloss: it interrupts the connexion between v. 1 and v. 3 (notice 'unto the land' &c. at the beginning of v. 3); the list of nations is found elsewhere in passages that are probably secondary; and the verse seems inconsistent with v. 12 (where Moses apparently asks to be told what he has already been told here).

I will drive out] LXX. {codd. A, F, Luc.} he will drive out, which suits the context better: Jehovah does not personally go with the people into Canaan (v. 3).

the Canaanite, &c.] On the list of nations, see on iii. 8.

3. a land flowing, &c.] See on iii. 8.

in the midst of] v. 5, xvii. 7, xxxiv. 9, Nu. xi. 20, xiv. 14, 42.

thee; for thou art a stiffnecked people: lest I consume thee J 4 in the way. And when the people heard these evil tidings, they mourned: and no man did put on him his ornaments.
 5 | And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto the children of E
 Israel, | Ye are a stiffnecked people: if I go up into the R/E midst of thee for one moment, I shall consume thee: therefore now | put off thy ornaments from thee, that I may E 6 know what to do unto thee. And the children of Israel stripped themselves of their ornaments from mount Horeb onward.

a stiffnecked people] xxxii. 9.

lest I consume thee, &c.] in consequence of some outburst of wilfulness or rebellion on thy part.

4—6. The people strip themselves of their ornaments.

4. these evil tidings] that Jehovah would not accompany them to Canaan.

and no man, &c.] The removal of ornaments was a mark of mourning and grief: Ez. xxiv. 17, xxvi. 16, Judith x. 3 f. (Kn.).

5. The people are here told to do what they have already done (v. 4<sup>b</sup>), a clear proof that two narratives have been combined. In v. 4 the removal of the ornaments is a spontaneous token of grief; in v. 5 it is done at Jehovah's command. It is true, LXX. omit v. 4<sup>b</sup>: but the omission is open to the suspicion of having been made to avoid the awkward anticipation of v. 5<sup>b</sup>.

Ye are, &c.] The compiler (so Di.) emphasizes afresh (see v. 3) Israel's stiffneckedness. The entire context of the words assigned to E has naturally not been preserved.

go up in the midst of thee] viz. towards Canaan (as v. 3).

what to do unto thee] i.e. how to deal with thee.

6. Horeb] E's term: see on iii. 1.

There can be little doubt that, as Di. remarks, according to E the ornaments were to be used in the construction or decoration of the Tent of Meeting (cf., in P, xxv. 2—8, xxxv. 22—29): some account of the construction of the Tent would naturally precede the notice of its use in vv. 7—11. But E's account of the Tent of Meeting, 'which originally followed here, and which certainly differed greatly from that of P, was omitted by the compiler, who preferred that of P (chs. xxv.— xxvii.); and only its conclusion is preserved in vv. 7—11.' Whether (Di. al.) the ark in its tent was intended originally as a substitute for the immediate presence of Jehovah on Sinai, after the people had left Sinai (just as in P, after the Tent of Meeting is erected, Jehovah speaks to Moses not on Sinai, but from the Tent), is more perhaps than we can say.

7—11. The Tent of Meeting, and the use made of it by Moses. The sudden introduction of this notice of the Tent of Meeting is extremely

E Now Moses used to take the tent and to pitch it without <sup>7</sup> the camp, afar off from the camp; and he called it, The tent of meeting. And it came to pass, that every one which sought the LORD went out unto the tent of meeting, which was without the camp. And it came to pass, when Moses <sup>8</sup> surprising; and it is difficult to explain it, except by the conjecture mentioned on v. 6. The notice is a highly interesting and remarkable one, preserving, as it does, the oldest representation that we possess—that of E—of the Tent of Meeting, and differing in many particulars from the representation given by P (chs. xxv.—xxxi., &c.). The 'tent' is obviously much simpler in structure than that of P; it is guarded by one attendant, the Ephraimite Joshua, instead of by the host of Levites pictured by P (Nu. iii.—iv.); and it is outside the camp (so Nu. xi. 26f., xii. 4), at some distance from it, not in its centre, as in P (Nu. ii. 17). The tenses, throughout the section, are frequentative, and describe what was Moses' habitual practice—no doubt, in E's view, during the whole time of Israel's wanderings in the wilderness. Used in v. 7 is intended to rule the whole section: but would go out, would rise up, &c., with whenever for when in vv. 8, 9, would be clearer.

7. used to take, &c.] at every new encampment of the Israelites.
the tent] As the context shews, not Moses' tent, or a provisional tent, but the same sacred tent which is mentioned by P, under the same name (xxv. 22), though described by him as a much more ornate and elaborate structure (see further Kennedy in DB. iv. 654). It is introduced as something already known ('the tent'): in all probability it had been just mentioned in a part of E no longer preserved (cf. on v. 6); and as it was a well-known element of the tradition, the art. could be retained by the compiler. The rend. 'a tent,' which Heb. idiom would also permit (G.-K. § 126<sup>1,2</sup>), does not suit the sequel, which implies that not a casual, but a definite tent, is meant.

pitch it] Heb. pitch it for himself: it was intended particularly for his own use, in his converse with God. P's 'Tent of Meeting' was used similarly (xxv. 22, Lev. i. 1, Nu. vii. 89): but that is represented principally as a centre for sacrifice and other ceremonial observances.

without the camp] like the local sanctuaries of a later age, outside the towns of Canaan.

The tent of meeting] I.e. the tent where Jehovah used to 'meet' Moses, and communicate to him His will. See more fully on xxvii. 21.

every one which sought, &c.] Every one who desired to 'seek' Jehovah in order to obtain an oracle (2 S. xxi. 1 Heb.: cf. p. 314, McNeile, p. cxvi f., EB. iii. 3841; Jud. xviii. 5, 1 S. xxii. 10, xxiii. 2, 2 S. xvi. 23), perhaps also with sacrifice or prayer (2 S. xii. 16)—would go out to the Tent of Meeting for the purpose.

8. Whenever Moses went out to the Tent, all the people would rise up, and follow him reverently with their eyes. The camp seems to be pictured on a much smaller scale by E than by P.

went out unto the Tent, that all the people rose up, and stood, every man at his tent door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the Tent. And it came to pass, when Moses entered into the Tent, the pillar of cloud descended, and stood at the door of the Tent: and the LORD spake with Moses. And all the people saw the pillar of cloud stand at the door of the Tent: and all the people rose up and worshipped, every man at his tent door. And the LORD spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp: but his minister Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the Tent.

And Moses said unto the LORD, See, thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou hast said, I know

door] lit. opening: so vv. 9, 10, and regularly with 'tent.'

9, 10. Whenever Moses entered the Tent, the pillar of cloud (xiii. 21, 22), symbolizing Jehovah's presence, would descend and stand by the entrance of the Tent (cf. Nu. xi. 25, xii. 5, Dt. xxxi. 15), God would speak to him there, and the people, every one at the entrance of his tent—in the East a common place for sitting in (Gen. xviii. 1)—would rise up and worship,—or rather, do obeisance (cf. on xxxiv. 14).

11. would speak unto Moses face to face] not from the distant heaven, or with the comparative indistinctness of a vision or a dream (Nu. xii. 8), but 'face to face' (so Dt. xxxiv. 10; cf. v. 4), or 'mouth to mouth' (Nu. l.c.), like one friend speaking to another. Moses would then return into the camp; but his minister (xxiv. 13), Joshua, remained permanently in charge of the Tent (cf. Samuel, 1 S. iii. 3, 15).

12—23. Moses resumes the intercession broken off at v. 3; and starting from the command given him in xxxii. 34<sup>a</sup>, xxxiii. 1<sup>a</sup> obtains from Jehovah (vv. 14—16, as the text stands; see, however, on v. 14) the promise that He will not carry out the threat of v. 3, but will Himself accompany the people on their way to Canaan, and also (vv. 17—23) that He will vouchsafe Moses himself a glimpse of His glory.

12. Moses complains to Jehovah that He has not treated him with the confidence that He had given him reason to expect.

Bring up] viz. into Canaan, like 'go up,' v. 1. So carry up, v. 15. whom thou wilt send with me] An angel has been promised in xxxii. 34, xxxiii. 2: so that, unless these verses are later insertions in the original context of J, the meaning would seem to be, which of the many angels that He has, He intends to be our guide (Di.).

Yet thou hast said, &c.] Neither of the two statements which follow thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight. Now therefore, I pray thee, if I have found grace in thy sight, shew me now thy ways, that I may know thee, to the end that I may find grace in thy sight: and consider that this nation is thy people. And he said, My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest. And he said unto has been made before, though the first may be said to be implied in the privileged position towards God which Moses is everywhere represented as enjoying, and the second in the promise of xxxii. 10<sup>b</sup>, and in the acceptance of Moses' intercession in xxxii. 14, 34. In xxxiii. 17 the same words are used by Jehovah Himself.

I know thee by name] i.e. know thee individually, more intimately than the other Israelites, like a king who knows the names of only such of his servants as he is on intimate terms with (Kn.). Cf. Is. xliii. 1, xlv. 3, 4.

13. if, &c.] A common Heb. phrase: Gen. xviii. 3, xxx. 27 al.

shew] lit. make me to know. 'Shew' in Old English meant not only to let see, but also to let know, or tell: see on Dan. ii. 2, iv. 2 in the Camb. Bible, or the writer's Parallel Psalter, p. 481. Cf. Ps. ciii. 7.

ways] His ways of dealing with men, Dt. xxxii. 4: see xxxiv. 6f.

that I may know thee, &c.] understand what Thy nature and character is, and shape my petitions accordingly, that so I may find grace in thy sight, and my future prayers may be answered.

is thy people] and should not, therefore, be left by Thee without a leader.

14. Jehovah promises that His presence shall go with Moses (as the representative of His people), and that He will give him—and with him the people—rest. The words do not however seem very suitable as an answer to v. 13; and Di.'s suggestion is a plausible one, that vv. 14—16 are misplaced, and should follow xxxiv. 9 (so also McNeile, p. xxxvi), where, it may be noticed, Moses is still praying for what, if xxxiii. 14 is in its right place, has been already granted (cf. p. 367).

presence] lit. face, i.e. the person himself (2 S. xvii. 11), in so far as he is present (LXX. αὐτὸς προσωπεύουμαι): cf., of God, Dt. iv. 37 ('brought thee out with his presence' [LXX. αὐτὸς]), Is. lxiii. 9 ('the angel of his presence saved them,' i.e. the angel in whom His presence was manifest, cf. xxiii. 21; but LXX. 'No messenger or angel, (but) his presence (αὐτὸς) saved them'). The expression can hardly, however, have been intended to denote Jehovah's entire Being: it must rather (DB. v. 639<sup>b</sup>) have denoted His Being either as manifested in an angel more fully than in the ordinary 'angel of Jehovah' (Bä.), or as others think (Lagrange, Rev. Bibl. 1903, p. 215; Kennedy, Samuel, p. 323 f.), as attaching to the Ark (cf. p. 283).

give thee rest] viz. in the assured possession of Canaan: cf. Dt. iii. 20, xii. 10, Josh. xxii. 4.

15. Moses replies that if Jehovah will not go with them, they prefer

- him, If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence. / 16 For wherein now shall it be known that I have found grace in thy sight, I and thy people? is it not in that thou goest with us, so that we be separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth?
 17 And the LORD said unto Moses, I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for thou hast found grace in my 18 sight, and I know thee by name. And he said, Shew me, 19 I pray thee, thy glory. And he said, I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; and I will be gracious to whom I to remain where they are, in the neighbourhood of their God (xix. 4), at Sinai.

16. For how can it be known that they stand in Jehovah's favour except by His personally accompanying them, and thereby shewing that they are distinguished from all other nations of the earth?

separated, &c.] The word, as viii. 22, ix. 4, xi. 7 (Heb.): for the thought, cf. xix. 5, Dt. vii. 6, 1 K. viii. 53 (a different Heb. word).

17. this thing also] i.e., as the text stands, accompany you personally to Canaan (v. 16): but, if vv. 14—16 (see on v. 14) stood originally after xxxiv. 9, give Moses a knowledge of His 'ways' (v. 13). In either case, the new paragraph would begin better at v. 18.

and I know thee by name] See on v. 12.

18—23. Moses repeats, in a more definite form, his request of v. 13. He asks to be allowed to see Jehovah's glory; but is told in reply that he cannot see this in its fulness (v. 20); he may, however, have a glimpse of it, sufficient to disclose to him God's moral nature.

18. Shew me] Here, as a modern English reader would expect, 'make me to see,' not as in v. 13, 'make me to know.'

thy glory] Thy full majesty.

19. goodness] goodliness or comeliness, viz. of the Divine appearance; cf. Hos. x. 11 (lit. 'the goodness, i.e. comeliness, of her neck'). 'It is to be a spectacle of outward beauty as a visible sign of His moral perfection' (McNeile).

proclaim the name of Jehovah] and so manifest the character implied in it—here, in particular, Jehovah's moral character. The name was regarded by the Hebrews as the expression of the character of the person denoted by it: see e.g. Is. i. 26, iv. 3, lxi. 3<sup>b</sup> (the names here mentioned are to be given to Zion or Israel, because they will possess the qualities denoted by them).

and I will be gracious, &c.] In virtue of the graciousness implicit in His name (xxxiv. 6 f.), He will shew grace and mercy to such as deserve it. Who these are, is not expressly stated; but fallen and penitent Israel is what is intended. For the form of sentence called

J will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy. And he said, Thou canst not see my face: for man shall not see me and live. And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon the rock: and it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, and will cover thee with my hand until I have passed by: and I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back: but my face shall not be seen.

the idem per idem construction, which is idiomatic in both Heb. and Arabic, where the means, or the desire, to be more explicit does not exist, cf. iii. 14, iv. 13, xvi. 23, 1 S. xxiii. 13 (lit. and they went where they went), 2 S. xv. 20 ('seeing I am going whither I am going'), 2 K. viii. 1 ('and sojourn where thou wilt sojourn'); and see the writer's Notes on Samuel, on 1 S. l.c. The second 'will' in each sentence is a simple future: it must not be emphasized as though it meant 'wish to' (θέλω). The quotation (from LXX.) in Rom. ix. 15 ('I will have mercy on whom I have mercy &c.') expresses the sense exactly. All that is said here is that God is gracious to those to whom He is gracious: on the motives which may prompt Him to be gracious, the passage is silent. See further p. 54.

20. The thought that no one could 'see God,' at least in His full glory, 'and live,' is often expressed in the OT.: cf. Gen. xxxii. 30, Dt. iv. 33, v. 24, 26, Judg. vi. 22f., xiii. 22, Is. vi. 5.

21—23. Jehovah accordingly bids Moses stand where he may see, as He passes by, not His full glory, but only His back, or hinder parts (xxvi. 12 Heb.), i.e., so to say, only the afterglow, which He leaves behind Him, but which may still suggest faintly what the full brilliancy of His presence must be (cf. Job xxvi. 14).

21. stand] better, station thyself: cf. xxxiv. 2.

xxxiv. Moses is commanded to hew two tables of stone, like those which he had broken, and to take them up the mount to Jehovah, vv. 1—5. Proclamation of Jehovah's moral character in the promised theophany, vv. 6—8. Moses again entreats Jehovah to forgive His people's sin, and to go with them to Canaan, v. 9 [and receives the promise that He will do so, xxxiii. 14—16]. Establishment of a covenant with Israel, vv. 10—28. How Moses' face shone, when he came down from conversing with Jehovah on the mountain, vv. 29—35.

Vv. 29—35 have all the marks of belonging to P; but the analysis of vv. 1—28 presents great difficulties. If these verses be read carefully, it will be seen that one thing is commanded, and another done. In vv. 1—4 Moses is commanded to prepare and take up the mountain two tables of stone like those which he had broken: Jehovah will then write upon them the words which were upon the first tables (i.e. the Decalogue of Ex. xx.). In v. 10, however, Jehovah declares that He is about to make a covenant: a number of regulations which Israel is to observe are given (vv. 11—26): Moses is then told to write these words, for they are the basis of the covenant (v. 27); and (v. 28<sup>b</sup>) he does write upon the tables 'the words of the covenant, the ten words.' It is true, as Di. observes, Moses is not in v. 27 told to write the words on the tables, so that, in itself, the intention of the command might be that he was to write them on a scroll for his own use: if this were the case, it would of course leave the way open for understanding the 'words of the covenant' in v. 28 of the Decalogue of Ex. xx. In view, however, of the connexion in which vv. 27, 28 now stand, it seems most unnatural to distinguish the covenant of v. 28 from the covenant of v. 27; or to understand the 'he' in 'and he wrote' in v. 28<sup>b</sup>, of any one but the 'he' (twice) in v. 28<sup>a</sup>, i.e. of Moses. The contradiction therefore remains: in v. 1 it is said that Jehovah will write upon the tables the Decalogue of Ex. xx.; in v. 28 it is said that Moses wrote the 'words of the covenant' given in vv. 11—26.

There are also other difficulties. As was pointed out on p. 347, there is nothing in the terms of xxxiv. 10, 27 to suggest that a renewal of the covenant is contemplated; and in addition to this, as Dr McNeile well argues, a fresh body of laws (vv. 11—26) is not required: 'a covenant having been formed (xxiv. 7 f.), and based upon laws which are given earlier in the book (xx. 22—xxiii. 33), and then having been broken by sin, all that can conceivably be required is repentance and forgiveness. The original covenant laws must unalterably hold good.' Vv. 1—4 should in fact be followed consistently not by the wholly different laws contained in vv. 11—26, but—as they are followed after the quotation in Dt. x. 1—3—by such words as, 'And he wrote on the tables, according to the first writing, the ten words (i.e. the Decalogue of Ex. xx.), ...and Jehovah gave them unto' Moses (Dt. x. 4).

It is plain, from what has been said, that the representation in xxxiv. 1—28 is not throughout consistent with itself. The following considerations will shew how critics generally—Di., for instance, not less than Welh.; cf. EB. ii. 1444—suppose that the inconsistencies arose. The laws on worship contained in xxxiv. 12—26 are evidently nothing but a different recension of laws on the same subject embedded in the Book of the Covenant, esp. in xxiii. 12, 15—19: here, in J, they appear as the laws on the basis of which the covenant is—not renewed, but—established for the first time (vv. 10, 27), just as in E (in its present form) the laws contained in the Book of the Covenant form the basis on which the covenant is established (xxiv. 7 f.). J's original narrative in xxxiv. 1—5, 10—28, in other words, describes really the first establishment of the covenant, and formed originally the sequel in J to xix. 20—25 (see on xxiv. 1): it is a parallel to E's account of the establishment of the covenant preserved in xx. 22—xxiii. 33, xxiv. 3—8: there was no room for it immediately beside E's account of the same event: but it was retained by the compiler, and placed by him where it now stands, immediately after the account of the people's forgiveness and re-instatement in Jehovah's favour, where it has in consequence the appearance of the renewal of the covenant which had been broken. The inconsistencies have arisen from the imperfect adjustment of the

J And the LORD said unto Moses, Hew thee two tables of 34
E stone | like unto the first: and I will write upon the tables the words that were on the first tables, which thou brakest.

two narratives, the narrative of the re-writing of the tables which had been broken, and that of the (re-)establishment of the covenant. If we omit from vv. 1, 4 the clauses marked in the analysis, we shall find that we have in vv. 1—5, 10—28, a consistent account of Moses ascending the mountain with two tables of stone, of his receiving from Jehovah the laws which were to form the basis of the covenant (vv. 10, 27), and of his writing these laws upon the tables (v. 28). By the insertion from E—who, as he described (xxxii. 19) the breaking of the tables, will also naturally have described how they were replaced—of the two clauses in vv. 1, 4 a narrative describing how Moses ascended the mountain to receive the laws of vv. 10—26 was transformed into one describing how he ascended the mountain to receive the Decalogue of Ex. xx., which Jehovah promises that He will re-write. But the wording of v. 28<sup>b</sup> was not altered so as to adjust it properly to the new sense of vv. 1—4; and hence the inconsistency between v. 28 and vv. 1—4.

One more point remains to be noticed. V. 28<sup>b</sup>—understood in the sense which the context naturally imposes—speaks of the ‘words of the covenant’ (i.e. the words on which the covenant of vv. 10, 27 is based) as ‘ten words’; and hence Göthe (in 1773), Wellhausen (independently: see Compos. des Hex.<sup>2</sup> p. 328), and others have supposed that there stood originally in vv. 11—26 ten regulations, which have since been added to by later hands, forming—in contrast to the ‘moral Decalogue’ of Ex. xx.—a ‘ritual Decalogue,’ which according to the writer of v. 28 was inscribed upon the two tables, and formed the basis of the covenant. As there are more regulations than ten in vv. 11—26, of course the ‘ten’ in question can be differently constituted: Wellh. (l.c. p. 331: so Bâ. p. xlvi) supposes them to have consisted of vv. 14<sup>a</sup>, 17, 18<sup>a</sup>, 19<sup>a</sup>, 22<sup>a</sup>, 22<sup>b</sup>, 25<sup>a</sup>, 25<sup>b</sup>, 26<sup>a</sup>, 26<sup>b</sup>. In view of the close connexion subsisting between v. 27 and v. 28 those who argue in this manner can hardly be blamed. It is however open to question whether ‘the ten words’ are an original part of the text of v. 28: they may be a harmonizing addition, intended (in spite of the inconsistency which it involves) to identify the ‘words’ written upon the tables with the Decalogue of Ex. xx. But, whether they were ten or more, it certainly seems that, according to the writer of vv. 27, 28, the ritual regulations of vv. 10—26 were—like the ‘moral Decalogue’ of E—written upon stone tables. The argument for this view of the chapter is clearly and forcibly presented in the Interpreter, Oct. 1908, p. 6 ff.

1—5. Moses is commanded to hew two tables of stone, similar to those which he had broken (xxxii. 19), and bring them up Sinai to Jehovah. The former tables are said (xxxii. 16) to have been themselves God’s handiwork: in the new tables only the writing is to be His.

3. The precautions are similar to those taken in xix. 12 f.
before] rather, in front of, i.e. on the slopes in front of the mountain, towards its foot.

As was pointed out on p. 347, the historical retrospect in Dt. ix. 8—29 is based largely upon Ex. xxxii., and contains numerous verbal excerpts from it; and a comparison of Dt. x. 1—3 with Ex. xxxiv. 1, 4 makes it practically certain that in the text of Ex. xxxiv. 1, 4 which lay before the author of Dt., there was mention of the ark as made at this time by Moses. Here is the text of Dt. x. 1—3, with the words excerpted from Ex. xxxiv. 1, 2, 4 printed in italics:—(Dt. x. 1) At that time Jehovah said unto me, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me to the mount, and make thee an ark of wood; (2) that I may write upon the tables the words that were on the first tables, which thou brakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark. (3) And I made an ark of acacia-wood; and I hewed two tables of stone like unto the first, and I went up to the mount; and the two tables were in my hand. Thus in Dt. Moses is instructed to make, and actually does make, the ark, before ascending the mount the second time to receive the tables of stone (Ex. xxxiv. 4); whereas in Ex. the command to make the ark is both given to Bezalel and executed by him, after Moses' return from the mountain (xxxv. 30 ff., xxxvi. 2, xxxvii. 1—all passages belonging to P). The two accounts are evidently discrepant: and there can be no reasonable doubt that the notices of the ark compiled in the original text of Ex. xxxiv. 1, 4 were omitted by the compiler, as inconsistent with the more detailed particulars, which he preferred, contained in the narrative of P.

5. and he (Moses) took his stand (cf. v. 2) with him there, and called upon the name of Jehovah] i.e. invoked Him in worship. The marg. must be followed: the subject of the verbs is Moses (see xxxiii. 21).

Jhim, and proclaimed, The LORD, the LORD, a God full of compassion and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy and truth; <sup>1</sup>keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving <sup>7</sup>iniquity and transgression and sin: and that will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, upon the third and upon the fourth generation. And Moses <sup>8</sup>made haste, and bowed his head toward the earth, and worshipped. And he said, If now I have found grace in <sup>9</sup>thy sight, O Lord, let the Lord, I pray thee, go in the midst of us; for it is a stiffnecked people; and pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for thine inheritance.

The sequel follows in v. 10. Called upon is lit. 'called with,' i.e. used the name in invocation: so Gen. iv. 26, xii. 8, xiii. 4, xxi. 33 al.

6—8. Description of the theophany promised in xxxiii. 19—23. The theophany consists essentially in a proclamation of the glories of Jehovah's moral nature, developed with special reference to the occasion giving rise to the theophany, and emphasizing the predominance of the Divine attributes of mercy above those of judgement. Echoes of this great declaration of Jehovah's moral nature occur frequently in the later literature: Nu. xiv. 18 (a quotation), Jer. xxxii. 18, Nah. i. 3<sup>a</sup>, Neh. ix. 17, 31, Joel ii. 31, Jon. iv. 2, Ps. lxxxvi. 15, ciii. 8, cxi. 4<sup>b</sup>, cxii. 4<sup>b</sup>, cxlv. 8, 2 Ch. xxx. 9. It is also probably the source of the explanatory comments on the second commandment in Ex. xx. 5<sup>b</sup>, 6.

Vv. 6—9 are not really connected with their present context: cf. McNeile, 217, xxx (a), xxxvi. Vv. 1<sup>a</sup>, 2—5, 10—28 form one connected whole (p. 364 f.); and xxxiii. 1, 3—4, 12—13, 17—23, xxxiv. 6—9, xxxiii. 14—16 (see p. 361) form another.

7. keeping mercy, &c.] hence, with 'doing' for 'keeping,' xx. 6.

forgiving iniquity, &c.] Cf. Mic. vii. 18.

will by no means clear the guilty] so Nu. xiv. 18, Nah. i. 3<sup>a</sup>, Jer. xxx. 11 = xlvi. 28 (EVV., here, 'will in no wise leave unpunished'). The verb is the one rendered hold guiltless in xx. 7: see the note there.

visiting the iniquity, &c.] See on xx. 5.

8. Moses now reverently does obeisance (cf. iv. 31, xii. 27).

9. Jehovah's 'ways' (xxxiii. 13) and character having now been disclosed to Moses, he again entreats Jehovah, who is ready to forgive (v. 7<sup>a</sup>), to pardon His people's sin, and give proof that He has again received them into His favour, by going personally with them to Canaan. xxxiii. 14 (see note) should now probably follow as the answer.

9. stiffnecked] This character of the people (xxxii. 9, xxxiii. 3, 5) is here made the motive for its being treated with favour and forgiven.

10—28. The (re-)establishment of the covenant, with the laws upon which it is based. The passage belongs in the main to E; but it has probably been enlarged in parts with hortatory additions by the compiler. We have met with some such additions before, in xx. 22—xxiii. 33; and they are found elsewhere also in connexion with laws, as in Lev. xviii. 1—5, 24—29, xx. 22—24 (H), and Dt. xii.—xxvi. passim.

10. Jehovah declares His purpose of concluding a covenant with His people, to be confirmed by wonders of a character to convince all of His power and greatness. The wonders meant are such as those narrated in Nu. xi., xvi., xx., xxi., &c. The verse, however, is hardly an answer to v. 9, whereas xxxiii. 14 would answer it directly: the conjecture (p. 361) that xxxiii. 14—16 should follow here is thus confirmed.

with thee] i.e. in dealing with thee: cf. Dt. i. 30, x. 21 (also with 'terrible'): in both these passages 'for' is lit. with.

11—28. The conditions of the covenant, i.e. the laws upon the acceptance of which its establishment depends. The laws themselves seem to have received parenetic additions from the compiler.

11—16. No alliance to be entered into with the Canaanites, lest intercourse with them seduce Israel into idolatry (comp. xxxiii. 24, 32 f., Dt. vii. 2—5).

11. that which I am commanding thee this day] viz. the injunction which follows (v. 12 ff.), to have no dealings with the Canaanites. The formula is one which is extremely common in Dt. (iv. 40, vi. 6, vii. 11, viii. 1, 11 &c.).

Asherim] The plur. of Ashērāh, the sacred wooden (see Dt. xvi. 21, Jud. vi. 26) post or column, which stood by the altar in Canaanite places of worship (cf. Jud. vi. 25—30, by an altar of Baal), and was often by the unspiritual Israelites set up (2 K. xvii. 10), or (Dt. xvi. 21) 'planted,' beside the altar of Jehovah. It is often supposed to have been a conventional substitute for a sacred tree; but this is not certain. We have no particulars about the precise size or shape of an Ashērāh: the two posts, of the form of tree-trunks, resting on a wide base, and surmounted by representations of the full and crescent moon, carved upon a stone from Carthage (Nowäck, Arch. ii. 19; Benzinger, Arch. 1 p. 381, 2 p. 326), might indeed be Ashērāhs; but we have no evidence that they were. The name Abd-ashirta ('servant of Ashirta') in the Tell el-Amarna letters, and the expression 'finger (oracle) of Ashirta,' on a cuneiform tablet of c. 1350 found at Taanach (see the writer's Schweich Lectures, p. 82), seem to indicate that there was an old Semitic goddess Ashērāh; and if this was the case, the 'Ashērāh' of the OT. was probably her emblem: but the great difference in the Heb. (עֲשֵׂרָה and עֲשֵׂרֹת) makes it unlikely that she was the same as the Phoen. 'Ashtōreth, or the Ass. Ishtar (Benz. Arch. 2 326 f.). On account of their heathen associations, the Ashērīm, like the mazzēbāhs (see on xxiii. 24), were proscribed by the more spiritual Israelites. For other allusions to Ashērāhs, see Dt. vii. 5, xii. 3 (repetitions of the present prohibition), 1 K. xiv. 15, 23, xv. 13, xvi. 33, 2 K. xiii. 6, xviii. 4, xxi. 3, 7, xxiii. 4, 6, 7, 14, 15; and comp. These are evidently two recensions of one and the same collection of laws. Neither can well be throughout in its original order, and later additions have almost certainly been introduced into both. xxxiv. 21 is obviously, where it stands, out of place, and is in a much better position in xxiii. 12. xxiii. 12<sup>b</sup> and xxxiv. 21<sup>b</sup> look like explanatory additions made to the same original law by two different compilers (comp. Ex. xx. 11 with Dt. v. 14 last clause, 15). xxiii. 13 (see note ad loc.) reads like the conclusion of some collection of laws, no longer in its original place. xxiii. 14, 17 would hardly both stand in a document written by a single hand: probably xxiii. 17 has been introduced from xxxiv. 23. In xxiii. 15 the words from Seven days to appear before me empty leave v. 16 without a verb to govern it (in the ||, xxxiv. 22, there is a fresh verb); and have probably been introduced here from xxxiv. 18. xxxiv. 19, 20 (to redeem) seems to interrupt the connexion where it stands, and to be interpolated between xxiii. 15<sup>a</sup> and 15<sup>b</sup>: on the other hand, the first clause of xxxiv. 19 seems in form more original than the first clause of xiii. 12. xxxiv. 24 is pretty clearly a reflection of the compiler. The two recensions are derived evidently from a common original; but we cannot in all cases say how the differences between them arose. For notes upon the passage as a whole, the reader is referred to chs. xiii. and xxiii.: it will be sufficient here to comment on the more important expressions peculiar to ch. xxxiv.

18. See on xxiii. 15<sup>a</sup>.

19. 20<sup>a</sup> (to redeem). See on xiii. 12, 13.

19. and all, &c.] Something must be out of order: since the first-born of cattle are included among 'all that first openeth the womb,' 'mine' cannot logically be the predicate of and all &c. Perhaps (Di.) thou shalt sanctify (Dt. xv. 19), or sacrifice, unto me has fallen out after 'sheep.' There is a similar inexactness in xiii. 12.

20<sup>b</sup>. appear before me] read probably see my face. See on xxiii. 15<sup>b</sup>.

21. in plowing time, &c.] i.e. even at times when the need of working continuously might seem most urgent. For clause <sup>2</sup>, see on xxiii. 12.

22. See on xxiii. 16. Feast of weeks is a name derived (see Dt. xvi. 9) from the 'seven weeks'—the average duration of harvest-time—by which this feast followed the commencement of harvest. The same expression is used in Dt. xvi. 10, 16, 2 Ch. viii. 13 †.

hold thee] See on xii. 47. So Dt. xvi. 13.

close] lit. circuit, i.e. completed circuit; Ges. (Theis.) 'ad (post) decursum anni.' So 1 S. i. 20 (lit. at the (completed) circuit of days),—also, in all probability, of the feast of weeks at the close of the year (notice in v. 21 'the yearly sacrifice,' lit. the sacrifice of days, of the same feast<sup>1</sup>): the word occurs also in Ps. xix. 6 [Heb. 7], 2 Ch. xxiv. 23 †; cf. the cognate verb in Is. xxix. 1 'let the feasts go round,' i.e. complete their circuit.

23. appear before] read probably see the face of. See on xxiii. 17.

24. An ideal picture. The Israelites may feel quite secure in observing these pilgrimages; for their enemies will be dispossessed, and their territory enlarged, so that, even though their men are absent from their homes on pilgrimage, no one will think of invading their land.

cast out] dispossess (Jud. xi. 23 EVV., 24 RV.). The thought as xxiii. 27 f.; the expression as Dt. iv. 38, ix. 4, 5, xi. 23, xviii. 12 (EVV. in all, drive out, which, however, confuses the word with the different one (gārash) so rendered in v. 11 here),—all with Jehovah as subject.

goest up] viz. to Jerusalem, for pilgrimages to which 'go up' was the technical expression (1 K. xii. 27, 28; Is. ii. 3; Ps. cxxii. 4).

25. See on xxiii. 18. In cl. <sup>b</sup> what in xxiii. 18 is prescribed apparently for all festal sacrifices is here referred specifically to the passover, —'fat,' which is not elsewhere mentioned in connexion with the passover, being changed into 'sacrifice,' which would refer naturally to the flesh of the lamb eaten at the passover.

<sup>1</sup> The words 'that [Heb. and] Hannah conceived' in v. 20 are almost certainly misplaced, and should stand at the beginning of the verse: 'And Hannah conceived; and it came to pass, at the close of the days (i.e. of the year), that she bare a son.'

26 the feast of the passover be left unto the morning. The first of the firstfruits of thy ground thou shalt bring unto the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seethe a kid in its mother's milk. And the LORD said unto Moses, Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel. And he was there with the LORD forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, | the ten <sup>1</sup>commandments. G/

26. See on xxiii. 19.

27. These words,—i.e. the commands of vv. 11—26,—are to be written down by Moses; for they constitute the conditions upon which Jehovah establishes His covenant (vv. 10, 27) with Israel. 'The verse is J's parallel to xxiv. 3—8 in E' (Di.).

after the tenor of] The expression used in Gen. xliii. 7.

28<sup>a</sup>. And he was there, &c.] viz. after the ascent of the mount described in v. 4, i.e. in the present form of vv. 1—4, Moses second ascent of it, but in their original form, if the view stated on p. 364 be correct, the ascent mentioned in xxiv. 1—2, 9—11, so that in this case the forty days of J here will be the same as the forty days of E in xxiv. 18<sup>b</sup>.

28<sup>b</sup>. And he wrote] i.e., in the present context of the words, Moses (see p. 364). Of course it must be admitted that v. 28<sup>b</sup> may have once stood in a context in which the pronoun would refer naturally to Jehovah: this would be the case, for instance, if it once stood immediately after v. 4, as Dt. x. 4 would suggest (cf. p. 364).

the words of the covenant] The 'words' of v. 27, i.e. the commands of vv. 11—26. It is difficult to think that this expression, at least as an original part of J, can have denoted the Decalogue of Ex. xx.: for the Decalogue of Ex. xx. is not in any part of Ex. made the basis of a covenant: this is a representation characteristic of Dt. (iv. 13, v. 2, 3 al.: see pp. 175, 193).

the ten commandments] Heb. words: i.e., if the words are part of J, and in their original context, the 'words,' or commandments, of vv. 11—26, which, though they are now more, may once have consisted only of ten (the 'ritual Decalogue,' p. 365). But it is probable that the words are a later addition, made, on the basis of Dt. iv. 13, x. 4, after the original wording of the chapter had been modified in vv. 1, 4, so as to make it describe the re-writing of the 'moral' Decalogue of Ex. xx. (p. 365); and in this case they will, as in Dt. iv. 13, x. 4†, refer to that Decalogue. So Kittel, Bā., McNeile (p. xxxi), al.

P And it came to pass, when Moses came down from <sup>29</sup> mount Sinai with the two tables of the testimony in Moses' hand, when he came down from the mount, that Moses wist not that the skin of his face <sup>1</sup>shone <sup>2</sup>by reason of his speaking with him. And when Aaron and all the children of Israel <sup>30</sup>saw Moses, behold, the skin of his face shone; and they were afraid to come nigh him. And Moses called unto <sup>31</sup>them; and Aaron and all the rulers of the congregation returned unto him; and Moses spake to them. And after- <sup>32</sup>ward all the children of Israel came nigh: and he gave them in commandment all that the LORD had spoken with him in mount Sinai. And when Moses had done speaking with <sup>33</sup>them, he put a veil on his face. But when Moses went in <sup>34</sup>before the LORD to speak with him, he took the veil off,

The Heb. verb is a peculiar one, recurring only vv. 30, 35; it is a denominative from hēren, 'horn,' in the sense of ray (see Hab. iii. 4), and means thus, was rayed. Jerome, following Aq., rendered literally in the Vulg. quod cornuta esset; hence the frequent representation of Moses in art with horns rising out of his head. LXX. δεδοξασται; see below. by reason of] The marg. is equally possible grammatically; but the context shews that the rend. of the text is right.

33—35. The glow alarmed the Israelites: Moses, therefore, put a veil on his face, which he wore ever afterwards, except when he went in to speak with God, or while he was communicating to the people the Divine message which he had received: in ordinary life the reflexion of the Divine glory upon his face was thus hidden from the people.

33. a veil] The Heb. word (masweh) occurs only here and vv. 34, 35. 34, 35. But whenever Moses went in...he would take...; and he would come out, and speak...; and the children of Israel would see..., and Moses would put, &c.] The tenses are throughout frequentative, describing Moses' habitual practice.

Comp. 2 Cor. iii. 7—18, noticing (1) that St Paul interprets the until he came out; and he came out, and spake unto the P children of Israel saw the face of Moses, that the skin of Moses' face shone: and Moses put the veil upon his face again, until he went in to speak with him.

narrative allegorically, assigning as the reason why Moses used to put on the veil, not that the Israelites might not constantly be beholding the glow on Moses' face, but that they might not see its gradual waning away (v. 13), which St Paul regards as a type of the passing away of their own dispensation; and (2) that St Paul's key-words in the passage, δόξα, δεδόξασται ('glory,' 'hath been made glorious'), are suggested by the LXX. rend. of 'shone' in vv. 29, 35, δεδόξασται. The narrative is a beautiful symbolical expression of the truth that close converse with God illumines the soul with a Divine radiance, and that those who 'with unveiled face' behold spiritually as in a mirror the glory of the Lord, are gradually through its influence transformed more and more completely into His likeness (2 Cor. iii. 18).

CHAPTERS XXXV.—XL.

These chapters, which all belong to P, form the sequel to chs. xxv.—xxxi., and narrate the execution of the instructions there communicated to Moses. In the main, the narrative is repeated verbatim from the instructions in chs. xxv.—xxxi., with the simple substitution of past tenses for future; in two or three cases, however, a phrase is altered, and there are also some instances of omission or abridgement. Thus a few verses (as xxv. 8—9, 15, 22, 40) are omitted, as not needing repetition; others (as xxv. 16, 21, 30, 37<sup>b</sup>), chiefly relating to the position or use of the different vessels named, are incorporated in xl. 17—23, the account of the erection of the Tent of Meeting, where they actually belong; and the sections on the Anointing Oil and the Incense (xxx. 22—33, 34—38) are merely referred to briefly in a single verse (xxxvii. 29). There are also, as compared with chs. xxv.—xxxi., differences in the order of contents. The relation of chs. xxxv.—xl. to chs. xxv.—xxxi. will appear perhaps most clearly from the following synoptical table:—

CHAPTERS XXXV.—XL.

xxxv. 1—3. Observance of the Sabbath inculcated (v. 3 added).
 4—9. The people invited to make voluntary offerings.
 10—19. All skilled workmen invited to assist.

CHAPTERS XXV.—XXXI.

xxxi. 15 (vv. 13—14, 16—17 not repeated).
 xxv. 2—7 (vv. 8, 9 not repeated).

20—29. Presentation of the offerings.

30—xxxvi. 1. Moses announces to the people the appointment of Bézal'él and Oholiab, and of other skilled workmen qualified to assist.

xxxvi. 2—7. Delivery of the offerings to Bézal'él and Oholiab. The liberality of the people has to be checked.

8—19. The curtains for the Dwelling, the tent over it, and the two outer coverings.

20—34. The boards, or 'frames,' to support the curtains.

35—38. The Veil and Screen.

xxxvii. 1—9. The Ark and Mercy-seat.

10—16. The Table of Presence-bread.

17—24. The Candlestick.

25—28. The Altar of Incense.

29. The Anointing Oil, and the Incense.

xxxviii. 1—7. The Altar of Burnt-offering.

8<sup>a</sup>. The Bronze Laver (v. 8<sup>b</sup> is new).

9—20. The Court of the Tent of Meeting.

21—31. Account of the amount of metal employed.

xxxix. 1—31. Vestments of the priests:—

2—5. The ephod (v. 1 introductory; most of v. 3 new).

6, 7. The two onyx stones on the shoulder-straps, engraved with the names of the tribes of Israel.

8—21. The pouch of judgment, to contain the Urim and Thummim.

22—26. The robe of the ephod.

xxxi. 2—6 (vv. 7—11, the details of things to be made, not repeated).

xxvi. 1—11, 14 (vv. 9<sup>b</sup>, 12, 13 not repeated).

xxvi. 15—29 (v. 30 not repeated).

xxvi. 31—32, 36—37 (vv. 33—35 not repeated).

xxv. 10—14, 17—20 (vv. 15, 16, 21, 22 not repeated).

xxv. 23—29 (v. 30 not repeated).

xxv. 31—39 (vv. 37<sup>b</sup>, 40 not repeated).

xxx. 1—5 (vv. 6—10 not repeated).

xxx. 22—25, 34—35 (abridged: vv. 26—33, 36—38 not repeated).

xxvii. 1—8<sup>a</sup> (v. 8<sup>b</sup> not repeated).

xxviii. 6—8.

xxviii. 9—12 (abridged).

xxviii. 15—28 (vv. 13, 14 much abridged in xxxix. 16<sup>a</sup>: vv. 29, 30 (the Urim and Thummim) not repeated).

27—29. The tunics, turban, caps, drawers, and sashes.

30, 31. The golden plate, on the front of the turban.

32—43. Delivery of the completed work to Moses.

xl. 1—8. Moses is commanded to set up the Tent of Meeting, and to arrange the sacred vessels in their places.

9—15. Repetition of command to anoint the Tent of Meeting, and the sacred vessels (xxx. 26—29); and to wash, invest, and anoint the priests (xxix. 4—9; xxx. 30).

16—33. Moses sets up the Tent of Meeting, and arranges the sacred vessels according to the instructions given partly in vv. 1—8, partly in chs. xxv.—xxxi.

34—38. The cloud takes up its abode on the Tent of Meeting.

xxviii. 39, 40, 42<sup>a</sup> (abridged: vv. 41, 42<sup>b</sup>, 43 not repeated).

See references to chs. xxv.—xxx. in the notes on xl. 16—33.

From a critical point of view, the most noticeable variation is the different position of the Altar of Incense and the Bronze Laver. These, which appeared before in the appendix to chs. xx<sup>a</sup>.—xxix., viz. in ch. xxx., are here introduced in accordance with the place which they would naturally hold, viz. in the description of the Dwelling (xxxvii. 25—28), and Court (xxxviii. 8), respectively; the Altar of Incense is mentioned also in ch. xl. (vv. 5, 26). If, therefore, chs. xxx.—xxx. are rightly assigned to a secondary stratum of P (see p. 328), the same conclusion will follow, as a necessary corollary, for chs. xxxv.—xl. There are other indications pointing in the same direction. In the LXX. of chs. xxxv.—xl. the order of the contents in xxxvi. 8<sup>b</sup>—xxxix. 43 differs remarkably from the Hebrew (see the Table in LOT: 37 f. [6<sup>b</sup>—8 40 f.], or McNeile, pp. 224 f.); and the renderings of many of the technical terms of the Hebrew differ from those in chs. xxv.—xxx. (see examples in McNeile, p. 226). It is thus difficult to suppose either (1) that the translators of chs. xxxv.—xl. had before them the Hebrew text of these chapters in its present form, or (2) that these translators were the same as those who translated chs. i.—xxxiv.; and it becomes probable 'that the Heb. text used by the original translators of Exodus did not contain chs. xxxv.—xl., and that they were supplied afterwards from a longer Heb. recension of the book, in which these chapters had not yet reached their final form' (Swete, Intr. to OT. in Greek, p. 236). These considerations support the conclusion, reached in the first instance upon independent grounds (the relation of these chapters to chs. xxx., xxxi.), that chs. xxxv.—xl. belong to a secondary and posterior stratum of P (P<sub>2</sub> or P<sub>3</sub>). This is recognized even by xxxv. 1—3. Command to observe the sabbath. A repetition of the substance of xxxi. 12—17 (note that v. 2 is in the main identical verbally with xxxi. 15), placed here apparently as a reminder to the Israelites that the sabbath must not be broken even for sacred purposes.

18. cords] i.e. tent-cords, to attach the curtains of the Dwelling, and hangings of the Court, to the tent-pins fastened in the earth (cf. xxxix. 40, Nu. iii. 26, 37, iv. 26, 32). Not mentioned in xxvii. 19, but implied in the mention of 'pins.'

19. the plaited (p) garments] See on xxxi. 10.

20—29. How the people responded to Moses' summons: ordinary men, women, and 'rulers,' all brought willingly whatever their means, or their ability, enabled them to provide. An ideal picture of a community ready and eager to contribute liberally to the sanctuary and service of its God. Cf. on xxv. 1.

20—29. Presentation of the offerings.

21. stirred...up] lit. lifted up: so v. 26, xxxvi. 2.

offering] contribution: see on xxv. 2.

all the service thereof] i.e., as xxx. 16, the daily worship, especially for the candlestick and the Altar of incense, the materials for which are mentioned in v. 28. 'All' must not be pressed; materials for the morning and evening daily burnt-offering, and for the Presence-bread (xxix. 38 ff.; xxv. 30), not being included in the sequel.

22. The offering of men and women alike; viz. gold (v. 6; xxv. 3), in various forms.

brooches] Heb. ḥāq̄,—elsewhere a 'hook' for the jaw (Ez. xxix. 4), or nose (2 K. xix. 28).

earrings] or nose-rings. See on xxxii. 2.

armlets] marg., necklaces: the precise meaning is uncertain. Heb. kūmās, only besides Nu. xxxi. 50.

all jewels of gold] more clearly, '(even) every jewel of gold.'

and every man that waved a wave-offering of gold unto Jehovah

23 gold unto the LORD. And every man, with whom was P<sub>3</sub> found blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and rams' skins dyed red, and sealskins, brought 24 them. Every one that did offer an offering of silver and brass brought the LORD's offering: and every man, with whom was found acacia wood for any work of the service, 25 brought it. And all the women that were wise hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, the blue, and the purple, the scarlet, and the fine 26 linen. And all the women whose heart stirred them up 27 in wisdom spun the goats' hair. And the rulers brought the <sup>1</sup>onyx stones, and the stones to be set, for the ephod, 28 and for the breastplate; and the spice, and the oil; for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense.
 29 The children of Israel brought a freewill offering unto the LORD; every man and woman, whose heart made them willing to bring for all the work, which the LORD had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses.

(brought it)] cf. vv. 23 end, 24 end. The rend. 'even' is impossible, besides yielding a wrong sense: the reference in this clause is not to those who brought brooches, and earrings, &c., but to such as brought gold in any form,—probably, in particular, ingots. 'Wave' and 'wave-offering' are used here, not in their proper sense (see on xxix. 24) of a ceremony implying that the object 'waved' is given ultimately to the priests, but in a weakened and later sense of present, presentation: so xxxviii. 24, 29, Nu. xviii. 11.

23, 24. The contributions of the men; viz. the other things mentioned in vv. 6, 7 (= xxv. 3—5).

24. offering] not as v. 22, but, as v. 5, contribution (see on xxv. 2). The verb 'offer' is cognate: lit. lift or take up (see ibid.).

the service] the business of constructing the sanctuary; so xxxvi. 1, 3.

25, 26. The special contributions of the women. The women spun yarn, both of linen (v. 25) and coarser (v. 26) materials. Spinning is still in the East the work of women: and both in the Sin. Peninsula and elsewhere women still spin camels' and goats' hair into the coarse yarn out of which tent-coverings are woven. 'Wise hearted,' and 'wisdom,' of technical skill; cf. v. 10, and on xxviii. 3.

27, 28. The contributions of the rulers (see on xvi. 22); precious stones, spices, and oil (vv. 9, 8 = xxv. 7, 6).

29. Whatever the Israelites offered was offered by them freely.

P<sub>3</sub> 'And Moses said unto the children of Israel, See, the LORD hath called by name Bezalel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah; and he hath filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship; and to devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in cutting of stones for setting, and in carving of wood, to work in all manner of cunning workmanship. And he hath put in his heart that he may teach, both he, and Oholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan. Them hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of workmanship, of the engraver, and of the cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and of the weaver, even of them that do any workmanship, and of those that devise cunning works. And Bezalel and Oholiab shall work, and every wise hearted man, in whom the LORD hath put wisdom and understanding to know how to work all the work for the service of the sanctuary, according to all that the LORD hath commanded.

30—xxxvi. 1. Moses communicates to the people Jehovah's nomination of Bēzal'ēl and Oholiab to superintend the construction of the sanctuary. Vv. 30<sup>b</sup> (from See)—33 are all but verbally identical with xxxi. 2—5, only the third person being substituted for the first, as Moses is here the speaker. Vv. 34—36 are expanded from xxxi. 6; xxxi. 7—11 (the list of things to be made) is omitted.

31. the spirit of God] see on xxxi. 3.

32. cunning works] works of skill (xxxii. 4).

33. cunning] skilled (xxvi. 1). This word is not in xxxi. 5.

34. that he may teach] i.e. instruct others to become skilled workmen likewise. The assistance of the 'wise hearted' is promised in xxxi. 6 (cf. xxxvi. 1, 2, 4, 8); but it is not elsewhere said that Bēzal'ēl and Oholiab should instruct them.

35. the craftsman (RVm.)] the word (lit. cutter in, incisor), if followed by 'of stone' may mean an 'engraver' (xxviii. 11), but, used absolutely, signifies generally a worker in wood, stone, or metal.

the embroiderer] See on xxvi. 1.

cunning works] works of skill, as v. 32.

xxxvi. 1. in whom, &c.] cf. xxxi. 6<sup>b</sup>.

the service of] i.e. the business of constructing, as xxxv. 24. So v. 3. according to] with regard to.

2 And Moses called Bezalel and Oholiab, and every wise P hearted man, in whose heart the LORD had put wisdom, even every one whose heart stirred him up to come unto 3 the work to do it: and they received of Moses all the offering, which the children of Israel had brought for the work of the service of the sanctuary, to make it withal. And they 4 brought yet unto him freewill offerings every morning. And all the wise men, that wrought all the work of the sanctuary, 5 came every man from his work which they wrought; and they spake unto Moses, saying, The people bring much more than enough for the service of the work, which the 6 LORD commanded to make. And Moses gave commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp, saying, Let neither man nor woman make any more work for the offering of the sanctuary. So the people were 7 restrained from bringing. For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.

2—7. Delivery of the offerings to Bēzal'el and Oholiab, and their assistants. The people continuing to bring offerings, in excess of what was required, are restrained by Moses. Another ideal picture: the people not only offer liberally, but offer more than is required; and their liberality has to be checked.

2. every wise hearted man, &c.] v. 1; cf. xxxi. 6<sup>b</sup>.

stirred...up] lit. lifted up, as xxxv. 21, 26.

to come] to draw near, viz. for a sacred purpose, as often in P (xvi. 9, xl. 32, Lev. ix. 5, 8, xvi. 1, &c.); cf. on xii. 48.

3. received of] took from before. 'Of' is incorrect and inadequate: the picture is of the heap of materials lying before Moses.

offering] contribution, as xxv. 2, xxxv. 5, 21, 24. So v. 6.

And they] They, however (i.e. the Israelites): the pron. is emphatic.

4. wrought] were working.

5. bring] are bringing.

There follows now (xxxvi. 8—xxxix. 31) an enumeration and full description of the things made, repeated for the most part verbally—with of course the necessary change of tense—from chs. xxv.—xxviii., xxx., xxxi. (for ch. xxix., see Lev. viii.). The order is in certain cases different: thus the Dwelling (xxxvi. 8—38) is made before the articles (the Ark, &c.), which it is to contain (xxxvii. 1—24); and the altar of incense then follows immediately (xxxvii. 25—29), instead of coming, as in chs. xxv.—xxxi., in the appendix (xxx. 1—10). See further above, pp. 377, 378.

8—19 (xxvi. 1—14). The curtains forming the Dwelling (vv. 8—13); the tent over it (vv. 14—18); and the two protective coverings above

P, <sup>1</sup>And every wise hearted man among them that wrought <sup>8</sup> the work made the tabernacle with ten curtains; of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, with cherubim the work of the cunning workman made he them. The <sup>9</sup> length of each curtain was eight and twenty cubits, and the breadth of each curtain four cubits: all the curtains had one measure. And he coupled five curtains one to another: <sup>10</sup> and the other five curtains he coupled one to another. And <sup>11</sup> he made loops of blue upon the edge of the one curtain <sup>2</sup>from the selvedge in the coupling: likewise he made in the edge of the curtain that was outmost in the second <sup>3</sup>coupling. Fifty loops made he in the one curtain, and fifty loops made <sup>12</sup> he in the edge of the curtain that was in the second <sup>3</sup>coupling: the loops were opposite one to another. And he made <sup>13</sup> fifty clasps of gold, and coupled the curtains one to another with the clasps: so the tabernacle was one. And he <sup>14</sup> made curtains of goats' hair for a tent over the tabernacle: eleven curtains he made them. The length of each curtain <sup>15</sup> was thirty cubits, and four cubits the breadth of each curtain: the eleven curtains had one measure. And he coupled five <sup>16</sup> curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves. And he made fifty loops on the edge of the curtain that <sup>17</sup> was outmost in the <sup>4</sup>coupling, and fifty loops made he upon the edge of the curtain which was outmost in the second this (v. 19). Mutatis mutandis, the text agrees almost verbally with xxvi. 1—14, except in the Heb. idiom for 'one to another' in vv. 10, 12, 13 (so v. 22), and in the omission of the clauses relating to the erection of the Dwelling in xxvi. 9<sup>b</sup>, 12, 13 (without, however, their being introduced in xl. 17 ff.).

8. every wise hearted man, &c.] cf. vv. 1, 2, 4. In the account of the construction of the sanctuary these are mentioned only here; in the sequel (even in v. 8<sup>b</sup>) the sing. (referring to Bēzal'el) is used regularly (as in xxvi. 1, 4 &c.) till ch. xxxix., where the plur. reappears (though not uniformly).

 20 <sup>3</sup>And he made the boards for the tabernacle of acacia 21 wood, standing up. Ten cubits was the length of a board, 22 and a cubit and a half the breadth of each board. Each board had two tenons, <sup>4</sup>joined one to another: thus did he 23 make for all the boards of the tabernacle. And he made the boards for the tabernacle; twenty boards for the 24 south side southward: and he made forty sockets of silver under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for its two tenons, and two sockets under another board for its 25 two tenons. And for the second side of the tabernacle, on 26 the north side, he made twenty boards, and their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two 27 sockets under another board. And for the hinder part of 28 the tabernacle westward he made six boards. And two boards made he for the corners of the tabernacle in the 29 hinder part. And they were double beneath, and in like manner they were entire unto the top thereof unto <sup>5</sup>one 30 ring: thus he did to both of them in the two corners. And there were eight boards, and their sockets of silver, sixteen 31 sockets; under every board two sockets. And he made bars of acacia wood; five for the boards of the one 32 side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of 33 the tabernacle for the hinder part westward. And he made

In xxvi. 37 the chapiters and fillets are not mentioned; and the five acacia-wood pillars are to be entirely overlaid with gold. As Di. points out, by the partial gilding a gradation would be obtained: (a) the pillars at the entrance to the Most Holy place overlaid entirely with gold (v. 36, xxvi. 32); (b) the pillars at the entrance to the Tent overlaid only at the top with gold (xxxvi. 38); (c) the pillars at the entrance to the Court (like those of the Court generally, xxvii. 17, xxxviii. 17) overlaid only at the top with silver (xxxviii. 19).

 6 the ark, to bear the ark. And he made a <sup>2</sup>mercy-seat of pure gold: two cubits and a half was the length thereof, 7 and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof. And he made two cherubim of gold; of <sup>3</sup>beaten work made he them, at 8 the two ends of the mercy-seat, one cherub at the one end, mercy-seat made he the cherubim at the two ends thereof.

And 20 in the candlestick were four cups made like almond-blossoms, the knops thereof, and the flowers thereof : and a knop 21 under two branches of one piece with it, and a knop under two branches of one piece with it, and a knop under two branches of one piece with it, for the six branches going out of it. And he made the lamps thereof, seven, and the tongs 23 thereof, and the snuffdishes thereof, of pure gold. Of a 24 talent of pure gold made he it, and all the vessels thereof.

And he made for the altar a grating of network of brass, under the ledge round it beneath, reaching halfway up. And he cast four rings for the four ends of the grating of brass, to be places for the staves. And he made the staves of acacia wood, and overlaid them with brass. And he put the staves into the rings on the sides of the altar, to bear it withal ; he made it hollow with planks.

8<sup>b</sup>. the serving women which served] The expression is peculiar, the word used (שָׂרָפָה) being (both times) not the ordinary Heb. for ‘serve,’ but the word which means properly and regularly to serve in a host, to war or fight. The same word is used by P of the service of the Levites in (particularly) the transport of the Tabernacle and its appurtenances (Nu. iv. 1—33), Nu. iv. 23 (RVm.) ‘Heb. to war the warfare’ ; cf. the cognate subst. warfare (EVV. ‘service’), vv. 3 (see RVm.), 35, 39, 43, viii. 24, 25 (see RVm.). Nu., and the women here, are pictured as performing their duties in organized bands, like soldiers in an army (cf. Ges. Thes., Di.), or (Gray, Numbers, pp. 32, 36) the word is one of those which in post-exilic times, when the nation had become a church, acquired a religious connotation. The women were no doubt thought of as washing, cleaning, repairing, &c. Women 'doing "warfare" at the entrance to the tent of meeting' are also mentioned in 1 S. ii. 22<sup>b</sup>: but the passage is not expressed in the LXX., besides differing in representation from the context (the sanctuary a 'tent,' not a hēkāl, or 'temple'); and is beyond question a late gloss. LXX. render νηστεύσασαι, 'fasting,' either paraphrasing, or misreading צַמְתָּ as צַמְתָּ ('fasting'). Onk. has who prayed. For other haggadic interpretations, see reff. in Di. The clause (8<sup>b</sup>) must (Di. al.) be a later addition to the original narrative; for it obviously presupposes the erection of the Tent of Meeting, which is not narrated till ch. xl.

The metal mirrors are to be thought of as the ṣ'rumāh, or 'contribution,' of the women; and the laver and its base, cast from them, as a 'memorial' of the gift. Comp. the explanation of the metal casing of the altar in Nu. xvi. 37—40.

9—20 (xxvii. 9—19). The Court of the Tent of Meeting. In vv. 16—19 the text (xxvii. 16—18) is reproduced with greater freedom than usual.

 for the pillars were of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver; and the overlaying of their chapters of silver; and all the pillars of the court were filleted with the work of the embroiderer, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen: and twenty cubits was the length, and the height in the breadth was five cubits, 19 answerable to the hangings of the court. And their pillars were four, and their sockets four, of brass; their hooks of silver, and the overlaying of their chapters and their fillets the court round about, were of brass.

18, 19. The screen for the gate of the Court. V. 18<sup>a</sup>=xxvii. 16<sup>a</sup>; v. 18<sup>b</sup> ('the height,' &c.) inferred from xxvii. 18 ('answerable to' = corresponding to; cf. in RV. Ez. xl. 18, xlv. 7, xlvi. 13, 18; and see DB. s.v. ANSWER). V. 19<sup>a</sup>=xxvii. 16<sup>b</sup>; v. 19<sup>b</sup> their hooks of silver inferred from xxvii. 17<sup>b</sup>; the 'chapters' and 'fillets' not mentioned in xxvii. 16 (cf. above, on v. 17), only the silver fillets implied in xxvii. 17<sup>a</sup>.

21—31. Account of the amount of metal employed in the construction of the Tent of Meeting. A 'very late addition' to the narrative (Di., in agreement with We. and others): notice (1) in v. 25 f. the census of Nu. i. (v. 46) is presupposed, although according to P (Nu. i. 1 compared with Ex. xl. 17) this did not take place till a whole month after the Tabernacle was completed and erected; (2) the Levites, who are first appointed to their official duties in Nu. iii., are already (cf. Nu. iv. 33) represented as acting under Ithamar's superintendence; (3) 'wave-offering' (vv. 24, 29) appears in the same weakened sense as in xxxv. 22; (4) the writer, while passing over altogether the silver offered voluntarily (xxv. 3, xxxv. 5 f., 24), to all appearance (comp. v. 26 with xxxi. 13, 14) misunderstands xxx. 11—16, treating the poll-tax there imposed, at the time of a census, in order to form a fund for the maintenance of daily worship, as if it were a contribution of silver in kind, for the construction of the sanctuary.

P, tabernacle of the testimony, as they were counted, according to the commandment of Moses, for the service of the Levites, by the hand of Ithamar, the son of Aaron the priest. And Bezalel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah, made all that the LORD commanded Moses. And with him was Oholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, an engraver, and a cunning workman, and an embroiderer in blue, and in purple, and in scarlet, and fine linen.

All the gold that was used for the work in all the work of the sanctuary, even the gold of the offering, was twenty and nine talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary. And the silver of them that were numbered of the congregation was an hundred talents, and a thousand seven hundred and threescore and fifteen

21. Superscription. These are the reckonings of (the metals employed for) the Dwelling, (even) the Dwelling of the testimony (so Nu. i. 50, 53, x. 11; cf. on xxv. 16), which were reckoned according to the commandment of Moses; (being) the work of the Levites, under the hand, &c. 'For the service' is wrong grammatically (for the constr. see G.-K. § 118<sup>m</sup>); the meaning is not that the reckonings were made for the Levites, but that they were the work of the Levites, done by them under the direction of Ithamar (cf. Nu. iv. 28, 33, vii. 8, where the same prep. is rendered under). For Ithamar see on vi. 23. 'Reckoning' is derived from the verb explained on xxx. 12, and is cognate with 'counted' just below and 'numbered' in v. 25.

22, 23. The writer, after mentioning what the Levites did (v. 21), reverts to the more important work done by the two artificers, Bēzāl'ēl and Oholiab (xxxi. 2, 6, xxxv. 30, 35).

23. a craftsman, and a pattern-weaver, &c.] as xxxv. 35.

25—28. The silver, with particulars of the purposes for which it was used. This amounted to 100 talents and 1775 shekels, i.e. 301,775 shekels (c. 140,828 oz.), being half a shekel a head, exacted (according to xxx. 13 f.) from the 603,550 male Israelites, of 20 years old and upwards, of the census described in Nu. i. (see v. 46). No account is taken of the silver offered voluntarily (xxv. 3, xxxv. 5 f., 24).

 every one that passed over to them that were numbered, from twenty years old and upward, for six hundred thousand the hundred talents of silver were for casting the sockets of the sanctuary, and the sockets of the veil ; an hundred 28 sockets for the hundred talents, a talent for a socket. And of the thousand seven hundred seventy and five shekels he made hooks for the pillars, and overlaid their chapters, and 29 made fillets for them. And the brass of the offering was seventy talents, and two thousand and four hundred 30 shekels. And therewith he made the sockets to the door of the tent of meeting, and the brasen altar, and the brasen 31 grating for it, and all the vessels of the altar, and the sockets of the court round about, and the sockets of the gate of the court, and all the pins of the tabernacle, and all the pins of

They are apparently light, or worn, beka's of the 'Phoenician' standard (DB. iv. 905<sup>b</sup>; EB. iv. 4444, 5297 f.), in which the shekel weighed 224 grs.

xxxix. 1—31 (ch. xxviii.). The vestments for the priests. V. 1 is introductory. V. 1<sup>a</sup> begins as though it belonged to xxxviii. 24—31, and was going on to state what was made of the richly woven materials offered by the Israelites (xxv. 4, &c.). At the same time it is remarkable (1) that the 'fine linen' is not mentioned at all, (2) that no notice is taken of the curtains and hangings (xxvi. 1 ff., 31, 36, xxvii. 9 ff.), for which nevertheless by far the greater part of the woven materials must have been used, and (3) that the second clause ('and they made,' &c.) is an evident doublet of the first (for 'holy garments' is a mere

It is possible therefore that v. 1<sup>a</sup> (to holy place) is a fragment of a complete account of what was made of the woven materials; and that and they made the holy garments, &c., is the real beginning of the account of the making of the priestly vestments.

The erection of the Tent of Meeting.

xl. 1—15. Moses is instructed by Jehovah to set up the Tent of Meeting, and the Court, to arrange the sacred vessels in their places (vv. 2—8), to consecrate the whole by anointing it (vv. 9—11), to clothe the priests in their vestments, and to anoint them (vv. 12—15). Most of these instructions have been given before; now that the time has come for carrying them out, they are summarily repeated (though not all that are necessary are given here; see vv. 17 ff.).

And thou shalt bring Aaron and his sons unto the <sup>12</sup> door of the tent of meeting, and shalt wash them with water. And thou shalt put upon Aaron the holy garments; and <sup>13</sup> thou shalt anoint him, and sanctify him, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office. And thou shalt <sup>14</sup> bring his sons, and put coats upon them: and thou shalt <sup>15</sup> anoint them, as thou didst anoint their father, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office: and their anointing shall be to them for an everlasting priesthood throughout 9—11. The Dwelling, and everything belonging to it, to be anointed with the holy anointing oil: see xxx. 26—29; and cf. xxix. 36 f. (the altar alone).

9, 10. It is remarkable that, while in xxx. 29 (see vv. 26—28), the Tent of Meeting with all the vessels belonging to it, are, by anointing, made 'most holy' (see for this term on xxix. 37), here the altar only is 'most holy,' and the Tent of Meeting and all its contents are only 'holy.'

14. coats] tunics.

15<sup>a</sup>. For the common priests being anointed exactly as the high-priest (not prescribed in ch. xxix.), see xxviii. 41; and cf. on xxx. 30.

15<sup>b</sup>. an everlasting priesthood] It is to be for ever hereditary in Aaron's family. A perpetual priesthood is also promised to Aaron's 'sons' in xxix. 9: but it is not, as here, based upon their being anointed; in fact, no anointing is there prescribed for them at all. The Rabbis, understanding the pron. in 'their anointing' to refer to Aaron's sons alone, inferred that the anointing of Aaron's actual sons sufficed for the ordinary priests in all future ages, and that in the case of the ordinary priests the ceremony was never afterwards repeated (cf. Di., and Kalisch, Leviticus, pp. 666—8). But this is a forced and artificial interpretation: their and to them refer naturally to Aaron and his sons together (Di.).

And he set the altar of burnt offering at the door of the tabernacle of the tent of meeting, and offered upon it the burnt offering and the meal offering; as the LORD commanded Moses. And he set the laver between the tent of meeting and the altar, and put water therein, to wash withal. <sup>2</sup>And Moses and Aaron and his sons washed their hands and their feet thereat; when they went into the tent of meeting, and when they came near unto the altar, they washed: as the LORD commanded Moses. 31—32. See xxx. 19—20. Moses is included, because for the time he acted as priest (v. 27). The tenses are frequentative, used to wash (twice), just as in xxxiv. 34 f., for instance. As 'Aaron and his sons' are not yet installed (see Lev. viii.), there is a prolepsis in the verses, even if (Di.) they are not a mere interpolation, attached unsuitably to v. 30, on the basis of xxx. 19 f.

33. See v. 8; cf. xxvii. 9<sup>a</sup>, 16. ('Set up' here = 'hang up' in v. 8. 'Put up' in v. 8<sup>a</sup>, and 'set up' in v. 8<sup>b</sup>, would make the renderings in the two verses uniform.)

34—38. The cloud (see on xiii. 21, 22) now takes up its abode on the Tent of Meeting (cf. Nu. ix. 15 P), and the glory (see on xvi. 10) of Jehovah fills the Dwelling (vv. 34 f.). Ever afterwards, through the period of the Israelites' journeyings, the cloud, while they were stationary, remains upon the Tent of Meeting, with fire shining in it by night,

35 glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle. And Moses was P<sub>3</sub> not able to enter into the tent of meeting, because the cloud abode thereon, and the glory of the LORD filled the taber-36 nacle. And when the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle, the children of Israel went onward, throughout 37 all their journeys: but if the cloud were not taken up, then 38 they journeyed not till the day that it was taken up. For the cloud of the LORD was upon the tabernacle by day, and there was fire therein by night, in the sight of all the house of Israel, throughout all their journeys.

36—38. The tenses are throughout frequentative (used to go onward, used not to journey, used to be), describing what was the case habitually during the journeyings in the wilderness. Cf. Nu. ix. 16—23, x. 34; also x. 11 f. (all P). For the divergent representations of J and E, see on xiii. 21, 22.

36. went onward] lit. plucked up (tent-pegs), i.e. broke up camp, the usual Heb. expression for set out. The verb is cognate with 'journeys,' and is rendered 'journeyed' in v. 37. Comp. on xii. 37, and xvii. 1.

38. and there was fire therein, &c.] i.e. in the cloud. Cf. Nu. ix. 15, 16 (P).

The book thus closes with the fulfilment of the promise given in xxix. 43, 45 (see on xxix. 43—6). The Dwelling is complete,—and Jehovah, with His protecting and sanctifying Presence, has taken up His abode in it, in the midst of His people. For the noble and impressive symbolism by which this great idea is expressed, see p. 113.

APPENDIX I.

The Passover.

History of the Passover in the OT. Let us first briefly consider what the laws, arranged in their probable chronological order, say about the Passover.

E contains no certain reference to the Passover. It contains regulations respecting the Feast of Unleavened Cakes, or Mazzoth, and the dedication of the first-born (xxiii. 15, xxii. 29); but it mentions neither the Passover nor the Exodus in connexion with either. On xxiii. 18, see the note ad loc.

In J the Passover is referred to twice. xii. 21—23 contains a command addressed to the Israelites in Egypt, in which they are told to take, according to their families, either a sheep or a goat from the flock, and to 'kill the passover': the blood of the victim is to be put into a bason, and applied by a bunch of hyssop to the doorposts and lintel of their houses: none is to go out from the door of his house till the morning; and Jehovah, when He passes through the land to smite the Egyptians, will 'pass over' or 'by' (pāsah 'al) the houses marked with the blood. In vv. 25—27 the compiler of JE (probably) adds that the Israelites are to continue to observe the institution after they have entered Canaan, and to explain to their children that it is a memorial of this deliverance of the Israelites, at the time when the Egyptians were smitten. In xxxiv. 25 the Passover—as it is to be observed in the future—is called a hag, or pilgrimage; none of the flesh is to be left unconsumed till the morning. Nothing is said about the place at which the Passover is to be kept.

In Dt. (xvi. 1—8) the Passover (vv. 1—3<sup>a</sup>, 4<sup>b</sup>—7) is treated in close conjunction with Mazzoth, and almost regarded as the opening ceremony of the Feast of Mazzoth (notice how parts of vv. 3, 4<sup>a</sup>, 8 are transferred verbatim from the directions for Mazzoth in Ex. xxiii. 15, xiii. 3, 7, 6). It is to be observed in the month of Ābib, as a memorial of the deliverance from Egypt by night. The offering is to be 'of the flock and the herd,' i.e. either a sheep, goat, or bullock; the flesh is to be boiled (v. 7 RVm.: 'roast' is a harmonistic rendering), and eaten with unleavened cakes, which are to be continued for 7 days (v. 3), as a memorial of the mingled hurry and alarm (hīppāzōn) with which their forefathers left Egypt. The rites are to be celebrated not in the individual homes, but at the central sanctuary, in the evening, the time of the departure from Egypt (vv. 5—7): in the morning, the worshipper may return to his home. The regulation that none of the flesh is to remain all night until the morning (v. 4<sup>b</sup>) is repeated from Ex. xxxiv. 25<sup>b</sup>.

In Ezekiel's ideal legislation for the restored community (Ez. xl.—xlviii.), the Passover (xiv. 21—24) seems also, as in Dt., to be closely associated with Mazoth (v. 21, whether read as in EVV., or with a probable correction, 'ye shall have the feast of the passover; for seven days shall unleavened cakes be eaten'). Nothing however is said about the private, domestic passovers, these being no doubt taken for granted; but on the 14th of the first month the 'prince' is to offer for himself and the people a bullock for a sin-offering: special sacrifices are also prescribed for each day of Mazoth.

The minutest directions respecting the Passover are contained in P. In Ex. xii. 1—13 the following instructions are given for the Passover to be observed in Egypt: on the 10th day of the first month the head of each family is to select from the flock either a sheep or a goat, a year old, and perfect; if his family is too small to eat the whole of the animal at one meal, he may invite his neighbour to join with him: on the 14th day of the month it is to be killed 'between the two evenings'; its blood is then to be applied to the two door-posts, and the lintel, of the house; the animal itself is then, not to be eaten raw or boiled, but roasted; it is to be kept entire—head, legs, and inwards; it is to be eaten with unleavened cakes and bitter herbs; none of the flesh is to be left till the morning, and anything that may so remain is to be burnt with fire; those eating it are to have staves in their hands, and to be girded and shod, as if for a journey. The Passover is sharply distinguished from Mazoth, the regulations for which follow in v. 14—20. In the supplementary law of xii. 43—49 (intended for the future) the unity symbolized by the rite is emphasized in v. 46 (the Passover to be eaten in one house; none of the flesh to be carried out of it; no bone in it to be broken); in the rest of the law, emphasis is laid on the exclusively national character of the institution: no uncircumcised person is to eat of it: a slave, or foreigner settled in Israel, may eat of it only if he has been circumcised, and so incorporated into the religious communion of Israel. In Nu. ix. 1—14 it is provided that any person prevented by ceremonial uncleanness or absence on a journey from keeping the Passover at the regular time may observe it on the 14th of the following month. No doubt, in most of these regulations, P, as in the case of other ceremonial observances described by him, throws back into the Mosaic age, and represents as instituted by Moses, the ritual with which the Passover had come to be associated in his own day.

The later Jews distinguished between the 'Egyptian passover' and subsequent passovers; and pointed out (Pesāhim ix. 5) as regulations designed only for the former, and not intended to be repeated, the selection of the lamb on the 10th day of the month, the sprinkling of the blood with hyssop on the houses, the 'haste' with which the meal was to be eaten, and abstention from leaven during one day only.

The following instances of the observance of the Passover are mentioned in the OT. In Jos. v. 10 (P) it is stated briefly that the Israelites kept the Passover, after crossing the Jordan, at Gilgal in the steppes of Jericho. The next Passover mentioned is the one not noticed in 2 Kings, but said in 2 Ch. xxx. (esp. vv. 15—17) to have been kept by Hezekiah: the third is the passover of Josiah, referred to briefly in 2 K. xxiii. 21—23, and described more fully in the passage inserted between 2 K. xxiii. 21<sup>a</sup> and 22 in 2 Ch. xxxv. 1<sup>b</sup>—17 (as in other religious ceremonies described in Chr., the details largely, perhaps entirely, reflect the usage of the Chronicler's own age, c. 300 B.C.); the fourth and last is that of B.C. 516, Ezr. vi. 19 f. 2 Ch. xxx., xxxv., Ezr. vi. 19 f. shew that it was the post-exilic usage for the Levites to kill the passover,—whether for such as were not clean (2 Ch. xxx. 17), or for all (2 Ch. xxxv. 6, Ezr. vi. 20),—and for the priests to receive the blood from the Levites, and toss it against the altar (2 Ch. xxx. 16, xxxv. 11)<sup>1</sup>. The passover of Josiah was observed, in accordance with Dt. xvi. 2, 6, 7, at Jerusalem (2 K. xxiii. 23); and the same usage prevailed (cf. 2 Ch. xxx., xxxv., Ezr. vi. 19 f., and the NT.) till the destruction of the Temple by the Romans in A.D. 70. For the rites with which the blood was presented on the altar, and the paschal lamb was eaten, in NT. times, it must suffice to refer to DB. iii. 690 f.

The Passover, it is clear, was a sacrifice<sup>2</sup>, but a sacrifice sui generis. In the meal connected with it, it resembles the peace-offering, and in the use made of the blood it has points of contact with the sin-offering: but it does not fall completely under any of the five great types of sacrifice described in Lev. i.—v. Even when, in consequence of the centralization of worship, the blood, as in the case of other sacrifices, was tossed against the altar by the priests, it still, in virtue of the domestic meal, which formed an essential part of it, retained its exceptional character. The Passover, no doubt, was an archaic institution, which acquired its main features before the Levitical system of sacrifices was developed, and was never assimilated to them.

Origin and significance of the Passover. Of the origin and significance of the Passover, as set forth in the Pent., there can, of course, be no question. It was instituted on the eve of the Exodus; its main purpose was to distinguish the houses of the Israelites from the houses of the Egyptians so that the former might not be entered by the angel of death; and it was to be observed annually ever afterwards as a memorial of the deliverance from Egypt. 'But,' as it is pertinently asked (DB iii. 688<sup>a</sup>), 'do we thus arrive at the real explanation of its origin and primary significance? Our accounts in their present form' date from a time when the Passover was already an established institution, and they leave many features in it inadequately explained. 'In view of this fact; in view of the many features which seem to point to something behind <sup>1</sup> In later times (Pesâhim v. 6—8) the custom was for the priests to stand in two rows, extending from the place where the people assembled to slay the lambs to the altar; the blood of each animal was received in a basin, which was passed up one row of priests to be thrown against the altar by the priest standing nearest to it, while the empty basins were passed back down the other row. The fat also was now burnt upon the altar.

<sup>2</sup> This has been disputed only by some Protestant theologians, for the purpose of depriving Romanists of an argument that might be used to support the doctrine of the sacrifice of the mass.

the interpretation given of them; in view of what we find in the observances of related peoples, so far as these are known to us; and in view of the development in the case of all the other great feasts, and the historical interpretation which came to be given to them—it is probable that we have here another instance in which Israel's religion takes up, transforms, and appropriates an existing institution.

1. From the name pēsah we learn, unfortunately, nothing certain. The word denotes both the animal sacrificed (Ex. xiii. 21 al.), and the festival (Dt. xvi. 1 al.). Pissēah is the Heb. word for 'lame,' and the verb pāsah means to limp, 1 K. xviii. 21 ('How long are ye limping &c.?'), 26 RVm. (of the sacred dance of the priests of Baal about the altar,—so described, either ironically, or because it was actually performed with limping movements): if pēsah were connected with this verb, it is thus conceivable that it might (1 a) have denoted originally a special kind of ritual dance, accompanied by the sacrifice of a lamb, and, have been transferred afterwards to the sacrifice itself (cf. DB. v. 622<sup>a</sup>). Or, as pāsah occurs in Ex. xii. 13 (see note), 23, 27, Is. xxxi. 5†, with some such meaning as pass over (Jos. Ant. ii. 14. 6 explains pēsah as meaning ὑπερβασία), or spare, it is possible either (1 b) that to limp by or over may in some way have acquired this sense; or (2) that there was another verb pāsah, meaning to pass over: no such verb is indeed known to occur in any other Semitic language, but Thapsacus, on the Euphrates has been supposed to have derived its name from it, with the meaning ford. This however is purely conjectural; and Xen. Anab. i. 4. 18 states that before his time there never was a ford at Thapsacus. Or (3) pēsah may be connected with the Ass. pasāhu, to be soothed, which would give it the meaning propitiation-sacrifice. On the etymological meaning of pēsah, we can thus not get beyond conjectures.

2. In Ex. xii.—xiii., in both J and P, the Passover, Mazzoth, and the dedication of the first-born, stand (virtually) in juxtaposition as they do similarly in Dt. xv. 19—xvi. 8 (cf. also Mazzoth and the first-born in Ex. xxxiv. 18—20 J); and all three observances are represented as having been instituted originally in Egypt. We know how the connexion between them is explained in the book of Exodus.

In J it is argued: Israel is Jehovah's first-born; because Pharaoh will not let Israel go, Jehovah slays Pharaoh's first-born (iv. 23 J): the Passover is instituted in order that when Jehovah goes through Egypt to slay the Egyptians, the Israelites may be spared (xii. 23, 27 J: so xii. 13 P); and then (xiii. 15 J, or the compiler of JE), because Jehovah slays the Egyptian first-born,—and (though this is not so said) spares the Israelite first-born,—the Israelite dedicates his first-born to Him (cf. Nu. iii. 13, viii. 17 P): unleavened cakes, lastly, were eaten originally on account of the haste with which the Israelites left Egypt (Ex. xii. 34, 39), and the Feast of Mazzoth was observed, ever afterwards, in memory of the occasion (Ex. xiii. 8 J; Dt. xvi. 3; Ex. xii. 14 P). An endeavour must, however, be made to describe how the connexion between the three observances is explained by those who cannot accept the book of Exodus as witnessing to more than the beliefs current about these observances some centuries after the time of the Exodus itself, and who see in the passages quoted, not the actual historical explanation of the facts or observances referred to, but the explanations framed long afterwards by religiously-minded Israelites to account for them.

(a) Mazoth wears every appearance of having been originally an agricultural festival, marking the beginning of barley-harvest (see on xxiii. 15): as this was also the time of year at which the Exodus took place, it came to be treated as commemorative of it; and the 'unleavened cakes' eaten at it were interpreted as commemorating the affliction in Egypt, and the deliverance from it (Dt. xvi. 3; Ex. xiii. 8).

(b) The first-born of men and the firstlings of animals were in Israel both sacred to Jehovah. The firstlings of animals, it is natural to suppose, were dedicated to Jehovah as a token of thankfulness to Him for fruitful flocks and herds (so Wellh. Hist. 88; Bâ.; al.), perhaps (Di. p. 126) with the collateral idea—such as that implied in the offering of firstfruits—of sanctifying all future births from the same animal, and making it lawful for the owner to enjoy gratefully himself the increase with which Jehovah might thus bless him (cf. Philo, de sacerd. hon. p. 233 Mangey, quoted by Kn., who describes the firstlings offered to Jehovah as 'thank-offerings for fruitfulness whether already enjoyed or expected'); or (Rel. Sem.<sup>2</sup> 463—5) on account of a special sanctity regarded as attaching to them. A similar custom existed among the heathen Arabs; the first birth (called fara') of a she-camel, goat, or ewe, was sacrificed, frequently while it was so young that 'the flesh was like glue and stuck to the skin' (ib. 462; EB. iv. 4185).

Why, however, were the first-born of men also regarded as sacred? According to Wellh. (l.c.), Bâ., 'when claim is laid to the human first-born, this is simply a later generalization, which after all resolves itself merely into redemption by an animal, and consequently into an augmentation of the original sacrifice.' But the idea seems to be more primitive than this explanation would permit: more probably it is founded ultimately upon reasons similar to those for which the firstlings of animals were held sacred: as the first gift of God after marriage, or (Rel. Sem.<sup>2</sup> 465) because the sacred blood of the kin flows purest and strongest in them (Gen. xlix. 3, Dt. xxi. 17). It is a fact, also, whatever the reason may be—Mr Frazer supposes that it is to ensure the health and prosperity of the family—that in different parts of the world, among uncivilized peoples, it is the custom to sacrifice or eat the first-born (Frazer, The Golden Bough,<sup>2</sup> ii. 51f.). That the sacrifice of first-born was no element in the religion of Israel within historical times is indeed certain: no writer asserts this more strongly than Wellh. (l.c. 89; so Bâ. 89): 'not only are there no traces of so enormous a blood-tax, but, on the contrary, many of a great preference for elder sons'; the instances of child-sacrifice which occur are either altogether abnormal (Jephthah's daughter), or, as in the reigns of Ahaz and Manasseh (2 K. xvi. 3; Mic. vi. 7; Is. lvii. 5; Jer. vii. 31, xix. 5, xxxii. 35; Ez. xvi. 20f., xxiii. 37), due to the importation of Phœnician customs into Judah (cf. on xiii. 12). Still it is difficult to think that the law (Ex. xxii. 29<sup>b</sup>), 'the first-born of thy sons shalt thou give unto me,' stands in no relation to this old Semitic practice. The jar-buried infants found recently in Palestine (see the writer's Schweich Lectures, p. 68 f.) seem to indicate that the ancient Canaanites were in the habit of sacrificing very young children, if not first-born<sup>1</sup>: and if in pre-historic times, before the Hebrews had definitely separated themselves from their Semitic kinsmen, and acquired a distinctive religion of their own, the custom of sacrificing the first-born had prevailed, or if, even without its having been a Hebrew practice, it had prevailed among their Phoenician and Canaanite neighbours, the Israelite law is naturally explained: the first-born are still sacred to the national Deity; they are not however given over to Him as a sacrifice, but redeemed at a money-valuation (cf. the note on xiii. 1, 2): the dedication of the first-born to the Deity is thus rendered morally harmless. The actual, historical origin of the dedication of the first-born was, however, forgotten: and so a theological explanation was found in the thought (p. 408) that it was because Jehovah had smitten the first-born of the Egyptians (Ex. xiii. 15).

(c) The Passover, at least in its primitive form, is in all probability a pre-Mosaic institution. It is not, like the feasts of Mazzoth, Harvest, and Ingathering, based upon agriculture, but reaches back into the nomadic stage, and is 'the one festival which the Hebrews may have brought with them from their shepherd-life in the wilderness' (Wellh. Reste Arab. Heid.<sup>2</sup> 105). Di. and others have noticed that it is introduced by J in xii. 21 as 'the Passover,' as though it were an already existing institution. That it was a night-festival, celebrated at the time of the vernal full moon, may point to its having stood primitively in some relation to the moon<sup>2</sup>. Its most central and significant features are however the application of the blood to the houses, and the partaking of the flesh at a common domestic meal; and these features seem to suggest that it was originally a sacrifice of propitiation and purification, offered annually in spring by each household for the purpose of renewing by the common meal the sense of communion with the Deity, and of protecting, by the use made of the sacrificial blood, tents—or, later, houses—with the flocks belonging to them, from pestilence or other calamity during the coming year (so Di. on Ex. xii. 13, after Ew.: cf. DB. iii. 689<sup>a</sup>). Spring festivals were celebrated by other Semitic peoples. 'The first 8 days of the month Rajab, which in the old calendar fell in the spring, was a great sacrificial season among the heathen Arabs. The poets compare the carnage of battle to the multitude of victims lying around the sacred stones. The victim, commonly a sheep, was called 'atīrah (pl. 'atā'ir'); its blood was poured on the head of the sacred stone, the flesh consumed in a feast. Such sacrifices might be offered at home; but it was probably more common to take them to some more famous holy place' (G. F. Moore, in EB. iv. 4186). We have evidence also of other spring sacrifices observed in different parts of Syria (ib.: Rel. Sem.<sup>2</sup> 405). For the use of sacrificial blood, as a supposed protection against calamity, there are also analogies among other Semitic peoples. To the present day, in Syria and Arabia, such blood is often sprinkled upon a new house to propitiate the jinn, or spirits who are supposed to haunt the locality, and so to ensure the safety of the workmen, or the prosperity of the family who are going to inhabit it cf. Curtiss, Primitive Semitic Religion To-day, 1902, pp. 183—91, 215—7; Goodrich-Freer, In a Syrian Saddle (1905), p. 250; Sayce, EHH. 176 (in Egypt)<sup>1</sup>.

It has further been thought by some that in the primitive Passover the animals offered were firstlings (Wellh. Hist. 87 f.; Rel. Sem.<sup>2</sup> 464 f.). Spring is the time of year at which, in Arabia, cattle year; in the Pent. itself, laws prescribing the dedication of the firstlings stand in juxtaposition to ordinances relating to the Passover (Ex. xii.—xiii.; Dt. xv. 19—23, xvi. 1—8); and the festival which the Hebrews ask permission to celebrate in the wilderness with their flocks and herds (Ex. v. 3, &c.; x. 9, 25) was, it is supposed, just this spring-festival of firstlings. Hence also the connexion of the Passover with the last plague has been explained: because the Pharaoh prevents the Israelites from offering their firstlings, Jehovah takes from the Egyptians their first-born (Wellh. p. 88). The grounds for this view seem, however, to be insufficient. No doubt, the festival of v. 3, &c. might be one at which firstlings were offered, but nothing is said to indicate or suggest this; while, if even the primitive Passover had been essentially a sacrifice of firstlings, it is not apparent why it should have ceased to be this, and why the two should have become so distinct as they clearly are in Heb. law (see also EB. iii. 3593 f.; iv. 4187).

Those who follow the preceding considerations regard the Passover accordingly as a transformed spring-sacrifice of propitiation and communion, and suppose it to have reached the form in which the OT. presents it somewhat as follows (cf. Benzinger, EB. iii. 3596 f.). Among the ancient nomad Hebrews it had been the practice on special occasions, for protection against pestilence and the like, to sprinkle the dwellings with the blood of a sheep. The custom afterwards became fixed: every year in spring such a festival came to be offered by each separate family (similarly Moore, ibid. 4188; Kautzsch, DB. v. 622<sup>a</sup>). A sacred meal was associated with it, symbolizing a renewal of the sense of communion with the Deity. For long after the immigration into Canaan, the Passover continued to be a family festival: it had nothing of the character of a popular pilgrimage, or hag. In Canaan the immigrating Israelites found among the agricultural Canaanites the custom of consecrating to the ba'al of the district every spring at the beginning of harvest, the firstfruits of the corn, and of celebrating a hag in this connexion. This the Hebrews adopted in the form of Mazzoth. Both the primitive Passover, and Mazzoth, were celebrated in the spring; and so, not unnaturally, they were united. The spring was also the time of year at which the Israelites left Egypt; a great plague was in reality the immediate occasion of the Exodus: and thus Passover and Mazzoth came to be regarded as memorials of the event; and the characteristic features of each were interpreted in a commemorative sense, or, it may be, adapted so as to be the more readily so interpreted. In particular, under the influence of the thought that because Israel was Jehovah's first-born, and Pharaoh would not let him go, therefore Jehovah smote Pharaoh's first-born, but spared those of Israel, the plague which was actually the immediate occasion of the Exodus, and which may really have been particularly fatal to young children, became one which destroyed the Egyptian first-born only; and so the rite of blood-sprinkling which 'in primitive days was intended as a precaution against all plagues becomes in the Exodus narratives a precaution against the particular plague directed against the first-born' (McNeile, p. 67).

The significance of an institution does not depend necessarily upon what it was in its origin; it may depend equally upon what it came to be, and upon the ideas of which, as years went on, it came gradually to be regarded as the expression. The Passover, whatever its origin, came to be a great national institution of the Israelites: it was a solemn annual memorial of a great national deliverance, and of the birth of national independence: the Paschal lamb was a symbol of unity, the unity of the family, of the nation, and of God with His people: while details corresponded to incidents of the Exodus, as told by tradition, the rite, as a whole, reminded men annually of the covenant-relation subsisting between Jehovah and Israel, and kept alive their sense of the continuance of His favour towards them. And so the Paschal lamb becomes a type of Christ, and the Paschal meal of the Christian Eucharist. Christ was the true Paschal Lamb (1 Cor. v. 7), who gathered up into Himself, and realized in a higher, more spiritual sense, the associations of redemption and deliverance—no longer, however, from the bondage of Egypt, but from the thralldom of sin—of which the Passover, for so many centuries, had been the expression. And in the Eucharistic feast, not only is the sense of unity between Christians forcibly expressed (1 Cor. x. 17), but in it the faithful believer partakes of the Body and Blood of the true Paschal Lamb, he enters anew into vital union with God, he appropriates to himself the atoning efficacy of Christ's blood, shed for him and for all mankind, and he nourishes his spiritual life with Divine grace and strength.

APPENDIX II.

The date of the Decalogue.

For those who accept the traditional view of the date and authorship of the Pentateuch, the discussion of this question has no meaning: if Moses wrote the Pentateuch, there can be no question as to either the date of the Decalogue, or the moral and religious teaching of Moses: he was, as Dt. iv. shews, a monotheist, and had a highly spiritual conception of God. But, to those who believe (cf. p. 415 f.) that the Pentateuch, even in J and E, only records what was told by tradition about the Mosaic age in the 9—8 cent. B.C., the question is a real and difficult one, which, if it can be answered definitely at all, can be answered only by taking as a basis the teaching of the earliest written prophecies, and the religious beliefs attested by the earlier historical writings—J, E, Judges and Samuel, when they have been divested of Deuteronomic and other later additions (such as Jud. ii: 11—iii. 6)—for the period at which they were written, and by arguing back from these, and by other indirect methods, to the probable religious beliefs of Moses himself in the 13th cent. B.C.<sup>1</sup>

The Decalogue, as it stands (whether in Ex. xx. or Dt. v.), cannot, on account of the strongly Deuteronomic colouring of parts of it, be earlier than the Deuteronomic age: the question is, What may be the age of it in its original form, when all the Commandments were presumably in the same terse form in which the 1st, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th still are, and when the explanatory clauses attached now to the other five had not yet been added to them?

It may be taken for granted that the religion of Moses was—to speak technically—ethical henotheism; i.e. (1) it implied the exclusive worship of 'one' God only, though without affirming that this God was necessarily the only God (monotheism), and (2) the God thus worshipped had a distinctively moral character, and demanded the practice of morality on the part of His worshippers. The recognition of ethical claims is of course constantly met with in heathen religions<sup>2</sup>; but they rarely, if ever, hold in them the paramount place which they held, as we know from the prophets, in the later religion of Israel, and which, it is scarcely possible to doubt, they held in it from the beginning. The principal reason for this belief is one that has been urged with great force, after Kamphausen, by Mr Montefiore. If the religion of Moses had not differed, in some distinctive feature, from the ordinary religions of antiquity, it is impossible to understand why, when the Israelites entered Canaan, and intermingled, as in many cases they did intermingle, with the native Canaanites, it was not merged and absorbed in their religion. Mr Montefiore writes:—

‘That successful resistance to Canaanite polytheism, on which we laid so much stress when ascribing the origin of monolatry [the worship of one God] to the Mosaic age, would surely not have been possible unless the Yahweh whom Moses taught differed from the Canaanite deities, not only in his numerical uniqueness, but in his higher and more consistent ethical character. The violent elements<sup>1</sup> in Yahweh’s character he shared with Molech and Baal, and many another divinity of the neighbouring Semitic tribes; but in no case did this corresponding violence produce a corresponding monolatry. We are therefore entitled to doubt whether the exclusive worship of the national God would ever have been ordained, had there not lain in the original conception of Yahweh the “promise and potency” of the monotheism of Amos and Isaiah. To quote the earlier words of Prof. Kuenen<sup>2</sup>, “The great merit of Moses lies in the fact of his connexion of the religious idea with the moral life.” The exclusive worship of Yahweh on the one hand, God’s moral character and the moral duty of man upon the other hand, must have acted reciprocally in the production of the Mosaic teaching as a whole.... One of the most sober and trustworthy of Old Testament critics, Prof. Kamphausen, maintains the same argument. “I recognize,” he says, “in the fact that the small number of the Israelites was not absorbed by the Canaanites, who were by far their superiors in all matters of external culture, a convincing proof of the ethical power of the Yahwistic religion<sup>3</sup>.”’

Naturally, the ethical character of Israel’s religion in Moses’ time would not be as developed and spiritualized as it became afterwards in the hands of the prophets and Psalmists. But, as Mr Montefiore remarks, ‘at the sanctuary of Yahweh, where the God was invisibly

See also in greater detail the excellent article, with criticisms of other theories, in the Jewish Quart. Rev., Jan. 1891, p. 251 ff. The ethical character of the religion of Yahweh in the time of Moses is also recognized by Kautzsch (DB, v. 632*), Marti, in an art. on ‘Jahwe und seine Auffassung in der ältesten Zeitalter’ in the Stud. u. Krit., 1908, p. 333 (Yahweh was from the beginning a spiritual deity, who made social and ethical demands of His worshippers), and other critics: comp. Bächtli, p. 1111; Burney, *Journ. of Theol. present among His people, were the fountain of justice and the judgment-seat<sup>1</sup>. Moses was the supreme judge, who gave tôrâh, and administered justice, in Yahweh's name; and the same duties were carried on by the priests, his successors<sup>2</sup>. 'We may thus reasonably infer that Moses taught his contemporaries, not theoretically but practically, as occasion demanded, and as part and parcel of Yahweh's religion, the fundamental elements of social morality. He taught them that Yahweh, if a stern and often a wrathful Deity, was also a God of justice and purity. Linking the moral life to the religious idea, he may have taught them, too, that murder and theft, adultery and false witness, were abhorred and forbidden by their God<sup>3</sup>.'

If these conclusions are sound, there will be no substantial difficulty in referring most of the Commandments to the Mosaic age. But difficulties have been felt with regard to some of them. It is indeed doubtful whether the observances implied in the fourth Commandment, and the use of the term 'house,' rather than 'tent,' in the tenth, are necessarily incompatible with a nomad life, and imply that the Israelites had entered upon the settled agricultural life of Canaan<sup>4</sup>: for we do not know how much cessation of work was at this early period prescribed for the sabbath; or whether at this time bayith may not have been a general term meaning 'abode,' and have included (as in Arabic) tents as well as houses. A more serious difficulty is presented by the prohibition of images. If these were prohibited by Moses, it is remarkable, it is said, that till the 8th cent. B.C., no reprobation of them is expressed: and that till that date images of Yahweh were used, to all appearance, without offence<sup>5</sup>. The pesilim of Jugal (Jud. iii. 19; cf. RVm.) were probably (Moore) 'rude stone images.' Micah makes an image out of silver dedicated to Yahweh by his mother; and the Danites afterwards set it up at Dan, where it was served by a line of priests whose ancestry was traced to Moses (Jud. xviii. 30). The original narrative is not intended to convey any censure of Micah's action, but simply to give an account of the origin of the cult of the Yahweh-image at Dan. Whether, as is often thought, the 'ephod,' mentioned in Judges, Sam. and Hos. iii. 4, was an image, is uncertain (see p. 312 f.); but it reads very much as if an image were meant by it in Jud. viii. 27. David was a devoted worshipper of Yahweh; yet he possessed one of the oracular images called 'teraphim' (1 S. xix. 13, 16; cf. Jud. xvii. 5, xviii. 14, 17, 18, 20; Kautzsch, DB. v. 642<sup>b</sup>): in Hos. iii. 4 ephod and teraphim appear as, at least in popular estimation, essential elements of the cultus. Jeroboam, also, would certainly not have set up the golden bulls, symbolizing Jehovah, at Bethel and Dan, if they had not been in harmony with practices and beliefs very widely accepted among the people. On the whole, it is no doubt true that, especially in the N. kingdom, images of Yahweh were in very common use. Whether, however, they were in universal use, does not seem to be so clear. If this had been the case, would not allusions to them have been more frequent and explicit in the earlier historical books than they are? Would not J and E, for instance, in alluding to rites of worship, have sometimes mentioned them? In fact, however, they never attribute the use of images to the patriarchs<sup>1</sup>: E mentions the Golden calf (Ex. xxxii.) with evident disapproval; and both J and E contain a prohibition of metal images (xx. 23, xxxiv. 17). No image is ever mentioned in connexion with the Ark. The central sanctuaries possessed no image in the times of Eli, David, and Solomon. The non-observance of a religious law is no proof of its non-existence, unless it is fairly clear that the persons not observing it are likely to have observed it, if they had known of it, which, in the instances here in question, is scarcely the case. David's 'teraphim'—probably household-gods—are hardly inconsistent with either his knowledge or his practice of a higher ideal<sup>2</sup>. Images may have been in use at the local sanctuaries, and among the common people; but if they were not in use at the central sanctuaries, this would seem to shew that, though the popular mind saw nothing in their use inconsistent with its conception of Yahweh, the more spiritually-minded Israelites did not countenance them. And if this be true, the prohibition may have been Mosaic, though it was not acted upon by the bulk of the people. The immediate occasion prompting the prohibition may have been contact with Egyptian idolatry<sup>3</sup>.

To explain this prevalence of images of Yahweh, especially in the N. kingdom, consistently with the Mosaic origin of the 2nd Commandment, the following theory has been offered by Dr Burney<sup>4</sup>. It has been increasingly felt by recent scholars<sup>5</sup>, partly on account of the mention by Seti I (B.C. 1326—1300)<sup>6</sup> of Asaru, i.e. apparently Asher, in the N. of Canaan, and the terms in which Merenptah speaks (p. xl) of Israel as already settled in Canaan, partly on other considerations, that, in spite of the Biblical representation, all the Israelite tribes were not in Egypt at the time of the Exodus, but that some had entered Canaan, and made it their home, considerably earlier. Dr Burney accordingly distinguishes (1) the Northern tribes, which entered Canaan directly from the East, as part of an old Aramaean immigration, and made it their home without a break of any importance; (2) Judah and

<sup>3</sup> There are parallels, more or less close, to all the commandments, except the 5th, in Amos and Hosea; but the fact is not of a nature to afford proof that the Decalogue is the source from which the parallels are derived, or the authority by which the language of the prophets was suggested. Simeon, which at the close of their stay at Kadesh, broke off from the other Israelites with whom they had journeyed from Egypt, amalgamated with the Kenites and other North Arabian tribes, and then moved northwards from Kadesh, conquering and settling in the territory known afterwards as 'Judah'; and (3) Ephraim, half of Manasseh, and Benjamin, which also left Egypt with Moses, but which entered Canaan from the East under Joshua, and settled in the central parts of Palestine. All these tribes alike were worshippers of 'Yahweh': but the Northern tribes, not having come under Moses' influence, would not attribute to Him the same ethical and spiritual character, and would use images—probably, as a rule, images of a young bull (cf. p. 348)—to represent Him. When the other tribes, upon entering Canaan, found their kinsmen there, it would not be more than natural if at least their less spiritual members assimilated their own worship to theirs, and adopted images likewise. Canaanite Yahwism, which did not repudiate images, would thus largely overshadow and supersede the more spiritual Mosaic Yahwism.

The Nash Papyrus.—This is a papyrus acquired in Egypt in 1902 by Mr W. L. Nash. It is in four pieces, perfect at the top, but mutilated at the foot and on both edges. It contains 24 lines of Hebrew, written in the square characters, and dating probably from the 2nd cent. A.D. It is thus by far the oldest Heb. MS. at present known. The papyrus begins with the Decalogue; and this is followed by the Shema' (Dt. vi. 4 f.), preceded by the introductory words expressed in the LXX., but not found in the Mass. text. The Decalogue and the Shema' were presumably transcribed together on the papyrus for some special purpose. The text agrees in the main with that of Ex. xx., but it sometimes follows that of Dt. v. In v. 10 it has ניו for יום (cf. xvi. 26 al.), with a few Heb. MSS. and LXX. (Ex. Dt.): it adds 'in it' (p. 107), and also (with Dt., and LXX. in Ex.) 'nor thine ox, nor thine ass,' and 'any of'; in v. 11<sup>b</sup> it has 'seventh day' for 'sabbath day,' as LXX. (cf. Gen. ii. 3); in v. 12 it adds, with Dt., and LXX. (Ex.), 'that it may go well with thee, and,' but places the clause, with LXX. (Ex. Dt.), before 'that thy days may be long'; vv. 13, 14 are transposed (p. 200); in v. 16 it has 'vain' for 'false,' as Dt.; in v. 17 'wife' precedes 'house,' as in Dt., and LXX. in Ex., and, 'his field' is added after 'house,' as in Dt., and LXX. Sam. in Ex. לו is always written plene; so also are the verbs תעבוד and תחטור. The forms ושמח for שמו in v. 7, and בה for בו in v. 10 (G.-K. § 91<sup>a</sup>), and ויקרשהו for ויקרשו (Cook, p. 41), are also noticeable. The text is thus in the main that of Ex. (it has Ex. xx. 11, and not Dt. v. 12<sup>b</sup>, 14 end., 15); but it agrees with LXX. (Ex.) in v. 13 f., and in including some of the variants of Dt. See fully S. A. Cook, 'A pre-Massoretic Biblical Papyrus' in Proc. Soc. Bibl. Arch. 1903, p. 34 ff.

APPENDIX III.

The Code of Hammurabi.

Hammurabi,—probably the Amraphel of Gen. xiv. 1,—was the sixth king of the first known dynasty of Babylon; and he reigned for 43 years—as nearly as can at present be determined, 2130—2088 B.C. An almost contemporary chronicle, and numerous letters of Hammurabi himself, give us abundant particulars of his reign. Hammurabi was a great and successful ruler: he freed Babylonia from the dominion of its foes, especially the Elamites; and by organizing and consolidating the administration of his country, he laid the foundation of its future greatness. His Code of Laws was discovered in Dec. 1901 and Jan. 1902 by M. de Morgan at Susa, inscribed on three fragments of a block of black diorite, which when fitted together formed a stelè 7 ft. 4 in. high and from 6 ft. 3 in. to 5 ft. 5 in. round. At the upper end of the front side is a sculptured bas-relief, representing Hammurabi standing in front of the seated sun-god Shamash, and receiving his laws from him. The inscription on the rest of the stelè consists of 44 columns of writing, besides five which have been erased. The number of separate laws preserved is 248.

The code is prefaced by a grandiloquent prologue, in which Hammurabi first declares how Anu, Bel, and Marduk, the supreme gods of Babylon, had called him 'to cause justice to prevail in the land, to destroy the wicked and the evil, and to prevent the strong from oppressing the weak'; and then, after enumerating a long list of titles describing what he had done for his country, he proceeds to explain how he had given effect to this command—'I established law and justice in the land, and promoted the welfare of the people.'

In order to enable the reader to understand properly the relation in which the Code stands to Hebrew law, it will be necessary to give an outline of the subjects treated in it<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> The most detailed account of the Code in English, including many notices of parallels with the Heb. and other laws, is that of S. A. Cook, The Laws of Moses and the Code of Hammurabi (1903). Translations of the entire Code will be found in Johns, The Oldest Code of Laws in the World (1903), or (the transl. revised, esp. in §§ 1—4, and with a full and excellent description of the leading characteristics of the Code, and comparison with Heb. law) in p. 599 ff. of his art. in BD. v. (1904), 584—612, or in Winckler, Die Gesetze Hammurabis in Umschrift und Übersetzung (1904), with an appendix containing the ancient Sumerian family-laws. For other bibliographical references, see Johns' art., and Kent, Israel's Laws and Legal Precedents, 1907 (vol. III. of the 'Student's Old Test.'), p. 280. See also Dr Lock's paper on 'Moses and Hammurabi' in The Bible and Christian Life, p. 1 ff. There is also a translation of the Code by Ungnad in Gressmann's Altorient. Texte (1909), i. 140 ff.

§§ 1—5. Penalties for false accusation, false witness, and wrong judgement.

6—25. Laws relating to property.

6—14. Theft of property.

15—20. Harboursing a fugitive slave.

21—25. Housebreaking, highway robbery, robbery at a fire.

26—41. Duties and privileges of royal servants, governors, and judges.

42—65. Laws relating to the tenure, rent, and cultivation of land. Rights and liabilities of tenants and landlords, in respect of fields (42—52), canals (53—56), trespass by sheep (57—58), orchards (59), and gardens (60—65).

66—99. Erased.

100—126. Laws relating to trade and commerce.

100—107. Relations between a merchant and his agent.

108—111. Wine merchants (price of wine: no disorder to take place in a tavern).

112. Liabilities for loss in the transport of goods.

113—119. Debt and distraint.

120—126. Deposits (things entrusted to the charge of another).

127—193. Family law. Betrothal; price of wife, and marriage-portion. Rights of wife and children, of concubines and their children. Wife not to be seized for husband's debt, nor husband for wife's. Divorce. Incest and adultery. Inheritance: rights of sons of both wife and concubines. Cases of marriage between slave and free woman. Rights of votaries to a share in their fathers' property (178—182). Adoption (185—191); punishment of ungrateful adopted son (192 f.).

194—233. Criminal law. Penalties for different cases of assault (195—214); fees for different operations by a surgeon, or veterinary surgeon, and penalties for unskillful treatment (215—225); penalties for branding a slave without proper authority (226 f.); fee of builder, and penalties for defective work in building (228—233).

234—240. Navigation. Wages to be paid to boatmen; and fines for grounding boat through carelessness.

241—277. Hire and wages. Rate of payment for hire of ox, sheep, harvester, herdsman, and various agricultural instruments; compensation for loss or damage; liabilities of shepherd for sheep under his charge; rate of payment for brickmaker, tailor, mason, carpenter, &c. (274), and for hire of boats (275—277).

278—282. Slavery. Claims and complaints made after purchase.

The code is followed by the words, 'The judgements of righteousness, which Hammurabi, the mighty king, confirmed, and caused the land to take a sure guidance and a gracious rule'; and by an Epilogue, in which Hammurabi repeats the intention which he had in framing the code, 'that the strong should not oppress the weak, and to give justice to the orphan and the widow, for the pronouncing of judgements in the land, and for the righting of wrong.' And he ends by promising blessings from Shamash on all future kings who maintain his laws, and uttering terrible curses against any who alters or rescinds them.

It will be seen at once that the code contains no ceremonial laws, but is confined entirely to civil and criminal law; and also that it deals with a very much wider range of subjects than the 'Book of the Covenant.' Babylonian civilization in Hammurabi's age was already highly developed—much more so than that of Israel when the 'Book of the Covenant' was promulgated: there was great commercial activity; property—slaves, lands, houses—was constantly changing hands; cases of marriage, divorce, adoption, and inheritance had to be provided for; the necessity thus arose for regulating all such transactions by law; and the abundant contract-tablets, which we possess, dating even from a period anterior to Hammurabi, testify to the scrupulous precision with which such transactions were always carried through<sup>1</sup>. The code of Hammurabi however regulates not only all these things, but also prescribes the fees or wages to be paid for different services rendered. It must not however be supposed that Hammurabi originated the entire code himself. Some of the provisions may indeed have been formulated by him for the first time,—in particular, perhaps, those fixing the prices for labour and hire; but as a whole what Hammurabi did was to formulate, arrange, and authoritatively sanction laws which had been already fixed by the decisions of judges before him, and were doubtless in many cases already operative in Babylonia. The code in this respect resembles the Indian Laws of Manu<sup>2</sup>, the Greek Gortynian code<sup>3</sup>, and the Roman XII Tables.

The following are the principal parallels with the Book of the Covenant (the citations are not, as a rule, made verbatim):—

CODE OF HAMMURABI.

3, 4. False witness to be punished, in stated cases, by the lex talionis (cf. Dt. xix. 19).

8. Any one stealing ox, sheep, ass, pig, or ship from a temple or palace, to pay 30-fold; if he be a poor man<sup>4</sup>, 10-fold; if he have nothing, to be put to death.

9—10. If something lost is found in another man's possession, witnesses to be called on both sides, to declare solemnly 'before God' what they know; whichever is proved not to be the owner, to be put to death.

EXODUS.

xxiii. 1. Malicious witness prohibited.

xxii. 1, 3<sup>b</sup>, 4. For theft of ox, if it be killed or sold, to pay 5-fold, of sheep, 4-fold: if found in thief's hand, to pay 2-fold; if thief have nothing, he is to be sold.

xxii. 9. If something lost is found in another man's possession, the cause of both to come before God, and whichever is condemned, to pay 2-fold to the other.

11. If claimant cannot bring witnesses, seeing he has slandered and stirred up strife, to be put to death.

14. 'If a man has stolen the son of a freeman, he shall be put to death.'

21. A housebreaker to be killed (judicially) before the breach, and buried in it<sup>1</sup>.

57. If a shepherd lets his sheep feed on a field without the owner's consent, the owner to have the crops, and the shepherd to pay him besides 20 gur of corn per gan of land.

117. If a man gives his wife, son, or daughter as a slave to work off a debt, they may do this for three years, but shall be free in the fourth.

118 f. An ordinary male or female slave given in the same way may, however, be sold by his or her new owner, unless the female slave has been a concubine who has borne her master children, in which case she must be ransomed by him.

125. If a man puts anything on deposit, and it be lost through burglary or pillage, the owner of the house must find the thief, and make the loss good to the owner.

126. If a man falsely alleges that he has lost something (deposited with another? or more generally, found in possession of another?), he is to estimate his loss before God, and to pay double what he falsely claims.

171. A slave concubine, if her master dies without having for-

xxi. 16. Any one stealing a man to be put to death.

xxii. 2—3<sup>a</sup>. A housebreaker may be killed in the night with impunity.

xxii. 5. If a man lets his beast feed (but see the note ad loc.) in another man's field or vineyard, the damage to be made good out of the best of his own.

xxi. 2. If a man buys a male slave, he is to be free after six years' service. (A female slave under similar circumstances does not go free in Ex. xxi. 7 [where she is represented as bought to be a concubine]; but she does so in Dt. xv. 17.)

xxii. 7 f. If money or property be deposited with a man, and it be stolen: if the thief be found, the owner of the house must pay 2-fold; if he be not found, he must swear before God that he has not appropriated it himself.

xxii. 9. If any dispute arises about an ox, ass, &c., or anything alleged to be lost (after having been deposited with another? or found under any circumstances in another's possession?), the matter is to be brought before God, and the party found guilty is to pay 2-fold.

xxi. 11. A slave concubine to become free, if her master do not mally recognized her children, to have no share in his property, but to receive her freedom with her children.

195. 'If a man has struck his father, his hands one shall cut off.'

196. 'If a man has caused the loss of a freeman's eye, his eye one shall cause to be lost.' Similarly (197, 200) for a limb or tooth. But for the eye or limb of a poor man, the penalty is only a mna of silver (198), and (201) for the tooth of a poor man  $\frac{1}{2}$  mna (20 shekels).

199. If a man puts out the eye, or shatters the limb, of a freeman's slave, he is to pay half the price of the slave.

206. If a man wounds another accidentally in a quarrel, he is to swear to this, and pay the doctor.

207 f. If he causes the other man's death, he is to pay, if the slain man be a freeman,  $\frac{1}{2}$  mna of silver, and if a poor man,  $\frac{1}{3}$  mna of silver.

209—214. If a man strikes a freeman's daughter (it is implied, intentionally), and causes a miscarriage, he is to pay 10 shekels of silver: (210) if she dies, his own daughter is to be put to death. If the woman is the daughter of a poor man the penalty is 5 shekels, or, if she dies,  $\frac{1}{2}$  mna; if she is a freeman's slave, 2 shekels, or, if she dies,  $\frac{1}{3}$  mna.

241. An ox not to be seized as a pledge, under penalty of  $\frac{1}{3}$  mna of silver. Cf. Job xxiv. 2.

245—6. If a man hires an ox, and by neglect or blows kills or injures it, he must make it good to its owner; (247—8) if, however, he only puts out its eye, or causes some smaller injury, he need pay only  $\frac{1}{2}$  or  $\frac{1}{3}$  of its value. (249) give her her food, raiment, and conjugal rights.

xxi. 15. Anyone smiting father or mother to be put to death (in xxi. 17 the same penalty for cursing a parent).

xxi. 23—25. In case of injury, life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, &c., to be exacted.

xxi. 26 f. If a man knocks out the eye or the tooth of his own slave, he is to give him his freedom.

xxi. 18 f. If a man injures another accidentally in a quarrel with a stone or his fist, and obliges him to take to his bed, he is to pay for the loss of his time, and for his doctor. [If he causes his death, he would presumably enjoy the right of asylum xxi. 12—14.]

xxi. 22. If when two men are quarrelling one of them (accidentally) strikes a woman, and causes a miscarriage, he is to be fined as the husband may fix. If vv. 23—25 are in place here (see the note), it is implied that if she dies, he is to die also.

xxii. 26. A garment taken in pledge to be returned before nightfall.

xxii. 14 f. If a man borrows an animal from his neighbour, and it is hurt or die, the owner not being with it, it is to be made good. But if the owner is with it at the time, the borrower is not liable.

If 'God has struck' the animal, 'and it dies' (i.e. if the injury be accidental), the hirer 'shall swear before God and be free.'

250. If a savage bull gores a man, and kills him, no claim can be made.

251. If an ox has pushed a man, and so shewn its vice, and its owner has not blunted its horns or shut it up, then, if it gores a freeman to death, he is to pay  $\frac{1}{2}$  mna of silver.

252. If it kills a freeman's slave, its owner to pay  $\frac{1}{3}$  mna of silver (= 20 shekels).

266. If in a sheepfold a stroke of God has taken place, or a lion has killed, the shepherd is to clear himself before God, and the owner must bear the loss.

Cf. 244. If a man hires an ox or an ass, and a lion kills it, the owner to bear the loss.

267. But if a sheep has been lost through the shepherd's carelessness, he must make the loss good.

There are also some parallels with the laws in Deuteronomy, and a few with parts of the 'Law of Holiness' (Lev. xvii.—xxvi.); but none with any of the laws of P<sup>1</sup>.

In view of Hammurabi's pronounced polytheism, as attested by the Prologue, the frequent mention in the Code of an oath, or solemn declaration, to be made 'before God' is noticeable (§§ 9, 23, 106, 107, 120, 126, 240, 249, 266, 281: cf. Ex. xxi. 6, xxii. 8, 11); also (§§ 20, 103, 131, 249) to 'swear by God'; and (249) 'if God have struck it (an hired ox), and it die,' and (266) a 'stroke of God' (in a sheepfold),—both of which we should call an accident (cf. Ex. xxi. 13).

In comparing the two Codes, it is difficult, where the cases are not the same, to say always which implies the severer punishment. Hammurabi imposes however the severer penalty in §§ 8, 9—10, 21, and Ex. in

xxi. 28. If an ox gore a man or woman that they die, the ox to be stoned, and its flesh not eaten, but the owner not to be liable.

xxi. 29—31. If an ox be known to butt, and its owner have not kept it in, and it kills a man or a woman, the ox to be stoned, and its owner put to death (though a ransom for his life may be accepted).

xxi. 32. If it gores a male or female slave, the ox to be stoned, and 30 shekels of silver to be paid to their master.

xxii. 10 f. If an ox, ass, or sheep be given to a man (but not specifically a shepherd) to keep (as a deposit), and it die or be hurt or driven away, no one seeing it, the man to swear before God that he is guiltless, and not to be liable for the loss. And (v. 13) if it be killed by a wild beast, he is not liable, if he can produce the torn carcase.

xxii. 12. But if the animal be stolen, it must be made good.

<sup>1</sup> Only § 132 agrees in principle (decision by ordeal), but not in detail, or in the case to which the principle is applied, with Nu. v. 16—28.

§§ 125, 195, 206 (slightly), 245 f., 250—252: the penalties are the same in §§ 14, 126, 196, 266 f.<sup>1</sup> Hammurabi several times imposes a lower penalty, when the injured person is a 'poor' man, and a lower one still when he is a slave: Ex. recognizes a distinction between freeman and slave, but none between a rich and poor freeman. On the whole however Hammurabi's punishments are more severe than those in Ex., or indeed in Heb. law generally (see DB. v. 595 f.). Ethical and religious teaching or motives are absent from Hammurabi's Code. This however must not be regarded as a defect in the Code, or as shewing that Hammurabi had no regard for such considerations: the Code is a body of laws intended (like the Laws of England) for actual use in legal matters, and in such a Code ethical or religious exhortations have no place. In the Prologue and Epilogue Hammurabi gives sufficient evidence of his religious feeling, and of the desire which he had to enforce justice, and to defend the 'widow and the orphan,' and others who were oppressed. And it is evident that the object of the Code throughout is to adjust conflicting interests, to repress crime, and promote well-doing.

Are, now, any of the laws of the Book of the Covenant derived from Hammurabi's Code? In considering this question there are two or three preliminary cautions to be remembered. In the first place all nations, when they arrive at a certain stage of civilization, devise laws to regulate society, and to protect individuals from violence or injury: to do this is an instinct of human nature. And the cases that have to be legislated for are likely to be the same in societies living under similar conditions: the same crimes, murder, assault, theft, false witness, &c., are likely to occur; and similar penalties, death, mutilation, stripes, fines, slavery, and especially the punishment of an injury by a similar one (the lex talionis), are likely to be inflicted. Resemblances have thus been pointed out between the Book of the Covenant, and the laws of Manu, of Solon, and of the Twelve Tables, &c. And when the two nations whose laws are compared are both Semitic, there are likely to be greater resemblances between them than when one is Aryan, for instance.

Nevertheless, even after making allowance for these considerations, the resemblances between the two Codes seem to be too numerous to have arisen quite independently. How then are we to account for them?

We certainly cannot think that direct borrowing is probable: the author of the Hebrew laws certainly never framed them with a copy of Hammurabi's Code before him. The differences between the two Codes are far too great to admit of this supposition. There is a great deal in Hammurabi's Code to which there is no parallel in the Book of the Covenant at all. And where there are parallels, though the cases are often the same, and they are dealt with similarly, there are constantly such differences in details that the one is not likely to have been taken directly from the other. The entire absence from the Hebrew Code of technical Babylonian terminology or distinctively Babylonian expressions is another fact pointing to the same conclusion.

Putting aside, then, the hypothesis of direct borrowing, the resemblances between the two Codes may still be accounted for in more ways than one. One theory is that the parallels and similarities are due to the common old-Semitic foundation upon which the civilization of both Babylonia and Israel was ultimately based: 'where the same case is treated similarly in the two Codes, the common source is the old customary Semitic law reaching back to long before the time of Hammurabi, which, current in both nations, was codified independently in Babylon and Israel.' There are no sufficient reasons for supposing that Babylonia alone developed Semitic civilization, and that the Arabs, Aramaeans, Phoenicians, Canaanites, and Hebrews all merely borrowed from it: the civilization of all these peoples was developed from a common origin; only that of Babylonia, mainly through the intense commercial activity of the Babylonians, was developed much more highly than that of other Semitic peoples, and was also much in advance of other Semitic peoples in the rate of its development (so Cook, p. 284, Grimme, ibid. p. 287, Kohler and Peiser).

But dependence on Hammurabi's Code, of an indirect kind, is also conceivable. The ancestors of the Israelites, whether they came from Ur (P), or, as the more constant and older tradition (J) told, from Haran, on 'the other side of the river' (the Euphrates), will have lived under Hammurabi's Code; and they may have carried some knowledge of its provisions with them when they migrated from Babylonia, which may have been afterwards utilized when the Book of the Covenant was drawn up,—whether by Moses, or at a later time. Or since, as we now know from the Tel el-Amarna correspondence (1400 B.C.), Babylonian influence had been strong in Canaan for long before the Israelite conquest, some of Hammurabi's laws may have been in operation there; and as the Hebrews, after they settled in Canaan, seem certainly to have adopted some of their civilization from the Canaanites, they may have borrowed from them some of the laws of Hammurabi. The Book of the Covenant exhibits the customary law of the early monarchy; but this description of it does not settle the date at which its provisions were first laid down in Israel. Some may have been laid down by Moses; others may have been added later. Whoever laid them down, may have adopted some of his provisions directly from the old customary Semitic law, as it was current among the Hebrews at the time; in other cases he may have been guided in framing his provisions by his knowledge of the great system of Babylonian law.

It must be remembered that much in the Book of the Covenant stands in no relation to Hammurabi's Code: this therefore must be of native origin,—unless indeed, as is hardly probable, it is adopted from some other, unknown source. It is quite conceivable that, while the bulk of Israel's laws was of native growth, a few might be founded upon outside models. Till we have further positive facts to go upon,—the discovery, for instance, in Palestine of a table of Hebrew or Canaanite laws,—we are not in a position to explain more definitely the origin of the resemblances between the two Codes: different possibilities are open, and we can hardly decide between them except by conjecture. Nor is it clear that all are to be explained in the same way.

APPENDIX IV.

The Historical character of the Tent of Meeting, as described by P.

This, which was formerly taken for granted, has, as a consequence of more exact and comprehensive study, become difficult to maintain. When the condition and numbers of the Israelites immediately after their departure from Egypt, the divergent representations contained in the Pentateuch itself, and the adverse testimony of the subsequent history, are all carefully considered, they are found viz. to form a cumulative argument, pointing with great cogency to the conclusion that the Tabernacle, as described by P., represents, not a historical structure, which once actually existed, but an ideal,—an ideal, based indeed upon a historical reality, but far transcending it, and designed as the embodiment of certain spiritual ideas, which, it was considered, could be adequately expressed only in a concrete material form. The following are the principal grounds upon which this conclusion rests.

1. The descriptions, when examined carefully, are found to be marked by omissions and obscurities, indicating that they are not the work of an eye-witness, or the working directions upon which a fabric, such as is described, could be actually constructed. Thus nothing is said of the shape of the cherubim, the nature and position of the ledge on the bronze altar, the position of the 'border' round the Table of Presence-bread, the thickness of the solid gold 'mercy-seat,' and, especially, of the thickness of the 'boards' or 'frames,' or of the manner in which the hollow wooden case, plated with bronze, which formed the altar of burnt-offering, was to be used. It is remarkable also that for the transport of the Tabernacle and the court, consisting of 48 'boards' or 'frames,' each 15 ft. high, 2½ ft. broad (their thickness is not stated), with 13 'bars' (ch. xxvi. 26—28), and 100 bases of solid silver—according to xxxviii. 27 weighing 96 lbs. each, and altogether therefore more than 4 tons,—the 9 pillars of acacia wood, each 15 ft. high, for the veil and screen, the 300 pillars for the court, each 7½ ft. high (their other dimensions are not given), with their 300 bronze bases, and the cords and bronze pegs for keeping both the Tent and court in position (xxxviii. 31), the Merarites have only four wagons assigned to them (Nu. vii. 8, cf. iii. 36f.),—evidently an altogether insufficient number.

2. It is perfectly true that the Egyptians, like the Babylonians, had long before the time of the Exodus acquired high proficiency in many of the useful and fine arts: but it can hardly be supposed that this proficiency was shared by a subject nation such as the Hebrews, who did not live in great cities, who had no palaces or temples to keep up, and no domestic state or luxury to cultivate, but whose principal occupations were the pasturing of cattle, and the forced labour of the corvée. Can it be deemed likely that a people such as this possessed the skill in joinery, weaving, embroidery, the casting and hammering of metals, and the forming them into often difficult and complicated forms, necessary to carry out the specifications contained in Ex. xxv.—xxxii.? Years afterwards, when the Hebrews had been long settled in Palestine, and had no doubt added something to their knowledge of art from contact with the Canaanites, Solomon hired Phœnician workmen to make all the metal furniture and vessels of his temple (1 K. vii. 13 f., 40 ff.). 'Further, it is difficult to suppose that a desert tribe, even after spoiling the Egyptians, possessed the requisite materials. Apart from the precious stones and the fine linen thread, the amount of metals alone, as given in xxxviii. 24—29, works out' (on the most probable computation of the shekel, at 224 grs.) as follows: gold, 40,940 oz. [= c. 1½ ton]; silver, 140,828 oz. [= c. 4½ tons]; bronze, 108,749 oz. av. [= c. 3 tons]. 'Moreover, it would be very difficult to procure in the desert the olive oil for the lamps, and the dyes—violet and purple from Tyrian shell-fish, and crimson from an insect found on a particular kind of oak tree [see on xxv. 4]' (McNeile, p. lxxxii). It is also (cf. on xii. 37; and see more fully on Nu. i.) quite certain that the numbers of the Israelites at the Exodus could have been in reality nothing even approaching 2,000,000; Petrie, a most circumspect historical critic, who is himself well acquainted with the products and capacities of the Sinaitic Peninsula, places the utmost number that the country could support at 5000: but even though we doubled this figure, it would not be credible that 10,000 nomad serfs could have possessed precious metals in these quantities, or even metals in general and the other materials mentioned, in quantities sufficient to construct the Tabernacle according to the specifications of Ex. xxv.—xxxii.

3. It seems impossible to escape the conclusion that the Pent. contains (cf. p. 257 f.) two different representations of the 'Tent of Meeting.' In xxxiii. 7—11 (E) the 'Tent of Meeting' is a simple nomad tent, which Moses 'used to take and pitch without the camp'; Moses goes out to it to receive revelations from God, and other Israelites also resort to it when they have occasion to 'seek' Him (see further the notes on xxxiii. 7—11). This tent, for reasons explained on xxxiii. 7, cannot be either Moses' tent or a provisional tent: it is the same 'Tent of Meeting,' in which God is said by P also to have spoken with Moses: but the representation given of it is in many respects very different. It is evidently far more simple in structure and appointments: it is guarded by a single attendant, the Ephraimite Joshua, instead of by the hosts of Levites appointed in P (Nu. i. 49—53, iii.—iv.) to guard and tend it, to the exclusion of all others (see Nu. i. 51, iii. 10 'and the stranger [i.e. the non-Levite] that cometh nigh shall be put to death'); and it is outside the camp, at some distance from it, not in its centre, as in P (Nu. ii. 17). That this tent is not a provisional tent appears with particular clearness from the fact that the same representation of the Tent of Meeting, outside the camp,—seemingly also with Joshua as its guardian,—is found in the Pent. even after the erection (Ex. xl.) of the splendid tabernacle described by P: see Nu. xi. 16, 24—30, xii. 4—5 (note especially 'Come out' in v. 4)<sup>1</sup>, and cf. Dt. xxxi. 14 f. It is a parallel difference between the two narratives that, when the Israelites are on the march, in JE (Nu. x. 33) the ark moves on ahead to search out a resting-place for them, whereas in P it is borne by Levites in the midst of the long procession of tribes (Nu. x. 21 [the tenses in vv. 17—27 are all frequentative, describing the practice]; cf. ii. 17, iv. 15). The Tent of Meeting of P is thus the same Tent of Meeting as that of JE; but it is represented as a far more splendid and elaborately appointed structure, and the arrangements for its position &c. are altogether different. The two representations cannot have co-existed historically at the same time; and it cannot be doubted that the simpler representation of J and E is much earlier than the highly elaborate one of P; and has far higher claims to be regarded as historical. Indeed, there are no grounds whatever for calling in question the genuine historical character of the primitive Tent of Meeting of J and E.

It must be obvious also that xx. 24—26 (E) presupposes ideas about altars materially different from those which underlie xxvii. 1—8, xxviii. 42 f., and belonging to a much less developed stage of society.

4. Another remarkable fact about the Tabernacle of P is its singular absence from the history upon occasions on which, if it had existed, it must almost inevitably have been mentioned. The Levites in attendance upon it, according to P, were something like 8000 (in Nu. iv. 48, 8580): its different parts, and the vessels belonging to it, were expressly assigned for transport to the three Lev. families of Gershonites, Merarites, and Kohathites (Nu. iv.); but at the passage of the Jordan, though the ark is a prominent feature, the narrative is silent as to the Tent of Meeting. The last passages in which P mentions it are Josh. xviii. 1, xix. 51, where it is said to have been set up at Shiloh (20 miles N. of Jerusalem). In the Book of Judges the ark is mentioned as being at Bethel (Jud. xx. 27—probably a gloss); but there is no notice of the Tent of Meeting. In 1 S. i.—iii. the ark is at Shiloh (iii. 3); but the sanctuary at which Eli is here mentioned as being the priest cannot be the Tent of Meeting, whether of JE or of P: it is a 'house' (i. 7, 24, iii. 15: so Jud. xviii. 31), or hékâl, 'temple' (i. 9, iii. 3), and has, not a mere 'opening,' like the Tent of Meeting, or other tent (see on xxvi. 36, xxxiii. 8), but doors (iii. 15), and door-posts (i. 9); in other respects, Samuel, in the duties discharged by him, reminds us strongly of Joshua in E (Ex. xxxiii. 11); the Levites and priests of P are conspicuous by their absence. 1 S. ii. 22<sup>b</sup> implies indeed that the Shiloh sanctuary was the Tent of Meeting of P (cf. Ex. xxxviii. 8; 'door,' also, is here lit. opening): but this half-verse (from and how) is not in the LXX.; and its contradiction to i. 9, iii. 3, 15, in describing as a 'tent' what these verses describe as a 'temple' or 'house,' leaves no reasonable doubt that it is a gloss, not yet found in the MSS. used by the LXX. translators. In 1 S. iv. the ark, as if nothing were known of the stringent regulations of Nu. iv. 5 f., 15, 17—20, is fetched from Shiloh, and taken into battle with the Israelites (cf. Nu. xiv. 44 in J). After the ark was restored by the Philistines, instead of being taken to what, if it existed, must have been its only proper place, the Tent of Meeting of P, it was brought to the house of Abinadab near Kiriath-jearim (1 S. vii. 1), who, though to all appearance an ordinary layman, consecrated one of his sons to keep it (where, it may pertinently be asked, were the priests of Aaron's line, who alone, according to Nu. l.c.c., might touch the ark?). It was now, probably, that the destruction of the sanctuary of Shiloh referred to by Jeremiah (vii. 12, 14, xxvi. 6, 9; cf. Ps. lxxviii. 60), took place. After this disaster the priests of Eli's line must have migrated to Nob, where they formed a settlement, more than 80 in number, and where there was a sanctuary of some kind, in which the Presence-bread was laid out, and an 'ephod' kept (1 S. xxi. 1, 4—6, 9, xxii. 18, 19); but whether it was a 'tent,' and, if so, of what kind, we are not told. The ark, however, seems to have remained with Abinadab till David removed it to the house of Obed-edom, a Philistine of Gath (2 S. vi. 2—11)<sup>1</sup>. Three months afterwards David brought it up in triumph to his recently conquered capital, the 'city of David' (Zion): but still the elaborate Tabernacle of P does not appear: David himself erects a tent for the ark (2 S. vi. 17; cf. 1 K. i. 39, ii. 28, where the altar belonging to the tent is mentioned); the priests and Levites, even on this solemn occasion, are, as before, conspicuous by their absence<sup>2</sup>. All these movements of the ark seem quite incompatible with the existence of the Tabernacle of P, or with the regulations of P respecting it: but they present no serious deviations from the much freer usage with regard to the ark implied by J and E (cf. Nu. x. 33, xiv. 44). When however Solomon transferred the ark to his newly-built Temple, the Tent of Meeting and the sacred vessels are said to have been taken into it (1 K. viii. 4<sup>b</sup>). It is not stated where they had previously been. The notice, if authentic, cannot refer to P's Tent of Meeting,—for if this ancient and venerable structure had been in existence, David would hardly have erected a new and special tent himself for the ark (2 S. vi. 17),—but to the tent pitched by David (so Di.): as however this is not called the Tent of Meeting, and is apparently intended only as a temporary shelter for the ark, it is probable that the reference is intended to be to the Tent of Meeting, but, as the notice in this case, for the reason just stated, can scarcely be correct, that it is the work of a writer who may have preserved a true tradition with regard to the tent erected by David, but have referred it erroneously to the Tent of Meeting of P (cf. the notes of Kittel, Barnes, Skinner on 1 K. viii. 4<sup>b</sup>; and Wellh. Hist. 43 f.)<sup>1</sup>.

For these reasons—the presumable absence of the skill and means for constructing it, the divergent representations of it found in the Pent. itself, and the impossibility of finding a place for it in the picture of the early religion of Israel given in Judges and Sam.—it does not seem possible to regard the Tent of Meeting, as described by P, as historical.

How then is the 'Tabernacle' of P to be understood? As will be shewn in the notes on Numbers (esp. i.—x: 28) in this series, P's whole conception of the Israel of the Exodus—the 'congregation,' the system of priests and Levites, the symmetrical arrangement of the camp, the order of the tribes on the march, &c.—is an ideal construction, a picture constructed upon a basis supplied indeed by tradition, but so developed and elaborated as to present in a sensible form certain important religious truths, of which the Mosaic theocracy was conceived to be the visible expression. The Tabernacle and its appointments, in the representation of P, form part of the same ideal conception. The historical Tent of Meeting is that of JE (Ex. xxxiii. 7—11, &c.); the Tent of Meeting of P is the tent of JE transfigured in the light of the higher and larger conceptions of the Divine nature, which had been reached in the age in which P wrote. As is expressly stated in Ex. xxv. 9 (RVm.), 8 (cf. xxix. 45), the primary object of the Tabernacle is that it may be a 'Dwelling,' in which Jehovah may 'dwell in the midst of' His people. Since Solomon had built his magnificent Temple, the idea that Jehovah had an earthly habitation, in which He had 'set His name' or 'made His name to dwell,' had become familiar to Israel (1 K. viii. 12 f.; and in Deut. writers, ib. ix. 3, Dt. xii. 11, &c.). Ezekiel had emphasized the idea further; and developed it moreover, with great detail, in a concrete material form. In his description of the ideal future in ch. xxxvii., the promise had been given (v. 26 f.), 'And I will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. And my dwelling shall be by them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.' And in his great ideal picture of the restored theocracy, contained in chs. xl.—xlviii., the prophet had described a temple, with a highly organized worship and priesthood, standing in the midst of the land, with seven tribes on the N., and five tribes on the S., in the centre of a strip of territory (25,000 × 10,000 cubits) assigned wholly to the priests, with the domain of the Levites (25,000 × 10,000 cubits) immediately on the N., and the city with its land (25,000 × 5000 cubits) on the S. (Ez. xlv. 1—5, xlviii.; see the plan in the Camb.

<sup>1</sup> The Chronicler, in additions to his excerpts from Kings (2 Ch. i. 3—6<sup>a</sup>, 1 Ch. xvi. 39, xxi. 29), states that the Tent of Meeting was at the high place at Gibeon. But this was clearly not the view of the much earlier writers of Kings (except possibly the writer of 1 K. viii. 4<sup>b</sup>); for in 1 K. iii. 2 the people are excused for sacrificing at the high places on the ground that no temple was yet built for Jehovah. But, if the divinely appointed Tent of Meeting was at Gibeon, there would surely have been no need to excuse the people for sacrificing at least at this high place; nor would the reason why Solomon sacrificed there have been stated to be because it was 'the great high place' (1 K. iii. 4).

Bible, p. 355), and guarded further against profanation by means of an outer court (500 cubits sq.), with a free space of 50 cubits all round, and an inner court (100 cubits sq.) confined to the priests, 'to make a separation between that which was holy and that which was common' (xlii. 20). The 'Most holy place' of Ezekiel's temple is a cube of 20 cubits (twice the dimensions of that of the Tabernacle, but the same as those of the shrine of Solomon's Temple); into this, in his vision, the prophet sees the divine glory enter, and hears a voice promise that there henceforth Jehovah will 'dwell with the children of Israel for ever' (Ez. xliii. 7, 9).

The age was one in which, at least in priestly circles, there was a strong longing for a visible symbol of the objective presence of God among men. Solomon's Temple had caused the idea to take deep root in the religious consciousness of the nation; and the destruction of Solomon's Temple produced naturally a deeply-felt void in the minds of devout Israelites. Since the Bab. exile had begun, also, Israel had 'ceased to be a civil community, and was bound together solely by a unity of religion. Political and national ambitions gave place to religious ideals; and these ideals were shaped by this longing for something concrete, round which Israel, as a body of co-religionists, might rally' (McNeile, p. lxxxiii). How the longing took concrete shape in Ezekiel's imagination is shewn in chs. xl.—xlvi. of his book. But it might also take shape in a different direction. Partly, perhaps, during the exile, partly after the return, 'devotional spirits, in contemplation of Israel's past, delighted to imagine that the concrete visible sign of Yahweh's presence had been the centre of their worship from the first. If the nation was ideal, their beginnings must have been ideal. And as the picture shaped itself in their imaginations, it was based upon one factor and another in the actual histories which they possessed' (ibid. p. lxxxiv). A 'tent' in which Moses received revelations from Jehovah was an old element in the tradition; not only the ark, but also a lamp, the Presence-bread, and an altar are all attested for the period before Solomon (1 S. iii. 3, xxi. 6, 1 K. ii. 28): more particulars about the pre-Solomonic tent, or tents, and the Temple of Shiloh, may have been preserved than we know of: other details may have been suggested by Solomon's temple—the length and breadth of P's Tabernacle were exactly half those of Solomon's sanctuary—the vision of Ezekiel, and possibly even the temple of Zerubbabel. Although, as has been shewn above, there are great difficulties in accepting all the details as historical, the general plan and outline of P's Tabernacle may rest upon historical tradition to a greater extent than we are aware. There are abundant indications shewing that the ritual system of P is a development from old, and in some cases, archaic ceremonial usage; and the same, mutatis mutandis, may have been the case with his picture of the Tabernacle.

The supreme idea of P is the realization of the presence of God in the midst of His people (Ex. xxv. 8, xxix. 42), in accordance with the promise of Ez. xxxvii. 27, cited above. Other ideas, closely associated with this, are the unity of God, which, as Dt. had taught, required the unity and centralization of His worship; and the holiness of God, which required as its correlative the holiness of His people (Ex. xix. 6, Dt. xiv. 2, Lev. xix. 2, and elsewhere). In the Tabernacle of P, and the ceremonial system of which it is the centre, these ideas find a concrete, symbolical expression. The Tabernacle is a carefully planned and splendid structure, designed to honour worthily the God who is to make it His abode. By its position in the very centre of the camp, it is a significant visible symbol of the presence of Jehovah in the midst of His people. Its holiness is at the same time guarded by its being encircled by a cordon formed by the camps of the Levitical families and the priests<sup>1</sup>, the other tribes being encamped outside these, three on each side. By the details of its structure, and by the significant gradations in the costliness and splendour of the materials of which it is made (pp. 260, 264), it at once gives expression to, and guards, the supreme holiness of Jehovah. The imageless inmost shrine is an acknowledgement of His spirituality, as its splendour does homage to His sovereignty; while the limitations on even the high priest's access to it are an indication of the conditions on which God is accessible to man. The unity of God is marked by the fact that the sanctuary is one, and the worship one. The ceremonial of purification and sacrifice which centres in the Tabernacle is the means by which the ideal relation of holiness and good-will subsisting between Jehovah and His people is maintained. For other ideas of which the Tabernacle may be regarded as the expression, see p. 260 f.; comp. also further, on the whole subject, Kennedy, DB. iv. 666 f., McNeile, p. lxxxiii ff. It may be added that the presence of a large ideal element in P's description of the Tabernacle (as of the Mosaic age generally) is fully recognized by Dillmann: see Ex. p. 272 (ed. 2, p. 302 f.), NDJ. p. 648 f., and an article by the present writer in the Expos. Times, March, 1906, p. 282 f. Comp. also Ottley, in his Bampton Lectures for 1897 on 'Aspects of the Old Testament,' p. 226, where, after speaking of the difficulties attaching to the contrary view, he continues, 'A Christian apologist can afford to admit that the elaborate description of the tabernacle [in P] is to be regarded as a product of religious idealism, working upon an historical basis, and that the sketch as a whole is largely coloured by reminiscences or traditions of the splendid temple of Solomon.'

<sup>1</sup> How few these were, in the Mosaic age, according to his own representation, the writer does not seem to have realized, after Lev. x. 2 all that are mentioned being Aaron, Eleazar and Ithamar, and Phinehas. Even allowing for a few unnamed grandsons, the fewness of the priests, as compared with the immense numbers of the people, and the duties which would in consequence fall upon them, is one of the many serious historical difficulties attaching to P's picture of the Mosaic age.

HEAD OF THE GULF OF SUEZ.

University Press, Cambridge.

Copyright—Bartholomew, Edin'

THE EASTERN PART OF THE DELTA, WITH THE ISTHMUS OF SUEZ.

The land of Goshen, according to Naville (see the note on Ex. viii. 22), extended (as marked in red) from Tel el-Kebir (towards the W. end of Wady Tumulat) to Saft el-Henna (the ancient PHACUSA), and Belbes.
